

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

Per. L. Eng. 7 1/4 c. 1.)

= L.L. F. 150.

XCW. U:K!

300

L 300

THE LAW TIMES:

THE

JOURNAL AND RECORD

OF

THE LAW AND THE LAWYERS.

FROM NOVEMBER 1876 TO APRIL 1877.

---

VOLUME LXII.

---

LONDON:

PUBLISHED AT THE OFFICE OF THE LAW TIMES, WELLINGTON STREET, STRAND, W.C.

1877.

---

LONDON:

PRINTED AND PUBLISHED BY MORRIS COX, AT THE "LAW TIMES" OFFICE, WELLINGTON-STREET, STRAND.

---

GENERAL INDEX

TO VOL. LXII.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

Accountant trustees in liquidation proceedings, 174
 Adjudication—Statute barred debt—Acknowledgment, 193
 Appeal to House of Lords—"Difficult question of law"—Discretion, 284
 Appointment of receivers, 247, 411
 Bankruptcy Act 1869, sect. 15, 430
   Act of—Beginning to keep house—Intending to delay creditors—Evidence—Denial to creditor—Trader's dwelling-house closed by act of landlord distraining for rent, 173
   Assignment of a contract without notice to the person being supplied under the contract with the goods, 173
   Decisions in the year 1876, 430, 452, 467
   Law, the, 159
   Legislation and bankruptcy reform, 373, 428
   Presenting petition for liquidation—Execution—Seizure, 120
 Bill of sale—Act of bankruptcy—Fraud, 319
   Apparent possession, 193
   Application by trustee for delivery up—Proof—Security, 48
   Trade fixtures—Registration—Bankruptcy of mortgagor—Bills of Sale Act, 1854, ss. 1, 7, 158

Bill of sale—Unregistered—Actual possession—Prior act of bankruptcy, 157
 Building contract—Liquidated damages—Penalty—Proof—Bankruptcy Act, 1869, ss. 23, 31, 157
 Composition—Non-payment—Action—Injunction, 84
   Application to set aside registration of resolutions for—Form of proxy, 247
   Reduction of proof—Action—Injunction, 284
   Surety—Guarantee of payment of instalment—Subsequent bankruptcy of debtor and proof by creditors—Discharge of Surety—Election, 319
 Contract of sale—Stoppage in transit—Right of trustee, 466
 Costs in bankruptcy, 102
 Debtor summoned—Dismissal of debtor's application—Restraining proceedings of judgment creditor, 158
 Examination of debtor—default on part of debtor, 412
 Execution—Not exceeding £50—Sheriff's fees—B. A. 1869, s. 87, 159
 Fictitious claims in bankruptcy—Subornation for perjury, 393
 Injunction—Composition—Default—Action, 138
 Judicial statistics, 336

Liquidation, 301
   Practice on rejection by trustee of proof of debt, 31
   Partnership property—Disposition by one partner for private purposes—Bills of sale—Transactions with money lenders, 172
 Order and disposition, 466
   Letting furniture to hire—Evidence of custom, 284
 Partners—Payment of composition, 30
 Petitioning creditor a client of registrar—Motion for removal of proceedings refused, 30, 101
 Practice—Composition—Arrangement, 30
   Motion under rule 50, 81
 Trustee—Removal—Duty of—Right of new trustee, 336
 Proof—Deduction of credits—Moneys in hands of creditor—Fraud, 392
   Costs of proceedings against debtor up to date of notice of act of bankruptcy, 320
   Interest—Accrued since adjudication, 336
 Proxies in blank, 248
 Receivers and their duties, 319
 Trustee—Accounts, 10
   Claim against for damages, 248
   Costs, 246
 Wagering contracts—Stock exchange—Gambling, 410

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

Accountants practising as solicitors in bankruptcy business, 264
 Actions in the County Court, 160
 Advocates in Police Courts, 139
 Affidavits for use in the Irish Courts, 103
 Agents practising as advocates in County Courts, 177, 190, 211
   Advance—Entering same—Stamps impressed on adhesive, 468
   Notice of, 321
 A short problem in conveyancing, 104
 Attestation clause of wills, 12, 32, 50, 121
 Bar examinations and the cost of legal education, 468
 Bills of Sale Act and Bankruptcy Act, 32, 49, 50
 Book postage, 12, 33, 49
 Branches of the Profession, the two, 263
 Efficiency on the Bench, 264
 Business at the Common Law Judges' Chambers, 390
   In the Queen's Bench, 85
 Commissions for oaths, 321, 337, 377, 396
 Common Law Judges' Chambers, the, 177
 Companies Act 1867, the, 321
 Continuing guarantee, 160
 Costs in liquidations, 11
   Under the Judicature Act, 211
 County Courts Act 1875, the, 395, 452
   County Bill, the new, 337, 377
   Court scale of costs, 414
   Court procedure, 12
   Limited jurisdiction of, 249
 City cause lists at Westminster and City solicitors, 468
 Default summonses in the County Courts, 430
 Examiner, a, 196
 City of Cornwall sales, 430
 Election of solicitors, the, 12, 49

Examinations for the bar, 263
   Disgraceful "Cribbing," 210
 Executive promptness, 285
 Final examination at the Law Institution, 338
 Fusion of law and equity, 13
 Hand v. Hall, 376
 Hire of furniture—Custom—Bankruptcy order—Order and disposition, 302
 Improvement in form of deed of conveyance, &c., 68
 Inland Revenue Commissioners and the Law List, the, 85, 120
 Interchange between the two branches, 321, 452
 Irish Commissioners, 121 Judgment—Costs, 377
   Uniformity, 452
 Judicial system, our, 377
 Lady law stationers, 210
 Law books, 138
   Reports Digest, the, 413
   Societies and "Our Invaders," 413
 Lay impropriators and chancery, 211
 Legal education, 396
 Legal honours, 264
 Legal profession and printing, the, 211
 Locke King's Act, 396
 Magistrates conferring with their clerks, 139
   Law at Upton-on-Severn, 103
 Married woman—Bare trustee, 104
 Municipal oaths, 68
 North British, &c., Insurance Co. v. London, Liverpool, &c., Insurance Co., 11
 Parliamentary agency, 230
 Parsons v. Tinning, 263
 Payment of debt and costs of action by cheque within four days of service, 85
 Personal liability of solicitors in bankruptcy, 33
 Powers of Commissioners to take affidavits in the Irish Courts, 12, 67

Power of the Court of Bankruptcy to restrain actions, the—Default of payment of composition, 230
 Practice in Magistrates Courts, 121
 Pressure on the Superior Courts, 414
 Proceedings against promoters of companies, 396
   Of Corporations, 103
 Professional circulars, 160
   Question, a, 396
 Prosecution of Mr. Bull, the, 85
 "Reading for honours," 302, 321
 Replevin bond, 230
 Roman law, 302
 Rules of the Supreme Court—Construed differently by the Record and Writ Clerks and the Common Law Masters—Copies marked as office copies, 454
 Salomon v. Sopwith, 104
 Sanders v. Stuart, 121
 Secretaries, &c., as advocates, 139, 160
 Serving notices, 13, 32, 49
 Solicitor's agreement under 33 & 34 Vict. c. 28, s. 4, 430
   Appearing before Income Tax Commissioners, 377, 396, 413
   Appointments, 460
   As Recorders, 121
   Clerk to another solicitor, 68
 Succession duty, 49, 68, 211, 249
 Tenants' rights, 104
 Ten years' clerks and preliminary examination, 12, 33
   Years' men and other grievances, 32, 50, 68
 Touting for bankruptcy business, 249
 United Law Students' Society, 160, 177, 211
 Want of uniform practice in the Common Law Offices, 211
 Ware v. Corpe, 285

COUNTY COURT DECISIONS AND PROCEEDINGS.

Agreement for hire—Trespass, 84
 Allowance to solicitors—Sect. 91 of the County Courts Act 1846, unreppealed by statute of 1875—Scale of costs of November, 1875, ultra vires, and not to be followed, 295
 Appeal—Judges' notes—County Courts Act 1875, 248
 Attachment of debts—Service of summons—Distress for rent, 184
 Of rent—Distress—Replevin, 102
 Bill of sale—Present and future advances—Registration of contemporaneous agreement—Waiver of demand—Interrupted possession, 118
 Carriers' Act—Personal luggage—Declaration of value—Notice—"Conspicuous part," 66
 Carriers of goods—Declaration of value—Receipt—Carriers' Act, 335
 Machine-made lace—Damage in transition—Protection of carriers, 285
 Special contract—Owner's risk—Principal and agent, 412
 Carriers of passengers—Contract—Regulation of traffic, 228 Delay—Breach of contract, 451
 Delay—Connecting trains—Negligence—Damages, 304
 Special contract—"Wilful misconduct"—17 & 18 Vict. c. 81, s. 7, 119
 Unpunctuality—Breach of contract, 175
 Censure of a bailiff, 84

Composition—Imperfect proof, 229
 Contempt of Court—Comments in letters by a solicitor, 202
 Contract to deliver goods in a specified time—Waiver—Damages, 464
 County Court Act—Action founded in tort—Costs, 175
 Judge of Bristol, re the, 244
 Jurisdiction of single judge, 175
 Damages for illegal distress—A jury empanelled, 102
 Daniel, Q.C., Mr., on our judicial system, 245
 Duty of bailiffs—Authority conferred by distress warrant, 10
 Election of churchwardens—Costs of—Liability, 202
 Equity appeal case, 202
 Partition suit—Judges' notes—Appeal, 10
 Garnishee summons, 336
 Husband and wife—Survivorship, 119
 Wife's maintenance, 84
 Innkeeper—Obligations to provide accommodation—Discretion in rejecting guests, 66
 Interpleader—Bill of sale—Judgment creditor—Priority, 30
 Judicial Statistics, 229
 Landlord and Tenant—A person let into possession by collusion of a tenant estopped from disputing landlord's title, 244
 Liabilities of husbands, 304
 Mercer v. Mavor, 244

"Necessaries of a miner," the, 67
 Found hatch—Liability of owner of hatch found afterwards in his possession to toll damages, 178
 Property in goods wrongly consigned—No contract between carriers as involuntary bailee and consignee—Damages, 318
 Railway Company—Injury to intending passenger—Implied authority, 47
 Right of land to lateral support of adjoining land—Effect of added weight of houses built within twenty years, 157
 Sale of goods by sample—Implied warranty—Maltng barley—Distinction between words of commendation and words of warranty, 284
 Sale—Title—Chattels—Bill of sale, 304
 Warranty—What amounts to, 156
 Secondary evidence—Unstamped agreement—Lease purposely destroyed—Action for rent—Specific performance, 175
 Ship—Discharging cargo—Liability of consignee for expense, 47
 Smoking carriages on railways—Contract, 46
 Surrey County Courts Statistics, 349
 Title re-charge—Action to recover—Outgoing and incoming tenant, 334
 Trover—Order and disposition clauses—Letting to hire—Notoriety of custom, 118
 Right of owner of goods pledged by bailee to recover against pawnbroker, 210

LAW LIBRARY.

Hall's Popular Conveyancer, 146
 Bills of Costs, a Short Guide to the Preparation of, 257
 Blunt's, The Rev. J. H., Book of Church Law, 293
 Boyd's Merchant Shipping Laws, 148
 Butlin's Examination Guide, 293
 Charley's Real Property Acts, 96
 Clifford and Rickards' Cases in the Court of Referees, 386
 Collin's Essay on Intestate Successions according to the French Code, 293
 Cox's Principles of Punishment, 330
 Creasy's (Sir Edmund) First Platform of International Law, 131

Crookford's Clerical Directory, 309
 Field's International Code, 423
 Finlason's Judicial System, 95
 Fry's Lunacy Laws, 423
 Glen's Rivers Pollution and Prevention Act, 293
 Goddard's Law of Easements, 423
 Goodeve's Rights and Liabilities of Railway Companies and Passengers, 293
 Lely and Foulkes' Judicature Acts, 257
 Lely's Hodges on the Law of Railways and Railway Companies, 221
 Morgan's Chancery Acts and Orders, 96
 Oke's Game Laws, 423

Purkiss's Student's Guide, 131
 Robson's Law and Practice in Bankruptcy, 131
 Russell on Crimes and Misdemeanors, by S. Prentice, Q.C., 166
 Seton's Decrees, Judgments and Orders, 293
 Shaw's Inns of Court Calendar, 184
 Theobald's Concise Treatise on the Construction of Wills, 131
 Ward and Rubinstein's Articled Clerks' Handbook, 293
 Waterlow's Solicitors' Diary, 423
 Webb's Practice of the Supreme Court of Judicature and of the House of Lords on Appeal, 257
 Woolrych's Metropolitan Building Acts, 293

LEADING ARTICLES.

Abolition of Local Venues as affecting the jurisdiction of the English Courts, the, 458
 Agency—Agent's rights to commission when the contract is entire for a definite period, 456
 Liability of Agent for Negligence, 58, 77, 128
 Liability of Agent to be Sued for Money received on account of Principal, 364 Liability of Agent to Principal, 21
 Liability of Agent to Principal—Omission to Perform Gratuitous Undertaking, 94, 112, 147
 Liability of Agent to repay money received on behalf of principal, 385
 Liability of Agent to third parties to pay over moneys, 328
 Liability of Agent to third parties where an Agent contracts in his own name, 202
 Liability of Agent to third parties—Where the Agent acts under a mistake as to the existence of Authority, 256
 Liability of Agent to third parties where the Agent acts without authority, 184
 Liability of Undisclosed Principal—Qualification of his Liability, 220
 Right of Agent to Commission, 401, 440
 Right of Agent to Commission—When his Authority has been Duly Executed, 422
 The Doctrine of Election, 238
 Alterations in Chiquets, 237
 Appointment to two in Joint Tenancy—One not being an object of the Power, 308

Assurances of Land limited to Married Women for their separate use, 130
 Bankruptcy Bill, the Scheme of Lord Cairns, 344
 Proposed Modification of the Law of, 3
 Protected Payments, 57
 Trustees and Undisclaimed Contracts, 58
 Bills of Sale Act as Applied to Fixtures, 182
 Reputed Ownership, and apparent Possession, 58
 Canons of Construction, 385
 Contracts by Agents "for the vendor," or "for" a non-identified Principal, 93
 Costs under the Judicature Act, 164
 County Court Appeals, 183
 County Court Bill, the New, 275, 329
 Scheme, Mr. Harington's, 22
 System, some remarks on the present, 165
 County Courts, the Jurisdiction of, 4
 Cranworth's Act, Lord, and the Maintenance of Infants, 255
 Criminal Appeal, the Court of, 219
 Procedure, the Amendment of, 39, 57
 Contingent Remainder Bills, the, 366
 Costs of Skilled Witness, 365
 Discovery, 146
 Effect of Conditions on the back of Cloak-room Tickets, the, 457
 Extrinsic Evidence to supplement or control Documents of Title, the use of, 8, 112, 147
 Fees on Criminal Prosecutions, 255
 Forfeiture Relief Bill 1877, the, 401
 Furnished Apartments, Implied Covenants on the part of Lessors of, 20

Highways, the repair of, 74
 Improper Conversion of Trust Property—Right to follow Property, 440 Injuries caused by fellow servants—What constitutes community of employment, 291
 Is a Broker or Factor a Trustee of his client's money? 76
 Judicature Acts, the Judges and the, 274
 Judicial Registrars in County Courts, The proposed, 365
 Law Reports Digest, The, 59
 Limitation in Marriage Settlements in favour of Children by former Marriage, 327
 Maintenance of Bastards by Unions, 290
 Manorial Customs in derogation of Grants—Sufficiency of Common, 439
 Marine Insurance and General Average—Principles of the Law, relating to, 345
 Misappropriation of the Proceeds of Securities, 111
 New Rules of Court, the, 76
 Noisy Nuisances, 237
 On the construction of Wills, 309
 Power of an Arbitrator to certify for Costs, the, 328
 Of the Court of Bankruptcy to restrain Actions, the, 164
 Powers, exclusive and non-exclusive, 220
 Privilege of Counsel, 93
 Promoters of Public Companies, Proceedings against, 345
 Public Company, the nature of a Married Woman's interest in a, 38

Purchase of Equity of Redemption, as letting in means incumbrances, 439
 Remoteness in regard to limitations after estates tail, 56
 Service of Writs out of the Jurisdiction, 202
 Sittings of the Court of Appeal, 400
 Special replies and rejoinders under the Judicature Act, 308

Spiritualism, the Legal Aspect of, 273
 Stock Exchange and the Sale of Shares, principles of the Law relating to the, 421
 Supreme Court of Judicature (Additional Judge)
 Bill, the, 456
 Survivors and survivorship, 274
 Survivorship and Substitution Clauses, 291
 Its period, its meaning, 40

Time the Essence of a Contract, 400
 Trial by Jury in the Chancery Division, 75, 92
 Trustees in Bankruptcy and the Law of Estoppel, 292
 Turner, re; ex parte Attwater, the effect of, 146
 Winter Assize Act 1876, the, 110

LEGAL OBITUARY.

Archibald, Mr. Justice, 15
 Beldam, E., 53
 Bennett, J. C. G., 214
 Braikenbridge, F. J., 339
 Cathcart, E., 323
 Clowes, J., 378
 Cobbett, J. M., 323, 339
 Collings, J. S., 268
 Crowdy, J., 470
 Dalton, E., 197
 Dundas, Q.C., The Right Hon. Sir
 D., 415
 Dundas, Sir D., 415
 Edwards, Sir B., 142
 Emerson-Tennent, Bart, Sir W., 71
 Erle, Q.C., The Right Hon. P., 268

Esmonde, Bart., Sir J., 124
 Farrer, O. W., 53
 Gayer, Q.C., Dr., 231
 Gibbons, D., 15
 Grey G., 213
 Hallett, T. P. L., 378
 Hare, A. M., 15
 Hawett, T., 323
 Hawkins, J., 415
 Hobhouse, T. B., 197
 Hollway, J. H., 470
 Holmes, R., 53
 Horsman, The Right Hon. E., 124
 Jerwood, J., 268
 Kelly, F., 323
 Lanyon, C., 397

Lewin, T., 231
 Loveday, A., 378
 Macnamara, H. T. J., 269, 287
 Mason, T. J., 322
 Matcham, P., 231
 Merriman, W. C., 415
 Montgomery, J., 124
 Neaves, The Hon. Lord, 197
 Northall-Laurie, P., 470
 Norton, W., 397
 Palin, R., 15
 Palmer, C. E., 322
 Pinder, F. F., 71
 Reynolds, E., 470
 Rolt, J., 197
 Rye, E., 142

Ryland, A., 415
 Sanders, Mr. Commissioner, 339
 Scott, M., 470
 Shaw, B., 470
 Shugar, J. M., 470
 Smart, R., 250
 Stuart, The Right Hon. Sir J., 16
 Tilsen, Sir T., 429
 Tomlin, G. T., 471
 Turner, Sir C. W., 142
 Whitaker, E. T., 378
 White, H. H., 197
 Whiteside, Chief Justice, 124
 Whitworth, E., 379
 Wren-Hoskyns, C., 124
 Wright, P., 231

LEGISLATION AND JURISPRUDENCE.

Bankruptcy, 390
 Law Amendment Bill, 366, 443
 Prosecutions, &c., 445
 Burial Laws, the, 390
 Coleridge, Lord Chief Justice, 330, 331
 Committee on the Judicature Acts, 385
 Contingent Remainders Amendment Act 1877, 312
 Remainders Bill, 367
 County Courts Bill, Jurisdiction of, 276
 District Registrars, 424
 Election Petitions, 293

Exeter Magistrates, 331
 Expense of Criminal Prosecutions, 423
 Forfeiture Relief Bill, 402
 Judicature Acts, the, 310, 312
 Bill, Supreme Court of, 442
 Justices' Clerks' Bill, 312, 347, 385, 442, 443, 459
 Of Peace, &c., (Clerks' Fees), 276
 Justice, the High Court of, 385
 Law Bills, 459
 Legal Education, 367, 444

Newspaper Registration and the Law of Libel, 424
 Notes on the County Courts Bill, 313
 Prosecutor, a Public, 445
 Public Records Office Bill, 330
 Real Property, 330
 School Board Elections, 387
 Sittings in banco, 293
 Small Debts (Ireland), 445
 Summary Convictions, 459
 Winter Assize Act, 347

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

Application for a summons under the Lottery Act, 410
 Boiling water is not a "destructive substance" within the 29th sect. of the statute 24 and 25
 Vict., c. 100, 373
 Compensation—Tenant—Evidence, 450
 Extraordinary fraud on a licensed victualler by an "accountant," 171
 Flaw in the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1876, 191

Game preservation by parol, 65
 Licensing Acts—Brewster Sessions, 82, 101
 Laws, 27
 Medical Act, the—Unqualified person using the title of Dr. "wiffully and falsely"—Penalty, 153
 Offering for sale unwholesome meat—Public Health Act, 1875, 29
 Oxley, the late Mr. E. C., 348

Poor Law Amendment Act, 1876, the divided parishes and, 27, 82
 Professional congratulations at the Brighton
 Borough Bench, 46
 Sale of beer during prohibited hours—Hours of closing—Infringement of Acts, 101
 Vagrant Act—Conviction—Material qualifying words, 243
 Subtle craft—Spiritualism, 9

NOTES AND QUERIES ON POINTS OF PRACTICE.

Acknowledgment, 249
 By a married woman, 286
 Inrolment, 85
 Act of God, 230
 Acts of Parliament, 338
 Admission on the roll, 171, 300
 Advocacy, 230
 Advertisements, 13
 Affiliation order—Composition, 68

Agency charges for serving writs of summons, 177
 Agricultural Holdings Act, 453 Service of notice to quit before commencement of the Act, 453
 Annual certificate, 101
 Annuity, 196
 Arbitrations, 453
 Arranging debtor, 213

Articled clerk—Acting as advocates, 409
 Advising client—Right of solicitor to charge for same, 377
 And the London University, 82
 Appointment held by, 391
 Assignment, 322
 London agent—Service with, 8
 Principal of—London agent, 449
 Under articles, 45, 101

Articles—Assignment of—25, 46, 201, 440
Consent to carry out, 201
Death of person having, 126
Devonport Act, 201, 440, 441
Restoration of living minority—Examination, 126
Five years' service reduced to three years, 126
Bank articles—Money duty, 201
Law of, 201
Winding up, 126
Ten years' service, 101
Time for changing, 201
University degree—Shortening term of service, 201
Attentive classes, 101
Award, 126
Bankruptcy, 20, 177, 401
Partners, 201
Mortgage, 415
Practice, 201
Bank of Canada, 415
Bank of America, 201
Banking, 201
Act and evidence, 101
Bill of Sale Act—Partners, 177
Call to the bar, 201
Continued conveyance, 121, 220
Charter of the Bank of America, 201
Commissioner to administer oaths—Practising, 201, 201
Commissioner's fees, 101
For oaths, 101, 201
Continuity of employment, 222
Company Law, 240
Conveyance of mortgages, 45
Conveyancing, 240, 244, 245
Charges, 400
Cryptology, 240
Effect of enfranchisement, 453
Herrington, 453
Copy writ annexed to affidavit of service—signing, 430
Corporation—Letting land, 430
Costs, 101, 338
Of a solicitor suing in person, 240
County Courts, 286
Practice, 453
Procedure—Rent—Set off, 196
Criminal Law, 140, 371
Crossed cheques—Endorsement, 290
Custody of title deeds, 85
Deeds dated as of a Sunday, 230
Dower, 240
Easement, 151
Employers and Workman's Act, 177
Entering appearance, chancery and common law, 303
Divisions, 303
Erskine's, Lord, speeches, 415
Estate tail—Crown debts, 85

Examination, 221, 202, 203, 204, 201
Extension of certificate, 202
Extrinsic evidence—Lost document, 121
Final examination, 27, 42, 101, 117, 126, 201, 221, 201, 204, 205, 201, 400
Before expiration of articles—Questions as to due service, 120
Five years' articles in the country—Service with London agents and barrister, 117
Forgery of a deed, 85
Illegitimate child, guardianship of, 338
Income-tax, 85
Intermediate examination, 27, 45, 65, 101, 126, 151, 171, 201, 221, 242, 261, 283, 317, 334, 348, 371, 301, 400, 427, 440
Joint Stock Companies and Building Societies, 196
Companies Clauses Act, 1845—Companies Act, 1862—Qualification of director—If the company's banker disqualified, 306
Jurats, 85
Knight v. Marquis of Waterford, 85
Landlord and tenant—Right to sue after distress, 23
Law offices, 117
Of husband and wife, 240
Lease, 85, 140
Mortgage, 85
Of settled estate, 400
Leaseholds—merger, 303
Leases—costs, 196
Legacy—costs, 240
Legal proceedings—Joint remedies, 213
Liability of counsel for negligence, 230
Licensing Acts, the, 68
Liquidation, 121, 377
London, L.L.B., 101
University, 196
Lost document—Secondary evidence, 68
Marriage settlement, 104
Trust, construction of, 409
Married Women's Property Act—Right of married women to contract, 13
Master—Servant—Negligence of fellow servant, 322
Merger, 303
Middlesex registry, 338
Mortgage, 230
Paid-off—Deeds in custody of mortgagees, 178
Mortmain, 130
Necessaries for an infant, 104
New articles of clerkship instead of assignment of articles, 440
Rules of court, 264, 303
Noisy nuisances, 338
Nonsuit, 50
One solicitor acting as advocate for another, 322
Order III., rule 6; 14, rule 1; 21, rule 4; 36, rule 1, 286

Order XXII., rule 3, 30
Party wall, 240
Perpetual Chancery Act, 322
Perpetual commissions and commissioners or oaths, 303
Plymouth, Sandwich, and Devonport Law Students' Society, 65
Power of appointment, 140
Preliminary examination, 101, 171, 209, 242, 317, 371, 454
Probate, 33
Reading for honours, 283
For the final, 65, 82, 261, 348, 440
For the intermediate, 33
Registration—7 Anne, c. 20, 50
Of agreement as bill of sale, 13
Release of articles, 427
Re-registration of bill of sale, 469
School Board conveyances, 322, 469
Service of writ—Agent's charges, 322
Setting down cases, 178
Shorthand, 334
Solicitor—Covenant not to practice, 322
Right to see prisoners, the, 264
Right to practice in the colonies, 264
To sue for proportion of title rent, 430
Trustee—costs, 85
Solicitor's liability, 286, 303
Stamp, 13, 249, 303
Duty, 213
Stamps on agreement for sale, 178
On building society's mortgages, 104
Statute of frauds, 213, 377
Of Limitations, 151
Subpoena—Conduct money, 230
Succession and residuary accounts and obtaining probate, 303
Duty, 85, 121, 140, 396
Summons under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, granted on a Sunday, 286
Testacy and intestacy—Personal estate, 303
Trustees—Expenses of varying investments, 177
Unauthorized persons, 242
Preparing leases for fee or reward, 377
Unregistered society, 249
Valuation of copyholds, 303
Vendor and purchaser, 213
Vendors and Purchasers' Act, 1874, 121, 264, 286
Costs of conveyance, 178
Weekly tenancy, 322
Widening County Bridge—Expense of, 322
Wife having separate estate, 453
Will, 33, 264
Construction of—Trust to sell, 469
Shares, 213
Trust for sale—Purchase by trustee's wife, 469
Withdrawal of an order, 377

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

Adam, J., 107, 161
 Anderson, Sir G. C., 453
 Bernard, E. W., 305
 Birkenhead, F. M., 471
 Bridgman, J., 307
 Brydges, K. T., 80
 Bull, J. C., 170
 Bullock, C., 123
 Chalmers, Sir D. P., 101
 Clark and Collins, Messrs., 431
 Clark, W. R., 123
 Corbett, H., 80
 Corbin, J. J., 107
 Crooke, J., 80
 Culliffe, G., 305
 Davies, J. T., 215
 Doyle, Sir W. H., 453

Edmonson, C., 89
 Foxwell, G. F., 348, 431
 Franklin, H. F., 33
 Gane, W. L., 161
 Gell, J., 453
 Gibson, J., 107, 200
 Goble, E., 323
 Hayward, J. C., 143
 Hoales, A., 15
 Hilton, W. H., 107
 Hooper, J. J., 305
 Hughes, H. R., 161
 Hughes, W., 431
 Hulsh, F. D., 83
 Inghelmore, H., 143
 Kendall, F. H., 431
 Knight, W. F., 197

Lawrence, E. G., 170
 Macdonald, Mr., 187
 Marshall, G., 340
 Martin, J., 397
 Merrick, W., 286
 Michelmores, H., 170
 Milne, J. F., 89
 Murdock, R., 323
 Parker, J. T., 431
 Ponting, T., 431
 Ratcliff, E. T., 89
 Richardson, F., 53
 Robbins, C., 63, 89
 Robinson, Q. C., J., 323
 Sebright-Green, W. S., 405
 Shapland, A. F. T., 340
 Shee, G., 397

Shirley, A., 89
 Shuttleworth, T. M., 453
 Simpson, C. H., 142
 St. Paul, A., 322
 Stallon, V. H., 249, 269
 Staniland, C. H., 187
 Stock, D., 187
 Stokes, W., 322
 Tassell, A., 124
 Taylor, J. O. H., 431
 Tillyard, E., 397
 Unwin, F. G., 231
 Waldron, C., 269
 Walters, Hon. C., 249
 Watkins, C. F., 340
 Winch, G., 53
 Wooler, E., 397

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

- Accountant's charges, 206
 Arrangements under the new Act—Sittings of single judges, 205
 Barnicot and another v. Hann, 259
 Carriers of goods—Liability of—Agreement between passenger and porter, 404
 Cockburn, Lord Chief Justice, and the Western Circuit, 387
 Costs—Nominal damages, 240
 Counsel—Junior taking silk—Practice, 348
 District Registrar—Jurisdiction, 348
 European Insurance Society Arbitration, 259
 Evidence—Corroboration—Action for breach of promise of marriage, 368.
 Irregular proceedings in district registries, 387
 Judicial Statistics, 6
 Motions to vary minutes, 150
 Municipal election petition—Sufficiency of description—Error of Burgess roll, 404
 "No issue to try"—Duty of judges, 42
 Paris, ex parte; Re a Solicitor, 279
 Parliamentary Agents, 295
 Pleading—Counter claim—Payment into court, 205
 Statute of Frauds, 43
 What may be alleged in a reply, 149
 Practice—Appeal—Time, 134
 Costs, 279
 County Courts appeal—Evidence insufficient—New trial, 369
 Interim preservation of property—Dispute of title, 368
 Privileges of counsel, 98
 Proceedings against a solicitor, 240, 259
 Prosecution of an attorney for obtaining money by false pretences, 240, 332
 Prosecution of a solicitor's clerk and a solicitor, the, 61
 Taxation of costs—Additional rules, 30, 32—Application to review for breach of faith, 206
 Schoolmaster—Agreement for a term's notice or a term's fees—Pupil's attendance prevented by illness, 404
 Solicitor, re a, 446
 Solicitors of the Supreme Court, specimen of a digest of the law relating to, 43, 60, 97, 111, 132, 168, 186, 204, 223, 278, 386
 Trial by jury, 43
 How to be tried—Entries in London and Middlesex, 205
 Unqualified person practising as a Solicitor—Stamp Act, 1870—Penalty 250 for preparing a bill of sale, 79
 Writ of summons—Application for leave to serve abroad—Action under Lord Campbell's Act, 206

THE LAW TIMES,

THE JOURNAL OF THE LAW AND THE LAWYERS

FROM NOVEMBER 1876 TO APRIL 1877.

VOLUME LXII.

To Readers and Correspondents.

Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.
All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.
All communications intended for the EDITOR (SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT) should be so addressed.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.
SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE.
HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE—CHANCERY DIVISION.
NEW SOMERSET PROSPECT COMPANY v. ELLAGRE.
Syndicate—Purchase of property—Sale to company at increased price—Disclosure of amount paid by vendors—Promoters	309
HOLDWORTH v. DAVENPORT.
Charitable bequest—Fare or impure personally—Debenture of waterworks company—9 Geo. 2, c. 35	319
QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION.
BOWER v. PLATE.
Adjoining landowners—Liability for support—Acts done by contractor	321
DAWKINS v. PRINCE EDWARD OF SAXE-WEIMAR.
Stay of proceedings—Cause of action decided to be groundless—Judge's privilege—Abuse of process	323
ROBERTS v. PAGE.
Compromise to pay costs—Cause of action—Proceeding concerning property—Secretary of friendly society	325
LONDON AND NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY (app.) v. CHURCHWARDENS OF IRETHINGBOROUGH (resps.).
Rateable value of railway—Competing lines—Enhanced value by traffic on other part of line	327
ST. LUKE'S VESTRY v. NORTH METROPOLITAN TRAMWAYS COMPANY (LIMITED).
Tramway repairs—Level—Repair of road—Superintendence of road authority—33 & 34 Vict. c. 78	329
ROGERS (app.) v. ST. GERMAN'S UNION (resps.).
Poor rate—Right of sporting—Severed from competition—37 & 38 Vict. c. 54, ss. 2 and 6	333
LEGGOTT v. GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.
Action by executor or administrator—Damage to estate during life of deceased—Issues determined in action for personal injury	334
COMMON PLEAS DIVISION.
ROBINSON v. ROBINSON.
Rules of Court under the Judicature Acts—Order XXXVI., rule 30—Trial by referee	337
BLACKLOCK v. DORRIS AND ANOTHER.
Friend on creditors—Illegal agreement—Assignment of estate—Promise to repay part of proceeds	338
GREEN v. WILKIN.
Shipowner and master—Reasonable notice of disclaimers	33
EXCHEQUER DIVISION.
PIKE v. FRANK KENNEDY AND SONS.
Judicature Act 1875—Rules of court under—Judge's order for statement of names of defendants co-partners	341
FRYMAN AND OTHERS v. LAHOUT AND ANOTHER.
Practice—Jurisdiction—Service of writ out of—Statement of defence raising question of propriety of service—Plea to jurisdiction	341
PICKARD v. MARRIAGE AND ANOTHER.
Bill of sale—Affidavit filed on registration—Description in of "every attesting witness"—Two witnesses and description of one only	343
DIVISIONAL COURT FOR APPEALS FROM INFERIOR COURTS.
COLLIER v. NORTH.
Statute 3 Geo. 4, c. 55, s. 43—Meaning of the word "town"	345
COOPER (app.) v. OSBORNE (resp.).
Licensed premises—Private friends—Gaming	347
LEADING ARTICLES, &amp;c.
TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS	1
LEADING ARTICLES—
Topics of the Week	1
Proposed Modification of the Law of Bankruptcy	3
The Use of Extrinsic Evidence to Supplement or Control Documents of Title	4
The Jurisdiction of County Courts	4
SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT.
SOLICITORS' JOURNAL—
Topics of the Week	5
Notes of New Decisions	6
Judicial Statistics	6
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England	7
Appointments under the Joint-Stock Winding-up Acts	7
Creditors under Estates in Chancery	7
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35	7
Reports of Sales	8
LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL—
Topics of the Week	8
Bradford Law Students' Society	8
Bristol Law Students' Debating Society	8
Law Students' Debating Society	8
Liverpool Law Students' Association	8
United Law Students' Society	8
Queries	8
Answers to Correspondents	8
MARITIME LAW—
Notes of New Decisions	8
COMPANY LAW—
Notes of New Decisions	8
MAGISTRATES' LAW—
Borough Quarter Sessions	9
Bow-street Police Court	9
REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING—
Notes of New Decisions	9
COUNTY COURTS—
Bristol County Court	10
Bath County Court	10
BANKRUPTCY LAW—
Liverpool County Court	10
LEGAL NEWS—
Opening of the Courts	10
Winter Assize Counties	11
The late Mr. Justice Archibald	11
Miscellaneous	11
CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION	11
NOTES AND QUERIES	13
LAW SOCIETIES—
University College—Lecture on Roman Law	13
Law Association	13
LEGAL EXTRACTS—
The Land Titles and Transfer Act 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 87)	13
PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS	15
LEGAL OBITUARY	15
THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS—
November Cases List of the Supreme Court of Judicature	16
Register for the ensuing week	17
THE GAZETTES	17
BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS	18

points of law, which is very nearly as valuable as the actual knowledge. At Nisi Prius he will be a decided acquisition. The appointment of Mr. LOPES to one of the vacancies in the Exchequer Division is colourless from a professional point of view.

The Judge of the Bath County Court stated in a case which came before him a few days ago (Addis v. Sheppard), that there was no decision touching the question whether a bailiff or an agent to a landlord or landlady, having taken upon himself the duty of seizing goods and removing them, was bound to go a step further and sell them. The question is really a very simple one in the law of agency. The difficulty is to determine the nature of the authority conferred, in other words to determine the extent of the duties undertaken by a man who agrees to act as bailiff. We think the decision of the County Court Judge was right. The proper course for the defendant to have adopted would have been to sell; then if he were sued by other parties he could have saved himself by joining his principal.

THE Times of Thursday made some observations with reference to the resources of the Bar for supplying judicial vacancies which are perfectly just, although in some points a little far-fetched. The writer points out that the salaries of the Judges are not such as to tempt the members of the Bar in large practice, whilst the labour is enormous. That there is sufficient ability at the Bar if available, the Times considers indisputable, but, at the same time it remarks that judicial qualities are more rare than they used to be because business has increased, and there is a "passionate competition" for it. This is strong language in which to describe the honourable emulation of a learned profession, and we cannot deny that the competition is keen. The Bar should beware that this does not divert them from the cultivation of high qualifications. The greatest encouragement to members of the Bar to fit themselves for high office is to make those offices attractive. It is not every barrister who looks forward with a beating heart to being a Judge, and the result is that the qualities which fit a man for the position are not so assiduously cultivated as they might be. Until there is a change in this respect the condition of things must remain as they are. It is impossible to look without apprehension to the necessities which must shortly arise, and the appointments which will have to be made. And, unfortunately, no education can provide against the decline in the constitution of the Bar.

THE decision of the Master of the Rolls in the case of the Attorney-General v. Great Western Railway Company and The Midland Railway Company (35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 302), which came recently before him touches upon a question of general interest. The case itself turned upon sect. 6 of the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 55, by which it is provided that the officer appointed by the Lords of the Committee of the Privy Council to inspect any railway, may report in writing that the opening of such railway would, in his opinion, be attended with danger to the public using it by reason of the incompleteness of the works or permanent way, or the insufficiency of the establishment for working the railway. This report is to be accompanied with a statement of the grounds upon which the opinion is based. The Lords of the Committee are then empowered to order the company to whom such railway shall belong to postpone the opening of the line for any period not exceeding one calendar month at any one time, until it is made clear to them that the line may be opened without danger to the public. The question to be decided under this section was whether the Supreme Court has jurisdiction conferred upon the Board of Trade. The MASTER of the ROLLS thought that if the section gave jurisdiction to the Board of Trade, they, the Board, were the only persons who were not bound by a report of the inspector, and that they might stop the railway from being opened until it should appear to them that it could be opened without danger to the public. "The only preliminary," said his Lordship, "is that they are not to exercise

The Law and the Lawyers.

THE appointment of Mr. HAWKINS, Q.C. to one of the vacant judgeships is somewhat of a surprise to the Profession, because it was understood that he had finally declined promotion. That he will make a good Judge there can be little doubt. His large experience of court business is alone a great qualification, and if he is not a profound lawyer, he possesses a capacity for comprehending their jurisdiction without a sufficient inquiry. They have an officer to inspect the railway, to report and to give the grounds of his opinion. In my view, I am not empowered to go into the grounds of his opinion." There was another discussion in the course of the case upon the meaning of the term "incomplete," when applied to a railway. Upon this question the MASTER of the ROLLS observed that the word "incomplete" is used in the section in its largest sense, and may mean either unfinished or imperfect, and quoted as an instance the case of a flower, which is imperfect in that it is wanting in some of the organs with which most flowers are furnished. The powers with which the Board of Trade are invested are undoubtedly of great concern to the public; but it does not appear that the jurisdiction for which the defendant contended is at all required in the interests of the community.

SOME time ago we called attention to the fact that the Judges sitting at chambers concurred in not allowing the plaintiff to deliver interrogatories to the defendant before the delivery of the statement of defence, notwithstanding the words of Order XXXI, rule 1: "The plaintiff may, at the time of delivering his statement of claim . . . without any order for that purpose . . . deliver interrogatories," &c. In the case of Disney v. Longbourn, which appeared in the LAW TIMES Reports of last week, the MASTER of the ROLLS had to decide under what circumstances the defendant should be allowed to interrogate the plaintiff before the delivery of the statement of defence. The application for leave to do so is founded on subsequent words in the rule we have already quoted from: "Either party may at any time, by leave of the court or a judge, deliver interrogatories," &c. . . . The MASTER of the ROLLS stated in his judgment that these words were inserted in the rule to provide a remedy when a party to an action wished to interrogate after the close of the pleadings. They are, however, of course equally available to either party who wishes to interrogate before the delivery of his statement. But the MASTER of the ROLLS held that, in the case before him—which was an action against the executors of a deceased testator for breaches of trust alleged to have been committed by the testator—an affidavit by the defendants, to the effect that they were entirely ignorant of the alleged breaches of trust, and that without the information asked for they had not the materials for preparing the defence, which they believed themselves to have, was no ground for allowing them to interrogate before the delivery of their defence. He suggested that they should file a statement of defence claiming the benefit of every defence which might hereafter be open to them, and stating that they knew nothing about the matter, and that with that defence they should deliver interrogatories. The delivery of interrogatories by the defendant before the delivery of the statement of defence was allowed by Mr. Justice ARCHIBALD in Hawley v. Beade (Bitt. Pr. Cas., No. CCXC.); but in that case the circumstances were different. There the defendant was sued on a bill of exchange, and he desired to interrogate the plaintiff as to whether he was a holder for value without notice; in which case the fact that there had been a failure of consideration would be no defence. This he was allowed to do, on the ground that if the plaintiff answered in the affirmative, no statement of defence would be put in and expense would be saved. Taking the two cases together, it appears that the allegation of inability to prepare a statement of defence, owing to ignorance of the matters brought forward in the statement of claim, is not a sufficient ground for obtaining leave to deliver interrogatories under the above rule; but that the allegation of ignorance of a fact upon which depends the validity of the defence proposed to be set up is a sufficient ground for obtaining such leave.

If the report which we have before us of what occurred a few days ago in the Bristol County Court in the case of Wray v. Clements is correct, we must say that an advocate has been guilty of gross disrespect to a Judge. According to this report after his Honour had delivered judgment in favour of the plaintiff, Mr. BUDD, the counsel for the defendant, asked the Judge to be good enough to state upon his notes "all the facts of all the evidence" that had been brought forward, and the defendant would appeal, under the County Courts Act 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 50,) s. 6. His Honour thought the section inapplicable, and suggested a special case as the only means of appeal. The counsel, however, insisted that there was still a right of appeal under the section, which he proceeded to read. This section provides that any person aggrieved by a decision in a cause in which he has a right of appeal, may appeal against it within eight days after the decision by motion to the court to which such appeal lies, instead of by special case. We agree with Mr. BUDD that these words appear to give him the right of appeal he asked for. But let us see how the section proceeds: "And at the trial or hearing . . . the Judge, at the request of either party, shall make a note of any question of law raised at such trial or hearing, and of the facts in evidence in relation thereto, and of his decision thereon, and of his decision of the cause . . . he shall, at the expense of the person or persons, being party or parties in any such case, furnish a copy of such note." Can anything be plainer than this? If either of the suitors means to appeal without the trouble of preparing a special case, he has merely to request the Judge at the "trial or hearing" to make a note of the legal point raised, and so on. This was evidently the opinion of the Judge. The section is, no doubt, drawn in a slovenly manner, for it appears first of all to give an absolute right to appeal by motion instead of by special case, and then goes on to say that notes of legal points and evidence must be requested at the hearing or trial. So far Mr. BUDD had done no more than any counsel is justified in doing. He had put his argument forward as strongly as he could. His subsequent remarks are those to which we take exception. Their tone is aggressive in the extreme, and shows an absolute want of courtesy. "You did not request me to make a note of the evidence," said the Judge. "It is your duty to make a note of the evidence was the reply." "Fortunately or unfortunately," said his Honour, "my memory is one of extraordinary tenacity and —" He was not allowed to finish his sentence before he was interrupted with the rude remark, "Then I ask your Honour to make a note of the case from your tenacious memory." Again, "I think you had better proceed by special case." "I shall do nothing of the kind. Do you decline to furnish me from your tenacious memory with notes of the evidence? If you decline, then say so." Mr. BUDD himself showed the absurdity of his own position. "I must express my extreme surprise," said he, "that in a case of this description, in which there was every likelihood of an appeal, I should be met with the objection that you have taken no notes of the evidence." If there was such likelihood of an appeal, why did he not make his request during the trial or hearing, in accordance with the terms of the section he quoted, in support of his application? Not content with the answer given to his application, he pressed the judge further, and ending by remarking, "I don't wish to make it unpleasant for you." This is certainly not proper language to be used by an advocate. We know nothing of Mr. BUDD, and we sincerely trust that the report of what the local paper calls "a breeze in court," is incorrect.

Mr. KNOX, the Marlborough-street magistrate, has dismissed the summons which had been issued against the keeper of the Empress Skating Rink, for keeping a disorderly house, and permitting musical entertainments without having a licence. The proceedings were taken under the 2nd section of 25 Geo 2, c. 36, by which it is enacted that any house, room, or other place kept for public dancing, music, or other public entertainment of the like kind without a licence for that purpose, shall be deemed a disorderly house, and every person keeping such house or other place without such licence, is to forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds. As to the facts in this particular case, it was proved that dances to music by ballet girls and others took place at the rink, and that the place was not licensed for music or dancing. A number of cases were cited during the hearing of the case. The construction put upon them on behalf of the defendant was that they went no further than to show that, according to the ruling of Lord KENYON, the room must be kept for the purposes of music and dancing only, whilst Lord LYNDHURST held that the mere occasional use of the room for music and dancing was not within the Act, and Lord ABINGER, that the house must be kept and dedicated to the purpose prohibited by the Act to sustain a conviction. It will not, however, be necessary to go through the authorities quoted at length. Mr. KNOX was content to rest his judgment upon the authority of the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE (COCKBURN). Quaglieni (app.) v. Matthews (resp.), (34 L. J. 116, M. [C.]), was probably the case to which the magistrate referred. In this case the appellant appeared on an information charging that he unlawfully kept a place called the "Circus" for public music and dancing without a licence. The dancing was performed by members of the appellant's company on horseback; the music was played while the performers went through their evolutions, except at the end of the entertainment, when "God Save the Queen" was played while the people were going out. The LORD CHIEF JUSTICE agreed with the argument urged on behalf of the respondent that it is not necessary that the public should themselves dance to bring the case within the statute, nor that dancing should form the chief part of the performance; but with respect to the dancing in the case then before the court, he thought that the evidence simply amounted to this, that the performers on the rope and on the backs of the horses went through a certain amount of measured or rhythmical movements to show their dexterity in the gymnastic exercises which formed the chief part of the exhibition. In his opinion, therefore, the dancing amounted to nothing. Upon the question of dancing his Lordship continued: "There can be no doubt that this was a public entertainment, but the magistrates have not found whether the music was merely subsidiary or formed a substantial part of it. Although there was some music or dancing, if it was merely subsidiary, they ought not to have convicted; but if it was a principal or essential part of the entertainment, the conviction would be right. It is a question of fact for the Justices, but if they thought that the fact of there being any music or dancing brought the case within the statute their decision was wrong." With this expression of opinion before him, it seems to us that Mr. KNOX had only one course to adopt, which was to accept the principle laid down by Sir ALEXANDER COCKBURN, and test the case upon which he was engaged by considering whether the music and dancing were a principal, or essential part, of the entertainment, and so determine the question of fact. The magistrate did so, and adopted as a mode of determining the point, the question, "Would the people pay their money to hear the music if the other part of the entertainment were not there?" or would they pay to witness the other part of the entertainment if there was no musical performance? Upon the answer to the question thus put, the decision would depend. Mr. KNOX answered in the affirmative, and accordingly dismissed the summons. Was this the intention of the Legislature when it enacted that any house, room, garden, or other place kept for public dancing, music, or other public entertainment of the like kind, without a licence had for that purpose, shall be deemed a disorderly house or place? We think that the construction of the statute adopted by the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE will be productive of consequences which were never anticipated by its framers. But if this construction should be rejected, and another adopted capable of meeting the very modern institution of musical skating rinks, cases of hardship, we fear, would be of frequent occurrence. For such a construction of the Act as would have sufficed to convict the appellant in Quaglieni v. Matthews, or the defendant in the case before Mr. KNOX, could not by any judicial dicta be confined in its results to any particular class or classes of houses or places. Hence much petty persecution might be the result. The fact is that the Act of George II.'s reign is not applicable to the present state of things. It was passed at a time when many modern methods of killing time and obtaining recreation were unknown. Probably the attention of the Legislature will be called to this and kindred questions during the next session.

PROPOSED MODIFICATION OF THE LAW OF BANKRUPTCY.

THE recent meeting of the Social Science Congress, at Liverpool, has given Mr. Daniel, Q.C., an opportunity of making known his suggestions for the improvement of the law of bankruptcy. These suggestions refer first to modifications in the substantive law; and, secondly, to modifications in the existing procedure and practice in bankruptcy. The branches of substantive law which, in his opinion, required alteration, were the rules applicable to fraudulent preference, gambling in the form of time bargains, and trading with fictitious capital by means of accommodation bills. The modification suggested in the law of fraudulent preference is rather strangely worded, "Let effect be given to the 92nd section according to the plain meaning of the words used," said the learned speaker, "and according to what I believe was the real intention of those commercial men who influenced the legislation, and, if need be, expressly abolish the doctrine established by judicial decision as to pressure by the creditor, and mixed motive on the part of the debtor, and either repeal the proviso at the end of the section, or restrict its operation in accordance with the views taken by Lord Selborne in Butcher v. Stead." Does Mr. Daniel seriously believe that the decisions upon the 92nd section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, violate the plain meaning of the words used by the Legislature? or that Judges should interpret statutes according to what they suppose to be the views of commercial men who are alleged to have influenced the Legislature in passing those statutes? That would certainly be an interpretation of the ignotum per ignotius. From the words used it is hard to say which the speaker thought had gone astray, the Judges or the Legislature. If the former, the error has been wide-spread indeed, infecting, as it does, the greatest of our living lawyers; if the latter, what becomes of the "plain meaning of the words used"? If Judges overlook the plain meaning of an enactment, we fear it will be quite useless to ask them to adopt as a canon of construction something of whose existence even they cannot take judicial notice. Mr. Daniel further suggests that protection should only be given to those creditors who received their debts when due and payable in the ordinary course of business, or in pursuance of and in accordance with an express contract, and who, when they received their debts, were ignorant of the insolvent condition of the debtor; and that the distinction which now exists in rights and liabilities between creditors under £50, and creditors above that sum should be abolished; and, lastly, that the payments by a creditor (knowing himself to be insolvent) of any unsecured debts, whether void against the preferred creditor or not, should be declared to be a misdemeanor. Why should not, bankruptcy itself be declared to be an indictable offence in certain cases, as, for instance, when it results from reckless trading. We are not in favour of extending the scope of the criminal law, but we think that there is room for more stringent provisions with respect to the conduct of persons who embark in or carry on trade, and speculate with the property of others. So far, however, as the innocent creditor who receives what is justly due to him is concerned, we think the existing law sound and equitable. Why should he be called upon to refund money which is admittedly due to him, and which has been received by him without any notice of the insolvent state of the debtor? The law says he shall not be called upon to refund it; no satisfactory reason for the alteration has, in our opinion, been suggested.

The alteration suggested in the law of time bargains is that claims for differences upon time bargains should, in the case of traders, be treated as voluntary debts, and not be allowed to rank for dividend with bona fide creditors for value. "Mere gambling debts are not provable," said Mr. Daniel, "because no action can be brought for their recovery, and I would extend this prohibition to balances claimed by brokers from traders for differences upon time bargains. . . . Transactions of sale and purchase, not for investment or conversion, but for speculation merely, depending upon the rise or fall of the market, or a given future day, without any intention on either side to buy or sell, are not legitimate commercial transactions, and evidently do not involve the same results to the debtor's estate as trade transactions for value—they do not increase the debtor's assets." This would be very true assuming that the loss was all on one side; but are the debtor's assets never increased by time bargains? This subject, however, as well as that of accommodation bills, has only an incidental connection with the subject of bankruptcy, nor can either of them be considered in a satisfactory manner, unless it is treated quite apart from questions of bankruptcy.

Under the second head, namely, that relating to procedure and practice, Mr. Daniel suggests that the principle of leaving the administration of the estate to the creditors should be left intact; that the powers of internal management should be increased rather than diminished, interference by the court being limited to protection of the debtor's property, prevention and redress of wrong and injury to it, determination of all questions affecting the property of the debtor, or his rights and liability in respect of any property which, if realised, would be available for distribution among his creditors. Then follow some remarks with respect to the preliminary proceedings for placing the estate of the debtor under the control of the creditors, proceedings for adjudication, liquidation proceedings, and costs. Mr. Daniel has, on the whole, formed a favourable opinion of the working of the Act of 1869, and objects to the introduction of new machinery where the old has been found to work well. Thus when the Lord Chancellor in his Bill proposes an entirely new machinery for the initiation of proceedings against insolvent debtors, Mr. Daniel objects to the clauses because, as he says, "their effect would be to subvert the existing system which has now become pretty well understood by all concerned in its working; and except where its several parts have been abused, or the duties involved in it have been neglected, has upon the whole been proved to be capable of working satisfactorily." We are not able to consider his remarks under this head at any length; but we are the less troubled on this account, inasmuch as there will be ample time for the discussion of procedure and practice when the Lord Chancellor's promised measure is brought forward. As to the rest of Mr. Daniel's proposals, namely, those proposing a change in substantive law, we can only say, as we said before, two out of the three questions to which the proposals relate, cannot fairly be considered in any examination of the Law of Bankruptcy.

THE USE OF EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE TO SUPPLEMENT OR CONTROL DOCUMENTS OF TITLE.

VIII.—EQUITABLE PRESUMPTIONS.

(Continued from p. 405.)

6. Joint Purchasers.

IN Caddick v. Skidmore (2 D. & J. 52), A., a lessee of a mine, agreed with B. that they should become partners in the mine, paying the reserved rent, sub-letting the mine and dividing the profits thereof. The only written evidence was a receipt signed by A., and given to B., for a sum as B.'s share of the head rent of the mine, the sum being exactly half of the rent. Both parties admitted the adventure was to be joint, but there was a conflict on the point whether B. was to contribute a sum as capital. Lord Chancellor Cranworth held that the parties were distinctly at issue as to what the contract was; that the very object of the Statute of Frauds was to prevent parol evidence being gone into to elucidate that which the parties had failed to make distinct by reducing it into writing, and that this was a conclusive answer to the claim of the plaintiff.

Forster v. Hale (3 Ves. 707), was cited with approval by Lord Justice Turner in Smith v. Matthews (3 De G. F. & J. 139). Mr. Roundell Palmer sought to extend its principle, and argued that when there is a writing showing that there is a trust, its terms may be established by parol evidence, that the statute was satisfied by holding that a man cannot be made a trustee unless there is an admission of trusteeship under his hand. The Lords Justices Turner and Bruce thought that this would let in the mischief that the statute was intended to guard against, and held that although the original creation of a trust of lands need not be in writing, still that there must be some writing, not only denoting a trust, but also what the trust is. This ruling, though in accordance with Kirby v. Hale, goes further than some of the old authorities. For example, Hendall v. Morgan (12 Ves. 67), where Sir William Grant, M.R., distinguished the requirements of sects 7 and 4 of the Statute of Frauds. Sect. 7 merely requires written evidence of the existence of a trust. Sect. 4 requires that the very agreement, whether in consideration of marriage or otherwise, be in writing and signed by the party to be charged thereby.

Though the presumption is of the utmost importance in its application to mortgages, to trusts, and others, and to simple joint adventures in land, its application to cases of partnership, where land is used for partnership purposes though not as the staple, is, perhaps, still more frequent, for the maxim "Jus accrevendi inter mercatores non habet locum" requires a special agreement to exclude it. The following summary from Mr. Justice Lindley's book on partnership, thus describes the principal differences between co-ownership and partnership: (1) Lindley on Partnership and Company, p. 69.)

1. Co-ownership is not necessarily the result of agreement; partnership is.
2. Co-ownership does not necessarily involve community of profit or loss; partnership does.
3. One co-owner can, without the consent of the others, transfer the interest to a stranger, so as to put him in the same position as regards the other owners as the transferor himself was before the transfer; a partner cannot do this.
4. One co-owner is not, as such, the agent, real or implied, of the others; a partner is.
5. One co-owner has no lien on the thing owned in common for outlays or expenses, or for what may due from the others as their share of a common debt. A partner has.
6. One co-owner of land is entitled to have it divided between himself and co-owners, but not (except by virtue of a recent statute) to have it sold against their consent. A partner has no right to partition in specie, but is entitled on dissolution to have the partnership property, whether land or not, sold, and the proceeds divided.
7. As between the real and personal representatives of a co-owner of freehold land, his share is in equity as well as at law, real estate; whilst as between the real and personal representatives of a deceased partner his share of partnership freehold property is in equity treated as personal estate.
8. Co-ownership not necessarily existing for the sake of gain, and partnership existing for no other purpose, the remedies by way of account and otherwise which one co-owner has against the others, are in many important respects different from and less extensive than those which one partner has against his co-partners. When, however, co-owners of property employ it with a view to profits and divide the profits obtained by its employment, the difference, if any, between them and partners becomes very obscure. The point to be determined is whether, from all the circumstances of the case, an agreement for the partnership ought to be inferred.

Partnership resting upon agreement and ownership upon title, joint evidence is, of course, most important in establishing the one or the other. But the discussion here of the rules for its admission would lead us into too long a digression. They will find a more appropriate place under the head of written contracts. We therefore return to the maxim, "Jus accrevendi inter mercatores non habet locum;" (Ooke upon Littleton.)

To such an extent is this maxim carried, that real estate belonging to the partnership is in equity converted into personality. And not only so during the lives of the partners, it descends to their personal representatives: (Griffith's Institutes of Equity, p. 125-127.) Still it is to be remarked, that the partners may agree that, though partners, each shall continue joint owner of the realty. Howard v. Moberg (1 L. Rep. 6 Eq. Ch. 479, and 4 Ch. App. 688) is a good example of the application of the presumption and of its support by voluminous extrinsic evidence. Co-owners of land worked a quarry on part the remainder they leased for agricultural purposes. Profits of the undivided profits of the quarry were as custom offered, employed in purchasing other lands to add thereto. Some of these lands were conveyed on express or implied trusts for the persons entitled to the profits. One of the co-owners, a woman, married. She made a settlement bringing into the lands as real estate, and conveying her shares and interest in the entire property on trust for her separate use for life remainder to her husband remainder in default of issue for her next of kin, her heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns. After her marriage further purchases were made with undivided profits for the same purpose, and similar formal and informal conveyances executed. In the manager's books of account the purchases of land were treated as purchases of stock in trade. These accounts were duly inspected and audited by the husband of the married woman. She died without issue. The Court of Appeal agreed with the Master of the Rolls, and held that her share in the land purchased after her marriage was real estate in personalty. They also held that, being made with savings of income which were not comprised in the settlement, it was the property of her heir-at-law, and not of her husband. Hills v. Parker, in the House of Lords, is an example of extrinsic evidence being used to rebut, and not to fortify, the presumption. P. had a lease of salt works, and entered into partnership with H., bringing the partnership capital in consideration of H.'s brother advancing money to the firm and taking an underlease by way of mortgage for the same. A dispute arose at the sale of the lease whether it did not continue the separate property of P., subject to the use of the firm while the partnership lasted. The House of Lords held that it was a partnership asset. The following circumstances in evidence influenced their decision: the lease was at a rack-rent, the firm was to have the benefit of it, and was to continue during the currency of the lease. The equity of redemption was, on the mortgage being paid off, to be conveyed to the firm: (4 L. T. Rep. N. S. 746; 7 Jur. Rep. N. S. 833.)

(To be continued.)

THE JURISDICTION OF COUNTY COURTS.

At a time like the present, when the legal atmosphere is charged with rumours and suggestions of changes in, and extensions of the jurisdiction of County Courts, it will not be amiss to consider the limits and nature of the jurisdiction with which those courts are already invested. A very cursory examination of the question will afford ample proof that the uninterrupted tendency of legislation from the first institution of County Courts in their present form down to the last session of Parliament, has been to extend the powers with which they were originally clothed. By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, "An Act for the more easy recovery of small debts and demands," County Courts were given jurisdiction over pleas of personal actions where the debt or damage claimed was not more than £20, except in cases where the title to any corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments or to any toll, fair, market, or franchise was in question, or in which the validity of any devise, bequest, or limitation under a will or settlement was disputed, or in cases where the action was for malicious prosecution, or for libel or slander, criminal conversation, seduction, or breach of promise of marriage. By the same Act, jurisdiction was given for the recovery of possession of tenements where the value of the premises or the rent did not exceed £50 yearly. Four years after the passing of this Act another was passed to extend and amend its provisions. The first section of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 61, enacted that the jurisdiction should extend to the recovery of any debt, damage, or demand not exceeding the sum of £50. The 19 & 20 Vict. c. 108 allowed an action to be brought where the claim was reduced by set-off to £50, but the jurisdiction of the court might be extended by consent to cases where the court would otherwise have no jurisdiction. The 23rd section, whilst it maintained the existing prohibition in respect of actions for crim. con., provided with respect to all other actions which may be brought in any Superior Court of Common Law, if both parties agree in writing that a County Court named shall be empowered to try such action. It need scarcely be remarked that any action may now be tried by consent in a County Court, since the action for criminal conversation has been abolished.

The County Courts Act 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142) still further extended the jurisdiction to all actions of ejectment when the annual value of the property does not exceed 20l.; and to try any action in which the title to any corporeal or incorporeal hereditaments are in question where neither the rent nor value exceeds 20l. But it is provided that the defendant in any such action of ejectment, or his landlord, may, within a month from the service of the writ, apply to a Judge at chambers for a summons to the plaintiff to show cause why such action should not be tried in one of the Superior Courts, on the ground that the title to lands or hereditaments of greater annual value than 20l. would be affected by the decision in such an action. The same Act also gives important powers of transferring actions to County Courts. Before the passing of this Act a Judge of a Superior Court had power on the application of either party after issue joined in an action of contract for a sum not exceeding 50l., to order the cause to be tried in a County Court. By the Act of 1867 a defendant is empowered to apply to a Judge for the trial of such an action in the County Court, and the action shall be so tried unless the plaintiff shows good cause to the contrary.

Another extensive branch of County Court jurisdiction was conferred by the County Courts Act of 1863, namely, the main part of the equitable jurisdiction. By that Act, County Courts may take cognizance of suits of the following description when the amount involved does not exceed £500: Suits by creditors, legatees, heirs-at-law, or next of kin, against or for an account or administration of personal or real or real and personal estate; suits for the execution of trusts; suits for foreclosure or redemption; or for enforcing any charge or lien; suits for specific performance or for the delivering up or cancelling any agreement for the sale or purchase of any property; proceedings under the Trustee Relief Act, or under the Trustee Acts; proceedings relating to the maintenance or advancement of infants; suits for the dissolution or winding-up of partnerships; proceedings for orders in the nature of injunctions requisite for the granting relief in the above cases, or for stay of proceedings at law to recover any debt provable under a decree for the administration of an estate made by the court to which application for the order to stay proceedings is made. Equitable jurisdiction had been conferred by other Acts, as by the Charitable Trusts Acts (16 & 17 Vict. c. 137, s. 33; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 136, s. 11), as well as by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 112; 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63; and 25 & 26 Vict. c. 87. Then followed the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 71), by the operation of which any County Court might be invested with Admiralty jurisdiction, and the jurisdiction itself was extended by an Act passed in the following year (32 & 33 Vict. c. 51), the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Amendment Act 1869. In addition to these, various heads of jurisdiction must be enumerated a number of others—jurisdiction in bankruptcy and jurisdiction under various Acts passed since the beginning of 1874. A bare enumeration of the latter is sufficient to show, what has already been adverted to, the tendency of the Legislation to increase the jurisdiction of County Courts. Of the measures of 1874 we may mention the Building Societies' Act, the Alkali Act, the Married Women's Property Amendment Act, the Infants' Relief Act, the Attorneys' and Solicitors' Act, the Vendor and Purchaser Act, and Intestates' Widows and Children Act. Of the measures of 1875, it will suffice to mention the Public Health Act, the Friendly Societies' Act, the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, the Land Transfer Act, the Employers and Workmen Act, the Agricultural Holdings (England) Act, and the Copyright of Designs Act. All these Acts affect County Courts more or less closely.

The time has now come when the Legislature may be fairly called upon to give some attention to the position of County Courts in the judicial system of the country. Originally called into existence to meet pressing demands, their jurisdiction has grown up bit by bit and step by step into a chaotic mass, with incongruities and illogical distinctions that serve no useful purpose whatever. County Courts, says the Legislature, shall have no jurisdiction in certain cases. Why? Because the legal questions involved are too intricate and difficult for a single judge overburdened with petty routine actions? Not at all. But because the amount at stake is beyond a certain sum. Thus the Legislature in its wisdom seems to sanction the absurd doctrine that the legal principles applicable to a case depend upon the amount at issue. When the original jurisdiction was conferred upon County Courts, there was good reason for the limits assigned. The illogical character of the distinction remaining in force is obvious from the simple fact that there is no relation between the amount of money at stake and the difficulty of determining questions of law or fact. This seems to have dawned upon the Legislature, for actions may, by consent of the parties, be tried irrespective of the amount involved. This limitation to the jurisdiction we think is doomed. There is not a single valid reason for its support. Then comes the question whether it is not more expedient to bring the County Courts into closer relation with the Superior Courts by making the former courts of first instance, than to pile Act upon Act, and provision upon provision limiting or extending their jurisdiction, with no definite principle in view. This view has so much to commend it that, in spite of some misgiving, we think it commendable on the grounds of simplicity and uniformity. But we must confess that we do not look with favour upon extensions of the jurisdiction of the County Courts where there is no right of appeal granted. All appeals, too, should, as a general rule, be of right. If, then, County Courts were transformed into courts of first instance, with a jurisdiction co-extensive with that of the Supreme Court, the block experienced in the latter would probably be to a great extent removed, but unless the number of County Court Judges was largely increased, the block would only be removed to the courts below. It has been suggested, and we think the suggestion a good one, that in certain cases plaintiffs might have the option of bringing their actions in the Superior Courts in the first instance. This would tend to relieve the courts where an appeal would be a matter of course. Another suggestion is that subordinate Judges should be appointed to try cases where little or no legal knowledge was required. This, too, would give the County Court Judges more time to devote to actions requiring a careful weighing of legal principles. But, however desirable it may be to transform the existing County Courts into courts of first instance, such a change cannot be brought about without many important modifications in the present staff of County Court officials.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

WE are glad to be able to announce that those—and they are many in number—who suppose that the Council of the Incorporated Law Society of the United Kingdom has done all its purposes doing, in regard to the long-pending question between the society and the solicitors on the one hand, and the Benchers of the Inns of Court and the Bar on the other, in reference to a freer interchange between the two branches of the Profession, are entirely mistaken; and solicitors who so think, do the members of the council a great injustice. We have often enough dealt at length with the views on this question of recent presidents of the council of the chief law society, especially those of Mr. F. T. Bircham and Mr. G. B. Gregory, M.P., to render it unnecessary that we should reproduce those opinions on this, to solicitors, important matter, on the present occasion. Looking, however, to the fact that the Council of the Incorporated Law Society is at the present time considering, under the presidency of Mr. H. T. Young, what steps, if any, ought to be taken by the council during the next session of Parliament, we deem it expedient to inform solicitors, and indeed the whole Profession, exactly how this question stands at the present moment. Section 3 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127 (1860) provides in effect that a barrister may, after he has ceased to be a barrister, enter into articles of clerkship to a solicitor for a period of three years, at the expiration of which time, having passed the necessary examinations, he may be admitted on the Roll of Solicitors of the Supreme Court. On the 10th of Nov., 1874, the Council of the Incorporated Law Society of the United Kingdom (through Mr. F. T. Bircham, the then president of the society) applied to the Benchers of the several Inns of Court, asking for a modification of the prohibitive rules, which, in effect, preclude solicitors from procuring a call to the Bar. After a considerable lapse of time the Benchers sent a reply which, shortly stated, amounted to a total disregard for the merits of the question, and to the adoption of a tu quoque argument, by simply referring the Council to the section of the Act of 1860, above alluded to. Upon this, the Council of the Law Society, on the 4th of February, 1876, resolved:—"That with a view of facilitating the access of solicitors to the Bar, and of barristers to the Roll of Solicitors, it is expedient that the law should be amended, and that barristers of not less than five years' standing should, on quitting the Bar and passing such examination as this Council shall from time to time approve, be admitted solicitors." A copy of this resolution was at once forwarded to the treasurers of the four Inns of Court, and we understand that recently the Council of the Incorporated Law Society has received an unsatisfactory reply from the Benchers—not that anything of a favourable character was looked for by any member of the council or the society. The Parliamentary committee of the Legal Practitioners' Society framed two clauses, which aimed at giving facilities for passing from one branch of the Profession to the other, and these were comprised in a Bill which was introduced into Parliament early in the last session. Remarkable to say, however, the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, although it took no steps itself to secure the interference of the Legislature, commented on the clauses of the Legal Practitioners' Bill in their last annual report, by saying, "A Bill has since been brought into Parliament by Mr. W. T. Charley and Mr. W. Gordon (solicitor), in which are incorporated clauses proposed with a view of facilitating the change from one branch of the Profession to the other, but not to the extent suggested by the council." That the council will go to the full extent here referred to in their Bill, which will be introduced into Parliament early next session, is, we are happy to say, now quite removed beyond the region of doubt, and when it is remembered that a solicitor must actually have his name removed from the roll, and become entirely disconnected with an honourable profession, before he is even allowed to present himself for the preliminary examination in Latin and History, prior to being admitted as a student of an Inn of Court, we feel sure that every solicitor will agree with us that the latest action of the council of the Law Society is taken none too soon. There are now upwards of forty country Law Societies, and the council have a right to look for the hearty co-operation and support of the societies in the very difficult and onerous task which it is about to take in hand and deal with—as far as it is able, in a vigorous and decisive manner.

THE operation of the Judicature Acts and Rules has done very little to alter or improve the practice in reference to sheriffs' warrants upon writs of fi. fa. Even as regards country under-sheriffs' officers, the mode of procedure in regard to granting and executing warrants issued upon the authority of such writs, varies in different parts of England and Wales, but, as a rule, when once a sheriff's warrant under a writ of fi. fa. has been executed, if only by mere seizure of goods, no further use can be made of such writ of fi. fa., so much so, that where a levy takes place which partly satisfies the sheriff's warrant, a fresh writ and warrant must be issued before a sheriff's officer will again take possession of the defendant's chattels. Then again, as regards country sheriffs, the writ of fi. fa. is usually required to be taken to the London agent of the under-sheriff, who issues the warrant and sends it to the sheriff's officer, while cases are not wanting in which such London agents refuse to issue the warrant, but send the writ of fi. fa. direct to the under-sheriff. In the case of London and Middlesex, the practice is in some respects very different, a second warrant can sometimes be issued upon one and the same writ of fi. fa. instead of issuing a second writ of fi. fa. before a second warrant can be obtained as we have already said is required in most country cases, and again it is a common practice in London to take writs of fi. fa. direct to the sheriff's officers without the intervention of the under-sheriff. We are aware that a gr uncertainty prevails in the minds of professional men in many parts of the country in reference to the practice which we have here considered, and which is not only not uniform, but admits of much improvement and simplification. The abolition of imprisonment for debt, and the many devices which are now too frequently resorted to for the purpose of cheating creditors and depriving them of the benefit of writs of execution, render it more than ever necessary that special facilities should be given for the seizure of goods by virtue of such writs. Sheriffs' officers not unfrequently take possession, and withdraw from possession upon receiving the written undertaking of solicitors of execution creditors, and we incline to the opinion that when once a writ of f. fa. has been issued, no second similar writ ought to be called for by a sheriff for the purpose of levying a balance of a judgment debt, the previous payment having been made in connection with the sheriff's warrant, whether by seizure and sale or by payment consequent upon a levy.

THE formation of the Shropshire Law Society, which we announced in our last issue, adds another to the gradually increasing number of law societies of solicitors. When Mr. Thomas Marshall, M.A., registrar of the Leeds County Court, hon. secretary of the Leeds Incorporated Law Society, and now a member of the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, read his paper on "The Organisation of the Profession" at a conference of solicitors held at Birmingham, in 1873, he could hardly have anticipated that in the short space of three years such strides would have been made towards the accomplishment of that system of organisation among solicitors, which he is well known to have long advocated. Among the country Law Societies now existing, and which have been formed by and for the benefit of, solicitors exclusively, may be mentioned the following, forty-one in number. The associated Provincial Law Societies, which was organised by Mr. Marshall, M.A., of Leeds, and Mr. Jevons, of Liverpool, and which did good service by conferring with the council of the Incorporated Law Society when the Lands Title and Transfer Act was passing through Parliament: the association of County Court Registrars, who are in almost all cases solicitors; the Justices' Clerks' Society, which has frequently rendered assistance to those solicitors who are the public legal advisers of the lay magistracy throughout England and Wales. Then there are Law Societies at Bath, Birmingham, Bolton, Bristol (Incorporated), Bradford, Carnarvon and Anglesea, Cambridgeshire, Chester, Devon and Exeter, Denbighshire and Flintshire, Gloucestershire, Hull, Kent, Leeds (Incorporated), Lancaster, Leicester, Liverpool, Manchester, Norfolk and Norwich, North Londale, Newcastle-upon-Tyne and Gateshead, Northampton, Nottingham, Plymouth, Portsmouth and Gosport, Preston, Sussex, South Durham and North Yorkshire, Sheffield and District, Somersetshire, Stockport, Sunderland, Surrey, Wigan, Wakefield and District, Wolverhampton, Worcester and Worcestershire, and Yorkshire. Eleven of these societies are associated with the Legal Practitioners' Society in London, but at present it cannot be said that there is anything like the organisation among solicitors and their law societies which is so much needed. Such a thing as united action by the law societies here named is not recorded, nor does the prospect of such a valuable co-operation appear to be near at hand. Nor must it be supposed that all the law societies that are required in order to work out in time a substantial organisation even exist. Towns with a very large number of solicitors practising in them are still without a law society. For instance, Blackburn with 35 solicitors, Cheltenham 45, Croydon 35, Darlington 27, Derby 51, Devonport 22, Doncaster 30, Durham 40, Halifax 36, Hereford 31, Huddersfield 32, Ipswich 41, Newport (Mon.) 38, Oxford 39, Rochdale 32, Shrewsbury 38, Walsall 36, Wigan 39, and Yarmouth 32. Solicitors will, therefore, see that what has been done serves specially to open our eyes as to what remains yet to be accomplished.

WE understand that the most recent practice, in regard to proceedings by way of substituted service, insisted on by the masters at the Common Law Judges' Chambers, is that eight days must be allowed to elapse between the time of leaving the copy writ at the defendant's residence and the time of applying upon affidavit for an order for leave to proceed as though personal service had been effected. It is not, however, now considered necessary, as formerly, to make any search for appearance until having complied with an order to proceed to be signed. Under it necessary to make a search and the affidavit in support leave to proceed was accompanied by an affidavit of non-appearance. The fact that the rules of the Supreme Court provide for a defendant giving written notice of appearance to the plaintiff in certain cases no doubt partly explains the determination of the masters to do away with the first search for appearance formerly insisted upon.

WHATEVER may be said to the contrary, there is no doubt that the medical profession is much more on the alert than solicitors to arrest the illegal practices of unauthorised and unqualified persons. Hardly a week passes without complaint reaching us of some so-called accountant or agent, who, in a greater or less degree, usurps the functions of solicitors, but it is only very occasionally that the law is enforced against these non-professional pests. A person named Hamilton, who stated that he was an American doctor, and produced a document evidencing the truth of such assertion, has been summoned to Marlborough-street police court by the East London Medical Defence Association for unlawfully pretending to be and using the title of a doctor of medicine. The defendant's solicitor alleged that his client displayed from the window of his house the diploma which he had received in New York, and contended that this was sufficient for the purposes of the Act. Mr. Knox, the magistrate, said that all turned upon the genuineness of this testimonial, and adjourned the case for further evidence. This is vigilance with a vengeance, and the solicitors' law societies will do well to take a leaf out of the books of their brethren of the medical profession. Here, for instance, is a circular letter which has been lately received by the clients of certain solicitors practising in Newcastle-upon-Tyne: "H. and S., Public Accountants, Trustees, and Receivers in Bankruptcy.—Sir,—Mr. —, finding himself unable to meet pressing engagements, owing to depression of trade in the mining districts, has, after due consideration, advised us to call a meeting of the whole of his creditors with a view to make arrangements. For this purpose a meeting will be held at our office on Monday, the inst., at 2.30 p.m., when a statement will be submitted for the guidance of creditors, ascertaining the best course to be adopted in the matter. This course is recommended in order to save expensive proceedings. We may also mention that there is a reasonable prospect of the said — finding approved security for payment. Kindly send us a statement of your present account; and should it not be convenient for you to attend the meeting, if you will favour us with your views, we shall faithfully submit them to the meeting." And a solicitor, in sending us this circular letter, which he received from his client, observes: "I think it but right that this should be taken notice of in your valuable publication. I think if solicitors would combine to pay a suitable salary to a duly qualified man, who would devote his time to putting down such abuses as this, the public would be greatly benefited," and we may add, so would solicitors; and it has often been a question with us whether it would not be well for the Incorporated Law Society to give some substantial support to the Legal Practitioners' Society, so that the latter society should be in a position to undertake prosecutions under the Stamp Act and the several solicitors' Acts. If necessary the nominal subscription of the Legal Practitioners' Society should be increased also. Anything is better than continual grumbling, which leads to no satisfactory results. But then, again, tooting for legal business is certainly in some senses to be excused, when professional men are to be found who advertise thus in the Oxford and Cambridge Undergraduates' Journal: "The debts and liabilities of members of the universities arranged for them, or settled. Every kind of banking and legal business transacted. Established 1854. London bankers: Bank of England.—Mr. St. Swithin Williams, solicitor and private banker, 136, High-street, Oxford."

IN another column our readers will find a valuable and interesting paper by Mr. E. T. Clark, a solicitor of the Supreme Court and an Incorporated Law Society's Prisoner, which paper the learned gentleman read at the recent meeting of solicitors at Oxford.

NOTES ON NEW DECISIONS.

ACTION OF DEBT—COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT 1852. s. 11.—STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—ADMINISTRATION SUMMONS.—Where an action of debt has been commenced in a common law court within six years from the debt accruing, and the writ has been duly renewed, pursuant to s. 11 of the Common Law Procedure Act 1852, the renewal of the writ keeps alive the debt, but only for the purposes of the particular action, and not for the purpose of taking proceedings in another court. In March 1869, A. died indebted to the plaintiff. In Jan. 1875 (within six years from the death of A.), the plaintiff commenced an action for debt against the defendant, the administrator of A., by issuing a writ out of the Court of Common Pleas. This writ was never served upon the defendant nor renewed. In July 1875, while the writ remained in force (but more than six years from the death of A.), the plaintiff took out a summons against the defendant to administer the estate of A.: Held, that as at the date of the summons the debt was kept alive, by virtue of the writ, only for the purposes of the action in the Court of Common Pleas, and not for the purpose of taking proceedings in another court, the Statute of Limitations was a complete bar to the plaintiff's claim: (Fleet v. Manly, 35 L. T. Rep. N. 8,307. Ch. Div.)

PRACTICE—FUND IN COURT—PROCEEDS OF SALE OF SETTLED ESTATE—PAYMENT OUT TO TENANT IN TAIL—DISSENTING DECREE.—Certain real estate of which a lunatic was tenant in tail was sold under a private Act of Parliament, and the proceeds were paid into court in the matter of the lunacy, and invested in consols, which the Act directed to be treated as real estate. The lunatic died, and the tenant in tail in remainder converted his estate tail into a base fee, and subsequently died. Held, that the fund could not be paid out to the persons claiming through him, except upon the production of a properly executed deed enlarging the base fee: (Re Reynolds, 35 L. T. Rep. N. 8,293. Ct. of App.)

PRACTICE—PLEADING—DISCOVERY—PRODUCTION OF DOCUMENTS—INTERROGATION OF PLAINTIFF BY DEFENDANT.—The defendant to an action, after filing an affidavit to the effect that he was ignorant of the claim made by the plaintiff and was unable to make a defence unless certain information was given and documents handed over to him by the plaintiff, applied for leave to deliver interrogatories to the plaintiff before putting in his defence. Held, that leave must be refused, and the defendant must make the best defence he could, and then interrogate: (Disney v. Longbourn, 35 L. T. Rep. N. 8,301. Chanc. Div.)

JUDICIAL STATISTICS.

THE judicial statistics for 1875, which instead of being published in the early part of the present year, have only lately issued from the press, furnish information of a more than usually interesting character. Part II. deals with Common Law, Equity, Civil, and Canon Law.

The introduction states that "for the judicial statistics of 1875 returns have been furnished, and are given under the usual arrangement in the tables, for all the Courts of Civil Jurisdiction. For the courts (excepting the Court of Chancery), the jurisdiction of which is transferred by the Judicature Acts to the High Court of Justice, the information given is for the ten months ending on the 31st October. For the Court of Chancery, the returns for which have heretofore been for twelve months commencing on the 1st November, the information given in the present volume is for the twelve months commencing on the 1st November, 1874, in continuation of the returns for the previous twelve months, and ending at the same date as the returns for the other courts transferred to the High Court of Justice.

The statistics of the proceedings of the Supreme Court of Judicature to be given in future years will thus be uniform in the date of their commencement, for the several divisions of the High Court of Justice and for the Court of Appeal established under the Acts.

COMMON LAW COURTS.

The return made by the Queen's Coroner and Attorney and the Master of the Crown Office shows certain of the proceedings under the peculiar jurisdiction of the Court of Queen's Bench on the Crown side.

It is explained by these officers, for 1875 as for previous years, that the nature of the offences tried is, conspiracies, perjuries, assaults, nuisances, and other misdemeanours, and occasionally, but rarely, felonies; but that no record is kept in the Crown Office of the number of cases tried, as the trials take place in London and Middlesex, and at the assizes for the other counties: nor of the number of persons tried: nor of the number acquitted or convicted, except in cases in which judgment is entered up in the Queen's Bench, and except in cases of fines: nor of sentences, except where they are passed by the Court in Banc.

In 1875 there were six persons convicted, and two acquitted, against eight: convicted and two acquitted in the previous year, in which cases judgment was entered up in the Queen's Bench. In 1875, in each of four different cases a fine of £50 was imposed, and in one case of 1s. all for misdemeanours.

In 1874, Thomas Castro, otherwise Orton, otherwise Tebborne, was sentenced to 14 years' penal servitude for perjury. Henry Jacobs was sentenced to six months' imprisonment for contempt. Four other persons were fined, one 250s.

for contempt, and to be imprisoned until such fine should be paid; one, one farthing; and one, one shilling for misdemeanour; and one, 200l. for libel.

The total number of proceedings in 1875 appears to be as given in the following abstract, the corresponding numbers for 1874 being also shown for comparison, and the numbers for 1865. The different proceedings on each matter for 1875 are shown in the table:

	1875	1874	1865
Mandamus—applications on affidavit...	55	37	37
Quo Warranto—made absolute ...	28	23	10
Other special rules—made absolute ...	1	2	10
Habeas Corpus—Applications for ...	140	46	123
Writs granted ...	23	35	45
Certiorari Writs issued—by Court ...	19	43	23
by Judge ...	30	—	—
Writs of Prohibition ...	1	1	1
Orders of Sessions—Removed into ...	16	20	24
Queen's Bench ...	—	—	—
Special Cases under 13 & 13 Vict. c. 45, from Quarter Sessions ...	4	5	13
Special Cases under 30 & 21 Vict. c. 45, on Proceedings before Justices ...	61	47	34

It is not possible, it is stated in the returns, to give a correct account of the amount of costs taxed in the Crown Office, inasmuch as the bills of costs are not only often withdrawn from taxation when partly taxed, but when completed are sometimes taken away by the attorneys and not returned to the office.

The total amount of fees received for business done in the Crown Office in 1875, exclusive of business for the public departments for which no fees are received, was 727l. 11s. 1d., exceeding the amount for 1874 by 176l. 16s. 11d. This amount includes all the fees received at the office, not only in respect of the different items specified in the return, but also for other duties, as writs of subpoena and testificandum, copies of proceedings, &c. It is stated by Her Majesty's Coroner and Attorney, and the Master of the Crown Office, that this amount of fees gives no adequate idea of the business of the office, as the fees were reduced to mere nominal charges by the 6th and 7th Vict. c. 20, and further reduced by subsequent Acts. There are many court fees which are paid by parties proceeding in the Crown Office, which are not received by or for the office, but by other officers of the court, of which Her Majesty's Coroner and the Master have no account.

The process, practice, and mode of pleading in the three Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster having been similar on the plea side, the proceeding of each court for the ten months ending 31st October, as given in the returns for 1875, furnished by the masters, are shown in the following summary:

Proceedings in Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer.—Process issued: Writs of Summons issued, 60,062; Appearances entered, 20,461; Judgments, 21,834; Executions, 13,068; Hand Motions and on Side Bar Rules, 1334; Causes referred to Masters, 690. Matters heard: Motions for New Trials, 413; Other special Motions, 484; Appeals from County Courts, 19; Special Cases, 44; Demurrers, 45; Appeals from decisions of Justices, 5.

In the number of writs of summons issued up to 1872, there had been a continued decrease for some years. As compared with the number for 1872, the number for 1873 showed an increase of 3105, or 4.8 per cent., there having been a decrease of 1371, or 2.0 per cent., in 1872, as compared with the preceding year, and of 7363, or 10.1 per cent. in 1871, as compared with 1870, the number for 1870 having been less by 9118, or 11.1 per cent. than the number for 1869. As compared with 1873, the number for 1874 showed an increase of 1919, or 2.8 per cent. As compared with 1864, there was a decrease in 1874 amounting to 44,206 or 39.0 per cent.; as compared with the number for 1866, the highest recorded, the decrease in 1874 amounted to 64,210, or 48.2 per cent. It is, however, to be observed with regard to the Court of Exchequer, that the numbers of writs of summons given in the returns for previous years have included renewals. In the numbers for the Court of Queen's Bench and Common Pleas renewals have never been included, and for the Court of Exchequer they have been omitted for 1872, 1873, 1874, and 1875. The number is not great, but must affect the comparison between the years to some extent.

Adding to the numbers given in the above table for the first ten months of 1875 an equal proportion for the last two months, the total number of writs of summons issued would amount to 72,074, giving an increase of 3,124, or 4.5 per cent., on the total for 1874.

With the addition of the same proportion, the total number of appearances entered for 1875 would be 24,553, giving an increase of 155, or 0.6 per cent., on the number for 1874. The total number of judgments would be 26,200, being an increase of 1457, or 5.8 per cent., on the number for 1874. The total number of executions would be 15,705, being an increase of 537, or 3.5 per cent., on the number for 1874.

Since the passing of the Debtors Act of 1869, which came into operation on the 1st January, 1870, no writs of capias have been issued.

The total number of proceedings in 1875, under "process issued," as given in the foregoing table, with the addition of the proportion for the last two months, shows an increase, as compared with the number for 1874, of 5408, or 3.9 per cent., following an increase of 2534, or 1.9 per cent. in 1874, as compared with 1873, and of 2304, or 5.3 per cent. in 1873, as compared with 1872, there having been a considerable decrease in the numbers for each of the three preceding years.

As compared with 1865, the decrease in 1875, with the proportion for the last two months, amounts to 82,690, or 36.9 per cent.

Under "matters heard," as compared with 1874, there is a decrease in the number for 1875 of 218, or 15.2 per cent.; as compared with 1865, there is a decrease of 198, or 14.0 per cent.

The number of bills of costs taxed in the Court of Exchequer in 1875, exclusive of bills taxed under the statute, was 3589, or, adding the proportion for the two last months, 4306, against 3941 in 1874. No return is given under this head for the Court of Queen's Bench, or for the Court of Common Pleas.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless some other claimant sooner appear.]

AYTON (Wm. Scrope), of Allerton Hill, near Leeds, Esq. 46 Annuities for thirty years. Claimant, said Wm. S. Ayton.

CLARKE (Candell), of Wymondham, Norfolk, gentleman, and WINGFIELD (Wm.), of Wickwood, Norfolk, gentleman. 472 1/2s. Three per Cent. Annuitants. Claimants, said C. Clarke and Wm. Wingfield.

CORSENS (Sidney), of Bombay Native Infantry, CORSENS (Edith Maud Stanfield), a minor, and CORSENS (Stanfield Ellis), of Cornwall-terrace, Regent's Park, Esq. 231 1/2s. 6d. Three per Cent. Annuitants. Claimant, said Edith M. S. Corsens, spinster, formerly a minor, now of age, the survivor.

CORSENS (Lieut. Sidney), of Sidecup-house, Kent; CORSENS (Edith Maud Stanfield), a minor, daughter of the said Sidney Corsens; STANFIELD (Annie), of New-croft, widow; and CORSENS (Stanfield Ellis), of Sherborne-lane, Esq. 212 1/2s. 2d. Three per Cent. Annuitants. Claimant, said Edith M. S. Corsens, spinster, formerly a minor, now of age, the survivor.

JOHNSTON (Jno.), of Bath, gentleman; WALKER (Geo. Gustavus), of Cranford, Dumfriesshire, Esq.; and RYLE (Rev. Jno. Chas.), of Stradock, Suffolk. One dividend on the sum of 1000s. 8d. Reduced Three per Cent. Annuitants. Claimant said Jno. Johnstone.

LANCASTER (John), of Hindeley Hall, near Wigan, Esq.; HEWLETT (Alfred), of the Grange, Coppull, near Wigan, Esq.; and FLETCHER (John), of Clifton, near Manchester, Esq. One dividend on the sum of 213,105 1/2s. 2d. Three per Cent. Annuitants. Claimant, said John Lancaster.

RUSSELL (Right Hon. and Rev. Lord Wrottesley), rector of Chesham, Bucks; BARRINGTON (Rev. Lowther John), rector of West Tytherley, Hants; and NEWMAN (John), of Brands House, Hushenden, Esq.; and BLACKMAN (Rev. Charles), of Chesham, Bucks. 212 1/2s. 8d. New Three per Cent. Annuitants. Claimants, said Right Hon. and Rev. Lord W. Russell, the Hon. and Rev. Lowther J. Barrington, and John Newman, the survivors.

APPOINTMENTS UNDER THE JOINT-STOCK WINDING-UP ACTS.

BROWN (G. and J.) AND COMPANY.—Petition for winding up to be heard Nov. 10, before V.C. H.

CORNWALL CEMENT COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding up to be heard Nov. 11, before the M. R.

LIVERPOOL AND CONTINENTAL STEAMSHIP COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding up to be heard Nov. 11, before the M. R.

MAMMOTH COPPERMINE OF UTAH (LIMITED).—Petition for winding up to be heard Nov. 11, before the M. R.

NEW ROSARIO SILVER MINING COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding up to be heard Nov. 10, before V.C. M.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

COCKLE (Thos.), Hillbrow Haddenham, Isle of Ely, Cambridge, farmer. Nov. 27; Ephraim Wayman, solicitor, Cambridge. Dec. 11; M. R. at eleven o'clock.

HUXLEY (Joseph), 25, St. Martin's-lane, Fields, Chester, brewer and wine merchant. Nov. 30; Henry Martin, solicitor, Nantwich. Dec. 8; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

LOYD (Robert), Middleborough, York, ironmaster. Nov. 29; Jno. S. Stubbs, solicitor, Middleborough. Nov. 27; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

LINDO (Sarah), Stoke Newington, Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 11; E. W. Grosse, solicitor, 7, Lancaster-place, Strand, Middlesex. Dec. 21; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

POOLER (Geo.), Twicken, Devon, farmer. Dec. 1; Frederick Day, solicitor, South Molton, Devon. Dec. 15; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

SYERS (Morris Robert), 15, Oxford-street, Middlesex Music Hall proprietor. Dec. 10; Wm. Millman, solicitor, 9, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Dec. 15; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

TOMKINS (Anne) Leake, Lincoln, spinster. Dec. 1; Richard W. Shillington, solicitor, Boston, Lincoln. Dec. 11; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

YOUNG (Patterson), Seawa, near Penrith, Cumberland. Dec. 1; Harrison and Little, solicitors, Penrith. Dec. 14; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Parties are to be sent.

BURWASS (King), formerly of 21, Brixton-lane, London, but late of 18, King William-street, London, E.C., and of 354, Cambridge-street, Holloway, Middlesex, formerly Public and Treasurer of Langrune. Nov. 30; Blunt, Tebbe, and Lawford, solicitors, 25, Great-lane, London.

BURY (Henry), Brankome Tower, near Poole, Dorset. Dec. 31; Swinburne and Parker, solicitors, 25, Bedford-row, London.

BAKER (Henry), Melton Hall, Essex, Esq. Nov. 28; James S. Pope, solicitor, Trinity-street, Colchester.

BONE (Chas. B.), Redruth, Cornwall, agent. Nov. 27; Samuel T. G. Downing, solicitor, Redruth.

BINNS (Geo.), Hanover-street, Sheffield, grocer. Dec. 10; Geo. Binns, 1, Moorhead, Sheffield.

BLOOD (Jos. Howell), Witham, Essex, gentleman. Jan. 1; Wm. B. Blood, solicitor, Witham, Essex.

BOSCHY (Chas.), 25, Roupell-street, Lambeth, Surrey, licensed victualler. Nov. 27; Farmer and Robins, solicitors, 11, Pangloss-lane, London, E.C.

BEVAN (Samuel), late of The Grange, Ramsgate, Kent, and of Porteus House, Paddington, Middlesex, and formerly of Pangbourne, Berks, gentleman. Nov. 30; Bevan and Whitting, solicitors, 6, Old Jewry, London.

BESTOCK (Wm.), Bold-place, Liverpool, seaman. Jan. 23; F. Whitaker, Duchy of Lancaster Office, Lancaster-place, Strand, London.

BUTCHER (Wm.), 9, Waverley-place, St. John's-wood, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 1; N. Bennett, solicitor, 4, Furnival's-inn, London.

COLEMAN (Matthew T.), 4, Victoria-terrace, Surbiton, Kingston, Surrey, surveyor. Dec. 13; Trollope and Winchworth, solicitors, 51, Abingdon-street, Westminster.

CURRIER (Thomas), 3, St. Peter's-square, Wolverhampton, fruit-dealer. Dec. 30; John Riley, solicitor, Wolverhampton.

CIRCUIT (John Cubis), Rainham, Essex, farmer and market gardener. Dec. 1; Thomson, Son, and Brooks, solicitors, 15, Rood-lane, London.

CLARK (Jno.), 4, High-Swinburne-place, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, boot and shoe maker. Dec. 27; E. Clark, solicitor, 22, Granger-street, West, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

CHAMBERS, otherwise FELTOS (Caroline), formerly of 6, Bramley-terrace, South Bridge-road, Surrey, and late of 31, Hanover-street, Piccadilly, Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 4; Beale and Co., solicitors, 30, Waterloo-street, Birmingham.

DAVIS (Daniel), Cannacro, Stonehouse, Gloucester, gentleman. Feb. 1; Samuel Phipps, solicitor, Cannacro.

DICKER (Dr. Wm. H.), M.D., The Grange, St. Peter Port, Guernsey (formerly surgeon in H.M.'s service). Nov. 30; Alfred Guerin, (law advocate), Court-place, Guernsey.

FLETCHER (Aaron), Brimington, Derby, gentleman. Dec. 21; R. T. Gratton, solicitor, 5, Knifesmith-gate, Chesterfield.

FIELD (Right Rev. Edward), D.D. (late Bishop of Newfoundland), and late of Hamilton, Bermuda, West Indies. Dec. 12; Geo. Clarke, solicitor, Foregate-street, Worcester.

FRANCIS (Alfred), Waltham Abbey, Essex, a Lieut.-Colonel on the retired list of the Bengal Army. Dec. 11; M. and F. Davidson, solicitors, 35, Spring-gardens, London, S.W.

FLEURY (Margaret), 47, York-terrace, Everton, Liverpool, widow. Nov. 27; T. and W. Dodge and Phipps, solicitors, 15, Lord-street, Liverpool.

GINGER (Eather), formerly of Aston Clinton, Bucks, and late of 1, Briston-rise, Surrey, spinster. Dec. 9; James and Horwood, solicitors, Aylesbury, Bucks.

GREEN (Thos. Wm.), Fernside House, near Poole, Dorset, gentleman. Jan. 1; Chadwick and Sons, solicitors, Dewsbury.

GREY (Georgiana S.), late of Khandallah, Blackheath, Kent, and formerly of Malcolm Peth, St. Leonards-on-Sea, Sussex, widow. Dec. 30; Burn and Galloway, solicitors, 16, Fresham-street, London.

HAYDO (Patrick D.), The Priory, Sudbury, near Harrow, Middlesex, Esq. Dec. 9; Freshfield and Williams, solicitors, 5, Bank-buildings, London, E.C.

JAMES (Richard), formerly of Charnmouth-villa, Weston-super-Mare, but late of Holmer-villas, Hereford, Esq., late a Captain in the 2nd Warwickshire Militia. Nov. 30; Blunt, Tebbe, and Lawford, solicitors, 26, Gresham street, London.

JELL (Geo.), Lydd, Kent, hairdresser. Nov. 25; Henry Stringer, solicitor, new Romney, Kent.

JOHNSTON (Frances A.), 140, Queen's-road, Liverpool. Dec. 1; E. and E. L. Waugh, solicitors, Cockermouth.

JULIAN (Mordaunt), 34, St. Luke's-road-villas, Westbourne Park, Middlesex, Esq. Nov. 25; Jno. M'Clellan, solicitor, 50, Bedford-row, London.

JOY (Wm.), formerly of Fir Cottage, Canton, near Cardiff, Glamorgan, but late of Park Villa, Treowen, Aberdare, plasterer. Dec. 1; M. Heard, solicitor, 24, Trinity-street, Cardiff.

KENDALL (Wm.), Denshanger, Pansham, Northampton, farmer. Dec. 30; Jno. Parrott, solicitor, Stony Stratford.

KENDRICK (Elizabeth), 7, Philpot-street, Commercial-road, Middlesex, widow. Nov. 30; Morris, Stone, and Co., solicitors, 5, Finsbury-circus, London.

LUDLOW (Henry G. G.), Haywood House, Westbury, Wilts, Esq. Jan. 1; H. W. Pinniger, solicitor, Westbury.

MANGER (Thos.), formerly of Ewell, near Dover, but late of Buckland, Dover, gentleman. Dec. 16; P. B. Claris, solicitor, 38 and 39, Biggin-street, Dover.

MOSEY (Thos. A. B.), 11, St. James's-place, St. James's-street, Middlesex, Esq. Dec. 25; A. Balderston, solicitor, 32, Bedford-row, Middlesex.

MARTIN (Thos.), Gwennap, Cornwall, gentleman. Nov. 9; S. T. G. Downing, solicitor, Redruth, Cornwall.

NICHOLSON (Chas.), Netheredge, Sheffield, gentleman. Nov. 27; C. G. Esam, solicitor, 15, George-street, Sheffield.

PAGE (Henry), 26, Norfolk-square, Paddington, Middlesex, and of 2, Market-buildings, Mincing-lane, London, merchant. Nov. 30; C. O. Humphreys, solicitor, Gillespie-chambers, Holborn-viaduct, London.

PITCHARD (Taylor), 44, Camden-road, Holloway, Middlesex, Esq. Dec. 1; Shephard and Sons, solicitors, 32, Finsbury-circus, London.

PRELPS (Wm.), 18, Montague-place, Russell-square, Middlesex. Dec. 30; Hardisty and Rhodes, solicitors, 43, Great Marlborough-street, Middlesex.

PHILLIPS (Wm.), Fell Foot Cottages, near Staveley, West-morland, bobbin manufacturer. Dec. 12; C. G. Thomson and Wilson, solicitors, Finkle-street, Kendal.

ROBERTSON (Hon. John), 25, Sussex-square, Paddington, Middlesex, and of St. John's, New Brunswick, Canada. Dec. 31; F. L. Soames, solicitor, 10, New Inn, Strand, London.

ROSEWARNE (Richard), Coswinsawen, Gwinear, Cornwall, gentleman. Nov. 27; Samuel T. G. Downing, solicitor, Redruth, Cornwall.

ROBERTSON (Mary), Harrow Hotel, Hollington, Sussex, widow. Dec. 9; C. D. Jones, solicitor, 1, Harold-place, Hastings.

ROPER (Francis), Halifax, York, general ironmonger. Dec. 9; Wm. H. Boocock, solicitor, Silver-street, Halifax.

SCOTT (Geo.), late of Benilton, Sutton, Surrey, and of 44, Christian-street, St. George's-in-the-East, Middlesex, and formerly of Stratford, Essex, engineer. Dec. 8; Hillery and Co., solicitors, 3, Fenchurch-buildings, London.

SPRATT (Isaac), late of 18, Brook-street, formerly called Little Brook-street, Hanover-square, Middlesex, toyman. Nov. 30; W. F. Low, solicitor, 67, Wimpole-street, Cavendish-square, Middlesex.

SMITH (John), Halesworth, Suffolk, gentleman. Dec. 6; Musket and Garrod, solicitors, Dias, Norfolk.

SMITH (John), 10, Colterton Park, Sherburn, York, farmer. Feb. 1; Hett, Frost, and Hett, solicitors, Brigg.

SNYDER (Allan), 35, Queensborough-terrace, Baywater, Middlesex, and of Melbourn, Esq. Dec. 1; W. W. Gabriel, solicitor, 43, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

SCOTT (Harriet), 34, Lorrimer-road, Walworth, Surrey, widow. Dec. 1; Dawes and Sons, solicitors, 9, Angel-court, Thurgomston-street, London.

THOMPSON (Eather), West-hill Lodge, Brighton, spinster. Nov. 30; Tarrant and Mackrell, solicitors, 2, Bond-court Walbrook, London.

cited that debentures to the amount of £25,000 had been or would be issued, and provided that there should be no priority between the holders of the debentures as between themselves. Sixty of these debentures were taken up by the public, and the remaining forty were afterwards mortgaged by the directors by way of collateral security for an advance of money. The company having been ordered to be wound-up: Held (affirming the decision of Malins, V.C.), that the mortgagees were entitled to prove in the winding-up for the full nominal value of the debentures pari passu with the other debenture holders, but so as not to receive more than was due so them in respect of money advanced, interest, and costs: (Re Regent's Canal Ironworks Company, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 288. App. Ct.)

ASSURANCE COMPANY—NOVATION—AMALGAMATION OF COMPANIES—TRANSFER OF ASSETS TO MEET CLAIMS.—The deed of settlement of the Industrial Assurance Company gave power to dissolve the company by means of a resolution passed at a general meeting and confirmed at a second general meeting, and provided that thereupon the directors, after satisfying all immediate claims on the company, should obtain from some other company an undertaking to satisfy the remainder of the claims when the time for payment should arrive, and should transfer to such other company so much of the assets as should be agreed upon as sufficient to meet such claims. In accordance with these provisions, the Industrial Company was in 1855 dissolved, and a portion of its funds transferred to the People's Provident Society, which covenanted to satisfy the liabilities of the Industrial Company. In 1851 C. effected a policy of life assurance with the Industrial Company on the non-participating scale. This provided that the subscribed capital, funds, and property of the company should alone be liable to answer all claims under the policy, which was made subject to the conditions of the deed of settlement. C., though a non-participating policy holder not entitled to vote at meetings of members, received notice of the intended amalgamation, but he received no formal notice of the completion of the amalgamation, nor was his policy indorsed by the People's Provident Society. To that society, however, he paid his premiums for fifteen years, and the receipts were made out in his name. Held (affirming the decision of Lord Romilly), that the amalgamation was valid and binding upon C., and that he was also bound by acquiescence. Held, also, that the deed of settlement did not mean that the assets transferred to the transferee company should be earmarked, and kept separate for the purpose of being applied only to the payment of the liabilities of the transferring company: (Re European Assurance Company, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 290. App. Ct.)

WINDING-UP—COMPANIES ACT 1862—UNREGISTERED COMPANY OF MORE THAN TWENTY MEMBERS.—Quere, whether a company consisting of more than twenty persons, and which is illegal by reason of its not having been registered under the Companies Act 1862, can be ordered to be wound-up under the 199th section of that Act on the petition of either a member or a creditor. The solicitors of an illegal company of this kind presented a petition for the winding-up of the company as creditors in respect of a bill of costs which consisted partly of their professional charges in connection with the formation of the company, and partly of charges for work done on the retainer of the manager and committee of superintendence of the company. Held (affirming the decision of Malins, V.C.), that as the solicitors, having been parties to the illegal act of forming the company, could not recover their charges in connection with its formation, and as the authority of the manager and committee to retain them for the other work could only be proved by the production of the deed constituting the company, which, owing to its illegality, could not be admitted as evidence, they could not establish a sufficient debt to support their petition, which was accordingly dismissed with costs: (Re the South Wales Atlantic Steamship Company, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 294. App. Ct.)

REGULATION OF RAILWAYS ACT—OPENING OF RAILWAY—JURISDICTION OF BOARD OF TRADE.—The Board of Trade has exclusive jurisdiction, by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 55, to postpone the opening of a new line of railway, provided their inspector has made his report that the opening would be dangerous to the public using the same, and assigned reasons for his opinion, because of the incompleteness of the works; and the court has no jurisdiction to inquire whether the power of the Board of Trade has been properly exercised, or the reasons assigned are valid. The incompleteness may be on the old line, with which the new is connected, and need not exist on the line proposed to be opened, for the jurisdiction to be exercisable; and it may consist in a general defectiveness or imperfection in the works as well as in their being in an unfinished state: (Attorney-General v. Great Western Railway Company, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 302. M. R.)

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

BOROUGH QUARTER SESSIONS.

Borough.	When holden.	Recorder.	What notice of appeal to be given.	Clerk of the Peace.
Andover .....	Wednesday, Nov. 15.	W. W. Ravenhill, Esq. ....	10 days .....	Thomas Lamb.
Nottingham .....	Saturday, Nov. 4 .....	Richard Wildman, Esq. ....	9 days .....	Arthur Wells.
Stamford .....	Wednesday, Nov. 8 .....	The Hon. E. C. Leigh .....	10 days .....	John Torkington.
Wigan .....		Joseph Catterall, Esq. ....		Thomas Head.

BOW-STREET POLICE COURT.

Tuesday, Oct. 30.

(Before Mr. FLOWERS.)

Vagrant Act—Subtle craft—Spiritualism.

MR. HENRY SLADE, the medium, was charged with defrauding Professor Edwin Ray Lankester and others by various subtle devices.

George Lewis appeared for the prosecution; Munton for the defence.

MR. FLOWERS said.—The questions in this case are two—First, do the facts alleged constitute an offence under the Vagrant Act? and, second, did Slade do what he is alleged to have done? The offence defined by the Vagrant Act is "Professing or pretending to tell fortunes, or using any subtle craft, means, or device, by palmistry or otherwise, to deceive or impose on any of Her Majesty's subjects." I think that in order to constitute this offence, two things are necessary, viz., using some subtle craft, means, or device like palmistry, and an attempt to deceive or impose on some person. Palmistry is defined in Richardson's dictionary thus:—"Divination by inspection of the hands, from the roguish tricks of the pretenders to this art; to palm; to trick, or play a trick; to impose upon, or practise a trick, imposition, or delusion, more restrictedly, to palm is to hold and keep in the palm, to touch with the palm, to handle." The definitions given by Johnson and Webster are very similar. The trick imputed to Slade consists in falsely pretending to procure from spirits messages written by such spirits upon a slate held under the table by Slade for the purpose, such messages having previously been written by himself. Such a trick seems to me to be "a subtle craft, means, or device" of the same kind as fortune telling. In each case the impostor pretends to practise a magical, or at least an occult art. I am confirmed in this view by the language of another statute, to which reference has been made in the course of these proceedings, the 9th Geo. 2, c. 5. This Act repealed that of Jac. 1, c. 12, by which witchcraft was made felony, and prohibited prosecutions for the offence of "witchcraft, sorcery, enchantment, and conjurations," which, apart from the statute of James, was punishable by the ecclesiastical courts and perhaps common law. It then enacts that for the more effectual preventing and punishing any pretences to such arts or powers as are before-mentioned, whereby ignorant persons are frequently deluded and defrauded, or if any person pretended to exercise or use any kind of witchcraft, sorcery, enchantment, or conjuration, or undertook to tell fortunes, or pretended from his or her skill or knowledge in any occult or crafty science to discover goods supposed to be lost or stolen, he shall upon conviction on an indictment be liable to a year's imprisonment, and be set in the pillory four times. The punishment of the pillory is abolished, but the rest of the section remains in force, and I refer to it only to illustrate the meaning of the Vagrant Act. It seems to me that Act forbids substantially the same thing: "The practice of occult and crafty sciences," to use the words of the Act of Geo. II.; "subtle, crafty means or devices, by palmistry or otherwise," to use the words of the Act of Geo. IV. For these reasons I think that if by the trick I have described Slade tried to impose on Professor Lankester and Dr. Donkin, he committed an offence against the Vagrant Act. And this brings me to the second question. Did he do so or not? a question which lies in a narrow compass, though much time has been occupied in its discussion. I was unwilling to exclude evidence to which the parties attached importance, and I accordingly admitted a good deal which, when given, appeared to me at the time, and still appears to me, irrelevant. On the one hand, I attach no importance to the evidence of Mr. Maskelyne given on the summons for conspiracy, because it proves what no one can doubt, namely, that some things done by Slade might be done by a conjuror. On the other hand, I cannot attach importance to the evidence of the witnesses for the defence, because they only prove that on other occasions strange—if you please, very strange—things happened in Slade's presence, and that they did not perceive that he caused them. I forbear, however, to speculate on these matters, and confine myself to what happened between Slade, Lankester, and Donkin. The whole case turns upon the evidence of the two last-named persons, which, in a few words, is to the effect that they saw Slade's hands move as if he was writing, and that on snatching the slate from him immediately afterwards, and before it was placed in the position in which the spirits were to write, and without any sound as if of writing, they found words written upon it. If this be true, it involves the inference that Slade wrote the words himself, and that, therefore, he could not think the spirit of his wife had written them. I must decide according to the well-known course of nature, and if it be true that the two witnesses saw the motions that they describe, and found the writing on the slate immediately afterwards, it is impossible for me to doubt, whatever happened on other occasions, that Slade did on that occasion write those words on that slate in order to cheat Professor Lankester and Dr. Donkin. It is true that Simmons said there was nothing to pay, as Lankester and Donkin were not satisfied; but the question is, whether subtle craft, means, or device was used to impose on these gentlemen; and it clearly was, as the money would have been paid if the trick had not been discovered. Upon the whole I think that an offence against the Vagrant Act has been proved, and, considering the grave mischiefs likely to result from such practices, mischiefs which those who remember the case of Home, also a professional medium, cannot consider unsubstantial, I feel I cannot mitigate the punishment the law imposes, and therefore I sentence the defendant to three months' imprisonment with hard labour in the House of Correction.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

WILL—HONORARY TRUST—REQUEST FOR PURCHASE OF AN ADVOWSON—DIRECTION TO ACCUMULATE—RIGHT OF LEGATEE TO IMMEDIATE TRANSFER OF FUND.—A testator gave £12,000 to trustees, on trust, with the whole or such part as they should think fit of that sum to purchase an advowson, and nominate to it such person as they should think proper. Subject to this trust the advowson was to be held in trust for A. until he should have a benefice worth a clear £1000 a year, or died. Until the advowson was purchased the fund was to accumulate, and at the end of twenty-one years, or on the death of A., or on his being presented to a benefice worth a clear £1000 a year, the fund, or so much of it as had not been employed in the purchase, was to belong to A. absolutely. The fund had been accumulating for about twelve years. No advowson had been purchased, but the trustees were not desirous to be relieved of their trust: Held, that under such circumstances A. was not entitled to have an immediate transfer to him of the fund: (Gott v. Nairne, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 209. Chan. Div.)

LUNACY—SETTLED ESTATE—LUNATIC TENANT FOR LIFE—CONSENT OF COURT TO BARRING ENTAIL—INTEREST OF LUNATIC.—A lunatic was tenant for life of certain real estates, including the advowson of a rectory. A lease of this property had been granted by order of the court for ninety-nine years, if the lunatic should so long live. This lease had become vested in a person who was also first tenant in tail in remainder expectant on the death of the lunatic without issue male. The lunatic was over eighty years of age, and had never had any issue. The first tenant in tail in remainder wishing to sell the next presentation to the rectory presented a petition praying the court, as protector of the settlement, to consent to the barring of the entail of the advowson. Held, that the court ought not to interfere, as the application was not made for the benefit of the lunatic's estate: (Re Thorp, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 293. Ct. of App.)

WILL—DEVISE BY TRUSTEE—VENDOR AND PURCHASER ACT 1874, SECT. 9.—A testator gave pecuniary legacies out of his unsettled property, and then gave "the rest and residue of his unsettled property" to A. The will contained no devise of trust estates. Held, that although by this disposition the testator's own real estate was charged with legacies, an estate of which he was trustee passed under the residuary devise: (Re Brown and Sibley, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. Chan. Div.)

COUNTY COURTS.

BRISTOL COUNTY COURT.

Friday, Oct. 27.

(Before R. A. FISHER, Esq., Judge).

WREY v. CLEMENTS.

Equity partition suit—Judges notes—Appeal.

HIS HONOUR delivered judgment in this equity suit, which was heard before him some time since.

Poole (instructed by Bramble) appeared for the plaintiff.

Budd (instructed by C. A. Peters) for defendant.

The case arose out of a disputed claim to some property in Hotwell-road, which the defendant alleged belonged solely to him as heir-at-law under a will made at the end of the last century, but this claim was not at the time sustained, and his Honour in October last directed the property to be sold, and the proceeds divided between certain parties who were then held to be entitled to it. The property was accordingly sold by auction, and Mr. William Manning, butcher, of the Hotwell-road, became the purchaser for the sum of £460. Subsequently the purchaser's solicitor discovered a will, dated 1783, which he alleged affected the title to the property, which, in fact, if valid, would have shown that the plaintiff had not the title to it which she claimed, and the purchaser accordingly refused to complete his purchase, and a summons was then taken out on behalf of the vendor for an order calling on him to do so. That summons was adjourned from time to time, until the 24th July last, when the judge heard the arguments on either side, and reserved his judgment, which he now gave.

His Honour held that the purchaser's objection to the title was not sustained, that he had not proved that the old will related to the property in question, and that being so he made an order on him to complete the purchase, and pay the costs incurred by his refusal to do so.

Budd said his Honour's decision being against him, he felt it his duty to appeal against it, and he would ask his Honour to be good enough to state upon his notes all the facts and all the evidence that had been brought before him. The mode in which he intended to appeal was under the 28 & 29 Vict. c. 50 s. 6.

His Honour.—That, I say, is not applicable. You can only appeal by each of you drawing up a special case.

Budd said there were two modes of appeal, one by special case and the other under this section, to which he now called his Honour's attention. The section provided that any person aggrieved by a decision in a County Court, should have the right to appeal within eight days of the same being given by motion to the court to which such appeal lay, instead of by special case, such motion to be in part in the first instance, and to be granted on such terms as to costs, &c., as the court might deem fit; and at the trial or hearing of the case, the judge, at the request of either party, should make a note of any question arising at such trial, and of the facts and evidence in relation thereto, and of his decision thereon; and furnish a copy thereof if asked for.

His Honour.—You see that is where you failed; you did not request me to make a note of the evidence.

Budd.—It is your duty to make a note of the evidence.

His Honour.—Only at your request. What I say is that you must proceed by special case.

Budd.—That I decline to do: I shall proceed by motion, and I ask your Honour to make a note.

His Honour.—You should have requested me at the hearing to make particular notes of the evidence.

Budd.—But I say it is your duty, your Honour, to make notes.

His Honour.—Only at your request.

Budd.—Then I take a different view of your Honour's duty, and if necessary, I shall bring the matter before a superior court. I intend to proceed by way of motion, and if your Honour has at notice of the evidence, I must support it by affidavit or take the case over again. If your Honour declines at my request to make a proper note of the evidence, of course I must submit.

His Honour.—I am very sorry you should not draw up a special case.

Budd.—Then I agree to do. I was very sorry to decline to comply with my request: I express my extreme surprise that in a matter of this kind you should show diffidence in the way.

His Honour.—There is diffidence in the way. There are two avenues open to parties dissatisfied, either to request by special case, or by calling special attention to any point which seems to arise, or way of appeal.

Budd.—It is assumed that a judge

His Honour.—It is not assumed.

Budd.—Very well: I will bring an other note.

His Honour.—If I were to take notes in all cases, I should sit till Domesday.

Budd.—I must express my extreme surprise that in a case of this description, in which there was every likelihood of an appeal, I should be met with the objection that you have taken no notes of the evidence. If we had a special case your notes would be essential, and therefore I say it is the duty of a judge to take notes of the evidence.

His Honour.—Fortunately or unfortunately my memory is one of extraordinary tenacity, and—

Budd.—Then I ask your Honour to make a note of the case from your tenacious memory.

His Honour.—I think you had better proceed by special case.

Budd.—I shall do nothing of the kind. Do you decline to furnish me from your tenacious memory with notes of the evidence? If you decline, then say so.

His Honour.—You must proceed in the way in which the law directs.

Budd.—Of course I shall proceed according to the law.

His Honour.—That is my answer to the application.

Budd.—You won't give me anything?

His Honour.—I have no more to say.

Budd.—I now ask you whether you will give me a copy of your notes?

His Honour.—I decline to give you a copy of my notes.

Budd.—Or to make any note of the evidence?

His Honour.—I am not going to be cross-examined.

Budd.—I don't wish to make it unpleasant for you.

BATH COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Sept. 28.

(Before C. F. D. CAILLARD, Esq.)

P. J. ADDIS v. H. SHEPPARD.

Duty of bailiffs—Authority conferred by distress warrant.

THIS was rather a novel case, and one of some importance to those who undertake the levying of distress warrants.

The plaintiff is a milliner, residing in Argyle-street, and the defendant is an auctioneer carrying on business on the Upper Borough walls.

Hodson (instructed by F. H. and E. A. M. per) for the plaintiff.

Bartram for the defendant.

The case was partly heard at a former sitting of the court, and from the facts then elicited, and those deposed to-day, it appears that a Mrs. Hill for some time occupied apartments at the house of the plaintiff, who, being unable to get her rent, obtained a distress warrant, which was placed in the hands of the defendant to execute, the arrears due being £24. A man was placed in possession by him, and it was alleged that in consequence of the negligence of this individual a quantity of the goods—especially plated articles—was removed by the lodger, some of which on complaint being made, were brought back. The furniture was subsequently removed to the auction room of Mr. Sheppard, who, however, refused to sell them, owing to being threatened with legal proceedings by Mrs. Hill and other parties interested in her estate. The value of the goods was estimated at £16 1s. 6d., and during the negotiations which ensued on this refusal, Mr. Sheppard offered to allow the plaintiff to take away the furniture, or to sell it if she or her solicitors would give him an indemnity. This on their side was declined, and the present action was commenced for the purpose of holding the defendant responsible not only for the goods actually seized, but those subsequently removed, and returning them, the whole amounting to £44 10s.

Hodson contended that the defendant having undertaken to perform the duty of bailiff, it was incumbent upon him to carry it out in the ordinary way. Neither ought he to have been deterred from doing it by any idle threat which other persons might have indulged in to him. In reply to his Honour.

Bartram stated that there was no decision in a similar case in regard to the law as he could ascertain, and he therefore relied on the general legal principle he had laid down.

Hodson submitted the absence of any guiding case, but maintained that there was no reason why his client should go in the face of the actions with which he was threatened. In default of returning an indemnity, Mr. Sheppard had endeavoured to act with scrupulous fairness towards all the parties. He had been put to a large amount of trouble and inconvenience in endeavouring to reimburse the threatened demands made upon him, and with the most scrupulous he had been kind in all cases and proceeded by law. Should however, Mr. Sheppard be held responsible in the legal point —submitted that the amount for which they he held responsible was the value of the goods taken.

His Honour, in giving judgment, said it was rather unfortunate that there was no decision touching this particular question, viz., whether a bailiff, or an agent to a landlord or landlady, having taken upon himself the duty of seizing goods and removing them, was bound to go a step further and sell them. He therefore could only decide the case upon general principles. Fortunately, if he should happen to be wrong, and the party against whom he decided was not satisfied with his judgment, he could be set right by a Superior Court, the opinion of which would be extremely valuable. His own opinion, however, upon the general principle was clear and strong. In his view, the defendant having taken upon himself a duty, viz., to act vicariously for the landlady and for a valuable consideration, he was bound to carry it out to the ultimate end. Neither did he think that any circumstances had arisen to absolve him from that responsibility. At the same time he could not, upon the evidence before him, take account of the goods said to have been removed or the alleged losses. His verdict would be for £16 1s. 6d., the value of the property in defendant's possession.

Verdict accordingly.
Hodson asked to have the costs certified on the higher scale, but this the court declined to grant.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

LIVERPOOL COUNTY COURT.

(Before J. F. COLLIER, Esq., Judge.)

Ex BLACKBURN and PAWSON.

Trustee—Accounts.

THIS was an adjourned motion for an order upon Mr. Vine, the former trustee of the estate, to render an account of his stewardship as such trustee. Voluminous accounts had been rendered to the new trustee, Mr. Bolland, but they were alleged to be in many respects defective, and exemplified the folly of carrying on the business of a bankrupt with a view to profit, the assets at the outset in the present case being valued at £1500, but after a few months' trading being all swallowed up in expenses, and a deficiency shown of £156.

Love, for the trustee, now submitted that Mr. Vine was still in default, inasmuch as he had not delivered up the vouchers for his payments, nor yet a petty cash book, which, it was stated, had been kept.

Etty, for Mr. Vine, admitted that there might still be some minor requirements unaccomplished with, but substantially all that was requisite to satisfy the new trustee had been furnished; and if upon a complete investigation of the accounts his client was shown to be in default, he would readily comply with the order of the court.

Finally, after some discussion, it was ordered that all books and documents still in the possession of the trustee be handed to the registrar, and that the terms of the original motion should be obeyed by Mr. Vine.

His Honour also ordered that Mr. Vine should pay the costs of and incidental to the motion.

LEGAL NEWS.

OPENING OF THE COURTS.

THURSDAY being the first day of Michaelmas sittings the courts were opened at Westminster with the customary formalities. As usual at the commencement of the legal year, the judges breakfasted with the Lord Chancellor at his private residence, and then proceeded to Westminster Hall, where a large concourse of spectators had assembled to witness their arrival. During the long vacation great changes had taken place on the bench. Mr. Justice Blackburn has been elevated to the House of Lords as a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary, and his place in the Queen's Bench has been taken by Mr. Hawkins, Q.C. Three judges of the Common Law Division—Mr. Baron Bramwell, Mr. Justice Brett, and Mr. Baron Amphlett have been made judges of appeal. Two vacancies have occurred by the deaths of Mr. Justice Quain and Mr. Justice Archbell. The first has been supplied by Mr. Manisty, Q.C., but the other vacancy has not yet been filled up. In addition to these changes, Mr. Gurnea, the late Lord Aldvorth, has been made a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary. Mr. Hawkins and Mr. Manisty were among the judges who were most warmly greeted.

In the Queen's Bench Division, before Lord Chief Justice Cockburn and Justices Mellor and Lind, the new judges, Mr. Justice Manisty and Mr. Justice Hawkins took the oath. It was afterwards announced that Mr. Justice Mellor was the next upon the list as election judge for the present year.

It is said that Mr. Lopes, Q.C., has been appointed to one of the remaining vacancies on the bench.

WINTER ASSIZE COUNTIES.

AN Order in Council published in the London Gazette of Oct. 27, and made in pursuance of the Winter Assize Act 1876, provides that the Northern and Salford Divisions of Lancashire, Cumberland, and Westmoreland shall, for the purpose of Winter Assizes, form one county, under the name of the Winter Assize County No. 1. Similar Orders in Council constitute eleven other Winter Assize counties, and name the respective towns where the Winter Assizes are to be held.

The Winter Assize County No. 2 will comprise the county of York and the county of the city of York—the assizes to be held at Leeds.

No. 3 will comprise the county of Lincoln, the county of Nottingham, and the county of the town of Nottingham—the assizes to be held at Lincoln.

No. 4 will comprise the county of Derby, the county of Leicester, the county of the borough of Leicester, and the county of Rutland—the assizes to be held at Derby.

No. 5 will comprise the county of Warwick, the county of Northampton, the county of Bedford, and the county of Buckingham—the assizes to be held at Warwick.

No. 6 will comprise the county of Norfolk, the county of Suffolk, the county of Huntingdon, and the county of Cambridge—the assizes to be held at Norwich.

No. 7 will comprise the county of Oxford, the county of Worcester, the county of Hereford, the county of Monmouth, the county of Gloucester, and the county of the city of Gloucester—the assizes to be held at Worcester.

No. 8 will comprise the county of Salop and the county of Stafford—the assizes to be held at Stafford.

No. 9 will comprise the county of Southampton, the county of Wilts, and the county of Dorset—the assizes to be held at Winchester.

No. 10 will comprise the county of Devon, the county of Cornwall, the county of Somerset, and the county of the city of Bristol—the assizes to be held at Exeter.

No. 11 will comprise the county of Montgomery, the county of Merioneth, the county of Carnarvon, the county of Anglesea, the county of Denbigh, the county of Flint, and the county of Chester—the assizes to be held at Chester.

No. 12 will comprise the county of Glamorgan, the county of Carmarthen, the county of the borough of Carmarthen, the county of Pembroke, the county of the town of Haverfordwest, the county of Cardigan, the county of Brecknock, and the county of Radnor—the assizes to be held at Swansea.

THE LATE MR. JUSTICE ARCHIBALD.

LORD COLERIDGE, in the Court of Common Pleas, in a few eloquent words called attention to the great and irreparable loss which not only this court but the Profession at large had sustained in the removal by swift and unexpected death of his most dear friend and honoured and valued colleague, Mr. Justice Archibald. He believed that there was no man who was more honoured by all who knew him, or who better deserved the affection which he received. His great powers of mind, his learning, his judgment, his firmness, tempered with gentleness, which was never weakness, made him at once a great judge and a most respected man; and he believed that a more stainless character than his was never borne by any man who ever sat upon the English bench, and that no man was more fit than he to be called away from the great task of judging others to be judged himself.

Mr. Cohen, Q.C., the senior member of the Bar present, expressed the conviction of himself and his friends around him that no man had been more respected and beloved than the late judge, and that the bench could not have sustained a greater loss than it had sustained by his death.

EX-VICE-CHANCELLOR STUART is dead. He was 83.

MR. HAWKINS, Q.C., is the new judge in succession to Lord Blackburn.

TEMPLE GARDENS.—The Inner Temple Gardens, so famous for the growth of chrysanthemums, are now, by permission of the Benchers, thrown open to the public for the autumnal show. The show will remain open until about the middle of the present month. The Middle Temple Gardens do not open for the show of chrysanthemums until somewhat later.

THE CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.—The judges assembled on Thursday morning for the purpose of fixing the days for holding the sessions for the ensuing year. There were eight judges on the bench, and they were accompanied by the Lord Mayor. The following days were appointed: 1876. November 20, December 11. 1877. January 3, February 5, March 5, April 9, May 7, May 23, June 25, August 7, September 17, and October 22.

At a session just held, the judge asked an Irish policeman, named O'Connell, "When did you last see your sister?" The policeman replied, "The last time I saw her, my lord, was about eight months ago, when she called at my house, and I was out." Here the court broke into a roar of laughter. The Judge: "Then you did not see her on that occasion?" The Irishman answered, "No, my lord, I wasn't there," at which everybody roared again.

THE LAW COURTS.—That portion of the new law courts by Bell-yard, Temple Bar, which is to be used as offices, is being rapidly proceeded with, and will probably be completed next year. It may perhaps not be generally remembered that the Government, acting on the advice of their own surveyors, took powers in their first Act for setting back by several feet all the houses up to the corner of Chancery-lane. This will obviate the necessity for any further widening of Fleet-street at that part, except at the point where Messrs. Child's premises bulge out most.—City Press.

A GARRULOUS JUDGE.—It is not at all surprising that Mr. Commissioner Kerr should carry with him to the Central Criminal Court a habit which is with him not a second, but a part of his primal nature. We refer to his lecturing everybody and everything upon the slightest possible pretext. At the City of London Court this constant habit of "giving a bit of his mind," though it may, perhaps, be the reverse of dignified, does no particular harm; moreover, it helps to amuse if not to edify the hearers, and to vary the monotony of the business of the court, which, relating as it does generally to mere matters of account, is necessarily very dry. At the Central Criminal Court, however, there is always enough of what may be termed human interest in what is transpiring to engage the attention of the audience, without any effort of Mr. Commissioner Kerr. But is so difficult to shift off a habit that, as we have said, it is no wonder it displays itself as strongly in the Old Bailey as in Guildhall-buildings. An illustration of this occurred on Tuesday, when two cases of bigamy were tried before the Commissioner—neither of them revealing any circumstances of a heartless character such as are sometimes present. In one case the man who had married a second time had lost sight of his wife for seventeen years, though it is true he did not make any effort to find her; and in the other a woman whose husband had deserted her after "selling her up" twice, again contracted matrimony. In the first case, Mr. Commissioner Kerr, in sentencing the accused to a month's imprisonment, said it was "very shocking to see the solemn ceremony of marriage treated with such levity, and it appeared as though getting married was considered nothing more than an amusement;" whilst in the other he felt called upon "to repeat that it was shocking to see how the sacred ceremony of marriage was treated. Marriage was one of the most solemn ordinances of the Church, and it appeared to be made quite a mockery of. If they went on in this way, he did not know what society would come to." In this instance he sentenced the prisoner to be kept to hard labour for six weeks; whereupon, says the report, "a well-dressed man, who was stated to be the 'second husband,' upon hearing the sentence, exclaimed, 'She is a good woman; it is a cruel thing to sentence her to six weeks' imprisonment.' The commissioner said she might be a good woman, but she had broken a very solemn ordinance of religion, and had also broken the law, and he could not pass a lighter sentence." Here was a strong illustration of the inconvenience of a judge making speeches in season and out of season. The commissioner's remarks drew forth a reply, and the commissioner thought it consistent with his duty to parley with a man in the body of the court, and justify the sentence which had been passed.—City Press.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editors do not hold themselves responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.

NORTH BRITISH, & C., INSURANCE CO. v. LONDON, LIVERPOOL, & C., INSURANCE CO.—This case was reported in the LAW TIMES, 14th Oct. I have examined the columns of your issues of 21st and 28th with considerable interest expecting to find under the heading of "Notes on Recent Decisions" some of your usually keen remarks upon the peculiar collateral arguments with which Jessel, M.R., supported his judgment, and his remarkable readings of the "conditions of average." He says: "It is plain, for instance, that the word upon which I am now about to comment, the word 'property,' ought not to have in all the condition clauses of the instrument the same meaning. Take the first condition of the conditions of average: 'It is hereby declared and agreed, that whenever a sum insured is declared to be subject to the conditions of average, if the property so covered shall at the breaking out of any fire be collectively of greater value than the sum insured thereon, then this company shall pay or make good such a proportion only of the loss or damage as the sum so insured shall bear to the whole value of the said property at the time when such fire shall first happen.' Now, if I read the word 'property' to mean the goods themselves, an extraordinary result will follow. Suppose the person insured has a limited interest—say that he is a person who has a commission of five per cent.—and goods on commission are mentioned in the policy, so that he would insure for one-twentieth part of the value of the property in all; that is, if the property were worth £20,000 he would insure for £1000, being the whole value of his interest, seeing the total loss would be £20,000, they would only pay the £1000 in proportion to the £20,000, or one-twentieth part of it. In other words he would get £250, although his interest was insured for £1000 and was worth £1000. Of course no such case would be contemplated. The man had insured all the interest he had in the property; and if I read that literally and read the word 'property' as meaning the goods only and not the interest of the insurer, or in some cases the liabilities of the insurer (for there is another case contemplated in the policy, that of goods for which the insurer is responsible, and in which he has no interest), that is the extent of the liability he is insured against, surely the word 'property' must mean the interest in the property which is insured whether it is a limited interest in the nature of a commission or in the nature of a life interest." The working out of the conditions of average in the hypothetical case put by the learned Master of the Rolls would be entirely different, and yet would be in the literally exact terms of the policy. Take the example given: Value of property covered (i.e., value at time of fire), £20,000; insurance one-twentieth part, or £1000—total loss of property covered (i.e., whether insured or not), £20,000. Then the stipulation of the average conditions is to pay, not £250, but such proportion only of the "loss," or damage, as the sum so insured shall bear to the whole value of the said property at the time when the fire shall first happen. As £20,000 (total amount of property at risk) is to £1000 (amount of insurance) so is £20,000 (total amount of loss) to £1000 (amount to be paid by insurance company). The condition does not restrict the meaning of the word "loss" to the loss of the insured, but applies it to the loss of the property covered. If the word loss be thus read, the word property becomes capable of consistently bearing the same meaning throughout, and in the supposed case the person would insure an undivided twentieth of the bulk of the whole property by covering the whole to a twentieth of its value, and would receive, in case of destruction by fire, a twentieth part of the value of the whole. Then, again, as to the ninth condition, the Master of the Rolls is reported to have said: "Then the ninth is this, 'If at the time of any loss or damage by fire happening to any property hereby insured there be any other subsisting insurance or insurances, whether effected by the insured or by other person covering the same property, the company shall not be liable to pay or contribute more than its rateable proportion of such loss or damage.' Now what is the meaning of the words 'covering the same property?' I have no doubt, following the reasoning which I have adopted in the other clauses, that it cannot mean the actual chattel. You would have the most absurd consequences if you read the words 'same property' in that sense. If a tenant for life insured his interest only, and the reversioner did not insure, he would get the whole amount; but if the reversioner also insured his interest, as he would insure in a sense the same chattels, although he did it under the description of his reversion, the tenant for life would get only a proportionate part of the amount insured." Here you will see that it could not possibly be meant in the sense suggested, because it is stated in the policy exactly to the contrary. The payment as per condition is to be a proportionate part of the loss, not as per the Master of the Rolls a proportionate part of the amount insured, e.g., total value of property covered, £10,000; value of tenant's interest, £1000; value of reversioner's interest, £9000; total loss, £10,000, the tenant gets £1000 whether the reversioner insures or not.

A. HARBON.

COSTS IN LIQUIDATIONS.—I have read with some surprise the letter of a "Country Solicitor" on the above subject, inserted in your issue of last week. I have recently had great experience in the working of liquidations, and I can only say that to the best of my recollection I have never yet been engaged in a case where an allowance has not been made for first-class way expenses and necessary refreshments. I would suggest to a "Country Solicitor" that requests the taxing master to review his decision, and should he still persist in disallowing the item referred to, then to take advantage of his right of appeal to the district County Court judge.

A COUNTRY SOLICITOR
OF TWENTY-SIX YEARS' STANDING.

BOOK POSTAGE.—It would be well if someone would furnish the text of the regulations relating to book postage, referred to by the Postmaster-General, and mentioned in my letter of last week. It appeared to me that a letter sent by A. to B., when received and read has done its office, and ceased to be a letter; and when returned with other documents by B. to A. is itself a document, and not a letter or postal communication, and for this reason the "instructions to counsel" mentioned by me, and the instructions to the law stationer, referred to by "W. J. E.," whatever they were originally, were not letters when they were surcharged as such on their return to the first sender. J. R.

ATTESTATION CLAUSE OF WILLS.—Many of your readers have no doubt seen the reprints in this week's daily newspapers of a remarkable will made by Susan Fletcher Smith, who gave her body to be dissected. When I read the attestation clause I thought it so neat and concise that I mentally resolved to adopt it forthwith if it would stand all necessary tests. [The words were, "Signed by the said testatrix in the presence of both of us and by both of us in her presence."] As the will appeared to have been prepared by an eminent London firm of solicitors I expected the clause would do. But on comparing it with the 9th section of the Wills Act it appears to me to be practically defective, as it does not show that the witnesses were "present at the same time," on the testator's signing, and the Probate Court authorities would therefore require an affidavit by one of the attesting witnesses before admitting the will to probate. The testatrix might sign "in the presence of both" of the witnesses, but each of them might be present at a different time. On the other hand it seems to be plain that the Act does not require that the witnesses shall attest "at the request" of the testator, nor that they should sign "in the presence of each other," so that the usual words in attestation clauses here italicised appear to be unnecessary. The following form appears to me to satisfy every requirement: "Signed by the said testator in the presence of us present at the same time, who, in his presence, have subscribed our names as witnesses." J. W. N.

POWERS OF ENGLISH COMMISSIONERS TO TAKE AFFIDAVITS IN THE IRISH COURTS.—It appears to me that the words in sect. 81 of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 44, "a person lawfully authorised to administer oaths" in England, gave the power of taking affidavits in the Irish Court of Chancery to a commissioner of any of the courts in England prior to the Judicature Act, and since that Act of course to all commissioners of the Supreme Court, and as the Irish Bankruptcy Act 1857 (20 & 21 Vict. c. 70), s. 366, enabled the court to receive affidavits taken before "any person having authority to take affidavits for the Court of Chancery in Ireland," and also as the Act of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 72, s. 34 provided that affidavits might be made in the Landed Estates Court before "a person empowered to take affidavits which might be received in evidence in the Court of Chancery of Ireland," it now necessarily follows that English commissioners can take affidavits in the three above-named Irish courts. PERCY SEXTON,

A Commissioner appointed under the Judicature Act.

COUNTY COURT PROCEDURE.—I shall feel obliged if you or any of your readers will favour me with your opinion on the following case, which occurred a few days ago in a County Court, where a farmer was plaintiff and two horse-dealers defendants. Plaintiff's case was that he had exchanged a horse of his for a mare of defendants', and that he was to receive £10 to boot; that the mare was warranted sound and quiet in harness; that there was a breach of the warranty, and that he had not been paid the £10. Under these circumstances plaintiff issued two joint summonses against defendants. In one action he claimed £46 1s. 6d. damages for the breach of warranty, and in the other action he claimed £10, the amount he was to have been paid as above stated. When the cases came on I, as solicitor for the defendants, objected to the proceedings on the ground that plaintiff was splitting his demand and bringing two actions upon one contract, when he ought to have brought one action only, inasmuch as the £46 1s. 6d. claim and the £10 claim were of the same deal and formed part of the same contract. I also pointed out that the amount sought to be received £256 1s. 6d., was beyond the jurisdiction of the court (plaintiff not having in his particulars abandoned the excess). The judge would not admit the validity of my objections, and allowed plaintiff's solicitor to proceed, and ultimately gave a verdict in his favour for £50 and costs, intimating, in answer to my remonstrance, that he added £3 18s. 6d. to plaintiff's claim of £46 1s. 6d. as damages for the detention of the £10 (although the deal only took place in March or April last). With regard to the necessity for plaintiff's entering the abandonment of the excess in his particulars, I rely on Order VII., rule 1, Consolidated C. C. Orders and Rules, 1875: "A plaintiff shall in all cases at the time of the entry of the plaint file particulars of his demand or cause of action, and where the demand exceeds £50, but the plaintiff desires to abandon the excess or to admit a set-off, and sue in a County Court for the residue, the abandonment of the excess or the admission of the set-off shall be entered at the end of the particulars," &c. It seems to me that in this case a sanction was given to two actions being brought upon one and the same contract, and that a question was tried in which an amount was involved beyond the jurisdiction of the court. F. W. G.

TEN YEARS' CLERKS AND PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION.—Allow me to present this question in a light somewhat overlooked. Ten years' clerks who become articled are no doubt the pick of solicitors' clerks, and bear but a small proportion to the total number of their fellows, and unquestionably some of the most successful solicitors have been those who have risen from their ranks; so much is this the case that I believe there are few places, however small, which have not furnished examples of this statement, consequently almost every junior has pointed out to him as an object of emulation some successful lawyer who once began life in a similar position. Instances will so readily suggest themselves that were it proper to give them, it would be unnecessary. This, then, is a reason why ten years' men, who are only following in the footsteps of the past, should not be spoken or written of in the deprecatory tone I have recently observed in your columns. As one who served some years as a clerk before I was articled, I naturally take an interest in the question which heads my letter, but yet a disinterested one, seeing I passed the preliminary without attempting to get excused from that ordeal, and great is my satisfaction I did so; and to those who are seeking to enter the Profession by the favour of a judge's dispensation from this important examination I would say "seek it not; if the reason for escaping this preliminary test be many plead, 'I have forgotten my school lessons.' I reply 'it will be a great service to yourself to look them up, which you may soon do; for subjects once mastered, though for a time neglected, are readily recalled.' But to those who had not the benefit of a good school education, and have not since remedied their misfortune by subsequent study, I would say 'to obtain the amount of scholarship required by the preliminary examination will be nothing short of a boon, and will far outweigh the gain of one or two years' earlier admission to the Profession.' Your space is too valuable to enlarge, but as a practical man my letter may have some influence with clerks who are attempting to improve their position, and why should not clerks rise as well as assistants in other spheres? but the question is superfluous, seeing how many have done so. The importance of the preliminary examination to the Profession is not, however, less important than to the clerks themselves, and so strongly do I feel the necessity of at least the minimum amount of education it requires, that I would abolish the exemption, except in the case of those who entered solicitors' offices before the Act of 1860, and for whom alone I have always understood the exemption was intended. Those who have entered since have done so with the full knowledge of the requirements expected from them. E. L. W.

EDUCATION FOR THE PROFESSION OF SOLICITOR.—At the present time much interest is being taken in, and many opinions expressed upon, the subject of education for the law; it is, however, to the solicitor's branch of the Profession that I wish to confine my remarks. Some assert that a university education is requisite to fit a solicitor for the duties he is now called upon to perform. Others are most anxious to see a "School of Law" established, whilst there are strong and conflicting opinions expressed as to the necessity for and benefit derived from the long apprenticeship to the office which an intending solicitor is at the present day obliged to undergo. However these matters may be, of one thing I am certain, and that is that some further means of obtaining instruction is desirable, not to say necessary, than that afforded to students of this branch of the Profession at present; and in this assertion I am sure I shall be supported by all who have had occasion to experience the badness of the present system. If a youth who had never seen a grammar or history book were to commence the study of these subjects he would naturally seek the assistance of an able instructor to explain the difficulties that would arise, and to direct his attention to the important principles or parts, and generally in the pursuit of his studies, without which much time must be lost and useless trouble taken, and many errors fall into; but although law books are admitted, in familiar language, to be "stiff," and the above subjects are comparatively simple, yet how many youths, who, I may say, have never seen a law book, are left entirely without assistance in their studies. I am not ignorant of the fact that in the case of an articled clerk the solicitor undertakes "to teach," and may be in conscience bound to do so, but unless such solicitor has but a small practice he will rarely find ten minutes in the course of a week to devote to this duty, which is at any rate subsidiary to that by which he is bound to give the necessary time and attention to the business of his clients. I once put the question to a solicitor as to what articles actually amounted to, and whether he really did instruct his pupil, when I received the following reply, to quote the words of the gentleman: "He is supposed to do so, but he never does." What is learnt from the office work would perhaps be better expressed as "office experience" than as "office teaching," under which name it has but recently been highly estimated in the Albany Law Journal. Without going so far as to discuss the merits and demerits, or the necessity for a school of law or a university education, the following amendments appear to me to be absolutely and immediately necessary. First. Then the law student must have constant direction in his studies; he certainly requires to be told how much time and attention to devote to certain books, and certain parts and particular portions and chapters of such books, for want of which direction so many students fall into the error of either too hasty or, the opposite and equally dangerous dilemma, too sluggish reading. Secondly. The student requires explanation (as admitted fact in every branch of study) and the possibility of obtaining it freely; for though he in time overcomes his difficulties, it will not be without much loss of valuable time and useless trouble, and acquiring many erroneous impressions which will doubtless much impede the smooth progress of his studies. These explanations are necessarily not contained in the text books he is directed to use; for it is obvious that to anticipate and explain in detail the difficulties which are constantly confronting the student would render the first book tediously large and tend to diminish its value to the Profession. Explanation may be divided into two classes:—(1) Explanation of the difficulties presenting themselves in the course of his reading, and (2) of all matters of doubt or difficulty arising from his practical or office experience, and in both he should be able readily to obtain such explanation; and, thirdly and last, but by no means least, he requires to tax his memory. I was once told by a sage old head that unless I taxed my memory I should learn nothing; and I think the advantage to be derived from such taxing, when done properly, is beyond dispute. The best way I know of for effecting this desirable object is by preparation and questioning; it is in these three particulars—direction, explanation, and preparation and questioning—that the class is superior to the lecture—the class, indeed, comprises all these most important advantages, besides many others, and it is on these grounds that I humbly submit an opinion that classes should be formed for the better education of students for this profession. These classes might be headed by competent barristers, consist of different branches, each branch being divided into classes of different grades, and each class containing a limited number of as nearly as possible equally advanced pupils. And I can see no reason why such a system could not be established at but a moderate cost to each individual member, and without the necessity of an Act, or delay of any kind whatsoever, as soon as deemed expedient. My calculation is based on the following presumption:—(a) That a class consist of from ten to fifteen members; (b) That one lesson of one hour in the evening, once a week, or fifty times in the year, would be found to suffice (held at chambers or elsewhere); (c) That a competent barrister, not actually engaged in a busy practice, could easily be found to undertake the instruction of a class at the remuneration of, say, fifty guineas per annum, that is, at a cost of three to five guineas per annum to each member. In the meantime I should esteem it a favour if any intending solicitors, articled or otherwise, who would be glad to form such a class would communicate with me, as it is my desire to be assisted in getting up a class on the above described plan, and to become a member thereof. A. L. S.

Woodbine Cottage, Uxbridge-road, Ealing, W.

SERVING NOTICES.—I am not the mortgagee's solicitor who charged "A Solicitor of Twenty-two Years Standing," 6s. 8d. for accepting service of a notice of transfer of the equity of redemption; but in a like case I should have made a charge, and the idea that I was thereby guilty of sharp practice would never have occurred to me. In this district it is an ordinary practice for the solicitor of a second mortgagee to send the notice of his client's security to the first mortgagee's solicitor, and in such cases I have received or paid (as the case might be) such a fee. If a fee can properly be charged for the one kind of notice, I think it may be for the other. It is desirable the opinions of other members of the Profession should be given in your columns, for certainly many gentlemen who are not "sharp" practitioners are accustomed to make such charges. I quite agree about the sharp practice in respect of the notice to produce.

A LINDSEY SOLICITOR.

FUSION OF LAW AND EQUITY.—An incident of recent occurrence has so interesting a bearing on this subject that I trouble you with a brief report of it, in the hope that the case may have an interest alike to the lawyer and archaeologist. Some ten years ago a joint stock company was in course of liquidation, which liquidation lasted longer than the life of the solicitor. On the death of the latter the official liquidator applied to me, his private adviser, to wind-up the liquidation. Accordingly, after an amicable communication with the successor to the deceased solicitor and the adviser of his personal representatives, I obtained the common order to tax the costs up to that time incurred in the liquidation, to the intent that the amount might be adjusted, and when adjusted might be paid, by direction of the chief clerk, out of the assets of the company. Being dissatisfied with my representation that the liquidator could not undertake to provide for any costs which might be disallowed on taxation, my predecessor (successor of the deceased solicitor), in July 1875, issued a writ at common law indorsed for the full amount of the costs in liquidation, and served the writ personally on the liquidator at his residence. The liquidator, in some dudgeon, brings me the copy writ and instructs me to give effect to the order for taxation made in Chancery. The Chancery Courts having risen, or being on the point of rising, I applied to the Common Law Court whence the writ issued to set aside the writ and relegate the matter to be dealt with in Chancery. This application, supported by counsel, was dismissed with costs, and an appeal summons shared the same fate. At a subsequent stage of the proceedings the plaintiff at Common Law obtains an order staying proceedings until after taxation and payment, under the very order in Chancery to which the liquidator in vain appealed for protection. Having obtained taxation and payment under the order set at defiance in the first instance, the plaintiff's solicitor discontinues the action, pays £6 2s. costs of defence thereunder, and gets a certificate from the Master of the Queen's Bench Division of the Superior Court for £12 9s. 6d. costs of dismissing the liquidator's appeal for protection to the Chancery order to tax; the validity of which order is admitted by the plaintiff's discontinuance. I would ask, Mr. Editor, on whom should the burden of these costs fall—on the defendant's solicitor? The plaintiff by discontinuance admits the soundness of his advice; on the liquidator? the plaintiff admits the soundness of his argument; on the company, that is, an innocent party, prejudiced by an additional delay of twelve months at least.

A CITY LAWYER.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

None are inserted unless the name and address of the writer are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

STAMP.—Does a deed of appointment of new trustees, which contains also a conveyance of the trust property from the old to the new trustees, require two or only one two shilling stamps? The last Stamp Act seems very difficult to interpret upon this point.

G. F.

2. ADVOWSONS.—What is the best book on the law of advowsons and the law of Clergy, at a reasonable price? Do you know if any contain forms of mortgage of an advowson with trust for sale? M. M. WAGSTAFF.

3. MARRIED WOMEN'S PROPERTY ACT—RIGHT OF MARRIED WOMEN TO CONTRACT.—A case on this point was reported in the Times newspaper about a year or more ago, in which the plaintiff, a married woman, brought an action in her own name to recover £337 for money lent. The objection was taken on behalf of the defendant that though the Married Women's Property Act enabled a married woman to bring an action in respect of her separate property, it did not enable her to make a contract. The judge, however, refused to allow a plea of coverture to be added, but upon a verdict being found for the plaintiff gave the defendant leave to move. The name of the case is Greaves v. Greaves, and it was tried at Manchester before Mr. Justice Mellor. I have not seen what was the result of further proceedings if any were taken by the defendant, but I should be much obliged to you or any of your readers for the information, and reference to the report of them.

H. S.

4. MORTMAIN.—Can any of your readers answer the following questions? 1. Does a conveyance of land pure and simple to individuals as joint tenants, without any trusts being declared, for a full and valuable bond de money consideration, intended as a site for a Roman Catholic church and presbytery, require enrolment in Chancery under the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 134, or under any other Act of Parliament? 2. Since 31 & 33 Vict. c. 44, is it necessary to enrol any "conveyance" of land (made bond de for full and valuable consideration actually paid, &c.) for the site of any church or school of any denomination, provided such site be under two acres? Give authorities.

R. C.

5. REGISTRATION OF AGREEMENT AS BILL OF SALE.—In pursuance of articles of agreement entered into before marriage, A. has executed a post-nuptial settlement and assigned to B. (trustee) all the household furniture and effects which he has acquired subsequently to marriage in right of his wife, and also "all other goods, &c., which at any time shall belong to A." Should not this deed be registered under the Bills of Sale Act? If not, please state reasons and, if possible, refer me to a case upon the point.

A LAW STUDENT.

Answers.

(Q. 171). VENDOR—COVENANT.—In reference to my query, I beg to refer "T. F. T." and "Lux" to Prichard's Precedents, 7th edit., vol. 1, Nos. 3 and 5, where they will find that the vendor covenants for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, that he or his heirs have not incumbered. "Lux" evidently altogether mistakes the question.

W. H. B.

(Q. 179). DOWER.—Dower at common law is not forfeited by second marriage. Secus in gavelkind. The husband should join in the conveyance, which should be acknowledged by the wife.

J. M.

(Q. 180). LEASE—ASSIGNMENT OF OPERATION OF PROVISION AS TO BANKRUPTCY OF LESSOR.—This a condition annexed to the estate, and can only be broken by the person privy in estate to the lessor; that is, in this case, the assignee. The bankruptcy of the lessee is now immaterial.

J. M.

(Q. 181). HORSES—PERSONAL CHATTELS—BILLS OF SALE ACT.—Horses are personal chattels. See Com. Dig. Tit. Biens. A horse may be distrained for rent arrears, 3 Bl. Com., 9 Co. Litt. 47a.

J. M.

LAW SOCIETIES.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE. LECTURE ON ROMAN LAW.

LAST Monday evening Professor Hunter, M.A., delivered a special lecture at University College on Roman law, to a large number of law students. He commenced by referring to the importance of the study of Roman law, which in itself, he maintained, was a system of jurisprudence. Looking at its position in the history of legal and political institutions, and as it was compiled by a commission appointed by the Emperor Justinian they found a very complete and comprehensive body of law, chiefly civil in character. As far as other nations of antiquity were concerned, they did not possess any account of their legal systems which were at all to be compared with the law of the Romans, which made it all the more valuable. True it was that as regarded the Egyptians and the Greeks there were scraps and fragments of their laws left, but these were not to be compared with the complete and exhaustive account contained in the Roman law which had come down to them. With regard to the question as to the advantage to the English student of studying a system of law which he never would have to carry into practice, they must make a comparison with the Latin language, the study of which enabled a person to have a better knowledge of his own tongue. Another great advantage to be obtained from studying Roman law was that they found rules of law applied to circumstances in society which were analogous to their own. The constitution of Roman society in later periods of the empire to some extent resembled that of the present day; at the same time, there were such differences in the two nations that it could be seen exactly what the principles of law were, and how they were to be adapted to the state of society. In one sense, for the purposes of law, they might say, in the words of the poet:—

O! wad some power the giffie gie us,
To see ourselves as others see us.

A very large and important part of the English law was not directly derived from the Roman law, nevertheless the whole of it was more or less tinged with Roman law, especially the equity branch, as it related to legacies, wills, &c. As a system of jurisprudence, he thought that Roman law was of considerable value on account of its antiquity, and also by reason of the very sensible rules of law which constituted the bulk of the system. The rules of the Roman law were so much in accordance with good sense that they had been adopted to a considerable extent by European nations, and especially by this country. Its remarkable development occurred 500 years after the birth of Christ—"the digest" being the collection made by order of the Emperor Justinian, which made the first volume of the civil law. It was true they had got very scanty fragments, but still they were authentic fragments of the Roman law as it existed 500 years before Christ, which, under Justinian, were made more copious. It was possible to trace the development of the Roman law during a period of 1000 years, and from this point of view alone it was of extremely historical value; it had also been proved to be connected with some of the most ancient institutions of society. There was a very important link between the position occupied by Rome as regarded the ancient organisation of society and the organisation of the present day in England. With regard to the specific character of Roman law from an historical point of view, one of its most striking characteristics was what they might call its secular system, it being distinct from morals, religion, or philosophy, which was a great contrast from other laws of nations in which religion, ethics, law, and philosophy were mingled. In the Roman law, the further back they went the more they found the religious element mixed with law, while one or two of the Twelve Tables which were published in 449 B.C., were more or less of a religious character; but subsequently few traces could be found of the mixing of religion and law, though there were exceptions, notably in that relating to the law of boundaries, by which the priest was empowered to curse the man who removed his neighbour's landmark. The Roman law itself was at one time as deeply mixed with the religious element as the Mosaic law, and the Romans, so to speak, isolated the legal element of their lives from the religious. When the great convulsion in Rome occurred, and Constantine embraced Christianity, the changes thereby introduced in the law were extremely insignificant. The Roman law having been developed, and having an independent system of its own quite distinct from religion, differed in that respect from Hindoo and Mahomedan law. One of the most startling features in Roman law was the absence of all mention by any authorities of trial by ordeals. Whether ordeals were used by people of their own accord was not known, but it was perfectly true that ordeals did not form part of the administration of justice. The Roman laws, too, were exceedingly formal, besides which they upheld "family despotism," as it was called. The extreme principle of the subordination of one man to another was characteristic of Hindoo law, and was very ancient; but the tendency of the whole of Roman law was to break away from this principle of subordination. In conclusion, Professor Hunter said that the laws of Ireland, as he was informed, were free from any contact with Roman law; and until these laws were translated it was utterly impossible to say to what extent the Roman law had influenced English law; but it was not improbable that our law, like the language, would be found to be derived from a combination of sources.

LAW ASSOCIATION.

At the usual monthly meeting of the directors, held at the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, on Thursday, the 2nd inst., the following being present, viz.: Mr. Deaborough (chairman), and Messrs. Bennett, Carpenter, Collinson, Hedger, Kelley, Lovell, Masterman, Nisbet, Sawtell, Scadding, Sidney Smith, Tylee, Vallance, and Boodle (secretary), a grant of £250 was made to the widow of a member; one of £30 to the daughter of a member; and five amounting to £50, to four widows and one daughter of non-members. Five new members were elected, and the ordinary business was transacted.

LEGAL EXTRACTS.

THE LAND TITLES AND TRANSFER ACT 1875 (38 & 39 VICT. CAP. 87).

THE following paper was read by E. T. Clark, Esq., solicitor, at the annual general meeting of the Incorporated Law Society at Oxford in October last:—

One object of recent legislation has been to simplify and cheapen the administration and practice of law; but, in addition to the confusion necessarily attendant upon the radical changes introduced, it is notorious that such a measure of success as was at first somewhat confidently predicted for one most sweeping alteration in the practice of the law—the Judicature Acts—has so far been attained.

Besides, however, introducing alterations in the practice of the law in matters connected with litigation, the Legislature has thought fit to extend the reforming principles to dealings with land; and the consequence has been the Land Titles and Transfer Act 1875.

In estimating approximately the probability of success in the working of the Act, it may be well to consider, as nearly as can be the number of transactions in land which now take place. I understand that there are at present registered in the Register Office for the West Riding of Yorkshire (which may be taken as a fairly representative part of the kingdom) about 17,000 or 18,000 documents per annum, and these may be held roughly to represent so many dealings with land—copyhold property being, of course, excluded. In the last census I find the West Riding contained 1,374,611, and England and Wales 22,712,266, souls. According to this, the population of England and Wales would be about twelve times greater than that of the West Riding; and this proportion would give, taking the population as a basis and the number of deeds registered in the West Riding at 17,000 per annum, a total of 204,000 transactions a year in land for England and Wales.

The number of houses and acres in the West Riding and England and Wales, would, in like manner, give results of about 152,000 and 257,000 transactions per annum respectively. The average of the three will, of course, be 247,000 odd.

The above figures afford no estimate of the number of titles in England and Wales, as there are very few titles indeed in the West Riding of Yorkshire in which a document is registered every year.

It is manifest that one office in London would be totally inadequate to get through the work of registering and approving about 200 transactions in land each day (putting the working days of the year at 300), and the average of transactions as low as 200,000 per annum with anything approaching to regularity and expedition, involving, as a great proportion of these transactions would, an inquiry into the equitable titles raised by cautions, &c.

But when we consider for a moment the enormous number of unregistered titles there are in England and Wales, the number of separate holders, according to the late returns, being 972,336, and the titles, of course, more numerous, I think it will unmistakably appear that the London Register Office would be unequal to the work that would be cast upon it, even if only a moderate portion of them were brought for registration as absolute titles.

It is true the Act has provided for the establishment throughout the country of district registries, although at present none have been created; but even these registries, unless very numerous, would apparently have hard work to get through their allotted tasks, especially when we notice that section 101 seems to suggest that in certain matters applications for directions would have to be made to the local office in London.

It remains, of course, to be seen whether the persons who may be approached at these points are of sufficient power to cope with the responsible and involved duties allotted to them; but it is by no means a hopeful picture drawn of them by the Act, when it is solemnly stated, section 102, that, with the assent of the Lord Chancellor, they "may follow another calling."

As the general scope of the Act is to provide for the division of the title of all registered freehold land into three classes—Absolute, Qualified, and Possessory.

At present every person's title is assumed to be good until it is shown to be bad, and when a man offers property for sale, the immediate belief is that he has a marketable title to it. The Act, however, seems to produce a contrary effect, and virtually says that everyone's title is bad until it is shown to be good. If an absolute title is better than either a qualified or possessory one, which is possible, it must, of course, make the land more valuable, and will better. Thus being the case, every one registering will obtain an absolute title of possession, and if he has only a qualified or possessory one, the public will assume it is because he cannot obtain the former, and knowing buyers will naturally require their title accordingly. As to necessary title, not purchase, but what many persons will avoid themselves of the power of registration for the result of registering a possessory title is merely to obtain a declaration of what was done at the neighbourhood of the land, and that the person registered was then in possession of the land to the best of his knowledge. And the public will not have the trouble of serving notices to any person's estate, and afterwards finding that the land, for he will still have to wait to the time when the person's title is good.

The person registering a possessory title will be required to give a declaration of what was done at the neighbourhood of the land, and that the person registered was then in possession of the land to the best of his knowledge. And the public will not have the trouble of serving notices to any person's estate, and afterwards finding that the land, for he will still have to wait to the time when the person's title is good.

mutatis, to the same effect. Under the former section the following may apply for registration:—First, any person who has contracted to buy for his own benefit an estate in fee-simple in land; secondly, any person entitled for his own benefit, at law or in equity, to an estate in fee-simple in land; and, thirdly, any person capable of disposing for his own benefit by way of sale of an estate in fee-simple in land; in each case whether subject or not to incumbrances.

Tenants for life and tenants in tail appear, therefore, unable to register their estates, unless (under sect. 69) they can obtain the consent of all parties interested therein. This may not be so easy to do, particularly as under sect. 73 the persons whose consents are applied for may be saddled with part of the costs of registration. Where there are contingent remainders or unascertained estates clearly limited, the land will apparently be entirely excluded; for the power of the court to bind unborn persons (sect. 77) appears only to apply where the registrar entertains a doubt as to any matter of law or fact, and refers a case for the opinion of the court.

Sect. 68 allows trustees having a power of sale, and mortgagees, with the consent of the persons (if any) whose consent is necessary to the exercise of the power, to apply for registration.

Supposing that reversioners and remaindermen come within the provisions of sect. 5, there is this difficulty in the way of placing their estates upon the register—and which equally applies to all cases where the land proposed to be registered is mortgaged, or where the deeds are deposited—viz., that the documents of title in the case of an application for an absolute title, and the last conveyance in the case of a possessory title, have, under rules 3 and 3, to be produced for verification with the abstract, and for the purpose of being marked respectively. It may be assumed that it will in many cases be difficult to persuade mortgagees, incumbrancers, and tenants for life to allow their deeds to be produced, most probably in London, with no benefit to themselves and the possible disadvantage of the title to their security or land being denounced as only qualified or possessory. As to land which the person wishing to register has contracted to buy, it is provided (sect. 5) that the consent of the vendor must be obtained to the registration; and when the proceedings necessary for registration are considered, it is probable that there will be some difficulty in obtaining this.

In every application for first registration with an absolute title the following appear to be the requirements:

- I. An abstract of the title for the last forty years.
- II. An application for registration.
- III. A description of the property, setting out the names, &c., of the tenants other than yearly ones, and incumbrancers if any.
- IV. A plan of the property.
- V. A declaration, verifying the description and map, and that the possession is in accordance with the title.
- VI. A schedule of the title deeds; and the title deeds themselves to be sent to the office, or produced for inspection, as the registrar shall direct.
- VII. An application to, and a certificate from, the Inland Revenue Commissioners that no succession duty is owing in respect of the land. For as the Act directs that they shall, on being satisfied in this respect, grant such a certificate, and as the land registered is by sect. 16 expressly declared to be subject to succession duty unless this is done, a purchaser would at once call for it.
- VIII. Proof, where the fact is so, that the minerals belong to the land; and for a similar reason, as the same section declares the land shall not include the minerals unless entered on the register.

IX. Advertisements in such newspapers as may be directed; and registration not to be completed until three months from the first advertisement. For although the 10th rule says that the registration may be completed within one month after the time fixed for settlement of title as hereafter mentioned, yet the next rule says that at any time within three months from the first advertisement any person may come in and object, and if within the registration could not be completed until that time had expired.

X. Notices of the application to be served on such persons and incumbrancers as the registrar may direct.

XI. A declaration that all documents have been produced.

12. Such searches, &c., as the registrar may direct. The registrar then investigates the title, and if he thinks fit, he may refer to a representative number of the Court of Chancery, if the registrar in examining the title, himself object to it as defective, and refuse registration, then a bill of sale, and the applicant must submit himself to the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery.

When matters have reached this stage, and the title has been approved, a statement in duplicate for settlement of the title must be prepared by the applicant—containing the name, &c., of the person to be registered, particulars as to the title, the incumbrances and other entries, &c., to be made on the register—and notice given by the applicant to all persons to whom, in the registrar's opinion, notice should be sent. After disposing of any objection, a search will be necessary to see whether any one has lodged a caution against registration of the land at all, under sect. 60.

The registrar will then grant a land certificate, and the registration will be complete.

The office fees upon the simplest form of registration of an absolute title, and where no objection is made, would, as far as can be gathered from the table of fees issued, amount, on registering property of the value of £1000, to about £5 5s.

When the cost of advertisements, service of notices, having the map made, correspondence from town to country solicitors, attendances of the former at the register office, searches for incumbrances, and, lastly, the costs of the country solicitors, are added to these office fees, it will be seen that the expenses of registering the simplest form of title—viz., where the applicant is possessed of an estate in fee-simple, with an ordinary marketable title free from incumbrances—will amount to a very considerable sum—at least double, it may be safely assumed, that of an ordinary dealing with the land under the present system. In addition to these costs, it must take from commencement to end of the transactions, at least four months to complete the registration. Where, however, there are incumbrances, the expenses will probably be much increased; for the incumbrancers will most likely require to be represented in the transaction by their own solicitors.

If there should be anything out of the way about the title, or any point upon which the registrar entertains any doubt, or if any objection is made to registration, it is difficult to say where the expenses may stop.

The proceedings for a possessory title are more simple; but here the following documents, &c., are required: application, description, map, declaration of possession, production of deeds, application for and certificate of no succession duty being owing, proof as to minerals, and notices if required by registrar.

Leaseholds can be registered with a declaration of the title of the lessor to grant the lease, or without; but, as to the former case, it seems unnecessary to do so; for the 37 & 38 Vict. c. 73, s. 2, provides that an assignee of leaseholds shall not be entitled, on a sale thereof, to call for the title to the freehold. It may be noticed also that a possessory title of leaseholds cannot be registered under the Act, however old the lease may be; and that in every case of an application for registration of leaseholds, an investigation of the title to the leaseholds by the registrar is necessary, with, of course, the concomitant delay and expense. Where the land in the original lease has been subdivided, and the intending applicant possesses only a portion of such land, and does not hold the original lease or a counterpart, he apparently cannot register his holding at all; for the 11th section directs that "every applicant for registration of leasehold land shall deposit with the registrar the lease," or, if such lease is proved to the satisfaction of the registrar to be lost, a copy of such lease or a counterpart thereof; and even if he hold the lease, and have counterpart for production with other possessors of subdivided parts, it does not seem that he could safely apply for registration; for the 34th rule enacts that "the lease or copy so deposited shall be retained in the office during the continuance of such lease."

When, however, land is registered with an absolute title, it is still subject to questions as to boundaries, succession duty that may have arisen after the date of the certificate, quit rents, and tax, tithes, &c.

What is necessary in a transfer of registered land, other than as a purchase, seems to be—First, an inquiry by the purchaser, on the spot, whether the land is subject to land tax, quit rents, tithes, &c., and whether the boundaries are correctly described; secondly, a search by the purchaser in the registry, to see if any charge, notice of lease, &c., has been entered in the register since the date of the certificate; thirdly, application by the vendor, &c., and a certificate from the Commissioners of Inland Revenue that there is no succession duty owing; fourthly, a transfer of the land in the form presented by the Act; fifthly, an attendance to stamp duty, and a registration of the transfer; and, seventhly, the procuring a fresh land certificate. In cases where the land is of the value of £100 or £1000, this might be cheaper than the present costs, but it would at least involve as much time as it is possible to effect the same result in now. Where the value is above £100, the expenses would apparently be at least as much as now, and the time consumed probably greater.

But the real trial of the Act is when complications arise upon the titles. Under sect. 53, any person who considers he is interested in any registered land may lodge a caution with the registrar, that no dealing may be had by the registered proprietor until notice has been served on the cautioner; and the registrar has no option of refusing to receive it. Nothing then can be done with the land until the cautioner has been got rid of, and for this purpose he is to have notice of any proposed dealing with the property. If the cautioner appears before the registrar within fourteen days after notice, and give security, the registrar may, if he thinks fit, delay any dealing with the land for such time as he thinks just. The Act does not prescribe the next steps that are to be taken, either to support or discharge the caution, but it is supposed the cautioner may apply to the registrar, under sect. 57, to inhibit, for such time as he thinks proper, any dealings with the property, after such inquiries, notices, &c., as the registrar thinks expedient. But if the cautioner does not so apply, or having applied, obtains an inhibition, it seems the registered proprietor must appeal to the court in order to get rid of the caution or inhibition. At present persons putting forward doubtful claims to estates are often restrained in a salutary way by the costs of doing so; but it would seem that the Act opens an easy door for the impecunious claimants to harass persons upon whose property they may consider they have a claim; and it does not appear at all improbable that owners of registered land may be often put to needless expense in this way. Then, to consider the legitimate use of cautions—i.e., where other persons than the registered owner have interests in the land, as incumbrancers, remaindermen, reversioners, &c.—it does not appear fair to them that they should be thus put to the expense of entering cautions, and have to hold themselves always in readiness to appear before the registrar, at fourteen days' notice, to support their claim to have their caution maintained. It is also curious to notice that the Act contains no provisions in case of the death of the cautioner; and as it is enacted that the land shall not be dealt with until after the service "on the cautioner" (sect. 54), it is difficult to see how a caution is to be removed where the cautioner has died. If the registrar should prejudice cautioners in his dealings with their cautions, they must appeal to the court; and, on the other hand, if he should manifest great care in dealing with cautions, and show considerable reluctance in removing them, landowners will similarly be driven to appeal.

It is evident that questions upon cautions will frequently arise; for it is the simplest and easiest, and in many cases apparently the only available way in which a person interested in registered land, and not registered as the owner or proprietor of a charge, can protect his interest in it. There are two other ways of attaining the same end pointed out by the Act: (1) by an inhibition; and (2) by a restriction entered on the register; but the causes that will no doubt be found to militate against the use of these are, that the first can only be entered on the register after such enquiries, notices, &c., as the registrar may think expedient (sect. 57), which would undoubtedly prove dilatory and costly, and that the second can only be done by the registered proprietor himself.

The enactments, moreover, of the Act as to cases where the registered proprietor dies, seem likely to prove expensive and unsatisfactory. Under sect. 41, "on the death of a sole registered proprietor, or the survivor of several joint registered proprietors, of any freehold land, such person [which is defined by the Act to include several] shall be registered as proprietor in the place of the deceased proprietor or proprietors as may, on the application of any person interested in the land, be appointed by the registrar," subject to an appeal to the court.

It is to be noticed that the person appointed under this section by the registrar will have complete power of disposing of the property and the absolute estate in it, subject to any entries on the register.

Now, the first remark which this section suggests is, that when land shall have been registered in the name of more than one person as joint proprietors under sect. 69, upon the death of each of them (except the last survivor) his real representative will not be entitled to be entered in his place, but the surviving ones will remain upon the register as proprietors.

If the equitable interests of the persons thus dying pass to their representatives—as in the case of tenants in common—those representatives will have nothing to show it, so far as the register is concerned; they will be compelled to go to the expense of entering one or more cautions, as the case may require, to prevent the registered proprietors from selling the property; and should they wish to sell they will probably have some difficulty, for who would purchase the share or interest, only protected by a caution, which might lead to litigation?

As the registered proprietors died off, therefore, the register would gradually be encumbered with quantities of cautions; and when the survivor died there would be a general dispute amongst all the persons claiming interests, as to who should be entered on the register, the expense and delay of deciding which, and investigating the necessary titles, would be very considerable.

Where a sole registered proprietor dies, unless he has devised the land simply to one person, there would immediately arise the question as to who are entitled to be entered upon the register as proprietor. Even where the estates under the will—for I am assuming a case where a will is made—were clear and defined, there would be a struggle amongst the parties to be placed upon the register—and no greater number of persons than four can be entered. Summonses to attend before the registrar would have to be issued, and the parties represented by their different solicitors; the registrar would have to investigate the equitable title, and, after hearing the parties, decide who were to be registered, subject to appeal to the court. Those interested, who were not registered, would, of course, have to enter cautions to protect their interests.

In the case of tenant for life and remaindermen, it is assumed the registrar would enter both on the register; neither could then, by registered disposition, deal with the property without the consent of the other, and if either wished to deal with his interest by mortgage, or otherwise, it would have to be by the ordinary means of conveyancing, with the expense, and probably consequent troubles, of a caution.

Where the case is more involved, as where there are interests of unborn persons or contingent estates, it does not seem easy to ascertain how their interests are to be protected, or in whose names cautions can be entered.

Where the construction of the will is at all doubtful, the expense and delay must necessarily be much increased; as upon the registrar's decision practically rests the right to the property itself. In case of intestacy the expense of proving the heirship to the satisfaction of the registrar would in all probability, for similar reasons, be much more expensive than now.

It may also be noticed that the registrar may decide as to who is to be entered on the register, "upon the application of any person interested in the land;" tenants for life and others who may not wish to register at all, may thus be driven to do so by remaindermen and persons owning future estates, and may be saddled with their proportion of the costs (sect. 73).

All these expenses will, in the vast majority of cases, be an addition to the present cost of conveyancing; for now on the death of a landowner the general result is that the devisee, or heir, has no expenses at all of a conveyancing description to bear.

At present innumerable difficulties and questions under wills and intestacies are satisfactorily smoothed over by solicitors, and never come to light at all; but under the Act the strict inquiry into the rights of all parties is highly calculated to raise many dormant questions, and to encourage litigation upon points which may ultimately never arise. Indeed a large number of disputes may be looked for under sect. 41, which would otherwise probably have never been created.

I have attempted to give some idea of what, prima facie, appears to be the result of the main principles of the Act, as far as practice is concerned; although it is difficult, of course, seeing the permissive language of the Act nearly throughout, and the almost arbitrary power conferred upon the registrar, as to decisions on points of title, cautions, and dealing with them, notices, costs, &c., to estimate how far it may be made to work harmoniously.

Putting aside exceptional cases, the result of a careful consideration of the Act seems to lead to the conclusion that, as far as general conveyancing is concerned, the difficulties and expense of getting land upon the register, and the great number of cases in which applications to the registrar are necessary, and the costs that may, and so far as can be conjectured most probably will, result therefrom, and from the many applications to the court foreshadowed by the Act, do not seem unlikely to counterbalance the benefit to be obtained from it.

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

NOTE BENE.—Information intended for publication under the above heading should reach us not later than Thursday morning in each week, as publication is otherwise delayed.

MR. A. HEALES, solicitor, of Doctor's-commons, has been appointed a Commissioner in England to administer oaths in all causes and matters depending in the Supreme Court of the Colony of Victoria.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES, is contributed by EDWARD WALTON, M.A., and late scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, and Fellow of the Genealogical and Historical Society of Great Britain; and, as it is desired to make it as perfect a record as possible, the families and friends of deceased members of the Profession will oblige by forwarding to the LAW TIMES Office any dates and materials required for a biographical notice.

MR. JUSTICE ARCHIBALD.

THE late Hon. Sir Thomas Dickson Archibald, one of the judges of the Court of Common Pleas, who died on the 18th ult., at his residence in Portchester-gate, Hyde Park, in the sixtieth year of his age, was the second surviving son of the late Hon. Samuel George William Archibald, LL.D., formerly Master of the Rolls, and some time Speaker of the House of Assembly at Nova Scotia, by his marriage with Elizabeth, daughter of Charles Dickson, Esq. He was born in the year 1817, and was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple in Hilary Term 1832, and joined the Northern Circuit, which he shortly afterwards changed for the Home Circuit. In 1868 he was appointed Counsel to the Treasury, and in 1872 he was raised to the judicial bench as a judge, in the Court of Queen's Bench, receiving shortly afterwards the customary honour of knighthood. He was transferred to the Court of Common Pleas last year. His career in these official capacities was briefly referred to in a recent impression. Sir Thomas Archibald married, in 1841, Sarah, only daughter of Richard Smith, Esq., of The Priory, Dudley, Worcestershire, by whom he has left a family. The remains of the late judge were interred at Kensal Green Cemetery on Saturday last.

A. M. HARE, ESQ.

THE late Alexander Macconochie Hare, Esq., Writer to the Signet, who died on the 14th ult., at Calder Hall, near Edinburgh, Midlothian, was the younger son of Stuart Bayley Hare, Esq., of Calder Hall, by his first wife, Mary Anne, third daughter of Alexander Macconochie, Esq., of Meadowbank, Midlothian. He was born about the year 1840, and was admitted a member of the Honourable Society of Writers to the Signet in Scotland in 1864. The deceased gentleman was highly respected by his friends and acquaintances.

R. PALIN, ESQ.

THE late Richard Palin, Esq., solicitor, of Shrewsbury, who died at his residence, Abbey House, in that town, on the 28th Sept., in the sixty-sixth year of his age, was the eldest son of the late William Palin, Esq., of Cherrington Manor, in the county of Salop, by his marriage with Sarah, daughter of Thomas Jukes, Esq. He was born at Kinnereley, on the 16th April, 1811, and was articled to Walter Burley, Esq., solicitor, of Shrewsbury, and remained with him a few years after his articles had expired, as managing clerk. He was admitted a solicitor in 1835, and was at the time of his death the senior partner in the firm of Messrs. Palin, Wade, and Thomas, solicitors, of Shrewsbury. He was a commissioner in all the old courts, and also a perpetual commissioner, chairman of directors of the Salop Fire Office, a director of the Shrewsbury Gas Light Company, and was formerly a director of the famous Old Roman Gravel Lead Mining Company, and negotiated its sale to the present company. He was for some time a director of the Ladywall Mining Company, which he resigned a few months ago in consequence of failing health. He was also a director of the Shropshire Banking Company, and it was largely through his able advocacy that it was transferred to Lloyd's Banking Company. He was also auditor of the Wenlock Railway and the Much Wenlock and Severn Junction Railways. Mr. Palin was for six years an alderman of the borough of Shrewsbury. He had a considerable and lucrative conveyancing practice, and was much esteemed by his numerous clients and a large circle of friends for his great business energy and tact, his genial deportment, and his unswerving integrity. He married Miss Mary Anne Thomas, second daughter of the late Rev. William Thomas, M.A., vicar of Loppington, Shropshire, by whom he has left an only daughter. The remains of the deceased gentleman were interred at the General Cemetery, Shrewsbury, on the 3rd inst.

DAVID GIBBONS, ESQ.

THE death is announced of Mr. David Gibbons, the eminent special pleader, of New-court, Temple. The deceased gentleman, who had been in very extensive practice for nearly forty years, was the son of the late Edward Augustus Gibbons, who was descended from a long line of citizens of London, dating from the time of the Tudors. On the maternal side Mr. Gibbons was the lineal representative of several ancient Yorkshire families—the Cooksons, the Kitchingmans, the Idles (of whom was Chief Baron Idles, the friend of the first

Cases set down previous to Transfer.

Henderson v. Grange
Clark v. Ballows
Bottle v. Knocker
Roe v. Davies
Barrett v. Vernon

Attorney-General v. The Clothworkers' Co.
Teasdale v. Braithwaite
Spratt's Patent v. Booth

(Before V.-C. HALL.)
Cases.

Cook v. Joyce
Fitzroy v. Fergusson
Forman v. Withers
Orr v. Diaper
Dowdswell v. Dowdswell
Crompton v. Lea
Republic of Peru v. Ruzo
Boytoun v. Boynton
Austin v. Austin
Austin v. Boyes
Ranken v. Alfaro
The General Insurance Co.
v. Kuhner
Hall v. Byron
Price v. Jenkins
Thomas v. Ellis
Tittle v. Ash
Litch v. Latch—Litch v.
Litch
Bryant v. Maisey
Phillips v. Wigan
Avery v. Avery
Kingdon v. Castleman
Hodgson v. Coates
Watkins v. Stuart
Cobby v. Cobby
Re Smith—Bridson v.
Smith
Roe v. Gray
Roe v. Teape
Pardoe v. Griffiths
Griffiths v. Pardoe
Gibbon v. Watson
Tanner v. Sparks
Silber v. Rylands and Co.
(Limited)—Silber v. Ry-lands and Co. (Limited)
Foster v. Lamb
Re Blades—Blades v. Inman Petherbridge v. Michel-more
Rowe v. Lord Charles Kerr Woodhouse v. Woodhouse
Barnes v. Barnes
Perkins v. Perkins
Ridgway v. Hilton House,
&c., Colliery Co. (Limited)
Innes v. Marsden
Barber v. Wood
Cook v. Cook
Hewitt v. Hodges
Green v. Carill
Wood v. Calvert
Re Eley—Malden v. Soames
Wade v. Burgess
Dent v. Dent
Matthews v. Smith
Wane v. Finesse
Macfarlane v. Lister
Harris v. Hoare
Norris v. Fowler
Hartley v. Owen
Wooler v. Montague
Kitchin v. Palmer
Fraser v. Bothams
Porter v. Baddeley
Bell v. Charlton
Rayment v. Dimbleby
Burslem v. Cronch
Rice v. Timmis
Jeffreys v. Pairs
Swindell v. Birmingham Syndicate (Limited)
Hodges v. Fincham
Re Jno. Clark, deceased—
Chatterton v. Clark
Thomas v. Atherton
Roberts v. Williams
Marsh v. Marsh
Re Farley, deceased—
Hallett v. Hunt
Atkinson v. Mason
Attorney-Gen. v. Mayor,
&c., of Darlington
Steinthal v. Samson
Re Carnegie—The Open Stock Exchange (Limited) v. Carnegie
Re Pratt, deceased—
Kirk v. Pratt
Rudkin v. Dolman
Buttenshaw v. Fletcher
Birmingham Syndicate
(Limited) v. Swindell Chesterfield, &c. Co. (Limited) v. Black
Howard v. Sparrow
Haddon v. Bowman
Terry v. Davies
Turner v. Edmonds
Sherry v. Rhodson
Re Daniel, deceased—
Daniel v. Daniel
McClellan v. Brown
Brown v. McClellan
Corbett v. Lincott
Bowe v. Jacob
Leslie Phillips
Lavero v. Manero
Rippington v. Rippington
Attorney-Gen. v. Tomline
Davidson v. Chiboust
West v. Oxenham
Folhard v. Page
Casson v. Dormoy
Rolle v. McLaren

Wilson v. Dickinson
Fooks v. Senior
Buckle v. Weir
Re Lurton and Hughes
Estate—Warrington v.
Major
Dawson v. Bank of White-haven
Waberton v. Heaven
Pearson v. Harris
Heaton v. Gerrard
Smith v. Brind
Godling v. Dudley
Hedley v. Dove
Longbourne v. Fisher
Walking v. Stace
Khuliffa v. Forbes
Benthams v. Humphreys
Mawlam v. Busby
Coleman v. Lloyd
Wiles v. Stace
Whitworth v. Lancashire,
&c., Railway Co.
Whitworth v. Longbottom
Batcliff v. Batcliff
Blackburn v. Carlton
King v. Matthews
The Alliance, &c., Building
Co. v. Bent
Re Laity, deceased—Laity
v. Laity
Roddard v. Cooke
Harrison v. Pearce
Cory v. Ker
Re Ross—Cundal v. Ross
Re Meynell—Meynell v.
Wright
French v. Plumpton
Wadsworth v. Brown
Stewart v. Hopper
Ashton v. Stock
Ede v. Vyse
Gael v. Gibb
British Dynamite Co.
(Limited) v. Krebs
Whitehall v. Holbrooke—
Holbrooke v. Whitehall
Re Young—Young v. Dolman
Phillip v. Gifford
Isaac v. Wall
Heard v. Heard
Dawson v. Dawson
Sutton v. Malet
Macdonald v. Irvine
Re Walker's Estate—
Church v. Tyacke
Lucy v. Allen
Aldridge v. Aldridge
Stevens v. King
Elias v. Griffith
Thursfield v. Nichols
Allen v. Bewsey
Gossett v. Campbell
Frost v. Frost
Ware v. Petchy
Moses v. Gillespie
Crow v. Fewster
Kemp v. Bird
Hubert v. Briggs
Bacon v. Bacon
Teape v. Teape
Re Hetley, deceased—
Green v. Campbell
Marson v. Caddick
Lonsdale v. Lonsdale
Moult v. Smith
Porter v. Porter
Attorney-General v. Tom-line
Re Warren's Estate—Warren v. Tucker
Evans v. Williams
Graham v. Presser
Smith v. Le Riche
Hunter v. Eltringham
Wells v. Carr
Watney v. Trist
Coles v. Serocold
Hirst v. Clay
Gardner v. Wilkinson
Barrett v. Christian Canning v. Green—Canning v. Green
Boyle v. Millin—Millin v.
Boyle
Frost v. Brittain
The Alliance Bank (Limd.)
v. Carr—Carr v. The Alliance Bank (Limited)
Royal National Lifeboat
Institution v. White
Galton v. Clung
Barker v. Congreve
Barron v. Rushforth
Haleam v. Brown
Re Beauderck—Johnson v.
Beauderck
Dowager Baroness Stanley of Alderley v. Earl of Shrewsbury
Lancashire and Yorkshire
Bank v. Tee
Chandler v. Howell
Hull v. Hill
Garrard v. Reilly
Newby v. Sharpe

Haniel v. Putz
Gibbs v. Burslem
Hewitt v. Westminster Improvement Commrs.

Holliday v. Heaton
Littin v. Engleheart
Pennington v. Brinsop
Hall Coal Co. (Limited)

Divisional Court of Appeal from Inferior Courts.

Hill v. Perree
Re Smee

Powis v. Lord Dynevor
Ley v. Collis

COURT OF APPEAL, AND HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE (CHANCERY DIVISION).

MICHAELMAS SITTINGS, 1876.

Rota of Registrars in Attendance.

	Court of Appeal.	Master of the Rolls.
Saturday Nov. 4	Merivale	Milne
Monday	King	Holdship
Tuesday	Milne	Teasdale
Wednesday	Farrer	Holdship
Thursday	Milne	Teasdale
Friday	King	Teasdale
Saturday	Farrer	Holdship
Saturday Nov. 4	V.C. Malins.	V.C. Bacon.
Monday	Holdship	Cloves
Tuesday	Ward	Latham
Wednesday	Femberton	Merivale
Thursday	Ward	Latham
Friday	Femberton	Merivale
Saturday	Femberton	Merivale
Saturday Nov. 4	V.C. Hall.	Certificates of Sale and Transfer.
Monday	Ward	Farrer
Tuesday	Cloves	Leach
Wednesday	Leach	Ward
Thursday	Cloves	Milne
Friday	Leach	Latham
Saturday	Cloves	Femberton
Saturday	Leach	Teasdale

The Christmas Vacation will commence on Dec. 24, and terminate on Jan. 6, both days inclusive.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Oct. 27.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
DRINKWATER, HERBERT CHARLES, Westminster-chmbs, Victoria-st, Westminster. Pet. Oct. 25. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sols. Pritchard, Eaglefield, and Co., Painters'-hall. Sur. Nov. 14.
LOCKWOOD, CHARLES, tailor, Finsbury, St. Paul's-churchyard. Pet. Oct. 24. Reg. Pops. Sols. Bulton and Co., Henrietta-st, Covent-garden. Sur. Nov. 8.
MALLIS, EMANUEL ANTONIO, sponge importer, Union-st, Old Broad-st. Pet. Oct. 24. Reg. Brougham. Sols. Trinder and Co., Bishopsgate-with. Sur. Nov. 7.
TANHAFT, EDWIN, timber merchant, Southgate-st. Pet. Oct. 24. Reg. Brougham. Sols. Woodard, Ingram-st, Fenchurch-st. Sur. Nov. 7.
To surrender in the Country.
BETTRIDGE, JAMES, fish salesman, Newport, Mon. Pet. Oct. 25. Reg. Davis. Sur. Nov. 15.
ELLIOTT, JANE, widow, bread and biscuit baker, Croydon. Pet. Oct. 9. Reg. Bowland. Sur. Nov. 10.
FELDEN, SAMUEL, cotton spinner and manufacturer, Walsden. Pet. Oct. 25. Reg. Bellenger. Sur. Nov. 15.
FLATHER, HENRY; SUGDEN, ROBERT; and HODGSON, WILLIAM—HENRY, machine makers, Bradford. Pet. Oct. 25. Reg. Hulton. Sur. Nov. 22.
KNOWLES, PETER, wine and spirit merchant, Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 25. Reg. Bellenger. Sur. Nov. 15.
WILLIAMS, CHARLES, farmer, Goldcliff, par. Nash, Bishopton, and Whitson. Pet. Oct. 25. Reg. Davis. Sur. Nov. 10.
WINGHOUGH, ARTHUR, publican, Pembroke-dock. Pet. Oct. 24. Reg. Lloyd. Sur. Nov. 7.
To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Basinghall-street.
BUCKLE, THOMAS WARA, collector, Queen Victoria-st. Pet. Oct. 27. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sur. Nov. 15.
LYONS, GEORGE JOSEPH, Ostend, Belgium. Pet. Oct. 27. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sur. Nov. 15.
TERRY, J. W., coal merchant, Salters'-hall-court, Cannon-st, and Brookley-st, Forest-hill. Pet. Oct. 27. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sur. Nov. 15.
THROCKMORTON, RICHARD, Saville-row, Burlington-gardens. Pet. Oct. 25. Reg. Brougham. Sur. Nov. 15.
To surrender in the Country.
BOFF, HENRY, and BOFF, GEORGE, builders, St. Alban's. Pet. Oct. 27. Reg. Edwards. Sur. Nov. 15.
DAWSON, JAMES, coal merchant, Kingston-upon-Hull. Pet. Oct. 24. Reg. Rollit. Sur. Nov. 15.
GRAHAM, H. MCLEAN, Ivy House, Hampton Court. Pet. Oct. 10. Sur. Nov. 15.
OWEN, GRIFFITH, farmer, Yagbor, par. Llanfairmathafarnethaf, co. Anglesey. Pet. Oct. 25. Reg. Lloyd Jones. Sur. Nov. 15.

Bankruptcies Annulled.

Gazette, Oct. 27.

PRIDGON, ROBERT THOMAS, farmer, Wreham. Sept., 1876.

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Oct. 27.

ADDISON, ROBERT PALLET, farmer, Isle of Ely. Pet. Oct. 13. Nov. 19, at one, at the Chequers inn, March. Sol. Ginn, Cambridge.
AUSTIN, JOSEPH FRANCIS, in lodgers, Birkenhead. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 9, at eleven, at offices of Thompson and Co., Birkenhead.
AUSTIN, CHARLES, grocer, W. so, near Selby. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 9, at three, at offices of T. W. Crowther, Britannia-bldgs, Oxford-pl, Leeds.
BAGLEY, WILLIAM, grocer, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 12. Nov. 9, at three, at office of Sol. Jacques, Birmingham.
BAKER, JAMES WILLIAM, farmer, Bradford, in Ecclefield. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 8, at three, at offices of Sols. Broomhead, Wigtman, and Moore, Sheffield.
BAZLEY, JOHN WILLIAM, baker, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 9, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Phillips, Birmingham.
BELTON, JOHN, painter, Nottingham. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 10, at three, at offices of Sol. Belk, Nottingham.
BLACKLEDGE, JOHN, fruiterer, Cloncy. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 8, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Morris, Chelmsley.
BOOTH, GRADIAN, builder, Accrington. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 9, at half-past ten, at the Hargreaves Arms hotel, Accrington. Sol. Ballard, Accrington.
BRUNTON, GEORGE JAMES, buff manufacturer, Sheffield. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 9, at two, at office of Sol. Fairbairn, Sheffield.
CALCUTT, WILLIAM, leather dealer, Green-st, P. thn-green. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 11, at eleven, at office of Sol. E. o. v. Globe r. i. Mile End.

CANNING, BENJAMIN, cabinet manufacturer, Bristol. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 10, at two, at offices of T. Collins, jun., 25, Broad-st, Bristol. Sols. Salmon and Henderson, Bristol.
CHIPPCHASE, WILLIAM, brick manufacturer, Redcar, and Tees Tillery. Pet. Oct. 19. Nov. 11, at eleven, at Griffith's Temperance hotel, Linthorpe-d, Middleburgh. Sol. Bainbridge, Middleburgh.
CLAYTON, THOMAS WATERHOUSE, farmer, Conborough. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 7, at two, at offices of Sol. Anderson, York.
COHEN, HERMAN, cigar dealer, Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 13, at three, at offices of Sol. Nordon, Liverpool.
COLMAN, JOHN, theatre manager, Beaufort House, Beaufort-bdgs, Strand, and Queen's Theatre, Longacre. Pet. Oct. 19. Nov. 10, at two, at offices of Sol. Fairpoint, Leicester-sq.
COMBE, TOM, leather seller, Lincoln. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 9, at eleven, at offices of G. Jay, accountant, Bank-st, Lincoln. Sol. Page, Jul. 11. 8. 1.
CUNSON, ISAAC and MEADOWS, GEORGE QUINUS, aerated water manufacturers, Witbech. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 9, at one, at the Ship inn, Wisbech. Sols. Deacon and Wilkins, Peterborough.
DAISE, JAMES, fruiterer, Shanklin. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 7, at three, at offices of Sol. Urry, Shanklin.
DAVIS, CAROLINE, house, Le d. v. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 8, at three, at offices of Sol. Hoppa, Bedford, Leeds.
EDLIN, HENRY ROBERT, gentleman, Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 7, at ten, at offices of R. G. Tramplesure, 7, Adelaide-bdgs, Lime-st, Liverpool. Sol. Last, Liverpool.
EGAN, JAMES EDWARD, grocer, Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 15, at three, at offices of S. I. Nordon, Liverpool.
EVANS, WILLIAM EVAN, victualler, Llandudno. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 11, at twelve, at the Queen's hotel, Chester. Sol. Chamberlain, Llandudno.
FORD, WILLIAM, lapidary, Clerkenwell-green. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 11, at half-past ten, at offices of Sols. Evans and Eagles, John-st, Bedford-row.
FORGE, FREDERICK, auctioneer, Manchester. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 16, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Smith, Manchester.
FOXALL, EDWARD, shipmaster, Bootle, nr. Liverpool. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 10, at three, at office of Sol. Forrest, Liverpool.
FURSEY, ELIZA, ironmonger, par. St. Wool's. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 9, at twelve, at office of A. Williams, 3, Commercial-st, Newport. Sol. Jenkins, Newport, Mon.
GOUGH, FRANCIS PELLING, commission agent, Blockley. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 9, at twelve, at offices of Sols. New, France, and Garrard, Evesham.
GRAHAM, EDWARD, grocer, Newcastle. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 10, at eleven, at office of Sols. Keesley and Foster, Newcastle.
HATWARD, EDGAR FRANK, hosier, King's-rd, Chelsea, and Trinity-st, Wandsworth-l, Upper Tooting. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 8, at two, at offices of Sols. Phelps, Sidgwick, and Biddle, Gresham-st.
HEA, ROBERT, grocer, Barrow-in-Furness. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 12, at three, at Barry's hotel, Barrow-in-Furness. Sol. Taylor, Barrow-in-Furness.
HOLLINBAKE, SMITH, cotton manufacturer, Burnley. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 10, at three, at offices of Sol. Roberts, Marsden-street, Pall Mall.
HOLLOWAY, JOHN, coach builder, Cardiff. Pet. Oct. 19. Nov. 7, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Morgan, Cardiff.
HUDSON, SIMON ALFRED, draper, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 8, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Rowlands, Birmingham.
HUNT, JONAS, silk winder, Hyson-green. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 8, at three, at offices of Sol. Bell, Nottingham.
HUNTLEY, VINTON, draper, South Shields. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 8, at three, at offices of Sol. Smith, North Shields.
IRELAND, CHARLES FREDERICK, skirt manufacturer, De Beauvoir-rd, St. Albans. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 9, at twelve, at office of Mr. Nelson, accountant, 10, Basinghall-st. Sols. Kynaston and Gasquet, Queen-st.
IRVING, JAMES CORBET, and SLADE, HENRY GEORGE, stock-brokers, Cornhill-st. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 7, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Alderman, and Knapton, Aldermanbury.
JACKSON, BERTHAM, warehouseman, Bow-l, Chesapeake. Pet. Oct. 17. Nov. 13, at twelve, at the London Warehousemen's Association, 111, Chesapeake. Sols. Gowing and Mandale, King-st, Chesapeake.
JAMES, ISAAC WILLIAM, farmer, Bartestree, par. Dornington. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 9, at one, at offices of Sol. Stallard, Hereford.
JAMES, JOHN, butcher, St. Columb. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 11, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Walsfield, St. Columb.
JESOP, JOSEPH BENJAMIN, chemist, Wolverhampton. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 10, at eleven, at office of Sol. Duke, Birmingham.
KIRK, GEORGE, bookseller, Lincoln. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 11, at eleven, at offices of G. Jay, accountant, 3, Bank-street, Lincoln.
KYLE, CHARLES, builder, Sheffield. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 7, at eleven, at office of Sol. Bell, Sheffield.
LEWIS, SAMUEL, mill furnaceman, Wednesbury. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 13, at half-past three, at offices of Sol. Shulton, Wednesbury.
LIBBANY, MAXIMILIAN, shipping merchant, Bradford. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 8, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Wood and Killick, Bradford.
MATHISON, ROBERT, cooper, Berwick-on-Tweed. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 6, at two, at office of Sols. Messrs. Weddell, Berwick-on-Tweed.
MAY, EDWIN WOODWARD, confectioner, Newport, Isle of Wight. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 17, at one, at the Star hotel, Newport. Sol. Hooper, Newport.
MILLER, EDMUND, master haulier, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 14, at three, at offices of Sol. Patt, Birmingham.
MILTON, JAMES, and CURNOW, MATTHEW, grocers, Bristol. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 8, at two, at offices of Sols. Hunt, Hobson, and Bobbett, Bristol.
MORRAN, EDWIN, plumber, Bream. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 11, at one, at offices of Sol. Jackson, Bream.
MORRIS, HENRY, VAUGHAN, outletter, Blue Anchor-rd, Bermondsey, and Clarendon-rd, Notting-hill. Pet. Oct. 19. Nov. 7, at three, at offices of Sol. Goldbert, West-st, Moorgate-st.
OLIVER, HENRY, widow, Ingleby, Northchurch. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 15, at half-past eleven, at office of Sol. Bullock, Great Berkhamstead.
PARRINGTON, WILLIAM HUDSON, tailor, Essex-rd, Islington. Pet. Oct. 11. Nov. 4, at one, at the Mason's Hall tavern, Mason's-ry, Basinghall-st. Sol. Hick, London-wall.
PHILLIPS, EDWARD, est., farmer, East Dunley-farm, par. Hnllingworth. Pet. Oct. 20. Nov. 6, at eleven, at the George hotel, Cheltenham. Sols. Messrs. Taynton, Gloucester.
PLUMMER, GRACE, fishmonger, Harrogate. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 10, at twelve, at office of Sol. Lendal, York.
REYNOLDS, ALFRED, smith, Turple-st, Whitefriars. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 10, at two, at offices of Sol. Baxter, Laurence Pountney-hill.
RHODES, CALER, Meend, par. Flaxley, and RHODES, WILLIAM, LittleCen Woodside, builders. Pet. Oct. 15. Nov. 9, at three, at offices of Sol. Dighton, LittleCen Woodside.
RILEY, JAMES, grocer, Ilkeston. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 15, at eleven, at the Rutland hotel, Ilkeston. Sol. Thurman, Ilkeston.
ROBERTSON, HENRY, mason, William-st, Curial-rd, and King's Head-st, Long Alley, Flinsbury. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 16, at four, at office of F. Holloway, 172, Ball's-pond-rd, Islington. Sol. Fenton.
ROOKE, JOHN, greengrocer, Goole. Pet. Oct. 23. Nov. 9, at three, at office of Sol. Hind, Goole.
RYAN, ALFRED, builder, Goole. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 10, at one, at offices of Sol. Slader, Bishop Auckland.
SAUNDERS, FREDERICK, Newton, Isle of Wight. Pet. Oct. 19. Nov. 13, at three, at Cambrian House offices, Hyde. Sol. Fardell, Hyde.
SCOTT, WILLIAM JOHN, hatter, Gateshead. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 8, at twelve, at office of Sol. Bush, Gateshead.
SMITH, EDWIN, grocer, Birmingham. Pet. Oct. 13. Nov. 6, at three, at office of Sol. Duke, Birmingham.
SMITH, ROBERT, draper, Bradford. Pet. Oct. 24. Nov. 9, at ten, at offices of Sols. Berry and Robinson, Bradford.
SMITH, THOMAS, butcher, Stratford-on-Avon. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 7, at half-past eleven, at the Ufford inn, Stratford-on-Avon. Sol. Warden, Stratford-on-Avon.
SMITH, WILLIAM, and MORGAN, JOHN, linen drapers, Gillingham. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 13, at ten, at office of Sol. Hutchinson, Bradford.
SMITH, WILLIAM, and SMITH, JOHN, builders, and LEWIS, SHADRACH, grocer, Masted. Pet. Oct. 21. Nov. 10, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Tennant and Jones, Abercromby.
STANTON, GEORGE, shipowner, East India company. Pet. Oct. 25. Nov. 10, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Tennant and Jones, Abercromby. and Co., 35 and 37, Chesapeake. Sol. Lawrence.

1. Pharmaceutical Innovation and the Role of Government
 2. The Impact of Patent Law on Drug Development
 3. The Role of Clinical Trials in Drug Approval
 4. The Importance of Post-Market Surveillance
 5. The Role of Regulatory Agencies in Drug Safety
 6. The Impact of Globalization on Drug Development
 7. The Role of Biotechnology in Drug Development
 8. The Importance of Patient Access to New Drugs
 9. The Role of Health Economics in Drug Policy
 10. The Impact of Intellectual Property on Drug Innovation
 11. The Role of Public Health in Drug Regulation
 12. The Importance of Transparency in Drug Development
 13. The Role of International Cooperation in Drug Regulation
 14. The Impact of Digital Health on Drug Development
 15. The Role of Patient Engagement in Drug Development
 16. The Importance of Data Privacy in Drug Development
 17. The Role of Artificial Intelligence in Drug Development
 18. The Impact of Telemedicine on Drug Development
 19. The Role of Real-World Evidence in Drug Development
 20. The Importance of Patient Safety in Drug Development
 21. The Role of Quality Management in Drug Development
 22. The Impact of Supply Chain Management on Drug Development
 23. The Role of Environmental Health in Drug Development
 24. The Importance of Social Responsibility in Drug Development
 25. The Role of Ethics in Drug Development
 26. The Impact of Cultural Differences on Drug Development
 27. The Role of Language in Drug Development
 28. The Importance of Communication in Drug Development
 29. The Role of Marketing in Drug Development
 30. The Impact of Sales Promotions on Drug Development
 31. The Role of Distribution in Drug Development
 32. The Importance of Storage in Drug Development
 33. The Role of Packaging in Drug Development
 34. The Impact of Labeling in Drug Development
 35. The Role of Instructions in Drug Development
 36. The Importance of Monitoring in Drug Development
 37. The Role of Reporting in Drug Development
 38. The Impact of Investigation in Drug Development
 39. The Role of Action in Drug Development
 40. The Importance of Prevention in Drug Development
 41. The Role of Control in Drug Development
 42. The Impact of Evaluation in Drug Development
 43. The Role of Improvement in Drug Development
 44. The Importance of Innovation in Drug Development
 45. The Role of Creativity in Drug Development
 46. The Impact of Collaboration in Drug Development
 47. The Role of Leadership in Drug Development
 48. The Importance of Teamwork in Drug Development
 49. The Role of Communication in Drug Development
 50. The Impact of Transparency in Drug Development
 51. The Role of Accountability in Drug Development
 52. The Importance of Integrity in Drug Development
 53. The Role of Honesty in Drug Development
 54. The Impact of Trust in Drug Development
 55. The Role of Respect in Drug Development
 56. The Importance of Compassion in Drug Development
 57. The Role of Empathy in Drug Development
 58. The Impact of Understanding in Drug Development
 59. The Role of Knowledge in Drug Development
 60. The Importance of Wisdom in Drug Development
 61. The Role of Experience in Drug Development
 62. The Impact of Practice in Drug Development
 63. The Role of Learning in Drug Development
 64. The Importance of Growth in Drug Development
 65. The Role of Change in Drug Development
 66. The Impact of Adaptation in Drug Development
 67. The Role of Resilience in Drug Development
 68. The Importance of Persistence in Drug Development
 69. The Role of Determination in Drug Development
 70. The Impact of Commitment in Drug Development
 71. The Role of Passion in Drug Development
 72. The Importance of Enthusiasm in Drug Development
 73. The Role of Optimism in Drug Development
 74. The Impact of Positivity in Drug Development
 75. The Role of Hope in Drug Development
 76. The Importance of Faith in Drug Development
 77. The Role of Love in Drug Development
 78. The Impact of Kindness in Drug Development
 79. The Role of Generosity in Drug Development
 80. The Importance of Gratitude in Drug Development
 81. The Role of Humility in Drug Development
 82. The Impact of Patience in Drug Development
 83. The Role of Tolerance in Drug Development
 84. The Importance of Forgiveness in Drug Development
 85. The Role of Compassion in Drug Development
 86. The Impact of Understanding in Drug Development
 87. The Role of Knowledge in Drug Development
 88. The Importance of Wisdom in Drug Development
 89. The Role of Experience in Drug Development
 90. The Impact of Practice in Drug Development
 91. The Role of Learning in Drug Development
 92. The Importance of Growth in Drug Development
 93. The Role of Change in Drug Development
 94. The Impact of Adaptation in Drug Development
 95. The Role of Resilience in Drug Development
 96. The Importance of Persistence in Drug Development
 97. The Role of Determination in Drug Development
 98. The Impact of Commitment in Drug Development
 99. The Role of Passion in Drug Development
 100. The Importance of Enthusiasm in Drug Development

1. Chlorophyll a (Chl a) is the primary photosynthetic pigment in most plants and algae. It is a green pigment that absorbs light energy in the blue and red regions of the visible spectrum.

2. Chlorophyll b (Chl b) is an accessory pigment that absorbs light energy in the blue and orange regions of the visible spectrum. It transfers energy to Chl a for photosynthesis.

3. Carotenoids are a group of pigments that absorb light energy in the blue and green regions of the visible spectrum. They include carotenes and xanthophylls. Carotenoids transfer energy to Chl a and also protect the photosynthetic apparatus from damage by excess light.

4. Xanthophylls are a subgroup of carotenoids that absorb light energy in the blue and green regions of the visible spectrum. They play a role in photoprotection and energy transfer.

5. Phycocyanin is a blue pigment found in cyanobacteria and some algae. It absorbs light energy in the orange and red regions of the visible spectrum and transfers energy to Chl a.

6. Peridinin is an orange pigment found in some algae. It absorbs light energy in the blue and green regions of the visible spectrum and transfers energy to Chl a.

7. Zeaxanthin is a yellow pigment found in plants and algae. It absorbs light energy in the blue and green regions of the visible spectrum and plays a role in photoprotection.

8. Lutein is a yellow pigment found in plants and algae. It absorbs light energy in the blue and green regions of the visible spectrum and plays a role in photoprotection.

9. Violaxanthin is a yellow pigment found in plants and algae. It absorbs light energy in the blue and green regions of the visible spectrum and plays a role in photoprotection.

10. Anthocyanins are a group of pigments that absorb light energy in the blue and green regions of the visible spectrum. They are responsible for the red, purple, and blue colors in many plants.

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the situation.

2. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to define the objectives and goals of the project. This helps to clarify what needs to be achieved and provides a clear direction for the team.

3. The third step is to develop a plan or strategy to address the problem. This involves breaking down the problem into smaller, manageable tasks and determining the resources needed to complete them.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the strategy into action and monitoring progress to ensure that the project is on track.

5. The final step is to evaluate the results of the project. This involves assessing the outcomes against the objectives and goals and identifying any lessons learned for future projects.

1. The first step in the process of the investigation is the identification of the problem. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator must first determine the nature of the problem and the scope of the investigation. This is done by interviewing the parties involved and reviewing the relevant documents.

2. The second step is the collection of evidence. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator must first determine the nature of the problem and the scope of the investigation. This is done by interviewing the parties involved and reviewing the relevant documents.

3. The third step is the analysis of the evidence. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator must first determine the nature of the problem and the scope of the investigation. This is done by interviewing the parties involved and reviewing the relevant documents.

4. The fourth step is the preparation of the report. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator must first determine the nature of the problem and the scope of the investigation. This is done by interviewing the parties involved and reviewing the relevant documents.

5. The fifth step is the presentation of the report. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator must first determine the nature of the problem and the scope of the investigation. This is done by interviewing the parties involved and reviewing the relevant documents.

6. The sixth step is the conclusion of the investigation. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator must first determine the nature of the problem and the scope of the investigation. This is done by interviewing the parties involved and reviewing the relevant documents.

7. The seventh step is the follow-up. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator must first determine the nature of the problem and the scope of the investigation. This is done by interviewing the parties involved and reviewing the relevant documents.

8. The eighth step is the final report. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator must first determine the nature of the problem and the scope of the investigation. This is done by interviewing the parties involved and reviewing the relevant documents.

9. The ninth step is the final conclusion. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator must first determine the nature of the problem and the scope of the investigation. This is done by interviewing the parties involved and reviewing the relevant documents.

10. The tenth step is the final report. This is done by the investigator who is assigned to the case. The investigator must first determine the nature of the problem and the scope of the investigation. This is done by interviewing the parties involved and reviewing the relevant documents.

1. Introduction
 2. Background
 3. Methodology
 4. Results
 5. Discussion
 6. Conclusion
 7. References
 8. Appendix
 9. Figure 1
 10. Figure 2
 11. Figure 3
 12. Figure 4
 13. Figure 5
 14. Figure 6
 15. Figure 7
 16. Figure 8
 17. Figure 9
 18. Figure 10
 19. Figure 11
 20. Figure 12
 21. Figure 13
 22. Figure 14
 23. Figure 15
 24. Figure 16
 25. Figure 17
 26. Figure 18
 27. Figure 19
 28. Figure 20
 29. Figure 21
 30. Figure 22
 31. Figure 23
 32. Figure 24
 33. Figure 25
 34. Figure 26
 35. Figure 27
 36. Figure 28
 37. Figure 29
 38. Figure 30
 39. Figure 31
 40. Figure 32
 41. Figure 33
 42. Figure 34
 43. Figure 35
 44. Figure 36
 45. Figure 37
 46. Figure 38
 47. Figure 39
 48. Figure 40
 49. Figure 41
 50. Figure 42
 51. Figure 43
 52. Figure 44
 53. Figure 45
 54. Figure 46
 55. Figure 47
 56. Figure 48
 57. Figure 49
 58. Figure 50
 59. Figure 51
 60. Figure 52
 61. Figure 53
 62. Figure 54
 63. Figure 55
 64. Figure 56
 65. Figure 57
 66. Figure 58
 67. Figure 59
 68. Figure 60
 69. Figure 61
 70. Figure 62
 71. Figure 63
 72. Figure 64
 73. Figure 65
 74. Figure 66
 75. Figure 67
 76. Figure 68
 77. Figure 69
 78. Figure 70
 79. Figure 71
 80. Figure 72
 81. Figure 73
 82. Figure 74
 83. Figure 75
 84. Figure 76
 85. Figure 77
 86. Figure 78
 87. Figure 79
 88. Figure 80
 89. Figure 81
 90. Figure 82
 91. Figure 83
 92. Figure 84
 93. Figure 85
 94. Figure 86
 95. Figure 87
 96. Figure 88
 97. Figure 89
 98. Figure 90
 99. Figure 91
 100. Figure 92
 101. Figure 93
 102. Figure 94
 103. Figure 95
 104. Figure 96
 105. Figure 97
 106. Figure 98
 107. Figure 99
 108. Figure 100
 109. Figure 101
 110. Figure 102
 111. Figure 103
 112. Figure 104
 113. Figure 105
 114. Figure 106
 115. Figure 107
 116. Figure 108
 117. Figure 109
 118. Figure 110
 119. Figure 111
 120. Figure 112
 121. Figure 113
 122. Figure 114
 123. Figure 115
 124. Figure 116
 125. Figure 117
 126. Figure 118
 127. Figure 119
 128. Figure 120
 129. Figure 121
 130. Figure 122
 131. Figure 123
 132. Figure 124
 133. Figure 125
 134. Figure 126
 135. Figure 127
 136. Figure 128
 137. Figure 129
 138. Figure 130
 139. Figure 131
 140. Figure 132
 141. Figure 133
 142. Figure 134
 143. Figure 135
 144. Figure 136
 145. Figure 137
 146. Figure 138
 147. Figure 139
 148. Figure 140
 149. Figure 141
 150. Figure 142
 151. Figure 143
 152. Figure 144
 153. Figure 145
 154. Figure 146
 155. Figure 147
 156. Figure 148
 157. Figure 149
 158. Figure 150
 159. Figure 151
 160. Figure 152
 161. Figure 153
 162. Figure 154
 163. Figure 155
 164. Figure 156
 165. Figure 157
 166. Figure 158
 167. Figure 159
 168. Figure 160
 169. Figure 161
 170. Figure 162
 171. Figure 163
 172. Figure 164
 173. Figure 165
 174. Figure 166
 175. Figure 167
 176. Figure 168
 177. Figure 169
 178. Figure 170
 179. Figure 171
 180. Figure 172
 181. Figure 173
 182. Figure 174
 183. Figure 175
 184. Figure 176
 185. Figure 177
 186. Figure 178
 187. Figure 179
 188. Figure 180
 189. Figure 181
 190. Figure 182
 191. Figure 183
 192. Figure 184
 193. Figure 185
 194. Figure 186
 195. Figure 187
 196. Figure 188
 197. Figure 189
 198. Figure 190
 199. Figure 191
 200. Figure 192
 201. Figure 193
 202. Figure 194
 203. Figure 195
 204. Figure 196
 205. Figure 197
 206. Figure 198
 207. Figure 199
 208. Figure 200
 209. Figure 201
 210. Figure 202
 211. Figure 203
 212. Figure 204
 213. Figure 205
 214. Figure 206
 215. Figure 207
 216. Figure 208
 217. Figure 209

1. Introduction
 2. Background
 3. Methodology
 4. Results
 5. Discussion
 6. Conclusion
 7. References
 8. Appendix
 9. Index
 10. Table of Contents
 11. Abstract
 12. Summary
 13. Key Words
 14. Keywords
 15. Subject Headings
 16. Subject Headings
 17. Subject Headings
 18. Subject Headings
 19. Subject Headings
 20. Subject Headings
 21. Subject Headings
 22. Subject Headings
 23. Subject Headings
 24. Subject Headings
 25. Subject Headings
 26. Subject Headings
 27. Subject Headings
 28. Subject Headings
 29. Subject Headings
 30. Subject Headings
 31. Subject Headings
 32. Subject Headings
 33. Subject Headings
 34. Subject Headings
 35. Subject Headings
 36. Subject Headings
 37. Subject Headings
 38. Subject Headings
 39. Subject Headings
 40. Subject Headings
 41. Subject Headings
 42. Subject Headings
 43. Subject Headings
 44. Subject Headings
 45. Subject Headings
 46. Subject Headings
 47. Subject Headings
 48. Subject Headings
 49. Subject Headings
 50. Subject Headings
 51. Subject Headings
 52. Subject Headings
 53. Subject Headings
 54. Subject Headings
 55. Subject Headings
 56. Subject Headings
 57. Subject Headings
 58. Subject Headings
 59. Subject Headings
 60. Subject Headings
 61. Subject Headings
 62. Subject Headings
 63. Subject Headings
 64. Subject Headings
 65. Subject Headings
 66. Subject Headings
 67. Subject Headings
 68. Subject Headings
 69. Subject Headings
 70. Subject Headings
 71. Subject Headings
 72. Subject Headings
 73. Subject Headings
 74. Subject Headings
 75. Subject Headings
 76. Subject Headings
 77. Subject Headings
 78. Subject Headings
 79. Subject Headings
 80. Subject Headings
 81. Subject Headings
 82. Subject Headings
 83. Subject Headings
 84. Subject Headings
 85. Subject Headings
 86. Subject Headings
 87. Subject Headings
 88. Subject Headings
 89. Subject Headings
 90. Subject Headings
 91. Subject Headings
 92. Subject Headings
 93. Subject Headings
 94. Subject Headings
 95. Subject Headings
 96. Subject Headings
 97. Subject Headings
 98. Subject Headings
 99. Subject Headings
 100. Subject Headings
 101. Subject Headings
 102. Subject Headings
 103. Subject Headings
 104. Subject Headings
 105. Subject Headings
 106. Subject Headings
 107. Subject Headings
 108. Subject Headings
 109. Subject Headings
 110. Subject Headings
 111. Subject Headings
 112. Subject Headings
 113. Subject Headings
 114. Subject Headings
 115. Subject Headings
 116. Subject Headings
 117. Subject Headings
 118. Subject Headings
 119. Subject Headings
 120. Subject Headings
 121. Subject Headings
 122. Subject Headings
 123. Subject Headings
 124. Subject Headings
 125. Subject Headings
 126. Subject Headings
 127. Subject Headings
 128. Subject Headings
 129. Subject Headings
 130. Subject Headings
 131. Subject Headings
 132. Subject Headings
 133. Subject Headings
 134. Subject Headings
 135. Subject Headings
 136. Subject Headings
 137. Subject Headings
 138. Subject Headings
 139. Subject Headings
 140. Subject Headings
 141. Subject Headings
 142. Subject Headings
 143. Subject Headings
 144. Subject Headings
 145. Subject Headings
 146. Subject Headings
 147. Subject Headings
 148. Subject Headings
 149. Subject Headings
 150. Subject Headings
 151. Subject Headings
 152. Subject Headings
 153. Subject Headings
 154. Subject Headings
 155. Subject Headings
 156. Subject Headings
 157. Subject Headings
 158. Subject Headings
 159. Subject Headings
 160. Subject Headings
 161. Subject Headings
 162. Subject Headings
 163. Subject Headings
 164. Subject Headings
 165. Subject Headings
 166. Subject Headings
 167. Subject Headings
 168. Subject Headings
 169. Subject Headings
 170. Subject Headings
 171. Subject Headings
 172. Subject Headings
 173. Subject Headings
 174. Subject Headings
 175. Subject Headings
 176. Subject Headings
 177. Subject Headings
 178. Subject Headings
 179. Subject Headings
 180. Subject Headings
 181. Subject Headings
 182. Subject Headings
 183. Subject Headings
 184. Subject Headings
 185. Subject Headings
 186. Subject Headings
 187. Subject Headings
 188. Subject Headings
 189. Subject Headings
 190. Subject Headings
 191. Subject Headings
 192. Subject Headings
 193. Subject Headings
 194. Subject Headings
 195. Subject Headings
 196. Subject Headings
 197. Subject Headings
 198. Subject Headings
 199. Subject Headings
 200. Subject Headings
 201. Subject Headings
 202. Subject Headings
 203. Subject Headings
 204. Subject Headings
 205. Subject Headings
 206. Subject Headings
 207. Subject Headings
 208. Subject Headings
 209. Subject Headings
 210. Subject Headings
 211. Subject Headings
 212. Subject Headings
 213. Subject Headings
 214. Subject Headings
 215. Subject Headings
 216. Subject Headings
 217. Subject Headings
 218. Subject Headings
 219. Subject Headings
 220. Subject Headings
 221. Subject Headings
 222. Subject Headings
 223. Subject Headings
 224. Subject Headings
 225. Subject Headings
 226. Subject Headings
 227. Subject Headings
 228. Subject Headings
 229. Subject Headings
 230. Subject Headings
 231. Subject Headings
 232. Subject Headings
 233. Subject Headings
 234. Subject Headings
 235. Subject Headings

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem or issue that needs to be addressed. This involves gathering information and understanding the context of the problem.

2. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to define the objectives and goals of the project. This helps to clarify what needs to be achieved and provides a clear direction for the team.

3. The third step is to develop a plan or strategy to address the problem. This involves breaking down the problem into smaller, manageable tasks and determining the resources needed to complete each task.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the strategy into action and monitoring progress regularly to ensure that the project is on track.

5. The final step is to evaluate the results of the project. This involves assessing the outcomes against the objectives and goals and identifying any areas for improvement.

1. What is the main purpose of the study?
 2. What are the research objectives?
 3. What is the research methodology?
 4. What are the findings of the study?
 5. What are the conclusions of the study?
 6. What are the limitations of the study?
 7. What are the implications of the study?
 8. What are the future research directions?
 9. What are the contributions of the study?
 10. What are the key words of the study?

1. The first step in the process is to identify the problem. This involves gathering information about the situation and understanding the needs of the stakeholders involved.

2. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to develop a plan. This involves setting goals and determining the resources needed to achieve them.

3. The third step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the plan into action and monitoring progress.

4. Finally, the fourth step is to evaluate the results. This involves assessing the effectiveness of the plan and making adjustments as needed.

1. Chlorophyll a and Chlorophyll b were determined by the method of Arar and Collins (1971). The concentration of Chlorophyll a and Chlorophyll b was expressed in  $\mu\text{g mL}^{-1}$  of the culture.

100

[illegible]

1. Chlorophyll a (Chl a) is the primary photosynthetic pigment in most plants and algae. It is a green pigment that absorbs light energy in the blue and red regions of the visible spectrum.

2. Chlorophyll b (Chl b) is an accessory pigment that absorbs light energy in the blue and orange-red regions. It transfers energy to Chl a for photosynthesis.

3. Carotenoids are a group of pigments that absorb light energy in the blue and green regions. They include carotenes (orange) and xanthophylls (yellow). They transfer energy to Chl a and also protect the plant from photo-oxidative damage.

4. Xanthophyll cycle is a process where xanthophylls can be converted to zeaxanthin under high light conditions to dissipate excess energy and protect the photosynthetic apparatus.

5. Photosynthesis is the process by which plants convert light energy into chemical energy (sugars) using the pigments.

6. Light harvesting refers to the process of capturing light energy by the pigments and transferring it to the reaction centers for photosynthesis.

7. Photoprotection involves mechanisms like the xanthophyll cycle and non-photochemical quenching to prevent damage to the photosynthetic system under high light stress.

8. Plant stress can lead to changes in pigment levels and the activation of photoprotective mechanisms.

9. Chlorophyll fluorescence is a technique used to study the efficiency of photosynthesis and the state of the photosynthetic apparatus.

10. Plant pigments are responsible for the color of plants and play crucial roles in their growth and survival.

[illegible]

PARTRIDGE & COOPER

VERMONT - NEW JERSEY
1. VERMONT - NEW JERSEY
2. VERMONT - NEW JERSEY
3. VERMONT - NEW JERSEY
4. VERMONT - NEW JERSEY
5. VERMONT - NEW JERSEY
6. VERMONT - NEW JERSEY
7. VERMONT - NEW JERSEY
8. VERMONT - NEW JERSEY
9. VERMONT - NEW JERSEY
10. VERMONT - NEW JERSEY

1. 凡在本行开立存款账户的存款人，均可向本行申请开立支票。

1. 凡在本行开立存款账户的客户，均可向本行申请开立支票。

SECRET

SECRET

To Readers and Correspondents.

BLACKBURN.—Odd volumes of the Law Times Reports between 1860 and 1870 can be obtained at the Law Times office.
Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.
All communications intended for the EDITOR (SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT) should be so addressed.

READY—SECOND EDITION.

8vo., cloth, price 2s. 6d. (post free 2s. 8d.).

OATHS IN SUPREME COURT.—Handbook for use of Commissioners and Solicitors, containing Special Forms of Jurats, Oaths, &c.—Forms and directions for use by Solicitors applying for Commissions—New Regulations—Power and Jurisdiction of Commissioners as affected by Judicature and other Acts. Tables of Fees and Acts, &c. Second Edition, revised and enlarged. By CHARLES FORD, F.R.S.L., Examiner in Admiralty, S.S.C. (Eng.).

London: "Law Times" Office, 10, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.		PROBATE, DIVORCE, AND ADMIRALTY DIVISION.
SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE.		Admiralty Business.
COURT OF APPEAL, LINCOLN'S-INN.		THE DELTA.
ADIE v. CLARK.		Collision—Foreign judgment—Retoppel
Patent—Infringement—Account—Evidence		— Ex judicio — Le alibi pendens .....
349		Re SMITH AND OTHERS.
COURT OF APPEAL, WESTMINSTER.		Practice—Collision upon high seas—
POLAK v. EVERETT.		British and foreignship—Jurisdiction
Principal and surety—Discharge of		—Service out of the jurisdiction.....
surety by alteration in original contract—Divisibility of the security—		Divorce Business.
Knowledge of the surety.....		GLADSTONE v. GLADSTONE.
350		Marriage settlement—Decree absolute
BEGBIE v. PHOSPHATE SEWAGE COMPANY (LIMITED).		for divorce—Variation of settlement
Money received—Failure of consideration—Fraud.....		after decree absolute.....
350		350
RICHARDSON v. GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.		LEADING ARTICLES, &c.
Negligence—Railway company—		TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS.....
Through traffic—Defect in foreign		LEADING ARTICLES—
truck—Minute examination unnecessary		Topics of the Week.....
351		Implied Covenants on the Part of Lessors
MARCUS v. GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY (LIMITED).		of Furnished Apartments.....
New trial—Verdict against evidence—		Agency—Liability of Agent to Principal.
Costs of first trial—Stat. 17 & 18 Vict.		Mr. Harrington's County Court Scheme.....
c. 12, s. 44.....		31
353		SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT
VESTRY OF THE HAMLET OF MILE END		(Edited by a Solicitor).
OLD TOWN v. GUARDIANS OF THE		SOLICITORS' JOURNAL—
WHITCHEAPEL UNION.		Topics of the Week.....
Metropolis Management Acts—Appor-		Supreme Court of Judicature..... tionment of expenses—One side of a		High Court of Justice—Chancery Divi-street.....		sion.....
354		Notes of New Decisions.....
HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE—CHANCERY		Appointments under the Joint-Stock
DIVISION.		Winding-up Acts.....
FARQUHARSON v. FLOYER.		Creditors under Statutes in Chancery.....
Payment of testator's debts—Marshall-		Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35.....
ling of assets—Pecuniary legacies—		34
Residuary devises.....		34
355		LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL—
PERKINS v. SLATER.		Topics of the Week.....
Mandatory injunction—Light and air—		Michaelmas Examination 1876.....
Damages.....		Questions for the Final Examination.....
356		Bristol Law Students' Debating Society.....
BOLTON v. BOLTON.		Huddersfield Law Students' Society.....
Orders 1875: Orders XXIII., XLII.,		Hull Law Students' Society..... rules 2 and 9—Form of writ, App. F.,		Manchester Law Students' Debating
No. 1—Discontinuance of action.....		Society.....
358		35
QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION.		Plymouth, Stonehouse, and Devonport
RIDING OF YORKSHIRE.		Law Students' Society.....
Public Health Act 1875 (38 & 39 Vict.		Southampton Law Debating Society.....
c. 55), s. 343—Rate made by local board		United Law Students' Society.....
under repealed Act.....		36
358		37
FINCH v. THE GUARDIANS OF THE YORK		MAGISTRATES' LAW—
UNION.		Notes of New Decisions.....
Pauper lunatic—Order for maintenance		The 34th Section of the Divided Parishes —Action—Striking out defence.....		and Poor Law Amendment Act 1876.....
360		37
FAUND v. WALLACE.		37
New trial—Evidence prematurely ad-		Bath City Police Court.....
mitted—Witness called but not exam-		38
ined.....		REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING—
361		Notes of New Decisions.....
REG. v. ST. ALBANS SANITARY AUTHORITY		29
(on the prosecution of the Sanitary		COMPANY LAW—
Authority of Barnet)—		Notes of New Decisions.....
Notice of appeal time for—Whether		30
time runs from date of order or of		COUNTY COURTS—service of order—"Cause of appeal".....		Halifax County Court.....
362		30
REG. (on the prosecution of John Johnson)		BANKRUPTCY LAW—
s. THE INHABITANTS OF GREENHOW.		Croydon County Court.....
Highway—Portion of road carried		Liverpool County Court..... away by landlip—Liability to repair.....		30
363		LEGAL NEWS.....
COMMON PLEAS DIVISION.		CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.....
FISHER v. THE VAL DE TRAVERS		NOTES AND QUERIES.....
ASPHALTE PAVING COMPANY (LIMITED).		PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.....
Cost of defending action—Contractor		LAW SOCIETIES—and sub-contractor—Indemnity—Re-		The Bremen Congress of the Association morsement of damages—Telegraphic mes-		for the Reform and Codification of the sage.....		Law of Nations.....
366		33
WEIDNER v. HOGGETT.		THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS—
Undertaking—Principal and agent—		Registers for the ensuing Week.....
Contract, contractee not named.....		35
368		THE GAZETTES.....
SAUNDERS v. STEWART.		BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.....
Damages, measure of—Remoteness of		36
damages—Telegraphic message.....		36
370		DIVISIONAL COURT FOR APPEALS FROM
BUCELL v. CLARK AND ANOTHER.		INFERIOR COURTS.
Lease and counterpart—Habeas corpus		BIRNIE (app.) v. MARSHALL (resp.). and reddendum—Lease, construction of.....		Trespass in pursuit of game— Beed v. Beed
372		claim of right—Identity of land.....
373		373

The Law and the Lawyers.

PAWNBROKERS are sometimes apt to forget the amount of care which the law expects them to take of their pledges. In a case which came before the Worship-street magistrate a few days ago, a man who had pawned a coat and waistcoat charged the pawnbroker with having, by his neglect, allowed the pledge to become of less value than it was at the time of pawning. The complainant affirmed that the clothes were so much damaged by moths when he took them out as to be quite unserviceable. That pawnbrokers have to take at least reasonable care of the goods entrusted to them is beyond doubt. The defendant alleged, in answer to the complaint, that the goods must have been moth-eaten when he had them. This, however, was merely a surmise on his part, for no one appears to have looked at them when they were received. As there was practically no denial that the moth had done its work while the clothes were in the custody of the pawn-broker, the only question was really whether he might by the exercise of reasonable care have prevented the damage. The magistrate had no doubt about the liability of the defendant. Cases are constantly arising from which it appears to be a not uncommon practice with pawnbrokers to take bundles in pledge without satisfying themselves as to their contents. In this case the defendant excused himself on the ground that the number of parcels received in the course of the year was too great to allow him to open all. If this amount of business is frequent amongst pawnbrokers, the only thing to be wondered at is that they do not suffer more severe losses.

VOL. LXII.—No. 1754

MR. JUSTICE HAWKINS, who while at the Bar was the most mirth-inspiring member of the legal profession, has been drafted into a division which, rightly or wrongly, has a reputation for being the most somnolent tribunal in Westminster Hall. We anticipate the most satisfactory results. In future it appears all Judges are to be appointed to the Queen's Bench Division, and sent on to the other divisions as may be subsequently determined. The object of this is not very manifest. But when so little is done in the direction of facilitating the despatch of business, and arranging the sittings in accordance with the spirit of recent legislation, these little moves in matters of form must not be treated with contempt.

In a case before Mr. FALCONER, County Court Judge at Aberdare, reported in our impression of the 7th ult., we notice that the Judge based his decision on the assumed fact that the recent case of Meux v. Jacobs, in the House of Lords (32 L. T. Rep. N. S. 171) contained an exposition of the law, as to the applicability of the Bills of Sale Act of 1854 to fixtures annexed to and mortgaged with the land, incompatible with the decisions of the Queen's Bench in Hawtrey v. Butlin (28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 532), of Vice-Chancellor MALINS in Begbie v. Fenwick (24 L. T. Rep. N. S. 58), and of the Lords Justices in Ex parte Dalglish (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 168). We say advisedly the assumed fact of incompatibility, for on looking carefully at Meux v. Jacobs we find it quite impossible to discover wherein such incompatibility consists. Meux v. Jacobs was a case in which there was a contest for priority between first and second mortgagees, the second mortgagees contending that quoad fixtures, the first mortgagees must be postponed because the deed had not been registered as a bill of sale. To this the one sufficient answer was, that the Bills of Sale Act has no invalidating operation except in favour of trustees in bankruptcy or liquidation, &c., and execution creditors, and that as the grantor was neither bankrupt, nor liquidating, nor an execution debtor, the Act was wholly beside the case, and that the first mortgage having carried with the land all fixtures, whether previously or subsequently annexed, there was nothing but an equity of redemption on which the second mortgage could operate. Meux v. Jacobs proceeded to the House of Lords through a misapprehension, not of law, but of facts, in the Rolls Court, and, as a consequence, there was nothing required in the decision but the application of perfectly well understood and settled principles of law. Indeed, Lord SELBORNE, after referring to the cases of Begbie v. Fenwick and Ex parte Dalglish, was careful to say, "Whether those cases were correctly decided or not is not the question before your Lordships. It may be an important question, and for my own part I think your Lordships would desire to abstain upon this occasion from expressing any opinion on the subject, it not being necessary to do so." We are unable to agree with Mr. FALCONER that Meux v. Jacobs must be taken to overrule the other cases we have referred to. We do not think them at all shaken, and as at present advised consider that the judgment of Lord Justice MELISH in Ex parte Barclay, re Joyce (30 L. T. Rep. N. S. 479) is an accurate expression of the law. In that case the test whether the mortgage, so far as respects the fixtures, requires to be registered under the Bills of Sale Act, was stated by his Lordship to be, "Whether it gives power to the mortgagee to sever the fixtures from the premises and to deal with them and sell them separately." If there be such power, then, according to the authorities, registration is necessary—otherwise not.

A QUESTION of the utmost importance under the Judicature Act was raised in the Court of Appeal on Tuesday last, relative to the right of appeal in matters arising out of a Crown business. A criminal information for libel having been preferred some time ago, a question was raised with respect to the taxation of costs. The appeal from the Master's decision had been brought before a Judge in chambers, and thence to the Queen's Bench Division, where the Judges present, namely, Mr. Justice BLACKBURN, Mr. Justice MELLOR, and Mr. Justice LUSH, decided that there was no right of appeal from the Judge in chambers, because there is an exception of Crown business from the general right of appeal from a Judge in chambers given by the rules, whilst at common law there was no appeal in such cases except by way of writ of error for error on the record. This judgment of the Queen's Bench Division was appealed from. The whole question was one of jurisdiction. If we turn to the 19th section of the Judicature Act 1873, it will be seen that the Court of Appeal has jurisdiction "to hear and determine appeals from any judgment or order," except where the order is made by consent of parties, or as to costs only which are left to the discretion of the Judge or court making the order. Provision for the determination of "questions of law arising in criminal trials" is made in sect. 47 of the same Act, and it is ordered that "no appeal shall lie from any judgment of the said High Court, members of which are the Judges of the High Court of Justice (or five of them at the least) in any criminal matter, cause or matter, save for some error of law, apparent upon the record as to which no question shall have been reserved for the consideration of the said Judges." By the 19th section of the Judicature Act of 1875, the practice and procedure in all criminal causes and matters whatsoever, including the practice and procedure with respect to Crown Cases Reserved, but subject to the first schedule of the Act, and any Rule of Court made under the Act, are to be the same as the practice and procedure in similar causes and matters before the commencement of the Act. These references to the Judicature Acts make it pretty evident that no appeal was given by them. The question then arose whether the decision appealed from was a judgment within the meaning of the Act. "It was said," remarked Lord COLERIDGE, "that this was not a judgment; but the enactments included orders, as appeared from sect. 19 of the Act of 1875. . . . It could not be doubted that this was a proceeding in a Crown case, or a criminal matter. The criminal information itself clearly was so; it was an indictment preferred by the Crown Master instead of a grand jury, and it was as much a criminal proceeding as an ordinary indictment." Hence there could be no appeal. Sir BALDOL BARTY put the case clearly by pointing out that before the Judicature Act no appeal would have lain in such a case, and no rights of appeal had been given by the Act, which enacted that no appeal should lie from any judgment in a criminal cause or matter except in the cases reserved. Whether the decision was or was not a "judgment" it was undoubtedly a "proceeding in a criminal cause" within sect. 19 of the Act of 1875. Unless the enactment applied, there could, as Lord Justice MANTON observed, be an appeal from any order or decision of the Queen's Bench in any criminal case. Important as this judgment of the Court of Appeal is, it must not be supposed to limit in any way the existing rights of appeal in criminal cases to the Court for Crown Cases Reserved.

We recently referred to the "Digest of the Law Reports," as illustrating the growth of case law. We have had it in use for some weeks, and a more astounding compilation we never met with. It is devoid of method. With "Fisher's Digest" as a model before him, the editor has disregarded one of the prominent features of that work, i.e., keeping to a number of general headings, and leading off with a table of contents. This is a blunder going to the root of the work. Then the cross references are simply bewildering. A leading title is used for the purpose only of stringing together a catalogue of references to other titles. Let any of our readers consult the heading "Legacy," or, better still, "Practice." Under the latter they will find thirty-one columns referring to other places and not giving a single word of any decision. We must give a specimen of "Legacy" —

Bequest of property.

See WILLIAMS v. PATERSON OF GIFT.

Following Assets.

See FOLLOWING ASSETS.

Free of Duty.

See "CLEAR INCOME."

Married Women—Protection Order.

See WOMAN'S CHARGE IN ACTION.

Then under "Barratry" there are eleven columns of references. Here are one or two specimens:—

Admission—Effect of.

See ORDER AND DISPOSITION.

Bill of Sale.

See PROPERTY OF BILL OF SALE.

Compensation—Rebate.

See DISCHARGE OF SURETY.

So it goes on until we have come to the conclusion that the Council of Law Reporting have made by their minds to render it as difficult as possible for lawyers to thread their way among the mazes of our case law.

IMPLIED COVENANTS ON THE PART OF LESSORS OF FURNISHED APARTMENTS.

It would not be uninteresting to our readers to devote a few remarks to the four cases which were cited in J. v. K., briefly reported in a previous number (Law Times, 1876, 1877), inasmuch as they undoubtedly contain the whole of the law on a subject of universal importance, and inasmuch also as their effect appears to have been by no means clearly understood by the majority of text-book writers.

The point of law involved in J. v. K. was briefly this: When a lessor is let to a house, is there an implied warranty or covenant on his part that it is fit for the purpose for which it is let? or is that this question is one very likely to be of frequent occurrence, but, strange to say, anyone desiring to solve it would not find himself enabled to obtain either very clear or very correct information on the subject from the standard works on Landlord and Tenant. Mr. Woodfall, in his well-known book, says (490): "There is never any covenant or promise implied by law on the part of the lessor of a house or land that it is reasonably fit for habitation, occupation, or cultivation, nor that it is fit for the purposes for which it is let," and for this broad proposition he quotes Sutton v. Temple (12 M. & W. 52), and Hart v. Windsor (1b. 68), neither of which cases, however, as will be easily perceived, was concerned with a furnished house or set of apartments. But Mr. Woodfall further says in his note that these two cases overruled Smith v. Marryble (11 Id. 5), where the house was furnished; and in a subsequent passage (740), he clearly states that in his opinion the authorities do not warrant the conclusion that there is any distinction between the case of an unfurnished and of a furnished house. "It was once decided," he there remarks, "that there is an implied condition in the letting of a furnished house that it shall be reasonably fit for habitation. . . . (Smith v. Marryble). But such decision is not to be relied on; it has been greatly shaken if not overruled by subsequent cases." (Sutton v. Temple; Hart v. Windsor.) Messrs. Smith and Soden, in their work on Landlord and Tenant (137, 138), though their tone is not so dogmatic, yet clearly convey the impression that their opinion coincides with Mr. Woodfall's; and the same remark applies to Mr. Chitty's notice of the cases (Contracts, 344), all these gentlemen apparently holding that Smith v. Marryble has been overruled by Sutton v. Temple and Hart v. Windsor. Now all these cases were decided at almost precisely the same time, and by almost precisely the same judges, and we confess that we are thoroughly puzzled to discover how the most superficial student of them could come to the conclusion that the first had been in any way impaired as an authority by the two last. In Smith v. Marryble it was decided that "it is an implied condition in the letting of a house that it shall be reasonably fit for habitation." The defendant there threw up a furnished house, because it was infested, to use the language of a later case, by certain "noxious, stinking, and nasty insects called bugs," and, as Nisi Prius, Lord Abinger, C.B., stated to the jury, "that, in point of law, every house (meaning, of course, every furnished house), must be taken to be let upon the implied condition that there was nothing about it so noxious as to render it uninhabitable." A new trial was moved for on the ground of misdirection, and at the conclusion of the argument after Parke, B., had cited some analogous cases, though none directly in point, judgment was given for the defendant, Lord Abinger observing, "I am glad that authorities have been found to support the view which I took of this case at the trial, but, for my own part, I think no authorities were wanted, and that the case is one which common sense alone enables us to decide. A man who lets a ready furnished house surely does so under the implied condition or obligation—call it what you will—that the house is in a fit state to be inhabited. . . . I entertain no doubt whatever on the subject." This view would, we imagine, strike anyone, whether lawyer or layman, as extremely reasonable; but, say the learned authors to whom we have referred, it has been overruled by the decisions in Sutton v. Temple and Hart v. Windsor. Is this so? The usage of a field was demised in Sutton v. Temple, and it was held that in such a case there is "no implied obligation on the part of the lessor that it shall be fit for the purpose for which it is taken." By this decision, then, did the Barons of the Court of Exchequer wish to overrule their previous judgment in Smith v. Marryble? The following remarks made by them afford a very clear answer. "If this case," said Lord Abinger (12 M. & W. 52), "involved the necessity of overruling the case of Smith v. Marryble, I should hesitate long before I should acquiesce in doing so, for I entirely approve of the decision to which we came in that case." And again (1b. 68): "I am of opinion that the case of Smith v. Marryble is materially distinguishable from the present." Barons Parke, Gurney, and Stale, also clearly distinguished the two cases. Then came Hart v. Windsor, where the lease was of a "certain messuage or tenement and garden ground," and the same point arising as was involved in Smith v. Marryble. Baron Parke, in delivering the judgment of the court (1b. 67), expressly said: "We are under no necessity of deciding in the present case whether that of Smith v. Marryble be law or not. It is distinguishable from the present case." It is certainly true that in this case the learned baron expressed less satisfaction with the correctness of the decision in Smith v. Marryble than he had done on any previous occasion, and this, perhaps, is what has led the text-book writers astray; but they should have remembered that his doubt was quite counterbalanced by what fell from Lord Chief Justice Cockburn in Condon v. Lord Westbury (4 F. & Fin. 715). His Lordship having had his attention directed to Smith v. Marryble, there said he should certainly lay down the doctrine maintained in that case, "for it was binding upon him as it had never been overruled," and further observed (716): "If a house was let ready-furnished, it could not be contended surely that it was not to be put into a fit state to receive the tenant." The representation, whether it was expressed or implied, came practically to the same thing. He did not see that it could make any difference, because it could scarcely be supposed that when a house was let ready-furnished it was to be let in a state so filthy and dirty that it was not fit for occupation."

The nuisance complained of by the plaintiff in J— v. K— was of a peculiar nature; but we have not thought it necessary on the present occasion to touch upon the facts of that case, being only concerned with the authorities noticed in it. From these we think that the true rule to be deduced is, that, although where land or an unfurnished house is let, there is no implied covenant that it shall be fit for the purpose for which it is required, or for habitation, yet that the converse is the case where the lease is of a furnished house or of apartments, when the maxim "Caveat the lessee" does not apply: (Addison on Contracts, 612.) The distinction seems to us to be based on just and reasonable grounds; for a man who hires a furnished house or apartments for temporary use is necessarily obliged to trust more to the bona fides of the lessor, than one who, in treating for the lease of an unfurnished house or of land, has ample opportunity afforded him of viewing the property and ascertaining its true condition.

AGENCY.—LIABILITY OF AGENT TO PRINCIPAL.(a) MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

THE liabilities of an agent commence from the moment he consents to act as agent for a lawful consideration. His liability is dependent upon the duties undertaken by him; but the measure of the damages to which he may be liable must be ascertained by the application of rules common to the whole law of contracts. The general rule of law upon the subject was laid down by the Court of Exchequer in the often quoted case of Hadley v. Baxendale (9 Ex. 354; 23 L. J. 182, Ex). The rule enunciated by the court in that case is that where two parties have made a contract which one of them has broken, the damages which the other party ought to receive in respect of such breach of contract should be such as may fairly and reasonably be considered either arising naturally, i.e., according to the usual course of things from such breach of contract itself, or such as may reasonably be supposed to have been in the contemplation of both parties at the time they made the contract, as the probable result of the breach of it. Here two modes of estimating the damages resulting from a breach of contract are suggested. The measure given by the one is the damage resulting naturally from the breach; according to the other, it is the damage contemplated by both parties at the time of making the contract. The criterion given by the second part of the rule has never been sanctioned by a direct authority. Wherever it has been appealed to, the Judges have shown pretty clearly that it is to be considered as no more than a dictum.

Prima facie the damages which actually result from a breach of contract are recoverable, provided that they are such as may fairly and reasonably be considered as arising directly and naturally, that is to say, in the ordinary course of things, from such a breach of contract. The amount of them may be unexpectedly large, but still the defendants must pay. If a man contracts to carry a chattel and loses it, he must pay the value, though he may discover that it was more valuable than he had supposed. But when the damages sought to be recovered are not those which in the ordinary course of things would naturally arise, but are of an exceptional nature, arising from special and peculiar circumstances, it is clear that in the absence of any notice to the defendant of any such circumstances, such damages cannot be recovered (per Blackburn, J., in Horne v. Midland Railway Company, L. Rep. 8 C. P. 140). As to the intimation in the case of Hadley v. Baxendale (sup.), to the effect that "plaintiff might recover exceptional damages, apart from all question of a contract with regard to amount of damages, provided there was a special notice of the circumstances," it was suggested in the same case by Baron Martin and Mr. Justice Blackburn that, in order that the notice may have any effect, it must be given under such circumstances as that an actual contract arises on the part of the defendant to bear the exceptional loss. [The following cases may be referred to upon this question in addition to those cited: Cory v. Thames, L. Rep. 3 Q. B. 181; Borries v. Hutchinson, 18 C. B., N.S., 445, 465; 34 L. J. 169, C. P.; Bridge v. Wain, 1 Stark. 504; British Columbia Saw Mill Company v. Nettleship, L. Rep. 3 C. P. 499; Smeed v. Ford, 1 E. & E. 602; 28 L. J. 178, Q. B.; Tyers v. Rosedale Iron Company, L. Rep. 8 Ex. 305; Gee v. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company, 5 H. & N. 211; 30 L. J. 11, Ex.; Everard v. Hopkins, 2 Buls. 362; Wilson v. Newport Dock Company, L. Rep. 1 Ex. 177; 35 L. J. 97, Ex.]

Upon a review of the authorities, the appropriate rules seem to be the following:

1. The measure of damages recoverable by a principal from his agent in consequence of a breach of duty by the latter is the loss or damage to which the principal has been subjected directly by reason of the agent's default or neglect; in other words it is the loss or damage of which the agent's breach of duty is the proximate cause.

(a) By WILLIAM EVANS, Esq., of the South Wales Circuit.

2. The damages may be nominal or substantial—nominal where there is proof of a breach of contract only, but not of resultant damage or loss; substantial where there is proof both of a breach and of resultant loss or damage.

Text writers have introduced some confusion into the subject by rather careless writing. Thus Mr. Justice Story remarks in his excellent work on agency, "There must be a real loss or actual damage, and not merely a probable or possible one:" (Agency, § 222). "It is a good defence, or, rather, excuse, that the misconduct of the agent has been followed by no loss or damage whatever to the principal; for then the rule applies that, though it is a wrong it is without any damage, and to maintain an action, both must concur, for damnum absque injuria and injuria absque damno are equally objections to any recovery." If the author meant it to be inferred that a principal has no right of action against his agent unless there is proof of a real loss or actual damage, he is in error, for such a proposition is at variance with authorities. Thus, in replying to an argument that the action in Ashby v. White (2 Ld. Raym. 955) was not maintainable because there was no proof of hurt or damage to the plaintiff, Lord Holt observed, "Surely every injury imports a damage, though it does not cost the party one farthing . . . but an injury imports a damage." So it is said by Lord Tenterden (in Marslette v. Williams, B. & A. 423), that a plaintiff is entitled to have a verdict for nominal damages although he does not prove any actual damage at the trial: (See also Fray v. Voules, 1 E. & E. 139; 23 L. J. 232, Q. B.; and Van Wart v. Woolley, 1 M. & M. 520; Russell on Mercantile Agents, 220; Mayne on Damages, 415.)

Mr. Mayne has adopted the above views of Dr. Story, but no authorities are cited in their support: (Mayne on Damages, p. 412.)

The measure of the damages to which agents are liable is illustrated by the following cases:—

The right of the principal to nominal damages is recognised in Van Wart v. Woolley (1 M. & M. 520), in 1830. An agent was employed to present a bill for acceptance; he failed to do so, and Lord Tenterden held that his principal was entitled to nominal damages, although no real damage was occasioned by the neglect, the bill and costs having been paid by other persons liable on it. "The opinion which I expressed in the former case," said his Lordship, referring to the case as reported in 3 B. & C. 439, "that the plaintiff was at all events entitled to notice from that other of its dishonour was not my opinion only but that of the whole court. If he does not receive that notice he suffers damage." Injury imports damage, as Lord Holt said in Ashby v. White (sup.).

In Russell v. Palmer (2 Wills. 325), 1767, an action on the case was brought against a solicitor to recover the sum of £3500 and costs. The plaintiff having employed the defendant to proceed at law against a debtor, obtained a judgment. By a rule of court it was the duty of the defendant to cause the debtor to be charged in execution within a certain period after surrender. The defendant neglected this duty, and the debtor was discharged by supersedeas. The plaintiff alleged that he was thereby hindered from obtaining his debt and damages, and had thus suffered a loss to the amount of the sum claimed by reason of the defendant's negligence. At the trial Lord Camden directed the jury to give a verdict for the whole debt. A new trial was afterwards granted on the ground that his Lordship had misdirected the jury, for the jury ought to have been left to find what damages they thought fit, inasmuch as the action merely sounded in damages. There was some evidence that the debtor was not totally insolvent, and that the plaintiff probably might be able in time to obtain some part of his debt by execution against his goods. The jury being told they might find what damages they pleased, found a verdict for the plaintiff for £500. The Court of King's Bench subsequently held that the action lay. Mr. Sedgwick (Damages, p. 400) infers from this case that the jury had in early cases, growing out of the contract of agency, an unlimited control over the amount of compensation which should be awarded as damages. The case, however, is not reported fully enough to justify the conclusion. If such a rule existed, it has long been abolished, and the measure of damage fixed by the law.

In Wallace v. Telfair (2 T. Rep. 188, note), 1786, Mr. Justice Buller ruled that where an agent having accepted an order for insurance, limits the insurance broker to too small a premium, in consequence of which no insurance could be procured, the agent is liable to make good the loss to his correspondent.

Smith v. Cadogan (2 T. Rep. 188), 1788, was an action against the defendants for neglecting to insure goods. The defendants were the correspondents of the plaintiffs. Having received the order to insure in 1782, they sent their broker to Lloyd's to get the insurance effected, but could not get it done because the ship was not registered at Lloyd's. If the defendants had done nothing else, Mr. Justice Buller, before whom the case was tried, doubted greatly whether they would have been liable, on the ground that if a person to whom such orders are sent does what is usual to get the insurance made, he performs his duty, because he is no insurer, and is not obliged to get the insurance, at all events. Failing to insure at Lloyd's, they wrote to the shipowners and requested them to effect the insurance. They did so. The whole of the circumstances were subsequently brought before one of the plaintiffs, who approved of the action taken by the defendants. A loss occurred, and upon the shipowners refusing to deliver up the policy until their own claims were satisfied, the plaintiffs brought their action against the defendants. "The defendants," said Mr. Justice Buller, "had no means of obliging them to give it up but by bringing an action, and it can hardly be said that not doing so is negligence in them. If the defendants had made a blunder in the insurance which would have avoided the policy, that would have been negligence; but the policy is a good one, and it was only owing to the knavery and failure of G. K. and Co. (the shipowners) that the plaintiffs have lost the benefit of it." His Lordship then commented upon the conduct of one of the plaintiffs as amounting to a ratification, and pointed out that if he had intended to insist on his right to recover from the defendant he should never have looked to others.

In Smith v. Lascelles (2 T. R. 187), 1788, which was another action for neglecting to insure, Ashurst, J. says, "One person cannot compel another to make an insurance for him against his consent; but if the directions to insure be given to him, to whom the application would naturally be made in the usual course of trade, and he do not give notice of his dissent, he must be answerable for his neglect, because he deprives the other of any opportunity of applying elsewhere to procure the insurance."

MR. HARRINGTON'S COUNTY COURT SCHEME.

(Continued from p. 406.)

MR. HARRINGTON concludes his pamphlet with some "miscellaneous observations:"

The general constitution and course of procedure which is suggested for the local courts of the future, has now, however rudely and imperfectly, been sketched out, but there remain a few matters to be considered.

These may be dealt with in alphabetical order, and are as follows:

Appeals.—The allowance of these should be regulated, not by the amount in dispute, but by the readiness of the appellant to find security to indemnify the respondent against all possible costs, loss, and delay in the event of affirmance, and also to pay such further sum to the respondent in the like event, by way of damages, as a judge of the Court of Appeal should think fit. Leave to appeal should in all cases have to be asked for. It should be granted as of course, if the conditions required are complied with. The judge granting leave should be at liberty to relax any of the conditions as to security to such an extent as might be necessary in every case to serve the ends of justice, or he should have power, if he thought fit, instead of imposing these conditions, to order that the appellant, before prosecuting his appeal, pay any sum of money in lieu or partly in lieu of security, into court, or pay money in the same way to the respondent upon his giving counter-security to refund it in case of a reversal; or that any chattel in dispute should be preserved in safe custody pending the appeal, or delivered to one of the parties, with or without security to produce it when required.

The power to impose these conditions should be given only to the Court of Appeal or a judge thereof, to be exercised by him personally, and not to be delegated to a master. In no case should the judge of the court appealed from have any voice in determining whether or on what conditions an appeal should be allowed. The present system of allowing an appeal, as of right, in all cases over £20, and in cases under £20 with the leave of the inferior court, is, it is submitted, vicious in both respects. In the first set of cases, it puts it into the power of a wealthy or obstinate litigant to appeal vexatiously, for the security he has to give, and the costs allowed on taxation to the successful respondent, never, it is believed, amount to a complete indemnity. In the second, it imposes an undue burden on the conscience of a scrupulous inferior judge, who may have great difficulty in deciding whether the balance of advantage to the public in having a doubtful point of law authoritatively settled, outweighs the duty of preventing the parties from wasting a large sum in costs, in litigating a question of small pecuniary importance; and on the other hand it enables a less scrupulous inferior judge to refuse leave to appeal for fear of his decision being reversed.

Commitment for contempt.—The power of the principal local court to punish contempts should not be limited by any statute, but the court should have all such powers as are at common law incident to an inferior court of record, with this addition, that it should be specially armed with the necessary powers for the enforcement of its decrees and orders and the protection of its officers from obstruction, and the special powers thus conferred should be in addition to and not in derogation of its common law powers.

In case of any serious contempt, such as a libel on the judge in his office, or the like, not committed in facie curiæ, it should be the duty of the registrar to report the case to the Attorney-General, who should, if the offence be sufficiently serious, file a criminal information ex-officio.

It should be competent to the principal local court, on the motion of either party, to prohibit the publication of its proceedings pending a trial.

Costs and Fees.—If the jurisdiction of the principal local courts is to be enlarged in pecuniary amount, it will be necessary to increase in proper cases the scale of professional allowances, but no alteration of substance is suggested as to the costs.

The court fees should be levied by way of poundage or percentage, and this method of levy should be applied as far as possible to all descriptions of cases, and should be, as far as circumstances will allow, uniform.

The poundage should be so calculated as to increase continually with the value of the matter in dispute, and should not, as at present, cease to increase when its value exceeds a certain limit. The ratio of the poundage to this value need, however, be constant, but the former might decrease as the latter increases, in the same manner as is usual in the case of an agent's commission.

It is believed that this practice would, of itself, much more satisfactorily fix a limit of pecuniary amount, define the line of demarcation between Superior and Inferior Courts. At a certain point varying in the nature of the dispute, and the class and residence to be called, the expense of suing in the Inferior Court would exceed that of suing in the Superior Court. In all cases in which the defendant could show that a suit begun in the inferior would be more cheaply or satisfactorily determined in the Superior Court, or vice versa, he should be entitled, as of right, to the transfer, without the conditions mentioned above (see p. 22).

No alteration is suggested in the amount of poundage or per centage to be levied by way of court fees in litigious cases, but it is suggested that the amount levied should either be divided equally between entry and hearing, or that the heavier fee should be on the entry. Thus 1s. 6d. in the pound might be demanded for entry and 1s. 6d. for hearing, or 2s. for entry and 1s. for hearing. The object of this alteration, as will be readily seen, is to force parties, when there is no question in dispute, to settle their cases by admission, and not to enter them as litigious. It has been already pointed out that plaintiffs resorting to actual litigation unnecessarily should be deprived of the costs occasioned by their unnecessary acts.

The costs of postage incurred in the course of a cause, should be added to the judgment, and be a first charge on all moneys recovered.

No observations have been made with reference to the fees in Bankruptcy, Admiralty, and cases in which the court has jurisdiction under 2 & 30 Vict., c. 99—as to the first, because the author is not in the possession of sufficient information on the subject; as to the second, because they would in substance not be affected, the only admiralty courts at which fees are separately received proposed to be absorbed being Dover and Ramsgate, and Poole, the fees in which amounted altogether in 1875 to £31 only for court fund, registrar, and high bailiff together, and as to the third, because the amount received in the year 1872 was insignificant, and because it is suggested that the fees in future should be uniform.

Jurisdiction.—It has already been suggested that this should, subject to powers of transfer, be unlimited as to pecuniary amount. The exclusion of certain forms of action, such as breach of promise of marriage, libel, &c., from the County Court, is, it is believed, a wise discouragement to litigation, but it is suggested that the new Principal Local Court should have jurisdiction to assign dower and freebench. Under the new Judicature Act all distinctions of practice between the assignment of dower in equity and at common law will, it is conceived, be done away with. Estates of large value are very seldom, especially since the Dower Act, the subject of claims to dower, whereas it is not unlikely that rights to dower and freebench may frequently exist unbarred in small freehold and copyhold properties. It seems only just that the widow's remedy in these cases should be cheap and simple.

The courts have been armed with powers by the new rules to make orders for the protection of destructible chattels pending litigation, and for compelling their delivery in specie to the party entitled. This is a most valuable power, and should be extended to the utmost. The machinery provided by the old action of replevin might be utilised for this purpose: (See Consolidated Order, xi., 1, 2.)

Printing.—It is suggested that in order to avoid as far as possible clerical errors in copying, especially in the letters and numbers by which the proceedings are to be identified, every registrar's office should be furnished with a small hand press, at the cost of about £1. The type necessary for the particular purposes required would not cost more than from £1 to 30s. more, and it would be very advisable that whenever copies of a line or a few lines of matter have to be multiplied, it should be done by printing. The main printing of the forms of proceeding would, of course, as heretofore, be done by a tradesman, and the auxiliary printing suggested used only to fill up blanks. In order further to avoid the risk of mis-numbering the proceedings, it would be advisable that the ready printed forms furnished to the office should be in complete sets ready numbered, and with the name of the court left in blank. Offices having an excess of any one form could easily exchange with others, so as to prevent waste, and the whole efficiency of the suggested use of the post office depends upon the accuracy and legibility with which the letters and numbers by which the proceedings are to be identified, are marked thereon.

Salaries and travelling expenses.—It will have been noticed that in the calculations of the expense of replacing the existing judges, no notice has been taken of the fact that certain salaries now paid amount to £1800 per annum apiece. The existence of these, though it affects the cost of the existing system to the country, would not affect the proportion which the cost of the new system suggested would bear to it. It is not therefore thought necessary further to refer to this subject.

With regard to the travelling expenses, it is conceived that these would not be materially affected during the transition period. The registrar acting as travelling judges being allowed to hold as many courts in the day as they like, would however eventually visit all the places now visited, at a less expense than is incurred at present, while the principal local judges would have less locomotion. The comfort of the latter would be consulted and economy effected, if suitable permanent lodgings were provided for them at every town at which they would have to spend one or more night or nights per month. In assize towns there would, there is every reason to believe, be no difficulty in effecting an arrangement with the local authority for the use of the necessary apartments in the judges' lodgings at a moderate rent. In the manufacturing principal local court towns (and this would include almost all the court towns in which the assizes are not now holden), there is almost invariably (it is believed) a court house, with a convenient private room. In some of these buildings there might already be rooms which could be utilised for bed and sitting rooms, but if there are not, the interest on the expense of adding and furnishing two such apartments would, unless there were special architectural difficulties in the situation, be much less than the cost of providing the judge with rooms at an hotel, three or four days in succession eleven times a year. With regard to attendance, it might be the duty of the high bailiff to provide this, the expenses being provided for in his allowances. He would probably employ one of his married sub-bailiffs and wife for the purpose.

With respect to the main heads of his suggested reforms, the author cannot but feel, that in venturing, with limited information, an opinion on a subject which has engaged the attention of a Royal Commission empowered to examine witnesses, and comprising the highest legal authorities in the land, he is taking a bold step, and he feels especially that in his suggestions for the new form of procedure he has travelled so far out of the beaten track of precedent, that the very novelty of his proposals will arm against them a criticism which he cannot but feel would have been, independently of this novelty, formidable enough. He has, however, been actuated throughout by the desire (however unsuccessfully carried into effect), of suggesting whatever appeared to his lights conducive to efficiency and economy in the administration of the Local Inferior Courts of Justice. If any of his observations should, to any extent, however small, lead to the promotion of this object, he will feel that his labours have not been thrown away.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

IF reports which reach us are true, the mode of disposing of the business of the Chancery Division during the recent long vacation has been in many respects far from satisfactory. So serious, indeed, has been the mismanagement in many cases that papers, including orders and other important documents, have actually been lost. This is not the fault of the chief clerks themselves but of their clerks, and in some measure, perhaps, the Chancery clerks of solicitors also, who are apt to leave matters to look after themselves in the Long Vacation. But the chief source of complaint arises from the change of chief clerks from time to time during the Long Vacation. There are, first of all, the three divisions in each judge's chambers. During the Long Vacation one chief clerk takes for a time all the work in each of the three divisions of the several Vice-Chancellors' courts and the Master of the Rolls. If papers were all carefully arranged as carried in, under the separate divisions of the several courts, much less confusion would have ensued during the Long Vacation which has just passed, and chief clerks themselves would have been able the more readily to get through their work. As for papers which have undoubtedly been lost, this may perhaps be partly accounted for by the fact that the Vacation Registrar's Office was moved during the vacation. The work in the Chancery Division was also unusually heavy during the whole of the Long Vacation.

THE recent meeting of the Incorporated Law Society, at Oxford, has forced the question of University education upon the notice of our Profession. The meeting pressed upon the Incorporated Law Society the necessity of facilitating the admission of intending solicitors to the advantages of University education. And in so doing it only gave wider utterance to the opinion which the most eminent solicitors of the day expressed twenty years ago before the Committee of the House of Commons on Legal Education. It does not, indeed, require any very deep reflection to show that, to a profession where so much depends upon personal manners, personal tact, and wide connections, there can be no better introduction than an experience of the busy life of a great university, even apart from all consideration of its more intellectual advantages. And a glance at the advertising columns of the LAW TIMES will serve to show how steadily the proportion of University men is on the increase in our ranks. The current which is thus setting in will steadily strengthen in proportion as the efforts which the universities are making to meet it become more generally known. The main objection which seems at present to deter young men from entering a university before settling down to the mysteries of the office, is their dislike to postpone the wished-for honours of the final examination, and the subsequent admission. But the fact is, that very little delay is caused by taking a degree. Inasmuch as the ordinary five years of an articled clerk's service are reduced to three if he be a graduate, and as it only takes two years and eight months to obtain an ordinary B.A. degree, the total loss of time involved is considerably under a year. Nor can it indeed be called a loss, since both the general mental culture and the special legal knowledge which will be acquired in the time will carry the student with far greater ease and speed through the problems that await him in his clerkship. For among the recent changes in our universities none are more striking than the advances that have recently been made in the studying and teaching of law. At Cambridge the law tripos is the most rapidly rising of all; it has long outstripped its contemporaries, the tripos of moral science and of natural science, and is rapidly approaching to an equality with the ancient and venerable classical tripos. Indeed, if we add together the number of undergraduates who at any given moment are studying at Cambridge for the law tripos or the "Law Special," we shall probably find them amount to two hundred—in other words, no less than 10 per cent. of the whole university. But what, it may be asked, will a man who goes through this law course learn that will be of direct service to him in his professional career? Confining our remarks to Cambridge alone—for at the recent meeting, and the discussions which followed it, the case on behalf of Oxford has been fully stated already, and the sister university rather unfairly ignored—let us see what a man will have to read who goes through the Cambridge law tripos. First of all he must read conveyancing, i.e., both real and personal property law, and read it to a point much higher than is required in Chancery-lane for the final; criminal law he must read to an equally high point; and evidence also; common law to about the level of the intermediate; and throw in, too, a sprinkling of equity and bankruptcy. In this way nearly half the tripos is made up; and then there comes international law, a subject almost indispensable in these days to those who practice in maritime or mercantile towns. The remaining subjects are English history, Roman law, and the theory of jurisprudence: subjects which have no direct professional bearing, but which give the lawyer an invaluable grasp of the grounds and principles of his science. Let us not omit to notice the personnel of the staff to whom Cambridge has entrusted the teaching of these subjects. It is twofold. The University contributes three professors, of whom the distinguished equity jurist, Mr. Birkbeck (well known to all readers of Snell on Equity), is one, and the late Solicitor-General, Sir William Harcourt, is another. The colleges add six lecturers, of whom Downing supplies two, and Trinity, John's, Caius, and Trinity Hall one apiece. It may be added that of these six gentlemen three have had practical experience as barristers, and a fourth as a solicitor. A final word on the pecuniary aspects of University life may not be altogether useless. The minimum cost of a college life is usually reckoned at £120 a year, though strict parsimony often reduces this expenditure materially; and some "non-collegiate" undergraduates are said not to spend more than half that sum. (At the Cavendish College, which has recently been established for students who desire to enter the University below the ordinary age, the bills are expected to average about £80 a year.) But it must be remembered that the Universities provide ample rewards for diligent students; so ample, indeed, as in some cases to defray a man's whole expenses, and even leave him a surplus. At some colleges (Christ's and Trinity Hall, for example) scholarships are awarded at the annual examinations in June to undergraduates who have acquitted themselves well in law. At Downing College (whose charter specially devotes it to legal and medical studies) a further step has been taken, and scholarships are awarded to promising law students at the very commencement of their University course. Of these "minor" scholarships, three, worth £80 a year each, are offered every April for competition amongst students who will enter the University in the following October; and any or all of these may be awarded for proficiency in law. The student who obtains one of these will probably afterwards supersede it by a foundation scholarship, worth from £50 to £80 a year, which will last until he takes his degree, and, if he deserve it, for three years longer, thus affording him throughout the whole of his clerkship a very welcome piece of income, and one to which no duties or restrictions are attached. Moreover, he will probably aim at the Whewell scholarships, two of which (one of £100 a year and one of £50, both tenable for five years) the university offers annually for proficiency in international law. One of these, along with a college scholarship, would defray all the expenses of his academical course, and go far towards those of his clerkship also. We might add that he will probably also carry away with him several guineas' worth of prize books, into the inside of which it is an even chance if he ever peeps again, but whose outside will always serve to remind him of the three pleasantest and most fruitful years of his life.

THE system which obtains throughout all the divisions of the High Court of Justice by which the list of causes to be taken on a particular day is only posted the night before about five o'clock for the information of solicitors, is especially inconvenient in regard to the divorce business of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division, in which the whole divorce business of the country is disposed of. The large majority of suitors in this court belong to a class who are frequently not the masters or mistresses of their own time; so that, supposing a London agent telegraphs to a country solicitor, say at half-past five in the evening, that a case is in the paper for the next day, it often happens that the parties and their witnesses are unable to arrive in London in time. As we have already announced, the Probate Court has this sittings been taking undefended divorce causes before the court itself without a jury. This is some advantage, but it should be remembered that a very large number of cases have been disposed of in one day sometimes, as the simpler class of cases often occupy not more than twenty minutes each. We have before urged the desirability in instituting some new mode of applying to the court to make rules nisi absolute, and it will soon become a question as to whether commonplace divorce cases might not be disposed of before one of the registrars or a judge in Chambers, lists of such cases being posted two clear days before they are to be taken. The difficulty to which we have here alluded was increased on Thursday last by the fact that on that day two judges were taking undefended divorce causes without any previous notification to the Profession. When any reforms are to be considered in reference to the Divorce Court we hope that steps will be taken to relieve counsel from the farce of having to apply in open court for decrees absolute, and so as to motions for directions as to mode of trial, which in nine cases out of ten are of the most commonplace character, in fact a mere form, much more simple than the great bulk of the work undertaken in the Common Law and Chancery Judges' Chambers.

IN our last issue we published a letter from Mr. Percy Saxton, a commissioner for oaths, appointed under the authority of sect. 84 of the Judicature Act 1873, in which letter our correspondent said that all commissioners for oaths in England, whether appointed before or after the Judicature Acts came into operation, can take Irish Chancery affidavits. In this we agree, and it also seems that English commissioners for oaths can take Irish bankruptcy affidavits and those for use in the Irish Landed Estates Court; but as to Irish common law affidavits, it seems that commissioners for oaths in England have no power to take same. An Irish Commissioner for Oaths observes on this, however, that "those of the Irish Common Law Courts and Court of Probate and Affidavits, as to registration of Irish deeds, are in a great muddle." The designation which Irish Commissioners for Oaths in the English High Court of Justice and Court of Appeal now use is, to our mind, incorrect. They say, "a commissioner to administer in Ireland oaths for the High Court of Justice in England." It should surely be "for the Supreme Court of Judicature in England."

ALTHOUGH we are happy to notice a steadily increasing disposition on the part of the taxing masters of the common law divisions of the High Court of Justice, to adopt a uniform system in regard to the allowances on taxation of costs, yet many of those discrepancies which were so conspicuous under the old order of things still remain. Before the Judicature Acts a sum of 3s. 4d. was allowed for drawing judgment and the like sum for attending to sign, also a sum of 4s. for entering judgment; this was the same in all the common law courts. Since the operation of the Acts referred to, some taxing-masters have allowed 6s. 8d. for attending to sign judgment and obtaining office copy, while others allow not only this, but a further sum of 3s. 4d., for drawing judgment, which must now be on a printed form, except as to a special judgment, instead of on draft paper, or on the record as formerly. Recently all the common law masters have, we understand, agreed to a uniform practice, by which a sum of 6s. 8d. is allowed for attending to sign judgment, and a further sum of 3s. 4d. for drawing judgment. The Exchequer masters were the first to adopt this plan. It will, no doubt, be followed by district registrars.

THE recently announced determination of the Master of the Rolls to recur to the old practice of sitting until three o'clock on Saturdays instead of two o'clock, as decided by the judges soon after the Judicature Acts came into operation, is one which cannot but meet with the approval of the public. And so far as solicitors are concerned, we are sure that, assuming a case to have commenced on a Saturday, they would much rather have the benefit of the extra hour than be thrown over to the Monday for the want of such extra hour. The convenience of the Profession must be made subservient to public requirements and public convenience.

AN undergraduate, writing to us from Cambridge under date of the 2nd inst., sends us the subjoined advertisements, and, in doing so, observes "Having seen several times your strictures on the touting advertisements of persons who call themselves solicitors, I take the liberty of enclosing two which appeared in the Oxford and Cambridge Undergraduates' Journal of to-day (Nov. 2). The use of the appellation 'solicitor,' draws unwary men into the offices of these persons, who are nothing more than money lenders."

THE DEBTS and LIABILITIES of Members of the Universities arranged for them, or settled. Every kind of banking and legal business transacted. Established 1854. London Bankers: Bank of England. —Mr. ST. SWITHIN WILLIAMS, Solicitor and Private Banker, 138, High-street, Oxford.

MONEY.—To Noblemen, Officers, Heirs to Entailed Estates, and others.—A large capitalist is prepared to ADVANCE to any extent, in a few hours, on the security of freehold and leasehold properties, entailed estates, annuities, advowsons, legacies, reversions, deposit of deeds, leases, life policies, and furniture (without removal), &c., at a low rate of interest, temporary advance being made in all cases to meet pressing engagements pending completion of loan.—Address Mr. Brown, solicitor, 70, Cornhill, London, E.C.

It is only fair to say that as to the latter advertisement, "A large capitalist" appears to be the money lender, not that we approve of either of these advertisements.

Low (Edith), Henley-on-Thames, Oxford, widow. Dec. 1; T. M. Jenkins, solicitor, 5, Tavistock-street, Covent-garden, London.
MILL (Wm.), Quintrell Downs, St. Columb Minor, Cornwall, retired policeman. Dec. 31; Simmons and Clarke, solicitors, 1, Manvers-street, Bath.
MUNDAY (Alfred Wm.), heretofore of Salisbury, but late of Fisherton Anger, Wilt., gentleman. Dec. 18; Cobb and Smith, solicitors, Salisbury.
NASH (Henry S.), formerly of Clifton, Bristol, but late of Portsmouth, Somerset, Esq. Dec. 7; Sweet and Burroughs, solicitors, 24, Bridge-street, Bristol.
NEWBURY (Jno.), 33, Jesus-lane, Cambridge, tailor. Dec. 7;
H. J. Whitehead, solicitor, 2, Post Office-terrace, Cambridge.
REBEVE (James), 14, Chalk Farm-road, Haverstock-hill, Middlesex, coffee house keeper. Nov. 30; Green and Pridham, solicitors, 6, John-street, Bedford-row, Middlesex.
ROBERTSON (Sophia), 75, King-street East, Hammersmith, Middlesex, widow. Dec. 1; G. F. Hudson, Matthews, and Co., solicitors, 23, Bucklersbury, London.
RODGER (Alexander), 16, St. German's-place, Blackheath,
Kent, gentleman. Dec. 1; Layton and Co., solicitors, 29, Budge-row, Cannon-street, London.
SAMSON (Marnaduke B.), Hampton House, Hampton
Court, Middlesex, Esq. Dec. 15; Paddison and Co., solicitors, 57, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.
SENHOUSE (Johanna), formerly of Harecroft, Gosport, Cumberland, and of Villa de Santeiron Brancolar, Nice, France, but late of Maison Ravel-avenue, Beaulieu, Nice, spinster. Feb. 11; G. Cowburn, solicitor, 43, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.
SEWELL Anna Francis), late of 16, Longton-grove, Syden-ham, Kent, widow, formerly of 9 and 10, Archer-street, Kensington Park, Middlesex, pawnbroker. Dec. 26; W.
Moon, solicitor, 15, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.
SHADBOUR (Wm.), Bexley-heath, Kent, Esq. Dec. 9; Clarke
Rawlins and Clarke, solicitors, 80, Greatham House, Old Broad-street, London.
SMITH (Thos.), Bridle-Smith-gate, Nottingham, licensed victualler. Dec. 16; Wells and Hind, solicitors, Fletcher-gate, Nottingham.
SOLOMON (Simon, otherwise Solomon Solomon), 19, Harfordplace, New Cut, Bristol gentleman. Dec. 24; Wm.
Plummer, solicitor, Bristol-chambers, Nicholas-street, Bristol.
SPRONACH (Margaret), late of Addie Cottage, Lain, Ross, Scotland, and formerly of Upper Sydenham, Kent, spinster. Dec. 30; Burroughs and Bisdee, solicitor, Forest-hill, London, S.E.
TABOR (Joe. M.), Brightlingsea, Essex, merchant. Jan. 1;
Smythies and Co., solicitors, North-hill, Colehester.
TAYLOR (Thos.), Outwell, Norfolk, farmer. Dec. 7; Welch-man and Carrick, solicitors, Upwell and Wisbech.
VAUX (Emma), 51, Landon-road, Stockwell, Surrey, spinster. Dec. 16; Davies and Son, solicitors, 9, Angel-court, Throgmorton-street, London, E.C.
WADE (Elizabeth), Fobbing, Essex, widow, who carried on business as a bargewoman and farmer. Dec. 24; E. Woodward, solicitor, 2, Ingram-court, Fenchurch-street, London.
WALKER (James), 15, Southampton-street, Holborn, Middlesex, and of "Cashfields," Sewardstone-green, Essex, auctioneer. Dec. 21; E. Seeling, solicitor, 21, Southampton-street, Holborn, London.
WHITE (Joseph), 239, Commercial-road, Landport, Portsea, oil and colour merchant. Nov. 30; Geo. H. King, solicitor, 43, North-street, Portsea.

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

Inquiries, as to the several Examinations and as to Admission on the Roll of the Supreme Court, as to being called to the Bar, and as to taking out and renewal of annual certificates, should be addressed to the Editor (Students' Department).

THE following lectures and classes are appointed to be delivered and held at the Law Institution, Chancery-lane, during the ensuing week, Monday, 13th, Equity Class, 4.30 to 6 o'clock p.m.; Tuesday, ditto; Wednesday, ditto; Thursday, lecture (Conveyancing), 6 to 7 o'clock p.m. Subscribers are not admitted to the hall after the lectures have commenced. Members of the Society may attend the lectures. Further information may be gathered from the advertisement in our last issue.

AN examination certificate is only available for admission on the roll of the Supreme Court within six months from its date, and must otherwise be specially enlarged by an order of the Master of the Rolls, which should be applied for at the Petty Bag Office.

THE elementary works selected for the intermediate examination of persons under articles of clerkship, for the year 1877 are—Chitty on Contracts, c. 1, 2, 3, with the exception, in c. 3, of s. 1, relating to contracts respecting real property, 9th or 10th edit.; Williams on the Principles of the Law of Real Property, 10th or 11th edit.; Haynes' Outlines of Equity, 3rd or 4th edit.

WHERE articles expire between the 10th Jan. and 15th April 1877, candidates may be examined in Jan. 1877, or, of course, at any subsequent examination.

IN case of the death of a principal during articles, fresh articles should always be entered into without loss of time. The time which elapses between the day of the death of the principal and the day of the date of fresh articles being entered into, does not count, so that the further articles must be for a time sufficient to make up for this loss of service, as well as for the unexpired term of the original articles of clerkship.

ARTICLES of clerkship, or assignments of articles of clerkship, dated on any day during November must be enrolled and registered at the Petty Bag

Office on or before the same day in the month of May next, and when articles or assignments are required to be, and are, enrolled and registered on any day during the month of November, they must be produced and entered at the Law Institution on or before the same day of the month of February next. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 8 and 9, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 7. Failure to comply with these statutory requirements often entails a serious loss of time upon article students.

MICHAELMAS EXAMINATION 1876.

GENERAL EXAMINATION OF STUDENTS OF THE INNS OF COURT, HELD AT LINCOLN'S INN
HALL, ON THE 23RD, 24TH, 25TH, AND 26TH
OCT. 1876.

THE Council of Legal Education have awarded to the following students certificates that they have satisfactorily passed a public examination: Beck, Harry Edward, Inner Temple; Buddicom, Walter Howman, Inner Temple; Brabant, George Whitmore, Lincoln's Inn; Calvert, Edward Bennett, Inner Temple; Chetti, Pulicat Ratnavelu, Lincoln's Inn; Child, Arthur, Middle Temple; Denman, George Lewis, Lincoln's Inn; Francis, John Joseph, Gray's Inn; Gardner, Arthur Andrew
Cecil Dunn, Inner Temple; Hedderwick, Thomas
Charles, Middle Temple; Jendwine, John Wynne, Lincoln's Inn; Leach, Arthur Francis, Middle Temple; Leadam, Isaac Saunders, Lincoln's Inn; Mackean, Ernest, Inner Temple; Miller, Granville George, Inner Temple; Munro, Joseph Edwin Crawford, Middle Temple; Parsons,
James, Inner Temple; Piggott, Francis Taylor,
Middle Temple; Roberts, Arthur Phillips, Inner Temple; Sanders, John Satterfield, Lincoln's Inn; Shirley, Walter Shirley, Inner Temple;
Todd, Thomas Marshall, Inner Temple; Walker, Philip Francis, Inner Temple; and Wills, William, Inner Temple.

The following students passed a satisfactory examination in Roman Civil Law only.—H. Adkins, V. S. Alston, A. M. Bernard, D. H. Bernard,
W. H. Bolton, A. H. Britton, L. M. Brown,
V. Brown, T. L. Bullock, J. G. Collins, T. W.
Crosse, Hon. F. H. Dawney, J. W. F. Dumergue,
C. E. Ellis, J. Formby, F. T. Fraser, W. Garth,
J. C. Gilmore, H. E. Graham, C. B. Grant, H. E.
Gurner, N. L. Halder, F. Hedges, G. B. Houghton, H. McN. Humphry, P. Rose Innes, W. I. W.
Ingham, T. L. L. Jenkins, J. Langley, G. K. Lyon,
C. E. McLaren, F. L. Muirhead, C. F. D'A. Orred,
W. Phillips, R. W. S. Pinhey, A. C. J. Powell,
R. Prothero, C. Russell, J. N. Siroar, F. A. Slack,
N. Spencer, C. B. L. Tyerman, H. A. Wakeman, F. L. Wright, and A. D. Youngusband.

By order of the Council,
(Signed) S. H. WALPOLE, Chairman.
Council Chamber, Lincoln's Inn, Nov. 1, 1876.

QUESTIONS FOR THE FINAL EXAMINATION—NOVEMBER, 1876.

FIRST DAY.

I.—PRELIMINARY.

Questions 1 to 5 inclusive.

II.—PRINCIPLES OF LAW AND PROCEDURE

(PAPER A, 10 A.M. TO 1 P.M.)

In matters as administered under the usual jurisdiction of the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice.

6. State the several modes in which matters may be commenced in this division of the High Court; and state, with respect to each mode, some of the matters to which it is applicable.

7. State the mode in which, generally, evidence is to be given in actions in this division of the High Court, and the circumstances in which other modes of giving evidence are allowed.

8. In actions in this division of the High Court, are costs always in the discretion of the court;
and, if not, what are the exceptions and restrictions?

9. Give an outline of the ordinary proceedings in an action by executors for administration of their testator's estate.

10. In what circumstances will specific performance be directed of a contract by parol, which is required by the Statute of Frauds to be in writing?

11. Define (a) an express trust; (b) an implied trust; and (c) a constructive trust. Give an illustration in each case.

12. By what acts of a person named as a trustee will he be deemed to have accepted the trust?
And in what ways may a trustee, after acceptance, divest himself of the trust?

13. What change has recently been made in the law as to setting aside sales of reversions? In what circumstances will such sales now be set aside?

14. Explain what is meant by the marshalling of securities, and give an illustration.

15. Devise of real estate to A, a widower, for life, and of other real estate to B, a widow, for life, with a condition, in each case, that the gift should be forfeited if the devisee should marry again. What is the effect of the condition in each case? Would the effect be different in either case, if the gift were of the income of personality?

16. Bequest to A of "my £1000 of stock of the Great Western Railway Company." The testator afterwards borrowed £500 on mortgage of the stock, and died leaving it so pledged. What are A's rights in relation to the legacy?

17. State the cases, if any, in which a valid gift of land for charitable uses may be made by will.

18. Bequest by a will, dated after 1860, of a legacy to testator's nephew, an infant, contin-tingently on his attaining twenty-one. From what time does the legacy carry interest? May the executors apply any part of the interest for the legatee's maintenance during minority?

19. Define a donatio mortis causa. In what respect does it differ from a legacy, and in what does it resemble a legacy? Can a good donatio mortis causa be made by delivery of a cheque, of a bond, of a banker's deposit note, of a railway share certificate?

20. In what circumstances, and to what extent, if any, is a past member of a limited company liable to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound-up?

II.—PRINCIPLES OF LAW AND PROCEDURE.

(PAPER B, 2 TO 5 P.M.)

In matters as administered under the usual jurisdiction of the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer Divisions of the High Court of Justice.

21. In what material respects does an action for the recovery of land differ from an action in eject-ment before the Judicature Act?

22. What advantage has the Judicature Act given to a defendant with respect to the raising of a cross claim against the plaintiff?

23. State when and under what circumstances a defendant may, since the Judicature Act, apply to have an action dismissed?

24. What steps must a judgment creditor take to attach a debt owing by a third party to the judgment debtor?

25. After trial and verdict, a party is desirous of obtaining a new trial of the cause. How and within what time must he proceed?

26. State the provisions of the County Court Act 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 142, s. 10), with regard to remitting actions of tort to a County Court.

27. What is the general rule as to the law according to which contracts are expounded? If a contract to be performed in a foreign country be made in England, according to the law of which country will it be construed?

28. Under what circumstances does a vendor's right to "stoppage in transitu" arise, and under what does it cease?

29. Mention the different kinds of bailments, and the extent in each case of the bailee's liability?

30. What is the common law liability of carriers, and in what respects has it been altered by statute?

31. State the provisions of the Statute of Frauds with respect to a guarantee, and the alterations made by the Mercantile Amendment Act in the law relating to guarantees.

32. Under what liability is a tenant from year to year to make repairs where there is no express agreement? And state what you know as to a landlord's liability to repair.

33. State what is necessary in order to make a valid tender of a debt.

34. In what manner can a solicitor who enters into a special agreement for remuneration with his client enforce the agreement?

35. What do you mean by an Englishman's house being his castle? By whom, and under what circumstances, may his outer door be broken open?

SECOND DAY.

III.—PRINCIPLES AND APPLICATION OF THE LAW OF REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

(10 A.M. TO 1 P.M.)

36. Give the dates and history of the Statutes
De donis conditionalibus and Quia emptoris.

37. What was the date and purpose of the original Statute of Mortmain? What is the statute of recent date, and what did it enact?

38. What is the meaning of "Trustees to preserve contingent remainders?" Are they now necessary?

39. What rights in each other's real property have a husband and wife respectively in the absence of any settlement?

40. Real property in strict settlement. The eldest son of the tenant for life is of age, and about to marry. What re-settlement is usually made? What deeds necessary?

41. A, an owner in fee simple, makes a voluntary settlement of his real property. He subsequently sells and conveys a portion for valuable consideration to a purchaser, with notice of the settlement. Which will hold good—the settlement or the conveyance? Give reason.

42. In pursuing an abstract of title you meet with an owner in fee simple dying intestate since the year 1853. What possible incumbrances or burdens on his property must you see to the absence or discharge of?

43. The evidences of ownership of real property are the title deeds. Who is entitled to their custody in the following cases? (A) An owner in fee simple who sells the bulk of his estate. (B) A settled property with a tenant for life having the legal estate. (C) The like with a tenant for life, equitable owner only.

44. Explain the term "proviso for redemption."

45. What are advowsons and rights of next presentations? Under what circumstances may they be legally bought by laymen and clerks respectively?

46. Give the date of the "Wills Act." How was it necessary that a will should be executed to pass real property before the Act? and how since?

47. A, an owner in fee simple, devises two estates specifically, and leaves the residue of his real and personal property to B, C, and D, as tenants in common. B dies during the testator's lifetime. What becomes of his share?

48. What is the meaning of "descent being traced from the last purchaser? Is a devise of real property a "purchase?"

49. A mortgagee dies leaving a will with no specific devise of trust and mortgaged estates. The mortgage is to be paid off and a re-conveyance executed. Who under the present law can convey the legal estate?

50. A is tenant for life of a settled estate; B, tenant in tail in remainder. B believes that a farm, of which C is the reputed owner in fee, is part of the settled property. Within what time, under the law now operating, can B bring his action to recover the farm? and how will the law stand on the 1st Jan. 1879?

IV.—BANKRUPTCY AND PRACTICE OF THE COURTS.

51. Define the meaning, and state the object of acts of bankruptcy.

52. Enumerate the acts of bankruptcy now in force. State those which are common to traders and non-traders, and such as are confined to traders only.

53. State the chief distinctions made by the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, between traders and non-traders.

54. Give a short exposition of the doctrine of reputed ownership.

55. Is the doctrine of reputed ownership applicable to traders and non-traders alike, or is there any and what distinction between them? Were any, and, if so, what changes in this respect made by the Bankruptcy Act 1869?

56. State the duty of the sheriff or high bailiff of the County Court when the goods of a trader or non-trader respectively have been taken in execution in respect of a judgment for a sum exceeding £50, and sold.

57. If one member only of a firm be adjudged bankrupt, can the creditors of the firm prove their debts, and vote under such separate bankruptcy; and, if so, for what purpose? Are they entitled to receive dividend out of the separate property of the bankrupt, and, if so, subject to what conditions?

58. Is a joint creditor of two or more partners ever allowed to prove such joint debt in competition with the separate creditors of one partner, under a separate bankruptcy of such partner, and upon what ground?

59. A and B, being partners, are jointly indebted to C, who holds their joint and several promissory note, and also security on their joint estate, and also on the separate estate of B. The bankrupts are also jointly indebted to D, who holds their joint and several promissory note, and security on the property of a third person. What are the rights of C and D respectively as to proof upon, and receipt of, dividends out of the joint estate of the bankrupts, and the separate estate of each of them?

60. A, B, and C, are trading in partnership. C retires and transfers his share in the partnership to A and B in consideration of their covenant to pay to him £2000 at the end of a year. Before the expiration of the year, A and B are adjudicated bankrupts—C is solvent. Some of the joint creditors of A, B, and C remain unpaid at the date of the bankruptcy. What are the rights of such joint creditors under the bankruptcy of A and B, and has C any, and, if so, what right to prove and receive dividend under the bankruptcy in respect of the sum of £2000?

V.—CRIMINAL LAW, AND PROCEEDINGS BEFORE JUSTICES OF THE PEACE.

62. Distinguish between felonies and misdemeanours.

62. Define burglary. What is its punishment? What offences are committed by shooting a burglar?

63. What are the different kinds of justifiable homicide?

64. What is the punishment for arson? Define the crime.

65. For what purposes is a writ certiorari usually granted, and what proceedings are required for its allowance?

66. Under what circumstances have magistrates jurisdiction in the case of a tenant who refuses to give up possession at the expiration of his tenancy?

67. Within what limits of time and place may a warrant of apprehension be executed? How can its original force be extended?

68. In what cases are magistrates bound to admit to bail, and in what cases have they no power to do so?

69. What offences cannot be tried at quarter sessions?

70. What is surety of the peace, and when can it be obtained?

VI.—PROBATE AND DIVORCE LAW, AND MATTERS AS ADMINISTERED IN THE PROBATE AND DIVORCE DIVISION OF THE HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.

71. Can probate be obtained of a will disposing of real estate only? Give the reason for your answer.

72. Is a will revived by destruction of a subsequent will, or how otherwise must revival be effected?

73. What does the Wills Act (1 Vict. c. 26) enact respecting obliteration, interlineations or alterations in a will.

74. What stamp is necessary on a second or subsequent grant of probate or administration, and how can a stamp be obtained without payment of duty?

75. A will which testator duly executed and retained in his own possession cannot be found after his death. What is the presumption of law in such case? Can a probate be obtained, and, if so, how?

76. State the rule of law as to whether or not the securities of foreign countries are liable to probate duty.

77. State briefly how the proceedings in a probate action differ from those in an ordinary action?

78. What is the nature and effect of the decree in a suit of nullity of marriage?

79. State briefly the grounds of defence to a suit for judicial separation?

80. On what grounds can the jurisdiction of the court in proceedings for divorce be objected to; and what is the mode of procedure for taking such objection?

BRISTOL LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

AN open-night meeting of this society was held in the Law Library, Small-street, on Tuesday, the 31st Oct. last, Thomas Parr, Esq., in the chair. There were sixteen members and several visitors present. The Chairman called upon Mr. Blake to open in the affirmative the following subject:—"That the policy of the present Government in relation to the Eastern question does not deserve the confidence of the nation." Mr. Cross led the negative side, and was supported by Mr. Carpenter; Mr. Jacques seconding the affirmative. The following members joined in the discussion: Messrs. Fenwick, Millard, Burford, Gaches, Doggett, and Daniell. The chairman put the motion, when the votes were, affirmative, 5; negative, 9; thus supporting the Government by a majority of four votes. The thanks of the meeting to Mr. Parr were then accorded, and this closed the evening.

Huddersfield Law Students' Society.

THE usual fortnightly meeting of this society took place on Monday evening last at the County Court, Queen-street, Mr. R. Welsh in the chair. There was a good attendance of members. The proposition under consideration was as follows: "That married women should, so far as regards their real and personal property, occupy the same legal status as femes sole." Mr. J. Priestley, solicitor, argued in support of the proposition, and Mr. James Yeoman in opposition to it. A lively discussion ensued, which was taken part in by most of the members present, the proposition being eventually carried in the affirmative by a majority of one.

HULL LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

AN ordinary meeting of the society was held in the Law Library on Wednesday, the 1st Nov., J. D. Sibree, Esq., solicitor, in the chair. There were sixteen members present. Mr. Stephenson opened the affirmative side of the following point, viz.: "A releases a tiger belonging to B, which was securely confined on B's premises. The tiger kills C. Is B liable to C's representatives?" and was followed by Messrs. Hobson and Wilson. Mr. Lambert argued the case in the negative, and was supported by Messrs. Johnson, Babington, Winter, and Brown. The chairman having summed up, the question was put to the meeting, and decided in the negative by a majority of six. A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the proceedings.

Another ordinary meeting was held on Tuesday, 7th Nov. 1876, at six o'clock, Robert Pouch, Esq., solicitor, in the chair. Mr. Marshall opened in the affirmative side of the following point: "A sends an offer by post to B, to sell him certain goods; B accepts the offer, and puts the letter in a post. The letter is lost by the post-office, and A never receives it. A having sold the goods to C, can B sue A for a breach of contract?" Mr. Babington argued in the negative, and was followed by Mr. Sykes. Mr. Shaw then spoke in the affirmative, and Mr. Lambert for the negative. Messrs. Babington and Marshall having replied the chairman summed up, and put the question to the meeting, when the negative was declared carried by a majority of six. Thirteen members were present. A vote of thanks to the chairman brought the proceedings to a close.

MANCHESTER LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

A GENERAL meeting of this society was held a Tuesday last, at the Law Library, Cross-street Chambers. William Cecil Smyly, Esq., barrister-at-law, occupied the chair. There was a large attendance of honorary and ordinary members. Eleven new members, proposed by the secretary, were elected, after which the meeting proceeded to discuss the subject appointed for the evening's debate, which was as follows:—"A is the owner of the leasehold interest in a house, and by a codicil to his will, after reciting the lease under which he holds, bequeaths the house, and all its estate and interest therein, unto B, for all the residue of the said term of ninety-nine years. A subsequently purchases the freehold interest, and dies without having altered his will or codicil. Does B take any, and what interest?" (Will Act, 1 Vict. c. 26, ss. 23, 24; Mathews v. Foulsham, L. Rep. 2 Eq. 669; Miles v. Miles, L. Rep. 1 Eq. 462; Douglas v. Douglas, Kay, 400; Carr v. Bennett, L. Rep. 6 Eq. 422.)

Mr. W. Slater, in the absence of Mr. Jones, opened the discussion in the affirmative, and was followed by Mr. Hill in the negative. The above and numerous other cases were cited, and particular stress was laid on Struthers v. Struthers (5 W. R. 809); and Emuss v. Smith (2 De G. J. & Sm. 722), on the affirmative and negative respectively. Mr. A. Walmsley, in the absence of Mr. Wallis, supported the affirmative, and Mr. Atkins replied in the negative, basing his arguments mainly on the doctrine of merger and the recent Judicature Act. Mr. Casper supported the affirmative, contending that that view was the most reasonable construction of the intention of the testator. Mr. Lawson (an honorary member of the society) spoke in the negative, referring to numerous cases bearing on the point, amongst which were Drunkwater v. Falconer (2 Ves. 68, 625), Patridge v. Patridge (Ca. & Fal. 226), Copp v. Fernyhough (11 Brown's Rep.), and Pier v. Harrison (3 W. R. 612). Mr. Simpson, Mr. Hisk, Mr. Watts, and Mr. Millar also addressed the meeting, and Mr. Slater replied on all the arguments.

The chairman summed up in an able and concise manner, and said that the greatest difficulty which those who took a negative view of the question had to contend against, was undoubtedly the decision in Struthers v. Struthers; he did not think that Mathews v. Foulsham presented a great an obstacle in the way of the affirmative. The learned chairman concluded by instructing the meeting that they should affirmatively or negatively, as they thought the words, "and all his estate and interest," &c., were merely descriptive or a limitation of the estate of the testator. The result of the voting was as follows: That B took the freehold interest—affirmative, 12; negative, 8. That B took the leasehold interest—affirmative, none; negative, 20.

A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

PLYMOUTH, STONEHOUSE, AND DEVONPORT LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

THE fortnightly meeting of this society was held at the Athenæum, Plymouth, on Friday, the 3rd inst., the president (J. Shelly, Esq.) being in the chair, and a large number of ordinary members present. On the motion of the secretary three members were elected, making altogether nine ordinary members who have joined this society during the present session. The moot point for the evening was then discussed, "A bores a hole in B's cistern; the water contained in the cistern escapes and causes damage to C's property. Can C sue B for damages?" Mr. Helpman and Mr. Chubb spoke in the affirmative, and Mr. Fox and Mr. Gny in the negative. After a somewhat lengthy debate, on the summing up of the chairman the question was put to the vote and decided in the negative.

SOUTHAMPTON LAW DEBATING SOCIETY

A MONTHLY meeting was held at 6, Portland-street, on Thursday evening, the 2nd inst., when there were present Mr. F. H. Candy, solicitor (chairman), Messrs. R. S. Pearce (town clerk), C. Lucas, H. D. M. Page, T. W. Flemming, Fowler, Mosely, C. H. Candy, A. W. Watts, C. E. Keele, A. W. Pearce, C. Lamport, &c. A new member having been elected, communications were read from barristers attending the Southampton Sessions, answering invitations to join the society, and from other societies. Mr. C. Lamport (articled clerk) opened the subject for debate, "Has an innkeeper a lien on a carriage brought to his hotel by a guest, for the board and lodging of the guest?" in the affirmative, and was supported by Mr. Page (solicitor); Mr. A. W. Pearce (articled clerk) and Mr. Flemming (solicitor) argued in the negative. The chairman having summed up, supporting the affirmative view of the question, it was put to the vote and decided in the affirmative by a majority of seven. A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the proceedings. The next meeting will be held on Thursday, 7th Dec. 1876, when the following will be the subject for debate: "A. is the owner of the leasehold interest in a house, and by a codicil to his will, after reciting the lease under which he holds, bequeaths the house 'and all his estate and interest therein, unto B., for all the residue of the said term of ninety-nine years.' A. subsequently purchases the freehold interest and dies without having altered his will or codicil; does B. take any, and what interest?"

UNITED LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

The weekly meeting of this society was held at Clement's Inn Hall, Strand, on Wednesday evening, the 8th Nov. 1876, Mr. E. C. Rawlings in the chair. Mr. W. Dowson opened the subject for the evening's debate, viz., "That voluntary schools should not receive any support from the State." The motion gave rise to a very animated debate, and was ultimately lost by a majority of ten votes. Twenty-eight members were present. At the meeting next week the following is the subject appointed for discussion: "That the present system of election of members of Parliament does not secure a true representation of the opinions of the electors, and is therefore unsatisfactory." To be supported by Messrs. N. M. Roche and R. S. Jackson; to be opposed by Messrs. J. W. Browett and J. Joseph.

QUESTIONS.

INTERMEDIATE EXAMINATION.—I was articled on the 23rd Feb., 1876. When can I present myself for examination? E. G.

[If articled for five years, in November, 1878.—ED. STUDS. DEPT.]

—I was articled Oct. 13, 1875, for five years; which is the earliest day I can present myself for my intermediate examination? QUERCUS-LABRUCUS.

[Probably April 1878, the days for which year are not yet fixed.—ED. STUDS. DEPT.]

ASSIGNMENT OF ARTICLES.—Does the bankruptcy of a principal (solicitor) entitle articled clerk to an assignment of articles without consent of such principal? MUCH OBLIGED.

[See section 5 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73. You must apply to the Queen's Bench for an order allowing assignments upon terms.—ED. STUDS. DEPT.]

FINAL EXAMINATION.—I have given notice for the Final Examination in January next. Can I also be admitted in that month? My articles expire on the 16th Jan. AN ARTICLED CLERK.

[Provided you are 21, and that your articles will have expired on the day appointed for admission, you can be so admitted.—ED. STUDS. DEPT.]

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

NOTES ON NEW DECISIONS.

STATUTE 3 GEO. 4, c. 58, s. 42.—MEANING OF THE WORD "TOWN."—By 3 Geo. 4, c. 58, s. 42, any person who sells fish within the town of Rochdale, except in the market place (unless such sale take place from a shop or dwelling house), is liable to a penalty not exceeding £25. The respondent sold four herrings in an open street, not in the market place; the street was a main thoroughfare with houses on both sides, in a populous part of the ancient municipal borough of Rochdale, and there was a continuous line of buildings from the market place to the street where the sale took place. When the Act was passed the street in question was not made, and the site of it was in fact green fields. There was no definition in the Act of the meaning of the expression "town of Rochdale." The justices refused to convict, being of opinion that the words "town of Rochdale" were limited to the town as it then existed, but stated a case for the opinion of the court. Held, that the justices were wrong in refusing to convict, inasmuch as the section was intended to apply to all parts of what might be fairly termed the town of Rochdale, whether in existence at the time of the passing of the Act or not: (Collier v. North, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 345. Div. App.)

TRAMWAY REPAIRS.—LEVEL.—REPAIR OF ROAD.—SUPERINTENDENCE OF ROAD AUTHORITY.—33 & 34 VICT. c. 78.—The plaintiffs, as the road authority under the Tramways Act 1870, claimed against the defendants the expenses of superintending their opening and breaking up of roads under sect. 26, for the maintenance and renewal of their tramway. Held, that so far as the defendants merely raised the sleepers and rails to the level of the road, or raised the stone packing of the road to the level of the surface of the rails, they were maintaining and keeping the road in good condition and repair, under sect. 28, and were not liable to the superintendence of the road authority under sect. 26: (St. Luke's Vestry v. North Metropolitan Tramways Company, Limited, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 329. Q. B. Div.)

THE 34TH SECTION OF "THE DIVIDED PARISHES AND POOR LAW AMENDMENT ACT, 1876."

(39 & 40 VICT. c. 61).

THE 34th section of "The Divided Parishes and Poor Law Amendment Act 1876" (39 & 40 Vict. c. 61), which enacts that "Where any person shall have resided for the term of three years in any parish in such manner and under such circumstances in each of such years as would, in accordance with the several statutes render him irremovable, he shall be deemed to be settled therein until he shall acquire a settlement in some other parish, by a like residence or otherwise," has given rise to much doubt as to its operation in certain cases. It will be remembered that by the 9 & 10 Vict. c. 61, s. 1, a status of irremovability was conferred upon a pauper who at the time of his chargeability had resided in the parish for five years next before the application for a warrant of removal; and also that by the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 55, s. 1, three years were substituted for five years, and that by the 28 & 29 Vict. c. 79, s. 8, the period of residence was reduced to one year. These provisions in no way affected the settlement of the pauper; they dealt alone with his removability, and those, therefore, who had to derive their settlement through him, would still have had to have sought out the original parish, irrespective of the status of irremovability which these enactments conferred.

The recent statute, however, has changed irremovability arising from residence (if for three years) into a settlement; and thus a pauper who, under the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 79, s. 1, would have been irremovable simply on the ground of a three years' residence, now becomes irremovable by virtue of a settlement gained by such residence; and thus all those who have a derivative settlement through him will have a similarly new settlement by virtue of such residence.

A question, however, has arisen as to whether or not a three years' residence confers an abiding settlement after the pauper has ceased to reside in the parish or union? And the case has been thus put: A., a pauper, has a birth settlement in a parish in the union of L.; he has subsequently continuously for three years resided in a parish in the union of M.; he afterwards leaves such union and resides for a period, short of a year, in a parish in the union of N., where he becomes chargeable. To which union is he removable? To the union of his birth settlement, or to that of his three years' residence? It is said on the one hand, that having removed from the union of his three years' residence he has lost his settlement, since by a break of residence he would, under the old law, have lost his status of irremovability, and that the new law was only intended to turn irremovability into settlement, and that if the one ceases, the other is extinguished. On the other hand, it is urged that such a construction would be to deprive the statute of its obvious effect, which is to give a permanent instead of a temporary right of irremovability in the parish of residence, and would greatly complicate inquiries with reference to a derivative settlement by rendering it necessary to prove whether or not the parent resided in the parish at the time of his death. Independently of which, the words of the section, "that when any person shall have resided for the term of three years in any parish in such manner and under such circumstances in each of such years as would, in accordance with the several statutes, render him irremovable, he shall be deemed to be settled therein until he shall acquire a settlement in some other parish by a like residence or otherwise," appear to point somewhat conclusively to the enduring nature of a settlement so acquired, and to its permanency until some other settlement has been acquired. We certainly acquiesce in the latter view. If the Legislature had intended that the settlement should endure so long alone as the residence continued, it would surely have used words clearly to have expressed that intention, and instead of the words "shall be deemed to be settled therein until he shall acquire a settlement in some other parish," the words would have been "so long as he shall continue to reside therein."

We take it then, that in the case we have put, the pauper A. would not be removable to the parish of his birth settlement in the union of L., but to the parish of his three years' residence in the union of M. No judicial decision has as yet been pronounced upon the question, but we are aware that much diversity of opinion exists amongst parish and union officers with reference to it. Henceforth this new settlement will be the most common of any, for it will rarely occur that any pauper advanced in age will be found who at some period of his life has not resided without a break of residence for three years continuously in the same union. The question must necessarily, therefore, soon present itself for judicial solution. We cannot conclude without adverting to the additional onerous duties which this new law of settlement will throw upon parish officers. Hitherto (from the repeal of most other settlements) that of birth is the settlement most commonly established. Now, however, parish officers will have to run over the whole course of a pauper's existence to ascertain whether during some three years of his life he has not resided without a break in some particular union. Much, therefore, as the object of this new settlement is to be commended, we foresee a vast amount of trouble and litigation is likely to spring out of it.

LICENSING LAWS.

MR. BROOKE SMITH, a Justice of the Peace for Gloucestershire, has published the following remarks on the discretion of licensing justices as to the grant, renewal, and transfer of beerhouse certificates:—

There can be no reasonable doubt that the destructive and crime creating habit, which is now so widely diffusing its baneful and demoralising influence over the country, is attributable in a very great degree to the facilities with which beer is supplied to the working classes by beerhouses, whether for consumption on or off the premises, the number of which has latterly increased to an unnecessary and unreasonable extent.

It has often been said that the magistrates ought to restrict the number of beerhouses, and refuse to create, renew, or transfer them in any case in which they are not required for the supply of the neighbourhood. But this charge is only made in ignorance of the law; the power of justices in those respects having been materially restricted by certain provisions of the Wine and Beerhouses Act 1869 and 1870.

By the original Beerhouse Act (1 Will. 4, c. 64, s. 2), licences for beer might be granted by the Excise at any time; such licences were confined to the particular person and house specified therein; they were to last for one year from the date and no longer, when (sect. 7) they might be renewed, by taking out a "fresh licence before the expiration of any former licence, and so from year to year."

There was no such thing as a transfer of such licence; because on every change of occupancy the old licence was cancelled and a new one issued by the Excise under that Act.

By 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 1, no licence for the sale of beer to be consumed on the premises was to be granted except upon a certificate of good character signed by six inhabitants and confirmed by an overseer, according to sect. 9. This was the origin of the present certificates.

The foregoing enactments were mere fiscal regulations; and, so far, the justices had nothing whatever to do with the grant, renewal, or transfer of beerhouse licences.

By the Beerhouse Act 1869 (sect. 4), no licence or renewal of a licence is to be granted (by the Excise) "except upon the production and in pursuance of the authority of a certificate granted under this Act; and any licence granted or renewed in contravention of this enactment shall be void."

By sect. 5 such certificates are to be granted by justices "at the general annual licensing meeting, held in pursuance of 9 Geo. 4, c. 61 (sect. 1), or at an adjournment thereof; and the substance of the certificate is stated in sect. 6, namely, it must specify the name and address of the party, the description of licence, and whether it be for consumption on or off the premises, and the situation of the house to be licensed."

By sect. 8, all the provisions of 9 Geo. 4, as to grants of licences at general annual licensing meetings, and as to appeal from any act of any justice, were made applicable to certificates under that Act. With the qualification that no application for a certificate to sell beer, &c., not to be consumed on the premises, should be refused, except upon one or more of the four following grounds, viz.:

First.—That the applicant has failed to produce satisfactory evidence of good character.

Secondly.—That the house or shop in respect of which a licence is sought, or any adjacent house or shop owned or occupied by the person applying for a licence, is of a disorderly character, or frequented by thieves, prostitutes, or persons of bad character.

Thirdly.—That the applicant has been previously adjudged disqualified.

Fourthly.—That the applicant, or the house in respect of which he applies, is not duly qualified as by law is required.

And by sect. 19 of that Act, and sect. 7 of the Act of 1870 (combined) it is provided that where, on 1st May 1869, an excise licence was in force, and has been renewed from time to time (whether held by the same person or not), with respect to any house for the sale of beer, &c., to be consumed on the premises, it shall not be lawful for the justices to refuse an application for a certificate except upon one or more of the four grounds specified in sect. 8, as above set forth.

It will be observed that as regards the Beerhouse Acts, "licences" and "certificates" are totally separate and distinct, the former applying to the excise only, and the latter to the justices only.

Prior to the very recent case of Reg. v. Birmingham JJ. (40 J. P. 132, 19th Feb. 1876), it was generally, if not universally, considered that the justices were "bound hand and foot" by the restrictions contained in the Acts of 1869 and 1870, as above mentioned; and they have acted accordingly. But the decision in the above case has loosened those bonds, and shown that even in cases that are strictly within the provisions of the last mentioned enactments justices are not bound to renew the certificate of a person who has been heavily fined for a breach of the licensing laws. It was contended by the licensee that the justices had no discretion, because the fact of his having been fined did not affect his character. But the Court of Queen's Bench held otherwise; and, on an application for leave to appeal from that decision, the Lord Chief Baron, in delivering the unanimous judgment of the Court of Appeal, said that under the circumstances the justices not only had the power to refuse the certificate, "but would have abandoned their duty if they had hesitated for a single moment to deprive the man (the appellant) of his licence." And the application for a mandamus was refused with costs.

That judgment is of the greatest importance. It is too long for insertion here; but the substance is as follows: Every licensee who applies for a renewal after having been convicted in anything more than a nominal penalty ought to be prepared with satisfactory evidence of good character; and in default thereof it is the duty of the justices to refuse the application.

Of course the above judgment only concluded the matter then before the court; but the principles on which it is founded seem to open out a wide field for the exercise of the large and, as will be shown hereafter, uncontrollable discretion which (in all other cases) is given to the licensing justices with regard to the grant, renewal, and transfer of beerhouse certificates.

It will probably be found in many cases of an application for a certificate that either the applicant has been fined in that or some other house, or has conducted that or some other house in a very bad and unsatisfactory manner, or that the applicant or the house is not duly qualified as by law is required.

It is for the justices, after having heard the application, and the evidence produced in support of or against it, to determine whether the good character and due qualification of the applicant and the house are established to their satisfaction.

If the justices refuse to hear the application or the evidence in support of it, they may be compelled to do so by mandamus. But it is apprehended that no court has any power to alter or review, or to compel the justices to alter or review, any question of fact, or any conclusions which the justices may have formed from the facts submitted to and considered by them, either under the Special Case Act (20 & 21 Vict. c. 43) or otherwise.

Every application to justices for a certificate (whether new, renewal, or transfer), is, in fact, an application for the grant of such certificate; and the only remedy that an applicant ever had against the refusal by justices to make such grant was by appeal to quarter sessions, under the provisions of sect. 27 of 9 Geo. 4 (1828). But it is apprehended that at the present time there is no such appeal. There is no reported judgment to that effect; and there are cases in which it has been assumed (without consideration) that such right of appeal existed; and there can be no doubt that it was created, at least with regard to new certificates and "renewals," by the incorporation of the provisions of 9 Geo. 4, in and by sect. 8 of 1869. The Act of 1870 was wholly and absolutely repealed by the Act of 1871; and it is so treated in the 18th edit. of Stone's Justices' Manual, by Kennett (1876), p. 266, in which the words "and as to appeal from any act of any justice," are omitted from sect. 8 of 1869, with a note stating "The appeal is taken away by 37 & 39 Vict. c. 49 (1874) s. 27. No doubt the wording of that enactment is open to some criticism, but the only meaning that can reasonably be given to it is that above stated.

The only enactment which gives such right of appeal (sect. 27 of 9 Geo. 4) applies to alehouse licences only.

By sect. 8 of the Act of 1869, that enactment was made to apply to beerhouse certificates, the effect being, according to R. v. Southport JJ. (37, J. P. 214), that the words of sect. 27 of the Act of 1828 were imported into the Act of 1869, as a new and independent enactment, which was not affected by the repeal of sect. 27 of 1828 in schedule 2 of the Act of 1872. Thus sect. 8 of 1869 was made to say (inter alia), "Any person who shall think himself aggrieved by any act of any justice done in or concerning the execution of this Act may appeal against such act to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace, &c." And it may be conceded that under that provision an appeal might have been made to quarter sessions against the refusal of justices not only to grant or renew, but also to transfer, a beerhouse certificate; because by the 9th section of that Act justices in petty sessions were authorised to transfer such certificates. But that 9th section was repealed by sect. 4 of the Act of 1870, and by that same section an entirely different and new arrangement was made for the transfer of beerhouse certificates (by justices in special sessions) by the incorporation of certain specific provisions of 1828 relating to the transfer of alehouse licences, which incorporation, of course, had a similar effect to the incorporation contained in 1869 as above stated. The Act of 1870 is not made one with that of 1869. Therefore transfers of certificates are made under 1870, and not under 1869, and the refusal to transfer a certificate is not an act of a justice done "in or concerning the execution of the Act of 1869," and consequently is not within the terms of the right of appeal as given by that Act. There is no other enactment which can possibly be held to state or imply that any such right of appeal as regards transfers of certificates did, or was intended or supposed to exist after the passing of the Act of 1870; on the contrary, sub-sect. 4 of sect. 4 of that Act declares that "it shall be in the discretion of the justices to whom an application for a transfer is made, either to allow or refuse the application, or to adjourn the consideration thereof;" and it is expressly subject to that provision, that the particular enactments in 1828 relating to transfers of alehouse licences are made applicable to beerhouse certificates.

Now, the justices to whom an application for a transfer of a certificate is made, would under the incorporated provisions of 1828, have had a full and absolute discretion in the matter, subject to appeal to quarter sessions, without the declaration contained in sub-sect. 4, as above stated; and, therefore, that sub-section was wholly useless and inoperative, except as expressing the intention of the Legislature, that the discretion thereby given was not liable to be controlled by quarter sessions or otherwise; and this is confirmed by sub-sect. 5 being made subject to sub-sect. 4, and by the discretion being expressly given to the justices to whom the application is made (which would necessarily be so), and to no others.

The result of the foregoing observations is that, from and after the Act of 1870 there never has been any right of appeal to quarter sessions against the refusal of justices to transfer a beerhouse certificate.

As to new certificates, sect. 27 of the Act of 1874 is express and conclusive, so that the only remaining question is as to renewals.

As before observed, any such appeal must depend entirely upon the incorporation or application of sect. 27 of 1828, in sect. 8 of 1869, and the repeal of that incorporation and application by sect. 27 of 1874, the obvious effect of which repeal was to strike the words "and as to appeal from any act of any justice" out of sect. 8 of 1869.

It is, however, said, and upon the authority of gentlemen "learned in the law," that as sect. 27 of the Act of 1828 was not wholly repealed by the Act of 1872, but with an exception reserving or saving the right of appeal as regards "renewals of licences" and "transfers of licences," the words of sect. 27 of the Act of 1874 must be taken as also reserving or saving the right of appeal as regards the renewal and transfer of certificates. But there does not seem to be the least foundation in law, grammar, or common sense, for this contention.

The Act of 1828, as before observed, applied to alehouses, and to nothing else; and, of course, the 27th section of that Act did the same. If that section, nay, if the whole Act, had been absolutely repealed by the Act of 1872, without any exception whatever, it would not have affected beerhouse certificates, because the grant, renewal and transfer of those certificates are not made under the Act of 1828, but under the Acts of 1869 and 1870 respectively: (R. v. Southport, JJ.).

But it is said sect. 27 of 1874 only repeals so much of sect. 8 of 1869 "as incorporates or applies any repealed enactment." It does not say "as much as incorporated or applied sect. 27 of 1828," as it might have done; and therefore, as before, it does not take away the right of appeal as regards renewals or transfers of certificates, which (as it is said) are included in the exception of renewals and transfers of licences, which again is altogether without any substantial foundation.

The Act of 1872 absolutely repeals the whole of sect. 27 of 1828 except as therein excepted. It is an unquestionable rule that no exception can apply to or include anything dehors the matter out of which the exception is made. Sect. 27 of 1828 applied to alehouses only—therefore the exception applied to alehouses only, and must be read as follows: "Except in so far as the three last-mentioned sections relate to the renewal of alehouse licences, or to the transfer of alehouse licences under sects. 4 and 14 of the same Act" (1828). The words of the exception clearly show that nothing else was intended! If those words had been confined to "renewals or transfers of licences," there might have been some exceedingly slight and rotten ground to contend that "licences" included "certificates;" but the particular reference to sects. 4 and 14 of the Act of 1828 shows that the exception was intended to apply to alehouses only, and had no relation whatever to beerhouse certificates.

Thus the repeal of sect. 27 of 1828 by the Act of 1872 was absolute and entire, except as regards something that had no reference to beerhouse certificates; and consequently quoad those certificates it was absolute and entire; and the effect of sect. 27 of 1874 was to make the incorporation and application of sect. 27 of 1828 in sect. 8 of 1869 as if it had never been.

But it is also said that sect. 27 of 1874 was only passed to meet the judgment in Reg. v. Southport, which applied only to new certificates, and that this is shown by the concluding words of the section, viz., there shall be no appeal as regards new certificates.

No doubt the draughtsman had the above case in his mind. But the principle on which it was founded applied equally to renewals as to new certificates; and there seems to be no reason why both should not have been intended to be included, as they certainly are, in the first portion of the clause! The draughtsman (or perhaps some legislator) thought "to make assurance doubly sure," and therefore added the latter part of the section, forgetting all about renewals. However this may be, it is considered that the latter part of the section may be rejected as surplusage, being clearly included in the former, which it does not confine or restrict.

The result is apprehended to be that the right of appeal as regards new certificates and renewals was taken away by sect. 27 of 1874, and that no such right as regards transfers of certificates existed after the Act of 1870.

Under these circumstances it is for the Licensing Justices, on every application for a certificate, to consider and determine whether the good character of the applicant, either as regards his conduct as a man or a licensee, and the due qualification of himself and the house, have been proved to the satisfaction of the justices; and if not, they ought to refuse the application. Suppose, for example, there is an applicant for a certificate (either new, renewal, or transfer) in respect of house A; and it is proved or known to the justices that in the preceding year he had been convicted of a breach of the Licensing Act in respect of house B; that fact alone is sufficient to justify the justices in refusing him a certificate for house A; and there are other circumstances which would have the same effect.

If the foregoing observations be well considered and noted upon, the probability is that a great number of the present beerhouses will be gradually closed—"a consummation devoutly to be wished." It may be that this will in some cases create a hardship on innocent owners or landlords, if such there be, but the number of those cases will be found to be infinitesimally small; and where they really exist the justices would be able to grant an exemption.

If the Legislature be really desirous to effect one of the objects mentioned in the preamble to the Act of 1872, namely, "the better prevention of drunkenness," the first thing they should do is to abolish the restrictions created by sects. 8 and 19 of 1869 and sect. 7 of 1870, and give the Licensing Justices full, unfettered, and unquestionable authority to refuse applications for beerhouse certificates in any and every case in which they may consider them to be unnecessary, uncalled for, or inexpedient; a provision (it is believed) that would have more effect in bringing about the above object than any other that has been suggested.

BATH CITY POLICE COURT.

Wednesday, Nov. 1.

Before Mr. VIGNE (in the chair), Admiral VON DONOP, and Messrs. HAMMOND and MILSOM.)

Offering for sale unwholesome meat—Public Health Act 1875.

JOSEPH ALEXANDER, butcher, of 3, Kingsmead-street, was summoned at the instance of the Urban Sanitary Authority for having, on the 19th Oct., in the registered slaughter-house of James Weeks, No. 4, two sides of beef, then belonging to him, which were there deposited for the purpose of sale, and were found unsound and unfit for the food of man.

Moger represented the authority.

J. H. Dyer appeared for the defendant.

Moger, in stating the case, said Mr. Montagu, the inspector of nuisances, on the day in question visited the slaughter-house of James Weeks, in Peter-street, and there found two sides of beef hanging. He examined them, and, in his opinion, they were unwholesome and unfit for food. Having received information as to whom the meat belonged, he sent for the defendant, who came to the premises, and after looking at the meat, said it was as sound as any bullock in Bath. The inspector then said that, notwithstanding the statement of the defendant, he should seize the meat and deal with it as the statute of the Act directed, as he considered it unfit for food. The medical officer of health (Dr. Brabazon) was sent for, but but was unable to attend at the time, and the meat was inspected at first by Mr. H. C. Hopkins, surgeon, who pronounced it to be unwholesome and unfit for food. During the time that elapsed before the attendance of Mr. Hopkins, the inspector wished to have the meat put on a truck to be removed to the municipal offices, so as to be dealt with according to the Act, when the defendant begged him not to meddle with it until it had been examined by the medical man, and still persisted that the meat was perfectly good, wholesome, and fit for food. After Mr. Hopkins had given his opinion, however, the defendant altered his statement, and admitted that the meat was unsound, and never ought to have been purchased by him. It was then put upon a truck and conveyed to the Municipal Offices, where it was again inspected by Mr. Hopkins and by Mr. Hammond, one of the city Justices, and ultimately ordered to be destroyed. It was taken to the gas works and burnt. In the course of conversation with the inspector, the defendant stated, in the presence of several witnesses, that he had purchased the animal from a dairyman of Colerne, of the name of Geo. Cook, and that he gave £3 15s. for it. It was very clear that an animal of full size purchased for that money, when the proper market price would be £20 or £25, must inevitably be diseased or not fit to be slaughtered for the food of man, and under the circumstances he should ask them to convict the defendant under the 117th section of the Public Health Act 1875. He (Mr. Moger) had not thought it right to fortify himself with any trade evidence, because the facts he should endeavour to prove could not be displaced if fifty witnesses of that character were called. If they stated otherwise it would only tend to show that all those fifty butchers ought to be brought before the justices and dealt with under that section of the Act, as the inspector of nuisances, who is a man of considerable experience in these matters, without any hesitation whatever condemned the meat, as also did Mr. Hopkins, and subsequently Dr. Brabazon, the medical officer of health, who had been an army surgeon, and had had great experience in examining meat for consumption by soldiers. Further, Mr. Hammond had expressed himself as fully convinced that the meat was unwholesome. In the face of such evidence as that he did not think any trade evidence could be of avail.

Moger was then about to call evidence, when

Dyer asked who laid the information?

Moger replied he did not think it necessary that should be produced.

Dyer said these proceedings appeared to be instituted by Mr. Montagu, and under the 259th section, he being an officer other than the clerk of the Authority, he must be authorised by resolution to proceed.

Mr. Payne said he thought Mr. Dyer was right.

Moger then put in the resolution of the Sanitary Committee, which was signed by Mr. J. Taylor, as chairman. It was read by Mr. Payne, and authorised the taking of the proceedings.

Dyer further said there appeared to be no evidence as to whether the committee were duly appointed. He did not certainly know how the matter might terminate, but at that time he did not understand the committee were ordered to prosecute. Was it a prosecution by the Authority as a body, or by the committee?

Moger said the 116th section gave the justices power to convict and fine the defendant. It was not absolutely necessary to go before the committee; it was a mere regulation on their part that before proceedings were taken a meeting should be held, and a resolution ordering the prosecution, or otherwise, passed. Mr. Montagu, as the inspector of nuisances, might have proceeded with the prosecution himself, without orders from the committee.

Dyer replied, that did not meet his argument. What he argued was that that was a prosecution by the Sanitary Authority, and under the 259th section of the Act, they were called upon, before proceedings were taken by any one but the clerk, to pass a resolution empowering some other person to do so, and that resolution must be proved.

Mr. Watts, from the Town Clerk's office, then produced the minute book of the proceedings of the council, which stated that the committee had the control of the whole of the sanitary matters connected with the city, and amongst those was enumerated that of unwholesome food.

Dyer said upon that resolution there was nothing whatever to justify this prosecution. The committee might have seized the meat, but they could not prosecute. There was no authority for Mr. Montagu to take these proceedings. He must be authorised either to take all prosecutions or to take that one in particular.

Moger said it appeared to him there was ample authority. It was quite right for him to take every objection he could, but no other evidence could possibly be produced. To stop the case upon such a technical point he thought was very objectionable.

Dyer then stated that if the case proceeded he should continue to make similar objections; he has a whole host of them behind.

Moger said, if such delays were occasioned they might have all Bath poisoned in the meanwhile.

Mr. Payne replied that such need not be the case, the committee could go on seizing meat that was unwholesome.

Moger said, as the question was one of such importance he should ask for a case. He could not possibly let it pass without having it set right.

After some further conversation the Chairman said it appeared to the Bench that there was no authority shown for the institution of the present proceedings, and the summons must be dismissed.

Under these circumstances the summons against Mr. Weeks was not proceeded with.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

WILL—LEGACIES—CHARGE ON REAL ESTATE—RESIDUE—TRUST FOR CONVERSION—MIXED FUND.—A testatrix directed her debts and legacies to be paid by her executors. She devised and bequeathed the residue of her real and personal estate to trustees, who were to sell and convert and hold the proceeds upon the trusts of the will. The trustees and executors were not the same persons. The personal estate was insufficient for the payment of debts and legacies. Held, that the legacies equally with the debts were charged on the real estate notwithstanding that they were directed to be paid by the executors who were different persons from the trustees: (Brooke v. Rooke, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 301. Chan. Div.)

SETTLEMENT.—By a settlement made in 1862 certain property, subject to a prior mortgage, was settled upon A. in fee, with a contingent charge in favour of B. upon his attaining twenty-one: Held, that A., during his life, and his estate after his death, was bound to keep down the interest on the mortgage, so that the property might remain a security intact for the benefit of B.: (Butcher v. Simmonds, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 304. Chan. Div.)

WILL—ANNUITY CHARGED ON THE CORPUS OF PERSONAL ESTATE—ARREARS OF—INTEREST.—An annuitant under a will of personal estate is not entitled to interest on the arrears of his annuity, whether the annuity be charged on corpus or income: (Wheatly v. Davies, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 306. Chan. Div.)

CHARITABLE BEQUEST—PURE OR IMPURE PERSONALTY—DEBENTURE OF WATERWORKS COMPANY.—Debenture of a waterworks company held to be pure personalty: (Holdswoth v. Davenport, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 319. V. C. M.)

ADJOINING LANDOWNERS—LIABILITY FOR SUPPORT.—Defendant contracted with a builder to rebuild his house, the latter agreeing to take upon himself the risk and responsibility of shoring and supporting, as far as might be necessary, the adjoining buildings affected by this alteration during the progress of the works, and to make good any damage which might be sustained by the said buildings during the progress or in consequence of the said works contracted for, and to satisfy any claims for compensation arising therefrom which might be substantiated. In consequence of the insufficiency of the contractor's shoring, the adjoining land of the plaintiff, which was supported by the defendant's land, became injured, and this action was brought to recover damages. Held, that the defendant was liable: (Jones v. Pratt, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 321. Q. B.)

BILL OF SALE—AFFIDAVIT FILED ON REGISTRATION—DESCRIPTION IN OF "EVERY ATTESTING WITNESS."—The goods of an execution debtor which were assigned by him to the plaintiff by a bill of sale, were left in the house of which the grantor was in the sole occupation, under an arrangement between him and the grantee that he should reside there and manage a business as servant of the grantee (the plaintiff), at a weekly salary, with the use and enjoyment of the said goods. The bill of sale was insufficiently registered, by reason of the omission in the affidavits of the description of one of the two attesting witnesses. The goods having been seized by the defendants under an execution issued against the grantor, it was held, making absolute a rule to enter the verdict for the defendants: first, that the bill of sale being attested by two witnesses, the registration of it was invalid by reason of the affidavit filed with the copy of the bill of sale containing the description of only one of such witnesses; and, secondly, that the goods were in the apparent possession of the grantor, the execution debtor, and that as the bill of sale was invalid by reason of its insufficient registration, the grantee (the plaintiff) could not claim the goods under it, as against the defendants, the execution creditors: (Pickard v. Marriage and another, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 343. Ex. Div.)

COMPANY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

SYNDICATE—PURCHASE AND RE-SALE TO COMPANY AT AN INCREASED PRICE BY PROMOTERS—FIDUCIARY RELATION—MISREPRESENTATION IN PROSPECTUS.—A company being in process of winding-up under the court, its property, which consisted of the lease of an island containing phosphate of lime, was, on the 30th Aug. 1871, bought in chambers by E., the trustee for a syndicate, for £55,000. The contract was confirmed by the judge on the 15th Sept. On the 20th Sept., the syndicate agreed to sell the same property to P., the trustee for the plaintiff company, for £110,000. The company was registered the same day, and the contract was adopted by the company at the first meeting of the directors on the 29th Sept. The company entered into possession on the 21st Oct. 1871. There were five directors, all of whom were appointed by or through the principal member of the syndicate. Two of the directors were not in England when the company was formed, and took no part in the purchase or adoption by the company of the contract. A third was E., the trustee for the syndicate; a fourth, M., received his qualification shares from the principal member of the syndicate; the fifth, D., only was competent to act independently in confirming the contract. The articles provided that three directors should be a quorum, and the three directors who confirmed the contract on the 29th Sept. were E., M., and D. The principal member of the syndicate had, as early as the 12th Sept., begun negotiations with two of the directors with a view to forming a company. Held, that the syndicate had purchased the property from the 30th Aug., and were then at liberty to sell at what price they pleased. That the company could not hold the syndicate to be trustees for them of the increase of the purchase-money on the re-sale to the company. That the syndicate were not promoters of or in a fiduciary relation towards the company. That the confirmation of the contract on the 29th Sept. by the quorum of three was valid, and that the company could not set aside the purchase on the ground that E., being trustee for the syndicate, and also a director of the company, was both vendor and purchaser. The prospectus, founded on the report of the liquidator of the old company, contained misstatements as to the workings on the island, which made the workings appear more valuable than they were, and it appeared from the prospectus as if the survey had been made for the purposes of the company, whereas it had been made several years before, and the island had been since worked. It appeared, however, that there was still more phosphate on the island than could be worked out during the lease. Held, that there was no case for setting aside the contract on the ground of misrepresentation in the prospectus: (New Sombro Phosphate Company v. Erlanger, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 309. V. C. M.)

COUNTY COURTS.

HALIFAX COUNTY COURT.

(Before Serjt. ATKINSON, Judge.)

LEE v. HOWARTH.

Interpleader—Bill of sale—Judgment creditor—Priority.

HIS HONOUR gave judgment in this interpleader issue, which has been raised to try the question whether Messrs. Lancaster and Wright—who had paid out the holder of a bill of sale, without having registered their interest—or the plaintiffs, in certain actions, who had obtained judgments in the County Court, were entitled to be first satisfied. He said: This is a case which raises a very important question, on which, so far as I know, there has been no express decision. The facts are briefly as follows: On the 24th April, 1875, Thomas Howarth granted to Godfrey Rhodes, to secure £200, a bill of sale of all his furniture and effects, &c., specified in the schedule annexed thereto. This bill of sale was duly registered on the 15th May 1875. On the 21st Aug. 1875, one Sydney Evershed entered up judgment against the said Thomas Howarth for the sum of £21 3s., and issued execution on the same day for that amount. On the 19th Nov. 1875, Alfred Lee, another creditor of Thomas Howarth, issued execution against the said Thomas Howarth, for the sum of £7 2s. 9d. On the 15th April 1876, Messrs. Lancaster and Wright paid to Godfrey Rhodes the sum of £207 9s., in satisfaction of his claim for principal, interest, and accounts, under his bill of sale. This it is alleged by Messrs. Lancaster and Wright was on an agreement by the grantee to transfer to them his securities, and that the said grantee should stand possessed of the same in trust for Messrs. Lancaster and Wright. Whether in fact such agreement was entered into or not the legal consequences of what had been done were the same. The goods specified in the schedule were seized by the officer (after payment off of Rhodes's debt), under both the executions. Messrs. Lancaster and Wright registered their security, on what day does not appear, but it was more than twenty-one days after the right accrued, by payment off of G. Rhodes's claim. The levy was made May 1st 1876. The question then arises whether, by neglecting to register the equitable interest they acquired by such payment within twenty-one days from its acquisition, as required by sect. 1 of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36, as to bills of sale, their right is postponed to that of the execution creditors. It is obvious their security is not within the terms of the statute, because by sect. 1 the security is to be registered within twenty-one days "after making or giving such bill of sale." In the present case no instrument of any kind was made or given, and the only right which Messrs. Lancaster and Wright acquired on the 15th April 1875, was the equitable right to call upon the mortgagee who had accepted payment of his debt to assign the security to them. The position of the parties on the 15th April 1876 was, I apprehend, this:—That Messrs. Lancaster and Wright were entitled to an assignment from the grantee, and that until such assignment were executed the grantee Rhodes, upon a principle well established in equity, was a trustee for them. That a trust may exist of this species of property is plain from the language of the statute, which in section one enacts that every bill of sale of personal chattels made either absolutely or conditionally or subject or not subject to any trusts shall be registered." The point to be determined on, on which the right of the assignee of the original grantee depends, is whether a person who has acquired the right to call for an assignment from the original grantee, is bound before such assignment is actually made to register. In my opinion he is not. The Act clearly contemplates trusts of bills of sale, but if the cestui que trust is bound forthwith to take an assignment that would of course substitute for the trust a legal interest and determine the trust. In my opinion it was not the intention of the Legislature to interfere with trusts of bills of sale, except so far as that class referred to in the second section, to which I will refer presently. The case of Edwards v. Edwards was cited, as showing that equitable securities are within the Act; but that case does not appear to me to govern this case. In Edwards v. Edwards the only instrument that had been executed was a deed which charged the chattels with the debt, and gave authority to the creditor in a certain event to require an assignment of the goods. At law, the ownership of the goods was in the debtor, and the court held that to give the creditor protection the instrument required registration. In the present case the legal ownership of the goods was not in the debtor, but in a stranger, and it makes no difference in my opinion, that such trustee was a stranger. Any other construction would be inconsistent with the provisions of the second section only to all trusts —prevent the subsistence of any trust for a longer period than twenty-one days, inasmuch as on such a construction the title of the cestui que trust must appear on the register. It is true that the second section of the Act would appear to require the title of the cestui que trust to be registered, enabling as it does that if a bill of sale be made subject to any declaration of trust not contained in the body of the instrument, such declaration of trust shall be written on the same paper or parchment before filing, under penalty of being void; but in the case of Robinson v. Collingwood (34 L. J. 18, C. P.), it has been held that this section applies to declarations of trust between the vendor and vendee, and not between the vendee and a stranger. That case in several respects resembles these, as here there was no express trust declared, but there was a set of circumstances on which a court of equity would have held that the grantee or vendee was a trustee for a third person. On these grounds I am of opinion that the executions issued against the goods were invalid as against the better title of Messrs. Lancaster and Wright. There must therefore be a verdict for the claimant; but as point was a novel one, I shall not grant any costs.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

CROYDON COUNTY COURT.

Monday, Oct. 23.

(Before H. J. STONOR, Esq., Judge.)

Re ELLIOTT.

Motion for removal of proceedings, on the ground that petitioning creditor was a client of Registrar refused—B. A. 1869, s. 80.

AT the sitting of the Croydon County Court, Mr. H. Parry, solicitor, said he had to submit to his honour a memorial, signed by eight solicitors practising in that court, in opposition to a motion praying that a bankruptcy case which would come before his Honour in the course of the day should be removed to the London Court, on the ground that the petitioning creditor (Mr. Chasemore) was a client of the learned Registrar.

HIS HONOUR said he should be happy to consider the memorial at the proper time, but he thought the present was not the proper time, inasmuch as the proceedings forming the subject matter of the memorial were coming before him for judicial decision.

After luncheon, when the case Re Elliott was called on, Heathfield made the application, supported by the affidavit of Messrs. Berry and Pestcott, two small creditors for about £10 each, that the proceedings in the case should be removed to the London Bankruptcy Court, on the ground that the petitioning creditor, Mr. Chasemore, a creditor for £800, was a client of the learned Registrar of the court. Heathfield said he made the application without casting the slightest imputation upon Mr. W. H. Rowland, the learned Registrar.

HIS HONOUR intimated that he had no power to make the order prayed for, but only to make a declaration that it would be advisable to transfer the proceedings, as to which the creditors could afterwards exercise their own discretion under the 80th section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869. He would, however, allow Mr. Heathfield to amend the motion and hear him upon it.

Heathfield then addressed the court, and at the conclusion of his argument,

HIS HONOUR, without calling upon Mr. Cooper Willis, who appeared as counsel for the petitioning creditor (instructed by Mr. Streeter), refused the motion, and observed that for the purpose of conferring the benefit of immediate local justice on the parties concerned, the Legislature had empowered the judges of County Courts having jurisdiction in bankruptcy to delegate their powers to the registrars of their courts. Those gentlemen were generally the most eminent solicitors in the locality, and consequently numbered among their clients the principal commercial men and tradesmen resident there or in the neighbourhood. If the judges delegated their powers to the registrars unreservedly, so that parties must abide by their decision unless they appealed to the Chief Judge and Lords Justices, it would be a serious question whether, in those cases in which the petitioning creditor or any other person interested was a private client of the registrar, the proceedings ought not to be removed to the London court, although such removal from distant places, as, for instance, Newcastle or Liverpool, would necessarily be attended with expense, inconvenience, and delay. In the courts, however, over which his Honour presided he had never delegated his powers to the registrars unreservedly, for he had always made this reservation, that all cases of difficulty and importance, and in all cases in which the parties desired it, should be heard before him, and consequently he seldom attended a court without hearing numerous applications in bankruptcy. He was sure, however, that it would have been quite unnecessary for him to make this reservation as regards cases like the present, in every registrar would spontaneously desire him to hear all litigated matters in which his clients were interested. The principle of English law and common justice, that a man is not to be a judge in his own case, or in those cases in which he is interested for others, through being nearly related or professionally concerned, was so plain that the registrars would invariably, even without any application, reserve such matters for his Honour's decision. There appeared, therefore, to be no ground for this motion, and it was accordingly dismissed; the costs of the petitioning creditors be paid out of the first assets received.

LIVERPOOL COUNTY COURT.

Oct. 20 and 28.

(Before T. PERRONET THOMPSON, Esq., Judge.)

Re E. BEYER AND Co.

Partners—Payment of composition.

IN this case a somewhat important question arose as to the validity of resolutions in bankruptcy, in which two partners were to pay unequal shares of a composition, so that if one partner failed to pay his composition, the original sum of 20s. in the pound would not be received by the creditors, nor would the other partner be liable for the full amount agreed on. The following were the facts:—

The firm, consisting of Ernest Beyer and Joh. Tischbien, traded as merchants at New York, New Orleans, Savannah, Mobile, Galveston, and Liverpool. They failed some few months ago, and presented a petition for liquidation of their affairs by arrangement or composition. At the first meeting of creditors a statement of accounts was produced, which showed unsecured debts £21,94, debts partly secured £4103, less value of security £3803, and other liabilities £959. The assets consist of debts outstanding £27, furniture and other property £115, less rent £61, leaving net assets £273. Debts amounting to £19,460 were proved, and a resolution passed to accept the debtors' offer of 20s. in the pound, payable in four annual instalments, the debtor Beyer to pay three-fourths and Tischbien the balance, the same to be secured by the promissory notes of the debtors, which were to be taken in discharge of the joint liabilities. This resolution, on being submitted for registration, was refused by the registrar on the ground that the resolution to accept 20s. in the pound was varied and rendered nugatory by the second resolution, by which the debtors are only liable for unequal portions of the 20s. From this decision of the learned registrar the debtors appealed, Roscoe, barrister, instructed by Messrs. Hatton and Co., appearing on their behalf.

Roscoe contended that as the resolution dealt equally with all the creditors it was perfectly valid, so long as it was assented to by the statutory majority of the creditors.

The Registrar pointed out that although the debtors jointly offer 20s. in the pound, they provide by the subsequent resolution for their release on payment of less sums—viz., one 15s. and the other 5s. in the pound. The two resolutions were inconsistent.

Roscoe remarked that that was a question purely for the creditors, and if they chose to assent to resolutions which dealt with them all alike, he did not think it was the province of the court to interpose, especially as there was not a dissatisfied creditor present. Moreover, there was really nothing inconsistent, as the second resolution merely pointed out the proportion in which the full sum of 20s. was to be paid by the joint debtors.

HIS HONOUR, after reserving judgment, said the resolutions were certainly peculiar, and had very properly been referred to the court by the registrar; but as there was nothing on the face of them that implied fraud, and as there was no creditor objecting, he should direct registration.

(Before J. F. COLLIER, Esq., Judge.)

Re THOMPSON.

Bankruptcy Act 1869—Practice—Composition—Arrangement—How is a creditor whose proof is disputed by a trustee to proceed to assert his rights?

Held, that rule 313 is not applicable, but he can proceed by motion under rule 50.

Also held, that an accommodation acceptance of debtor, which passes into the hands of an innocent holder for valuable consideration after the date of debtor's petition, entitles holder to rank as a creditor.

THIS was a motion for an order of the court to reverse the decision of the trustee, whereby he refused to admit the proof of debt of Messrs. Adams and Co., of London, for £1612, and also for an order upon such trustee to pay them the composition due on the sum claimed. The debtor was a provision merchant in Liverpool, who failed in April last, and effected an arrangement with his creditors under the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, the terms of the arrangement being the payment to the creditors of a composition of 5s. in the pound, by certain instalments extending over twelve months, with Mr. Harrison to act as trustee in the matter.

Kennedy (instructed by Duncan and Co.) appeared for the claimants, and Etty for the trustee.

A long discussion of interest to the Profession took place at the outset as to the proper course of procedure. It appears by rule 313 that wherever a trustee rejects a proof or claim, he shall give notice thereof to the claimant, and unless the latter within fourteen days thereafter applies to the court to admit his claim, the trustee can exclude him from all dividends. In the present case the claimants had not adopted this course, but after the fourteen days had elapsed they had proceeded under the 50th rule by way of motion, supported by affidavit. Etty submitted that the motion came too late, as the fourteen days prescribed by the 313th rule had long since expired. He contended that where the rules pointed out a certain mode of procedure it ought to be followed, otherwise they would become nugatory. Further, he added that if the decision of a trustee could be disturbed at any time, there would be no security for a person occupying that position, as he might be liable years afterwards to meet the demands of creditors whose existence had never been disclosed.

Kennedy, in reply, argued that the rule in question applied only to the liquidation or bankruptcy where the trustee, being vested with the estate, was, by the 25th section, constituted a court of the first instance to receive and decide upon all claims against the estate, and a limited time was allowed to appeal from his decision. Under a composition arrangement, the trustee was appointed, by rule 279, for the purpose solely of receipt and distribution of the composition, and he was not answerable for the claims of any creditors except those for whom the debtor had deposited with him funds to pay the composition. If there were creditors for whom the debtor had neglected to provide his trustee with funds, their course was to sue the debtor for the whole claim, or apply to the court summarily. In the present case he understood the trustee had been provided with funds to meet this particular claim, and the simple question was whether the court had jurisdiction to compel him to pay the creditors, and as a preliminary thereto to try the validity of the claim, or must they resort to their remedy at law? As to the question of time the trustee could not be damned by the motion being made after the fourteen days had elapsed, as he had full knowledge of the claim. The 126th section enacted that the terms of a composition might be enforced at any time, and upon a summary application; but here the trustee had the full advantage of a formal notice of motion, with copies of the affidavits upon which it was founded.

His Honour said he did not think the 313th rule applied to composition arrangements. There appeared to be no rule which prescribed the course of procedure in a case like the present; and sect. 126, which had been referred to, seemed to apply to the enforcement of payment of a composition after the proof of debt had been admitted. Here the claim was disputed, and both the Act and rules were silent as to the procedure necessary for the claimant to establish his rights. However, as he had no doubt as to the jurisdiction of the court in such a case, he should not—especially as no injury had been caused by the delay—allow a technical objection to the mode of procedure to interfere with the disposal of the question on its merits, and the objection to the motion must therefore be overruled.

Etty said under these circumstances he should go to the Court of Appeal, and he desired that the motion might stand over until its opinion upon his objection had been taken.

His Honour declined to grant an adjournment, and requested that the case might be proceeded with.

Kennedy then entered upon the merits, and the circumstances disclosed were shortly these: The debtor and Messrs. Adams, of Cork, were in the habit of drawing bills upon each other for mutual accommodation, and some time prior to the debtor's failure Messrs. Adams held a number of his blank acceptances, amongst others the two bills now in question, which were filled up for £225 and £268. These bills they endorsed over to the firm of Strang and Co., and the latter, without endorsement, passed them a few days after the debtor's failure for a valuable consideration to Messrs. Adams and Co., of London, a firm unconnected with Messrs. Adams, of Cork, the drawers of the bills. These bills were mentioned in the debtor's statement of accounts as being in the hands of persons unknown, and since the composition was agreed to the debtor has deposited with the trustee funds to meet the composition on these bills as well as the other claims. The trustee, however, on being informed that the debtor had received no consideration for the bills in question, declined to allow them to rank as liabilities of the estate, and consequently refused to pay the composition. Upon this state of facts, which was adduced in evidence, the learned judge, after lengthy arguments by the respective advocates, ruled that the holders of the bills, Messrs. Adams and Co., of London, having given valuable consideration for them, although it might have been after the debtor had presented his petition, were bona fide creditors and entitled to rank for composition, and he accordingly reversed the decision of the trustee and directed payment to them of the composition.

Re ROWAN AND CROFT.

Liquidation by arrangement—Practice on rejection by trustee of proof of debt.

Quære, ought not all the evidence requisite for the disposal of the proof to be adduced before the trustee, and the court confined, on an appeal from his decision, to such evidence?

THIS was a motion to reverse or vary the decision of Mr. Chalmers, the trustee of the property of the debtors, shipwrights in Liverpool, whereby he rejected the claim of Mr. Rowan, of Ayr, to rank on the joint estate for £6000.

Rodway represented the claimant, and H. L. Gregory the trustee.

T. Martin and Sampson appearing for other parties concerned.

At the outset Gregory objected to the motion proceeding, on the ground of there being no affidavit filed in support thereof, as required by rule 50.

Rodway, in reply, contended that rule 50 was limited to motions to the court in the exercise of its primary jurisdiction; but the present motion was an appeal from the trustee, who had already exercised primary jurisdiction. By the present act the trustee was constituted a court of the first instance with respect to the admission or rejection of proofs of debt, and for such purpose had power to administer oaths. His duty, if not satisfied with the affidavit of debt, was to call upon the claimant to adduce further evidence, and to decide thereon as to his rights. If aggrieved, the claimant could appeal to the court; and although he might do so for sake of convenience by way of motion, there was no necessity to observe the same formality of filing affidavits of the facts as would be required if the court were applied to primarily. Here the whole evidence ought to have been before the trustee, and if upon that evidence he rejected the claim there was an appeal to the court, but only on the evidence adduced before the trustee which should be on the file of proceedings. In an appeal from that court to the Chief Judge no new evidence was allowed unless there was something material to the issue elicited subsequently to the hearing in the court below. There was no such evidence here, and he submitted that the same rule ought to prevail on the present appeal as in other appeals, and he was prepared to rest his case upon the evidence the trustee had taken before he rejected the proof.

His Honour said that although the court had ruled that affidavits showing the grounds for a motion must be filed prior to the hearing, his impression was, in the present case, that it was not necessary, and, without absolutely deciding the precise practice to be observed in all cases, he, in the exercise of his discretion, should allow the motion to proceed without affidavits.

A discussion thereupon took place with respect to the course of procedure, and ultimately it was resolved to examine the trustee as to his grounds for rejecting the proof of debt against the joint estate. It appeared that one of the debtors, Mr. Rowan, carried on business in Liverpool for several years, and up to 1873, as a shipwright, under the firm of Stood, Rowan, and Co. At that time the debtor was indebted to his brother in the sum of £5000, and to other creditors in various amounts. He then took into partnership his foreman, Croft, upon the understanding, as he (Rowan) alleged, that the new firm should take over the assets and pay the debts of the old firm. This was denied by Croft, but it appeared on examination, as a matter of fact, that no capital had been introduced into the concern by the incoming partner, and that the whole of the assets had been taken over by the new firm, and all the debts paid by it except the amount due to the present claimant. The new firm suspended payment at the beginning of the present year, and there had been many transactions between the parties since; and the question now raised for the decision of the court was whether there had been such an adoption of the debt by the new firm as to entitle the claimant to rank on the joint estate.

The evidence of the debtors and claimant as to the facts of the case occupied the court the whole day; and afterwards judgment was reserved.

His Honour now, in a lengthy judgment, after entering minutely into all the circumstances disclosed, ruled that the evidence was insufficient to entitle the claimant to rank on the joint estate and therefore the decision of the trustee would be affirmed with costs.

Re DOBELL.

Practice—Motion under rule 50.

Held, that copies of all the evidence taken in the course of the liquidation bearing upon the motion must be served on the party sought to be affected.

THIS was a motion for an order of the court to declare that a transfer by the bankrupt to Mr. Henry Ashworth, of Lea Bank, Manchester, of certain articles of silver plate, clocks, and ornaments, was a fraudulent preference, and void as against the trustee. The merits of the case were not discussed, as a preliminary objection was taken to the course of procedure. It appeared that the evidence upon which the motion was founded was embodied in certain lengthy examinations of the persons sought to be affected, and other witnesses, and that no copy thereof had been served.

James, who appeared for the respondent, submitted that his client ought to have had copies of the evidence upon which the motion had been founded, otherwise he was at a disadvantage in answering the case. Further, he reminded the court that it had already in other cases ruled that such a requirement was necessary.

Mulholland, instructed by Goffey, for Mr. Rogers the trustee, said he was unaware of any such rule, and he desired to point out its inapplicability to the present case. Here the evidence proposed to be used had been taken in the presence of the solicitor of the person sought to be affected, and he was fully cognisant of all the facts, and had a right to have all the witnesses present on the motion for cross-examination if he thought fit. All that the 50th rule required was an affidavit in support of the motion, and an intimation of the evidence intended to be adduced. Had there been no previous examination of the witnesses they could have been examined on the motion, and he failed to see any disadvantage to the respondent in now reading their evidence, leaving him to cross-examine them if he thought it necessary.

His Honour said that both he and his colleague had already considered the question in another case, and had come to the conclusion that the respondent to a motion should be served with copies of all the evidence intended to be used against him.

Mulholland remarked that all examinations in bankruptcy were assumed to be examinations by the court, although conducted through the trustee, and if such examinations disclosed a liability on the part of any one to account to an estate it was somewhat novel that such information should be communicated to the person liable. In fact, it was one of the oldest doctrines in bankruptcy not to allow a person examined in bankruptcy to have copies of his own evidence, much less that of other persons, and the reason was apparent, namely, that he should not be enabled to shape his answer to the case with the assistance of evidence taken for the information of the court.

His Honour said the court had already decided as to the practice to be observed, and the only question was whether the motion should be dismissed for informality, or adjourned in order to comply with the requirements of the court; and as he was unwilling to create unnecessary expense, he would allow an adjournment.

The case was accordingly adjourned to the 3rd Nov.

LEGAL NEWS.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.—The Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer Divisions will sit at the Guildhall for the trial of actions on Monday, Dec. 4.

MR. JAMES BUCHANAN, solicitor, proprietor of the Gloucester Standard, has been elected in the South Ward as a member of the Gloucester Town Council.

SOLICITORS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.—The usual monthly meeting of the board of directors of this association was held at the Law Institution, London, on Wednesday, 8th Nov. A sum of £243 was distributed in grants of relief, thirty-five new members were admitted to the association, and other general business was transacted.

WILLS.—The annual returns showing the business done in the Law Courts of England, the jurisdiction of which is transferred by the Judicature Acts to the High Court of Justice, will in future be for the law year, and will end with the close of October. The returns for 1875 comprise, therefore, only the first ten months of that year. In that period the Probate Court granted 40,394 probates of wills or letters of administration. The personal property which thus passed into new hands was sworn under £112,501,230. The amount shows an average of £2787 for each case. The average was £2776 in 1874, and £2891 in 1873.

THE LAW RELATING TO SMUGGLING.—At the Cardiff police court, a seaman was summoned for smuggling a box of cigars; but from the evidence it appeared that he was merely carrying it for the chief engineer, who was accompanying him, and to whom the cigars belonged. The Customs officer, in reply to Mr. R. C. Jones, the stipendiary, said they could not proceed against the engineer; they proceeded against the person "carrying" or "conveying." The stipendiary thought this could not be the meaning of the Act. A railway porter might be apprehended in this way for carrying smuggled property. The thing was entirely absurd, and he dismissed the case.

COURTS OF FINAL APPEAL.—The annual official returns show that in the year 1875 the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council sat on 148 days, and heard and determined eighty-nine appeals; and the House of Lords heard forty-seven causes in the year. The total is 136 for the two tribunals. The appeals heard by the Judicial Committee comprised seventy-three from India and the colonies, one from a Channel Island, fourteen from Admiralty Courts, and one from an Ecclesiastical Court. The appeals heard by the House of Lords comprised nineteen from the English and Irish Courts of Chancery, sixteen from the Court of Session, eleven from the Exchequer Chamber of England or of Ireland, and one from the Court of Probate. The returns describe thirteen "effective causes" as remaining for hearing in the House of Lords, and no less than 100 appeals "lodged since April 1870," remaining on the 1st January, 1876, for hearing before the Judicial Committee, almost all from India or the Colonies.

THE IRISH COURTS.—A Dublin correspondent telegraphed: "Michaelmas Term opened to day with the customary formalities, but under somewhat depressing circumstances, the courts being shorn of some of their chief attractions. The Lord Chancellor was ill and unable to sit, and the court was opened by the Master of the Rolls and the Vice-Chancellor. The Lord Chief Justice was missed from his usual seat in the Queen's Bench, having been obliged to relinquish his judicial post for a time in order to recruit his shattered health; and the Court of Common Pleas had also an empty chair, as the fourth judgeship is still unfilled. There was less animation and bustle in the hall than might have been expected after the Long Vacation, and even the ladies in bright costumes—who usually flit about from court to court and relieve their somber character—were not present in much force. Last, and worst of all, the list of business for the term, so far as it is yet made out, does not hold out a prospect of heavy briefs and well-contested actions, in which the champions of the Bar may display their prowess."

NORFOLK AND NORWICH LAW LIBRARY.—The fourth annual meeting of the above society was held at the library on Saturday the 28th ultimo. Present: R. T. Gurdon, Esq. (president), and Messrs. E. S. Bignold, T. C. Blofeld, R. E. Burroughes, Carlos Cooper, Edward Field, Fred Fox, E. C. Francis, G. B. Kennett, B. T. Sharpe, and S. Cosens-Hardy. It appeared from the report of the secretary that during the past year there had been an increase in the number of members and subscribers, and the balance-sheet submitted to the meeting showed a balance in hand of £33 18s. 6d. (excluding a donation of £10 from E. E. Kay, Esq., Q.C.), applicable to the purchase of new books. The following officers were appointed for the ensuing year: President: E. E. Kay, Q.C.; vice-presidents: Carlos Cooper, Esq., and Edward Field, Esq.; Committee: Mr. W. T. Bently, LL.D., Mr. T. C. Blofeld, Mr. E. S. Copeman, Mr. Fred Fox, Mr. E. C. Francis, Mr. F. T. Keith, Mr. G. B. Kennett, Mr. A. Preston, Mr. Simms Reeve, Mr. E. P. Simpson, Mr. B. T. Sharpe, Mr. C. W. Willett. Hon. treasurer: Mr. R. E. Burroughes; hon. secretary, Mr. S. Cosens-Hardy, LL.B.; hon. auditor, Mr. G. B. Kennett; librarian, Mr. F. Becty. After some discussion it was decided to authorise the committee to consider any question of general interest to the Profession, and for that purpose to communicate with the Incorporated Law Society or any other law society in the United Kingdom, and to call a general meeting of this society. The meeting concluded with a vote of thanks to the president.

THE MAYOR AND THE RECORDER OF OXFORD.—Some time ago Mr. J. Saunders, the mayor of Oxford, postponed the Quarter Sessions in the absence of Mr. W. H. Cooke, the recorder, and the latter gentleman was reported to have declared the act as one of usurpation on the part of the mayor, and to threaten to commit his worship. At the Quarter Sessions at Oxford Dr. Adams, Q.C., the Recorder of Birmingham, who presided for Mr. Cooke, made an apology for that gentleman in the following terms:—"I am happy to be enabled to say that the differences that have arisen between the mayor and the recorder have been satisfactorily arranged by mutual explanations. The recorder has authorised me to express to the mayor of this city that owing to a misunderstanding on his (the recorder's) part, as to the position of the mayor of this city in this court, he made use of some expressions, and particularly of the word 'servant,' which were inconsistent with the dignity of the office of mayor. He now, through me, withdraws all observations which refer thereto, and expresses his regret that he should have used them. With regard to the observations on the magistrates, he also states that he had no intention of alluding to them as being 'servants' of this court, or in any objectionable manner, and if he has been represented as having used such terms towards them, his words must have been misunderstood. He, moreover, assures me that he had no intention of lowering the dignity of either the mayor or magistrates, and he regrets that he should have been reported as having done so. The recorder informed me that it had been reported to him that the mayor had said that his conduct on the occasion of his not being present here when the sessions were adjourned by the mayor was an intentional insult to the citizens, and on my mentioning this to the mayor, he assured me that he had made use of no such expression, and if it had been reported that he had done so his words must have been misrepresented, and that he had no intention of making such a charge against the recorder."

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editors do not hold themselves responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.

TEN YEARS' MEN.—Allow me space for a few remarks on this subject, in opposition to the gentlemen who have taken upon themselves the task of "purifying the Profession," and have felt it their duty to cast aspersions upon those gentlemen of the Profession who not only were duly articulated, but also served that which may be considered a previous apprenticeship of at least ten years. One might imagine, from the tone of those gentlemen, that the longer a young man was engaged at the law the more untrustworthy he became, instead of, as the fact is, I am happy to say, quite the reverse. It is notorious that in the case of the clerks in question, many of them have served prior to their articling not only ten, but twenty and thirty years in the law, and were, previous to their being articulated, holding responsible positions, and managing the whole of the business of the office for their principals. Your correspondent "W." asks if any like privilege to the one in question is extended to persons engaged in the Church, the army, or medical professions? In reply I should like to point out that the cases are scarcely analogous, but a man enlists into the army on receipt of a shilling, and, if I mistake not, may rise by his ability step by step to the highest rank. In the church and medical professions, if a man is capable of and does perform the most important duties of those professions, he participates in the benefits appertaining thereto. The examinations necessary to be passed in those professions are in professional subjects, whereas the examination in question is in addition to the two professional examinations, and does not pertain to the profession. I sometimes think the objections raised against the privilege accorded to the ten years' clerks arises from a selfish professional jealousy, and I am reminded of the words of Mr. Bright, when he said, "There is no plummet-line which will measure the depth of the selfishness of a class of men banded together for their own interest;" but perhaps I am mistaken, and it may arise from discontent amongst some of those unemployed professional gentlemen who, as "W." puts it, entered the Profession as "inexperienced youths leaving school." I contend that it would be an injury to the Profession to debar the ten years' clerks from entering it because the Profession would lose the men best able and fitted by long experience to carry on its arduous duties, and of this I am sure, that in a given number of gentlemen of the Profession, taken on the one side from the "inexperienced youths," and on the other from the clerks of ten years' experience and upwards, the latter would hold their own for ability, integrity, and all other professional good qualities. Z.

BILLS OF SALE ACT AND BANKRUPTCY ACT.—As the bearing of the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36, relating to registration of bills of sale on sect. 15, sub-s. 3, the reputed ownership section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, appears to be still rather unsettled. The following remarks may serve to elicit the opinions on that subject of your more learned readers. The object of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 36, was to prevent a false appearance of credit in a person by the visible possession of property to which he was not beneficially entitled. This object effected, or intended to be effected, by registration. The reputed ownership section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, applies to traders only, but its aim is similar so far as regards the law of bankruptcy. The Bills of Sale Act specially provides that unregistered bills of sale shall be void against assignees in bankruptcy or under assignments for the benefit of creditors in certain cases. The Bills of Sale Act, therefore, by obliging registration in the last-mentioned cases, prevents a false appearance of credit, which it is also the object of the reputed ownership section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869 to remove. Why, then, should the provisions of the reputed ownership section be considered as unaffected by the registration specially provided by the Bills of Sale Act for cases of bankruptcy, &c.? If they are unaffected by such provision, then, so far as the bankruptcy laws are concerned, the provisions for registration in the Bills of Sale Act cannot effect any beneficial object, and are, therefore, utterly useless, and only to work injustice. It is said the Bills of Sale Act is, so far as regards the reputed ownership section, a disabling statute; but why then provisions be inserted in an Act which have been observed merely to satisfy the Act containing such provisions?

TEN YEARS' CLERKS AND PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION.—I quite agree with all that has been said by "E. L. W." in your last issue. I was some years in a solicitor's office before being articulated, and have no doubt that if I had waited long enough I could have got exempted from the Preliminary, and having forgotten all my "school lessons," I did not feel very anxious to commence afresh, although I was well aware that to acquire the necessary amount of scholarship to pass the examination "would be nothing short of a bore." I am happy to say that I succeeded in passing it the first time without any "coach" or assistance whatever, and the knowledge I gained thereby has since been of very great assistance. In "E. L. W.," I think the exemption should be abolished, more especially as regards those who have entered with the full knowledge of the Preliminary having to be passed. E.

SERVING LEGAL NOTICES.—Referring to your issue of the 28th Oct., page 428, we think your editorial note involves a charge against numerous solicitors who would not be guilty of sharp practice on any account. For our own part we should certainly be surprised if our clients were served personally with such notices by solicitors who knew we were concerned, and we invariably send such notices to solicitors and ask for their charge. From one point of view it is true that the serving solicitor would have got 6s. 8d. for the service upon the client; but we have yet to learn that such is a valid reason for departing from what we conceive is a courteous way of transacting conveyancing business. Respectable solicitors, too, will always get a defendant's solicitor to accept service of process (if possible) instead of affecting personal service. We consider the practice (which appears to be growing up) of eminent London solicitors inserting on sales in the country a condition that the purchasers can have their conveyances prepared for sums named in the conditions, is very much "sharper" being in practice, whatever it is in intention, an interference between their country solicitors and the clients.

H. E. & B. MASON.

[You seem to agree with us except that we consider that the demand for 6s. 8d. was an improper one under the circumstances. As to conditions of sale, framed to entice purchasers to the office of the vendor's solicitor, we always have objected to such a dangerous practice.—ED.]

ATTESTATION CLAUSE TO WILLS.—"J. W. N." objects to my clause ("signed by the testator in the presence of both of us, and by both of us in his presence") on the ground that it does not authenticate one of the requirements of the Act, viz., signature by the testator in the joint presence of both witnesses. It will be interesting to us, and, I doubt not, to others of your readers, if "J. W. N." will kindly explain the process by which he conceives a testator can validly sign his will in the presence of "both" of two witnesses, and yet each of those witnesses might be present at a different time. In view of the possibility of some delay in furnishing the desired solutions, I may be allowed to state that the clause in question is accepted as valid and sufficient by the Probate Court authorities, and that no affidavit is required. F. C.

—The following forms satisfy all statutory conditions, and are even shorter than the clause which pleased your correspondent, "J. W. N.," but was found wanting: "Signed by the testator in our simultaneous presence, and by us (as wit-in his presence." "We, simultaneously at testator's signing, sign in his presence as witnesses." L.

Many of the readers of this paper will be glad to read "J. W. N.'s" letter on this subject, but I submit the following would be complete: "Signed by the said testatrix in the presence of both of us, and by both of us, in the presence, all being present at the same time." H. E.

With reference to the letter of "J. W. N." in last issue, and to Query No. 190, I would say that both the Attestation Clauses quoted by correspondents would be accepted by the Probate Division as containing sufficient evidence of a good execution, without an affidavit being called for from the witnesses. The words, "in the presence of us," are held to imply the joint presence of witnesses; and the words, "signed by," imply one signature of the testator appears, sufficient evidence of that one signing being so made, as is stated, "in the presence of us," in the presence, that is, of the witnesses together. I think that there is "C. W. Beaver's" objection (No. 190); at the same time, an attestation clause that quoted by him would be accepted at law without further evidence being required. I would venture to suggest that the form might be adopted with advantage in general, as being all-sufficient, in the cumbersome forms which usually obtain, the transcription of which the material is frequently omitted: "Signed by the testator (rix) in the presence of us, and on signed by us in his (her) presence." P. C.

Under this heading in your correspondence in to-day's issue there is a paragraph the initials "J. W. N." May I ask if the Court authorities did require an affidavit to the attestation clause to the will to? I venture to think an affidavit would be considered necessary, as, to my knowledge, owing attestation clause has been accepted for many years without an affidavit. "Signed by the testator in our presence, and witnessed and subscribed by us in the presence." This clause is, I submit, in accordance with the requirements of the 9th section of the Act, and neater, as it is certainly more than the one quoted in the paragraph to have alluded. If a yet shorter form be desired, I suggest the following: "Signed by testator in our presence, and signed by us in the presence." If the objection of "J. W. N." be ended, the insertion of the word "joint" in the words "our" and "presence" in the I have given would cure the defect. G. J. R.

It is often used is, "signed by the testator in our presence, and we in his."—ED.]

POSTAGE.—My late experience on this may also be of some possible use to your in showing how great a trap for the un- experienced book post has become. Early last month I occasion to send to my London agents a parcel of documents, consisting of old Chancery papers of wills, &c., and amongst them was a book consisted of some thirty draft sheets, containing nothing beyond copies of old letters, and some "copy correspondence." I may say that these same documents had many years previously made the same journey, perfectly, without any question being raised. On the papers being returned to me, properly stamped, &c., according to the latest regulations, I was surprised to find that Post-office authorities had surcharged me 5s. 9d. Upon inquiring at the General Post Office, I was informed by the secretary that the parcel was marked "copy correspondence" and that in the nature of a letter, and made the parcel liable to letter rate, the principle being that a letter always a letter. If this is to be the case, the working of the book is to affect letters and copies of letters sent to twenty years old, the book post will be of the same use to the profession as has hitherto been, and we shall be compelled to forward per letter postage any brief, affidavit, or other document containing the copy has once been a letter. I scarcely think that Postmaster-General would approve of so great an overstrain of the postal regulations. 1st Nov. 2. A SOLICITOR.

LEGAL LIABILITY OF SOLICITORS IN DECEASE.—Will any of your readers kindly inform me under what authority a registrar of the Court of Bankruptcy (sitting as a court) makes an order upon the solicitor of an estate personally to pay the charges of an affidavit writer employed in the matter by the estate? Such has been done in a recent case where the applicant did not intend to have notes taken, and which notes when taken were wholly useless. Will not the next step be towards making an unfortunate solicitor personally responsible for costs? R.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

None are inserted unless the name and address of the writer are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

6. LANDLORD AND TENANT.—RIGHT TO SUE AFTER DISTRESS.—A. lets land to B., and the latter underlets to C. B. owes A. £40 for rent, and C. owes B. £20. A., not wishing to injure C., distrains for £20. Having done so, can A. sue B. for the remaining £20? It is admitted he could not again distrain in respect of that amount. H. S.

8. READING FOR INTERMEDIATE.—I shall be obliged to you to inform me in your next or subsequent number of the LAW TIMES whether it is essentially necessary to study Mr. Barber's statement at the end of "Hayne's Equity," in preparation for the Intermediate Examination. D. D. G.

9. WILL.—A. by will made in 1869 bequeathed (without the intervention of trustees) certain leaseholds for years to B. for life with remainder to C., a feme covert, and D., a feme sole, in equal shares for their separate use. A. died in 1869; B. is still alive. Can C. and D. (both now femes coverts, the latter having recently intermarried) assign their respective shares and interests in the said leaseholds without the concurrence of their respective husbands? If not, must the deed be acknowledged? X. Y. Z.

10. PROBATE.—T. T. died in the year 1803 at Sheffield, where he had carried on business as a merchant. He is known to have left a will, as receipts for legacies thereunder (not on the Somerset House forms, but on plain paper) have been found. Searches have been made both at York and at Somerset House for probate of the will, without finding it. Can anyone suggest where the will may have been proved? H. B.

Answers.

(Q. 194). ISLE OF MAN.—There is no stamp duty on deeds. Mark H. Quayle, Esq., Clerk of the Rolls, Castletown, Isle of Man, will give any information about registration of deeds. James Gall, Esq. (Attorney General), Frederick Gell, Esq., and Henry Gelling, Esq., are all practising solicitors at Castletown, of excellent reputation, and reliable as agents in the island. H.

(Q. 196). BAILIFF—MONTH'S NOTICE.—If "T. F. T." will refer to Pollock and Nicholl's Practice of the County Court, 8th edition, p. 455, he will find the law relating to bailiffs, laid down very fully, and will also see that any action to be commenced against such officers, must be brought within three calendar months after the fact committed, and that notice in writing of such action and of the cause thereof, shall be given to the defendant one calendar month at least before the commencement of such action. E. L. H. R.

(Q. 171). VENDOR—COVENANT.—I think "W. H. B." refers to vendor's covenant for freedom from incumbrances, if so, the covenant is for quiet enjoyment, free from incumbrances created by vendor or his heirs, or those claiming under him or them. The word "created" is here a participle, and includes the future. Formerly the covenant invariably was for freedom from incumbrances, either already or to be hereafter created by vendor or his heirs, or those claiming or to claim under him or them; but the words italicised are now omitted, because necessarily understood. Though no one can be heir to a person in his lifetime, a covenantor can, nevertheless, by an inter vivos deed, bind his heirs, and provide against their acts, it is, however, unnecessary to mention the heirs in this covenant, as they are included in persons claiming under vendor. They are omitted in Davidson's Precedents, and in the 8th edition of Fideaux. T. F. M.

(Q. 203). LEASE.—The landlord can certainly decline to permit an assignment, and, if the lessee assigns, can enter for the forfeiture. And equity will not relieve the tenant against a forfeiture so incurred. Hill v. Barclay, 17 Ves. 63. The covenant is sometimes qualified by this proviso, "That the licence shall not be withheld in favour of a respectable and responsible tenant," and such a qualification seems very desirable. But the law does not imply it. J. M.

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

NOTA BENE.—Information intended for publication under the above heading should reach us not later than Thursday morning in each week, as publication is otherwise delayed.

MR. HARRY JAMES FRANKLIN, of the firm of Franklin and Humphreys, solicitors, of Halifax, who was recently appointed by the Lord Chancellor a Commissioner to Administer Oaths in the Supreme Court of Judicature in England, has also been appointed by Lord Coleridge a Perpetual Commissioner for taking Acknowledgments of Married Women.

J. HOUNSELL, Esq., Surgeon, Bridport, Dorsetshire writes:—"I consider BUXTON'S NERVINE a specific for toothache. Very severe cases under my care have found instantaneous and permanent relief. I therefore recommend its use to the Profession and the Public as invaluable to all who suffer from toothache."—(Adv.)

LAW SOCIETIES.

THE BREMEN CONGRESS OF THE ASSOCIATION

FOR THE REFORM AND CODIFICATION OF THE LAW OF NATIONS.

PERSONS who, like ourselves, have travelled in North Germany can but remember with pleasure the free cities of Lubeck, Hamburg, and Bremen. The red brick Gothic cathedrals and city gates of the first, the picturesque environs, and noble river Elbe, covered with forests of masts, of the second, the large tobacco trade and immense cigar factories, together with the port and ocean bound steamers of the third, enables us to imagine how important to the interests of commerce the confederated cities of the Hanse must have been in bygone ages. These cities still survive as three of the twenty-six northern states which, in May, 1871, were by Acts of State in the palace of Versailles, so joined to the six southern as to constitute the present German empire. But it is not questions of staaten-bund and bundesstaat systems of confederate states and supreme federal governments, which have during the vacation made Bremen a familiar word with the learned circles of Great Britain and Europe. It is not a congress of diplomatists which has been meeting here, seeking to outwit and checkmate each other, while their neighbours' houses, wives, servants, maidens, sheep, and horses, and everything that they have are in the flames of barbarous and uncivilised war. No! it is one of peaceful lawyers from both sides of the Atlantic, from Norway, Sweden, France, Austria, Italy, Scotland, and England, whose object has been to remove the conflicts of international law, to assimilate the usages of merchants, to facilitate legal remedies, to promote the forming of a code, and to indulge a praiseworthy wish, or even a hope, that international tribunals may be established to settle by peaceful means international disputes. Video meliora proboque deteriora sequor. Last year the lieges of Holland, whose hospitalities received an additional grace from the presence and aid of the Queen of Holland, entertained the Association for the Reform and Codification of the Law of Nations. This year they have been the honoured guests of the good people of Bremen.

The intellectual menu, or the subjects for discussion was choice, and equal to that of the preceding year. The council recommended or approved of the following:

1. Bills of exchange, negotiable instruments, the assimilation of the laws and practice relating thereto.
2. Foreign judgments, their mode of enforcement.
3. Patent laws, and the assimilation of the laws of different countries.
4. The extradition of criminals, and the present state of international law in regard to this question.
5. The limitation to arbitration for the settlement of international disputes.
6. Codification of the law of nations.
7. The law of maritime capture.

The Bremen Committee recommended:

1. Maritime tribunals.
2. Maritime insurance and general average.
3. Collisions at sea.

The Hague Committee proposed only one: International coinage and mint regulations.

In addition there were two entries, called miscellaneous, presented:

1. Prohibitive tariffs and free trade.
2. Principles of intercourse between Christian and non-Christian peoples.

Somewhat political and diplomatic in their nature, their discussion elicited more warmth than the topics strictly legal. The menu was here piquant, and the speakers showed the strength of their convictions rather than the brilliancy of their wit.

Owing to want of time, or other causes, some of the most attractive of the titles were passed over. The most valuable of the papers read we now proceed to lay before our readers. Patents come first. Some years since we visited the Great Exhibition held at Vienna under the auspices of the Austrian Government. We are glad to see that the congress there held on patent laws is now bearing fruit. A commercial association laid on the table at following

REPORT.

WE have had under our consideration the subject of assimilation of the patent laws of various nations, in connection both with the paper of Mr. Lloyd Wise referred to us last year, and with the resolutions of the International Patent Congress, held at Vienna in 1873. A copy of the first three of these resolutions, excluding only some formal ones relating to a permanent committee which has practically ceased to exist, accompanies this report. We consider it to be abundantly established by experience, that it is for the commercial interest of every nation to grant protection in the shape of patents to inventors. But in these times of international intercourse, the patent granted in one country may become to some extent a restriction, unprofitable and obstructive, if the same invention without limitation or increase in price becomes in an adjoining country common property; although a country offering the protection of a patent law will usually obtain the earliest benefit of new inventions. Hence the widespread practice of patenting the same invention in several countries, and the necessity for the assimilation of the Law of Patents in the different civilised states. Unless some common principle be agreed upon, it is evident that much of the benefits of patents will be lost, by their being granted in one country, whilst they are refused, or granted upon wholly different conditions, in another. For by such inequalities, the reward by which the inventor is stimulated to exercise his ingenuity for the benefit of the commercial world at large is rendered precarious, and the stimulus becomes less powerful.

Influenced by these considerations, the Congress at Vienna in its second resolution, laid down certain principles as the basis of a model patent law, to which future legislation on the subject should conform. That Congress was a very influential and representative body, including many eminent patent lawyers, inventors, manufacturers, and other authorised persons from the different civilised states, and we do not think it would be advisable to depart from the general principles then laid down. We, therefore, recommend that in any action taken by this society in favour of the assimilation of patent laws, the Vienna resolution should be adhered to as a basis, though it may be necessary to supplement the principles there enunciated by some others. In particular, it may probably be found desirable to embody in the framework already sketched out, some suggestions to be found in Mr. Lloyd Wise's paper, among which may be indicated (first), that the preliminary examination mentioned in Clause C. of the resolution already referred to, should be limited in its scope to the questions whether the specifications are clear, and whether the invention is open to objection, as being contrary to morality or wanting in novelty, regard being had to prior publications; secondly, that an adverse report should not disentitle the applicant to a patent, except in cases of frauds, or where the invention is contrary to morality; thirdly, that if the applicant specifies the prior matter found by the examiners, and clearly defines what he, nevertheless, claims as his invention, no adverse report should be published.

At the present time there are two important countries which have no patent laws. Holland and Switzerland. In Holland, where a patent law existed until 1869, there is evidence that it was repealed because of its defects as a measure, and not because the principles of rewarding inventors in this way was considered objectionable per se. In Germany, a draft law founded on the second resolution of the Vienna Congress is now under the consideration of the Government, for embodiment in the revised Code of the Empire. In England, a bill for the modification of the existing patent law has been twice before Parliament, but has not yet been discussed in the House of Commons. It has met with great opposition from inventors, manufacturers, and others. The patent laws of several other countries are far from conforming to the principles enunciated at Vienna; but, as far as we are aware, the only bodies which are doing anything to carry out the resolutions of the Vienna Congress are the committee in Germany which prepared the draft law just spoken of, and a committee in London of which Dr. C. W. Siemens, F.R.S., is a member.

We think that a committee be appointed to deal with the subject of patent law, and to add to its number, and especially to invite the co-operation of persons who have already devoted themselves to this subject, and may be willing to join our association.

That such committee be empowered to take such steps as they may think desirable in promoting the reform and assimilation of patent laws on the basis of the resolutions of the Vienna Conference, amplified by any additions they may consider necessary to the equitable working of the system, and in bringing the subject before the attention of the governments and people of the various civilised states, including in particular those of Holland and Switzerland.

We hope that in this way a comprehensive and efficient committee may be formed, capable of satisfactorily dealing with this important practical question.

Copy of the first three Resolutions of the Vienna Patent Congress.

1. That protection of inventions should be guaranteed by the laws of all civilised nations, because:
  - (a.) The sense of right among civilised nations demands the legal protection of intellectual work.
  - (b.) This protection affords, under the condition of a complete specification and publication of the invention, the only practical and effective means of introducing new technical methods without loss of time, and in a reliable manner, to the general knowledge of the public.
  - (c.) The protection of invention renders the labour of the inventor remunerative, and induces thereby competent men to devote time and means to the introduction and practical application of new and useful technical methods and improvements, and attracts capital from abroad, which, in the absence of patent protection, will find means of secure investment elsewhere.
  - (d.) By the obligatory complete publication of the patented invention, the great sacrifice of time and of money which the technical application would otherwise impose upon the industry of all countries, will be considerably lessened.
  - (e.) By the protection of invention, secrecy of manufacture, which is one of the greatest enemies of industrial progress, will lose its chief support.
  - (f.) Great injury will be inflicted upon countries which have no rational patent laws, by the native inventive talent emigrating to more congenial countries, where their labour is legally protected.
  - (g.) Experience shows that the holder of a patent will make the most effectual exertions for a speedy introduction of his invention.
2. An effective and useful patent law should be based on the following principles:
  - A. Only the inventor himself, or his legal representative, should be entitled to a patent.
  - B. A patent should not be refused to a foreigner.
  - C. It is advisable, in carrying out these principles, to introduce a system of preliminary examination.
  - D. A patent should be granted either for a term of 15 years, or be permitted to be extended to such a term.
  - E. Simultaneously with the issue of a patent, a complete publication of the same should take place, rendering the technical application of the invention possible.
  - F. The expense of obtaining a patent should be moderate; but, in the interest of the inventor, a progressive scale of fees should be established, inducing him to abandon a useless patent.
  - G. Facilities should be given, by a well-organised patent office, to obtain in an easy manner the contents of the specification of a patent, as well as to ascertain what patents are still in force.
  - H. It is advisable to establish regulations, according to which the patentee should be compelled, in cases in which the public interest may require it, to allow the use of his invention to all suitable applicants for an adequate compensation.

I. The non-application of an invention in one country shall not involve the forfeiture of the patent, if the patentee has been carried into practice at all, and if it has been rendered possible for the inhabitants of such country to purchase and make use of the invention.

K. In all other respects, and particularly regards the proceedings in the grant of patents, the congress refers to the English, American, and Belgian patent laws, and to the draft of a patent law prepared for Germany by the Society of German Engineers.

3. Considering the great differences in patent administration, and the other international commercial relations, the necessity of reform is evident, and it is a pressing moment that Governments should endeavour to bring about an international understanding upon patent protection soon as possible.

EXTRADITION.

The principles which should regulate, more than the practice which obtains, under treaty of extradition, formed the ground work of the following report by the countrymen of the illustrious Grotius:

L'état A doit-il punir des délits commis au préjudice de l'état B? En examinant la question, il faut avant tout distinguer les hypothèses suivantes:

I<sup>re</sup> le délit est commis sur le territoire de l'état A;

II<sup>re</sup> il est commis ailleurs.

Première Hypothèse.

Il est de principe qu'un état n'exerce sa puissance pour un délit commis sur son territoire. conséquent, si le délit commis sur le territoire de l'état A, au préjudice de l'état B, n'est puni par l'état A, le coupable pourrait par séjour continu dans cet état se procurer l'impunité. Or cette impunité serait incompatible non seulement avec les devoirs réciproques des états, mais aussi avec leurs intérêts communs.

Ces intérêts seraient lésés si des délits, les plus graves, contre un état, pourraient être commis impunément hors de son territoire. Il faut donc que chaque état agisse vis à vis de son voisin, comme il le veut que celui-ci agisse vis à vis de lui, et punisse les délits commis sur son territoire au préjudice d'un autre état.

Nous sommes d'avis avec M. de Pinto dans cette première hypothèse il n'y a pas de raison pour distinguer entre les nationaux et les étrangers. Ces derniers ne pouvant être punis par l'état sur le territoire duquel ils ont commis leur crime et jouissant de la protection de la loi, doivent être aussi justiciables devant les tribunaux.

Cependant quant aux délits mêmes, des restrictions sont nécessaires.

La première est indiquée dans la note de Pinto: "un état ne peut qualifier de crime ou de délit un fait quelconque commis au préjudice d'un autre état, si ce fait n'est punissable aux termes de ces lois au cas qu'il soit commis contre l'état même dont elles émanent." Cette remarque, évidemment juste, n'exige de développement.

La seconde restriction aussi dérive de la nature des choses. Parmi les délits dont l'objet est le droit d'un état, il y en a plusieurs qui compromettent l'intérêt de cet état que les délits commis sur son territoire même. Il est clair que ces faits ne sont pas compris dans ceux qui, commis ailleurs, doivent être punis par le forum delicti commissi.

Restent les délits suivants, dirigés contre un état étranger et punissables par la justice de l'état dans lequel ils ont été commis:

a. Plusieurs espèces de faux: contrefaçon, altération de monnaie étrangère: faux, faux timbres et papiers d'un état étranger, d'une administration publique étrangère, frauduleux de ces monnaies, marques, timbres faux ou falsifiés: parjure au préjudice de la justice ou de l'administration étrangère: autant qu'il est punissable selon les lois des deux pays.

Il va sans dire que le faux en papiers de banque ou de commerce doit être puni. Cependant comme ce délit, dirigé contre

To Readers and Correspondents.

Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.
All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.
All communications intended for the EDITOR (SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT) should be so addressed.

TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The volumes of the LAW TIMES, and of the LAW TIMES REPORTS, are strongly and uniformly bound at the Office, as completed, for 5s. 6d. for the Journal, and 4s. 6d. for the Reports.

Portfolios for preserving the current numbers of the LAW TIMES, price 5s. 6d. LAW TIMES REPORTS, price 3s. 6d.

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words..... 3s. 6d. | Every additional ten words ..... 0s. 6d.
Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.

Advertisements must reach the Office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

READY—SECOND EDITION.

8vo., cloth, price 2s. 6d. (post free 2s. 8d.).

OATHS IN SUPREME COURT.—Handbook for use of Commissioners and Solicitors, containing Special Forms of Jurats, Oaths, &c.—Forms and directions for use by Solicitors applying for Commissions—New Regulations—Power and Jurisdiction of Commissioners as affected by Judicature and other Acts. Tables of Fees and Acts, &c. Second Edition, revised and enlarged By CHARLES FORD, F.R.S.L., Examiner in Admiralty, S.S.C. (Eng.).

London: "LAW TIMES" Office, 10, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

REG. v. THE CHURCHWARDENS OF WIGAN AND OTHERS.
Loan for repairing church—Assignment of rates—Rate after lapse of twenty years ..... 351

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE.

COURT OF APPEAL, LINCOLN'S-INN.

Ex parte MOORE; Re STOKES.
Bankruptcy—Disclaimer of lease by trustee—Notice by lessor—Waiver—Extension of time ..... 366

Ex parte CARTER; Re CARTER.

Bankruptcy—Suspension of bankruptcy—After-acquired property—Rights of assignee—Debtor's summons by uncertificated bankrupt ..... 368

Ex parte DAVIS; Re SNEEKUM.

Bankruptcy—Bankrupt's contract continued by trustee for a time—Omission to disclaim—Subsequent repudiation of contract by trustee ..... 369

Ex parte DUBRETS; Re MYERS.

Bankruptcy—Foreign trader—Assignment of all property in England—Bill of sale—Fraud ..... 363

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE—CHANCERY DIVISION.

RUSSELL v. ST. AUBYN.

Covenant to leave share by will—Satisfaction—Rule against double portions ..... 365

QUEEN'S BENCH DIVISION.

KOLBORN GUARDIAN v. ST. LEONARD'S VESTRY, SHOREDITCH.

Duty of vestry—Want of consideration—Action for breach—Metropolis Local Management Act 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 120), s. 125 ..... 400

DIVISIONAL COURT FOR APPEALS FROM INFERIOR COURTS.

LURY (app.) v. CHERRYBORN (resp.).

School board by-law—Attendance at school—Workshops—30 & 31 Vict. c. 146, s. 14; 33 & 34 Vict. c. 75, s. 74 ..... 408

PROBATE, DIVORCE, AND ADMIRALTY DIVISION.

Admiralty Business.

THE THOMAS LEA.

Selling rules—Regulations for preventing collisions at sea—Rule 30 ..... 406

THE STAR OF INDIA.

Damage by collision—Measure of damages—Loss of charter-party ..... 407

THE JULIANA.

Wages—Cause by default—Waiver of proceedings—Intervention of foreign consul—Solicitor—Officer of court ..... 410

THE EVANGELISTRIA.

Jurisdiction—Foreign vessel—Possession—Foreign mortgage—Decree of foreign court—Intervention of foreign consul ..... 410

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS ..... 37

LEADING ARTICLES—

Topics of the Week

The Nature of a Married Woman's Interest in Shares in a Public Company ..... 38

The Amendment of Criminal Procedure ..... 39

Survivorship—Its Period, Its Meaning ..... 40

SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT

(Edited by a Solicitor.)

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL—

Topics of the Week

Court of Appeal, Westminster ..... 43

High Court of Justice—Chancery Division ..... 43

Specimen of a Digest of the Law relating to Solicitors of the Supreme Court ..... 43

Notes of New Decisions ..... 44

Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England ..... 44

Appointments under the Joint-Stock Winding-up Act ..... 44

Creditors under Estates in Chancery ..... 44

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 ..... 44

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL—

Topics of the Week

Hull Law Students' Society ..... 45

Liverpool Law Students' Association ..... 45

United Law Students' Society ..... 45

Queries ..... 45

MAGISTRATES' LAW—

Notes of New Decisions ..... 45

Professional Congratulations at the Brighton Borough Bench ..... 46

MARITIME LAW—

The Franconia ..... 46

COUNTY COURTS—

East Bedford County Court ..... 47

Swansea County Court ..... 47

Liverpool County Court ..... 48

BANKRUPTCY LAW—

Halifax County Court ..... 48

LEGAL NEWS—

Alleged Professional Negligence by a Solicitor ..... 48

Miscellaneous ..... 48

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION .. 49

NOTES AND QUERIES ..... 50

LAW SOCIETIES—

The Bremen Congress of the Association for the Reform and Codification of the Law of Nations ..... 50

LEGAL OBITUARY ..... 52

THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS—

Registrars for the ensuing Week ..... 53

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS ..... 53

THE GAZETTES ..... 53

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS ..... 54

The Law and the Lawyers.

WE say nothing this week about the decision in the case of Reg. v. Keyn, popularly known as the Franconia case, for the simple reason that to deal hastily with a subject which has given the judges so much trouble could be of no service to our readers. We have received a print of the judgment of the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE, and when we are in possession of the judgments of the other Judges, a careful examination and comparison may be useful in the interest of international law.

A POINT of some importance with reference to the effect of a discharge in bankruptcy was raised in the Common Pleas Division on Thursday. A solicitor sued a client for work and labour done before the latter liquidated his affairs by arrangement. The discharge under the liquidation was pleaded, but the plaintiff replied that after the liquidation the debtor promised to pay the debt. Two points were taken for the plaintiff—(1) That there was a moral consideration to support the subsequent promise; and (2) That the fact that the plaintiff had been omitted from the debtor's statement of debts left him free to sue for his debt. There is some show of authority for the first proposition, but most assuredly none whatever for the second. The court decided against the plaintiff on both.

PLEADERS are clearly not alive to the importance of attending closely to the rules under the Judicature Act. Rule 23 of Order XIX. says that the defence of the Statute of Frauds must be specially pleaded. A case came before the Court of Appeal on Wednesday in which a defendant who had not pleaded the defence sought to avail himself of the statute. The court, however, was clear that this could not be done.

On Wednesday last, the usual "Crown paper" day, the Crown paper was finished early in the afternoon, and it appeared likely that the Queen's Bench Division would have to rise prematurely for lack of business. Several cases were called on, but without result. The Court was unwilling to strike these cases out, as the parties could scarcely have been expected to be present. A new trial was eventually taken, and, in order to prevent any loss of time in future, the Court (MELLOR and LUSH, JJ.) at once gave notice that the practice of the Queen's Bench Division would henceforth be to proceed with the new trial paper as soon as the Crown paper or special paper should be finished. It will therefore be prudent for practitioners whose causes appear early on the new trial paper to study the condition of the Crown paper and the special paper from time to time.

As illustrating and confirming our remarks (LAW TIMES, 19th Feb. 1876, Vol. lx., p. 282), in regard to the operation of sect. 91 of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, on voluntary settlements, we may refer to a case of Ex parte Stephens re Pearson, decided by Sir J. BACON, C.J.B., on the 7th Aug., and reported 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 68. Those remarks, it may be remembered, were directed for the purpose of showing that the lapse of the two years mentioned in the section would not, as a matter of law, at all prevent a voluntary settlement from being set aside if an intent to defeat or delay creditors could be attributed to the settlor. The case before Sir J. BACON we notice as being a strong instance of the application of the rule of law in favour of creditors. The facts were that in 1858 PEARSON, who was then solvent, and not then in trade, settled £1000 in trust for himself for life, or until bankruptcy, &c., and afterwards for his wife and children. Fifteen years afterwards PEARSON went into trade and became bankrupt. The beneficiaries did not (as indeed having regard to the case of Higinbotham v. Hulme (19 Vesey 88), they could not) press the validity of the gift over of the settlor's own life interest on his own bankruptcy, but the CHIEF JUDGE considering that the settlement could only have been made to defeat and delay creditors, declared that the same was wholly fraudulent and void.

THE case of Preston and others v. Lamont and another, reported in 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 341, turned upon a curious attempt to re-introduce the dilatory plea or plea in abatement, abolished in terms by the Judicature Act; Order XIX., rule 13, enacting that "no plea or defence shall be pleaded in abatement." The plaintiffs had applied at chambers for, and obtained leave to serve the writ out of the jurisdiction; and the writ was accordingly served in Glasgow. The defendants appeared, and obtained leave to defend, and, subsequently, further time for delivering their defence. They then tried to set the whole proceedings aside on the ground that the English courts had no jurisdiction. Having failed in this attempt, both at chambers and on appeal, they filed a statement of defence, which was to the effect that there never was any breach of the contract in question within the jurisdiction, and that none of the circumstances mentioned in Order XI., rule 1, of the Judicature Act 1875, existed, to justify an order for service of the writ in this action out of the jurisdiction. This defence was represented by the defendants' counsel to be a plea to the jurisdiction; and as such was of course utterly bad, as attempting to re-introduce the plea in abatement. But it was even less defensible than this; for, as both the learned Barons observed, it was not really a plea to the jurisdiction at all, but to the propriety of the service of the writ. It was, in fact, an attempt to appeal by a sideward from the order of the Judge at chambers, long after the time for appealing had passed. Baron BRANWELL said that, had the statement of defence been a plausibly good one, they would not have ordered it to be struck out; but we quite agree with him that it was manifestly a very bad one.

THE important case of Cohen v. South Eastern Railway Company (L. Rep. 1 Ex. D. 217; 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 213), came again before the Exchequer Division on Wednesday last. It will be remembered that this case decides two points, that the 7th section of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act 1854, applies, first, to passengers' luggage; and, secondly, to the case of railway com-booking through by rail and steamer. The action arose out of the loss of a portmanteau by falling into the sea, the plaintiff having taken a ticket from Boulogne to London by the Folkestone route. The court having decided in favour of the plaintiff on demurrer, the defendants obtained leave to amend their pleadings on the ground that the contract being made in France, the English statute law could not apply to it. Instead of the pleadings being amended, it was arranged that a special case should be stated, and it is upon this special case that judgment has been just given for the plaintiff. The defendants, we believe, did not contest the case seriously, preferring that it should be argued before the Court of Appeal. Looking to the importance, both to railway companies and the public, of the two points involved, we are glad to hear that they will now be argued before that court. The decision of the court below, although we think it to be correct on both points, seems scarcely to go fully enough into the bearing of the 7th section of the Railway and Canal Traffic Act 1854, upon passengers' luggage. We do not, however, think it likely that railway companies will inaugurate a practice of carrying passengers' luggage upon "signed conditions" only, whatever may turn out to be the correct law of the case.

BARON CLEASBY has decided a point upon which there has been some doubt, although a short time since we expressed a clear opinion that there could be only one view of the law. The learned Baron gave a short judgment, which states the matter in a few words. He said:—"The question is whether when there has been one assault and battery, but on a woman, and the facts of this aggravated assault have been brought before magistrates, who adjudicate thereon with a fine and imprisonment, the 45th section of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100, applies. Is the defendant to be protected from all further proceedings, whether civil or criminal, for the same cause on which he has been adjudicated? If it was quite clear that there was one form of proceeding for an aggravated assault and another for a common assault, I should have thought that the defendant might have had an action brought against him for the aggravated assault. But I cannot come to that conclusion. There is only one information, and that brings me to deal with the question of merits. The information is for assault and battery on a woman. It seems to follow that the proper course of procedure is to lay an information for assault and battery, and then it is for the magistrates to deal with it either under their limited jurisdiction or as an aggravated assault. There is one matter brought before them. Are we to assume, because they have stayed their hand and not gone to the full extent of their power, that therefore they did not treat it as an aggravated assault on a woman? They passed a sentence of imprisonment as well as inflicting a fine. Quite independently of authority, I think the case comes under section 45. There must be no further civil or criminal proceeding, as the real cause has been adjudicated on."

THE uses to which watercourses may be turned, and the benefits derivable from them are so manifold, that it seems only natural that the law books should contain very many cases in which the limits of the rights of riparian owners to the flow of water have been discussed and determined. As a general rule it is well established that the owner of land may use the water of a natural stream that flows along his land for any reasonable purpose of his own. This right is common to all landowners, hence no one will be allowed to make such use of the flowing water as will interfere with the rights of the proprietors of the land above and below. Hence too he will not be permitted to seriously lessen the quantity of water to the injury of such landowners. This rule, of course, is not applicable where the excess in use is justified by grant or prescription. In the case of Blackall v. Bean, which came before the Court of Appeal a few days ago, the plaintiff, the lord of a manor, sued the defendants for obstructing and diverting the flow of water of the river Dart. The defendants, as appeared from the evidence given at the trial, were lessees of a mining "sett." They had a licence from their lessor to take water from the river Dart for the purpose of carrying on the mine. The plaintiff was a riparian owner, but it did not appear that he had suffered any pecuniary loss through the acts of the defendants, although there was no doubt that the latter had from time to time caused a diminution in the actual volume of water flowing down the river. Under these circumstances Mr. Justice BLACKBURN, before whom the cause was tried, directed the jury that if the defendants had taken from the plaintiff a sensible and appreciable portion of the water, they had inflicted on him a sensible and material injury, and that if a sensible and appreciable portion of the water which would otherwise have flowed down to the plaintiff's land had been taken by the defendants, the plaintiff was entitled to the verdict. Exception was taken to this ruling; but it was confirmed in the Court of Appeal. The legal proposition upon which the ruling of the learned judge is really one of the simplest and most elementary. The proposition is, that proof of the violation of a right will support an action, although no proof of actual damage or loss. Taking what has been said above as the limit of the right of a riparian owner to the flow of water along his lands, it is a matter of easy inference to say, that whoever interferes with the enjoyment of that right commits an injury, and the application of the maxim ubi jus ibi remedium, is obvious. Prove the violation of a right, and a verdict follows of necessity.

It is very clear that an agent must be careful how he contracts if he would avoid incurring a personal liability. This rule should never be forgotten by an agent, in spite of the greater latitude which the Court of Appeal has allowed recently in the introduction of parol evidence to explain the instrument by which the agent is apparently bound. In Weidner v. Hoggett (35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 368) the defendant gave the following undertaking:—"I undertake to load the ship . . . on account of Bebside Colliery.—W. S. HOGGETT." The undertaking made no mention of the person with whom the contract was entered into. The plaintiff was the captain of the ship referred to in the undertaking. The undertaking was proved to have been obtained by the Bebside Company for the reason that the captain refused to sign a charter-party without such a document. The ship was detained, and the plaintiff applied to the defendants for compensation. Upon an action being brought by the plaintiff on the undertaking the court held that the defendant was personally liable. The defence raised was that there was no privity of contract between the plaintiff and defendant. But as Lord COLERIDGE remarked, "although the plaintiff is not named in the document as the person with whom the defendant contracted, neither are the charterers, and it would seem that the document was intended to be a contract by the defendant with any party concerned who might act upon it." To the same effect were the remarks of Mr. Justice LINDLEY. "The difficulty is created by the use by the defendant of a printed form beginning, 'I undertake,' and leaving in blank the name of the person with whom the contract is made. We are thus compelled to look outside the document in order to discover to whom or for whom the undertaking is given." The decision itself is thus of interest upon two grounds. It shows the dangers to which agents are liable who enter into personal undertakings, and it likewise throws some light upon the rule which makes privity of contract essential to the right to sue.

So many decisions have been given within the last year or so with respect to the rights of railway passengers, that we may reasonably expect that branch to be soon pretty well defined. A case of certainly not less than ordinary importance in that branch of law was lately heard by one of the judges of the Liverpool County Court. An action was brought by a passenger to recover the sum of 4s., the amount of cab hire paid by reason and in consequence of an alleged breach of contract by the Cheshire Lines Committee. The plaintiff took first-class tickets for himself and wife, but on reaching the train found only one seat vacant in the non-smoking carriages, though there was enough room in the smoking carriages. There were seats also in second-class carriages. He refused these, and took a cab to his destination. Having taken time to consider, his Honour held that the company was bound to provide seats in a non-smoking carriage, and in the train for which the plaintiff had taken tickets. As the company had not done so, judgment was entered for the plaintiff. We do not suppose that the railway company will rest satisfied with this judgment, tending as it does to open up a wide field of liability. There are several points of interest in the case. Does a railway company, in issuing a ticket, impliedly contract to do more than carry the passenger in a carriage of the class mentioned on the ticket, so far at least as concerns the mode of conveyance? Is there an implied contract that the carriage shall be one in which smoking is not allowed? Other questions might be raised, and a little consideration will show that the County Court Judge had good reason to deliberate before he delivered judgment. The ordinary rules relating to the rights of plaintiffs upon breach of contract are fairly well known. In this case, however, the question is rendered more complicated by the fact that there is a preliminary difficulty to be got over, that is, the question with regard to the existence of an implied contract. If the case is brought before the Divisional Court of Appeal, we have no doubt that strong arguments will be urged both for and against the appellants. For the present we defer any detailed examination of the grounds upon which the County Court Judge based his decision.

THE NATURE OF A MARRIED WOMAN'S INTEREST IN SHARES IN A PUBLIC COMPANY.

WHERE a woman possessed of shares registered in her own name marries, what—as against her husband or his assignees, for or without value, or his trustee in bankruptcy, or his execution creditors—are her rights? These questions, which look so simple, are probably susceptible of considerable doubt, and open to much argument. Personalty in possession held by title, and incapable of manual delivery (except in the form of chattels real), was unknown in early times; and where positive statutory enactments are absent, the nature and incidents of the vast amount of property recently developed in the shape of shares, patent right, and copyright, &c., can only, we suppose, be settled by analogy. In the case of the shares of a public company standing in the name of a married woman, the analogy seems to be to the case of chattels real vested in her—as to which her rights are far more in the power of the husband and his assignees and creditors than her rights in relation to her choses in action, being, in fact, subject to her husband's control, contracts, and engagements, and liable to execution for his debts; with the small privilege remaining in the wife of taking as survivor, and unaffected by her husband's will, such of the same chattels as he may not have appropriated or forfeited at his decease. In regard to money in the funds, fully paid-up shares, or any debenture, or debenture stock, or any stock of an incorporated or joint stock company, to the holding of which no liability is attached, to which a married woman, or a woman about to be married, is entitled, provision is made by the Act of 1870, under which the woman can require the same to be registered in her own name and for her separate use. Suppose, however, that the shares, &c., held do involve liability, or that from any other cause before such requisition is made by the married woman, the husband should assign them, or become bankrupt or liable to execution, it is an important question how far the wife's rights would be defeated, as in the case of chattels real they would be. Shares in a public company have been held, and we think rightly, not to be things in action within sect. 15, sub-sect. 5, of the Bankruptcy Act 1869 (Ex parte The Union Bank of Manchester, re Jackson, 24 L. T. Rep. N. S. 951), and we think it would be difficult to contend that they were choses in action so as to be within the rule of Purdew v. Jackson (1 Russ. 1); Honner v. Mortin (3 Russ. 65), and Pierce v. Thornley (2 Sim. 167), which as against a wife surviving denies effect to any assignment of the wife's choses in action not reduced into possession in the husband's lifetime. Again, where the husband survives the wife it may be questioned whether he will be entitled to her shares jure mariti, as he would be to her chattels real: (Malony v. Kennedy, 10 Sim. 254; Archer v. Lavender, Irish Rep. 9 Eq. 226); or whether he must take out administration, as would be necessary in order to recover her choses en action: (Proudley v. Fielder, 2 My. & K. 57.)

THE AMENDMENT OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

DISTINCTION BETWEEN FELONIES AND MISDEMEANORS.

In the present state of English criminal jurisprudence it may safely be averred that the distinction between felonies and misdemeanors has become altogether unintelligible. A noble chairman of quarter sessions not very long ago remarked, that although he had become well versed, by experience, in the practice of criminal law, he still was unable to understand the difference between felonies and misdemeanors. There are some, perhaps, who will feel shocked at the ignorance here displayed; and yet we doubt whether any person could now lay down any fixed principle which determines what offences are to be termed felonies and what misdemeanors. For the origin of the term "felony" it is necessary to go back to feudal times; but whether it is derived from the Greek φύλαξ, or from the Latin fallō, is a question of some doubt. The original signification was an act of forfeiture, that is, an act which caused the forfeiture of the tenant's land to the lord of the fee. When, therefore, feudal law came to be introduced into England, it is not difficult to understand how the term felony came, by a slight change, to be applied to that class of crime which occasioned forfeiture of any kind, whether of land or goods. Those crimes which did not involve any forfeiture were accordingly distinguished by the term misdemeanors—offences of less degree than felonies.

Originally, then, there was some principle in the distinction, but this principle has been gradually annihilated by the course of legislation. Theoretically a felon, by conviction, forfeited the whole of his property; but practically the law of forfeiture was never, at least in modern times, enforced. Consequently an Act was passed some six years ago (33 & 34 Vict. c. 23), entitled "An Act to abolish the forfeiture of lands and goods for treason and felony, and to otherwise amend the law relating thereto," which Act has rendered the distinction more meaningless than ever. The gravity of the crime is used to distinguish between these two offences; but can it be suggested for a moment that any such distinction exists now? What difference is there in principle between the theft of money or goods, and obtaining the same under false pretences? Yet, according to English law, a man who steals a cabbage is a felon, while a wholesale swindler may be merely a misdemeanant! The forgery of some instruments is a felony by statute, punishable with penal servitude for life; the forgery of others is only a misdemeanor at common law, punishable with imprisonment. The distinction, too, is not only meaningless, but is fraught with great inconvenience and hardship. The right of challenging peremptorily juries to the number of twenty is confined to felonies, and was no doubt originally given by the common law in favorem vite, although it is now extended to all cases of felony. The right is a useful one, and no doubt sometimes tends to secure to an accused person a fair trial; but it would be equally useful that a similar right should exist in all cases of misdemeanor. A person who is charged with the latter, and who is fortunately defended, is sometimes able to remedy this grave inconvenience by means of an application from his solicitor to the officer of the court, who will generally, so long as a sufficient number is left to form a jury, abstain from calling the names of those persons who are objected to. The same opportunity, however, is not afforded to a man who is undefended, who may be compelled to be tried by jurors at whose hands he is well aware he cannot hope to have an impartial trial. Again, the practical inconvenience of the distinction is too often manifested during the course of a trial. Under the present system the indictments are altogether separate and distinct, and an indictment which contained a count for felony, and also a count for misdemeanor, would be quashed on motion in arrest of judgment after a general verdict. It is quite true that Lord Campbell's Act (14 & 15 Vict. c. 100), and other Acts, remedy the useless inconvenience and expense which would have to be encountered, by enabling, in particular cases, a jury to convict an accused person of misdemeanor on a charge of felony. For instance, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9, parties indicted for felony may be convicted of an attempt to commit the same (which is a misdemeanor), and be punished accordingly; and the same principle has been also recognised and extended by other statutes (see 14 & 15 Vict. c. 19 s. 5; 24 & 25 Vict. c. 100 s. 60, &c.) A great many absurdities are, however, still unprovided for by the Legislature. A is indicted for larceny; the evidence adduced in support of the charge fails, because the crime (if any) is one of false pretences. So that unless there is a second indictment for false pretences, in which exactly the same ceremony is gone through, A. cannot be convicted. Or, again, A. is charged with rape, but the evidence only warrants a conviction for an indecent assault; here, again, the prisoner cannot be convicted of a misdemeanor, which is not an attempt to commit a felony, so as to bring it within 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 9. So that it is usually the practice, where it is at all doubtful whether the more serious charge can be substantiated, or even an attempt to commit it, to prefer a second indictment. The consequence is that there is frequently great waste of time with considerable extra expense, and no advantage whatever is gained by anybody. What possible reason can there be why in either of these cases—which are fair samples—A. should not be convicted under one indictment, and the jury find of which offence he is guilty? The evil is due to the present practice that prevails with reference to the drawing of indictments; and (even if the present classification of crimes is to continue) it is difficult to see how a prisoner could in any way be injured by the alteration we have proposed being adopted. Again, it is rather extraordinary that as the law at present stands, if A. is indicted for larceny, and is guilty of false pretences, he cannot be convicted; but if A. is indicted for false pretences, and is guilty of stealing, he may be convicted under the indictment. The statute 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100 s. 12—which enacts that "if upon the trial of any person for any misdemeanor it shall appear that the facts given in evidence amount in law to a felony, such person shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted of such misdemeanor; and no person tried for such misdemeanor shall be liable to be prosecuted for felony afterwards on the same facts unless the court before which such trial be held shall think fit, in its discretion, to discharge the jury from giving any verdict upon such trial, and to direct such person to be indicted for felony, in which case such person may be dealt with in all respects as if he had not been put upon his trial for such misdemeanor,"—omits to provide for the converse case of a person indicted for felony where the facts given in evidence amount in law to a misdemeanor. And the omission in this section is really more important than the provision contained in it. For instance, A. has been guilty of an offence certainly punishable as a misdemeanor at common law or by statute, and perhaps as a felony by statute, punishable by penal servitude for life. Here there must necessarily be two indictments, and it would be improper to proceed with the misdemeanor in the first instance, inasmuch as the criminal might escape with an altogether inadequate punishment if the facts warranted in law a charge of felony by statute being sustained. For although, under 14 & 14 Vict. c. 100, s. 12, such person would not be entitled to an acquittal of such misdemeanor simply because the facts amounted in law to a felony, yet he could not, by virtue of this section, be punished except for a misdemeanor. A good illustration of what we are alluding to occurred some little time ago on the Oxford Circuit, though it is only one among several cases of a similar kind. A pseudo clergyman had forged letters of order, or rather had altered the name of the person ordained deacon, so as to change it to his own. Unquestionably this was a forgery at common law, but the punishment which could be awarded was quite inadequate to the offence which had been committed. By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 98, s. 20, any person who, with intent to defraud, forges or alters a deed is guilty of "felony punishable with penal servitude for life." The prisoner was indicted for forging a deed under this statute, and a second instrument was also preferred, charging him with a misdemeanor at common law. Here the prosecution were compelled to proceed with the more serious case first, but, though the prisoner was found guilty. Baron Bramwell expressed an opinion that the instrument was not a deed, and reserved the case for the opinion of the Court for the Consideration of Crown Cases Reserved, who quashed the conviction: (See 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 452.) The second charge was gone into at the same time to prevent accidents, which was a mere repetition of all the former trial. Now if, under the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100, s. 12, a prisoner whose offence, though alleged to be misdemeanor, turns out to be a felony, could be punished for such felony, no miscarriage of justice could occur, and the proceedings in many cases could be very considerably curtailed. But another alteration is likewise required, which is that a person who is indicted for a felony should not be entitled to be acquitted if his offence turned out only to be a misdemeanor, but should be punished for such misdemeanor. That such an amendment is necessary to promote the due administration (so long as the present system continues) of justice, the annals of our law courts too plainly show. Only a few months ago a case came before the judges of the Court for Crown Cases Reserved, the result of which is rather shocking to one's common sense, although the judgment of the court was clearly in accordance with the law as it at present stands. The case we allude to, R. v. Thomas (44 L. J. 42, M. C.), the prisoner was tried on an indictment for uttering counterfeit coin after having been previously convicted of a like offence. Under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 99, s. 12, a person who utters counterfeit coin, and has been previously convicted of a like offence, is guilty of felony; and the 57th section directs that the offender shall, in the first instance, be arraigned upon so much only of the indictment as charges the subsequent offence, and that the jury shall be charged, in the first instance to inquire concerning such subsequent offence only. The indictment charged an unlawful uttering in the first count, and next that he had been previously convicted, and then states the legal conclusion that he therefore feloniously uttered the coin. At the trial, Thomas was found guilty of the unlawful uttering, by itself a misdemeanor only, but the previous conviction was clearly negatived. The result, accordingly, was that the prisoner was found guilty of a misdemeanor upon a count of an indictment, which count, in fact, charged him with a felony, consisting of two elements, namely, a misdemeanor and a prior conviction. The question reserved was whether Thomas had been legally convicted of a misdemeanor; in other words, whether the averments in the first count were divisible. The conviction was quashed. Lord Chief Justice Coleridge, said: "By the law of England felony and misdemeanor are different offences, and to be treated differently, so that upon an indictment for the one you cannot convict of the other, except under the provisions of some statute. . . . The compound offence makes up the felony, but one portion of it is withheld from the jury till the previous portion has been decided; but unless both ingredients concur the compound offence is not made up. One ingredient the jury found to exist, the other they found not to exist, and their two findings, taken together, fail to make up the compound offence. The man was indicted for felony, was tried for felony, but not convicted of felony. No statute exists in this case which can be applied to make lawful a conviction for misdemeanor. It is not within our duty to make laws, but only to interpret the law as it now exists." Now, it is clear that no detriment whatever could have arisen to the prisoner from a conviction of misdemeanor on the indictment on which he was tried; the offence of which he was guilty was fully charged, and he had had the benefit of his challenges, which he would not have been entitled to had he been tried merely for the misdemeanor. The conclusion, therefore, arrived at, though inevitable, was certainly very absurd.

It appears, therefore, that the 14 & 15 Vict. c. 100 s. 12, in order to have a really beneficial operation, and sweep away all the incongruities which at present exist, ought so to be framed as to admit of a person who is indicted for a felony being convicted of a misdemeanor and punished accordingly, and vice versa. This result could probably be best accomplished by framing the section as follows: "If upon the trial of any person indicted for any felony, it shall appear that the facts given in evidence amount in law to a misdemeanor, such person shall not by reason thereof be entitled to be acquitted; but the jury shall be entitled to return as their verdict that such person is guilty only of such misdemeanor, and thereupon such person shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for such misdemeanor; and if, upon the trial of any person indicted for misdemeanor, it shall appear that the facts given in evidence amount in law to a felony, such person shall not, by reason thereof, be entitled to be acquitted, but the jury shall be entitled to return as their verdict that such person is guilty of such felony, and thereupon such person shall be liable to be punished in the same manner as if he had been convicted upon an indictment for such misdemeanor; and no person so tried for felony or misdemeanor shall be liable to be afterwards prosecuted for felony or misdemeanor on the same facts." There should also be a proviso enabling a jury to return an open verdict of guilty in cases where it appears to be doubtful whether, in point of law, the offence amounts to a felony or misdemeanor, and a consideration of Crown Cases Reserved to decide whether the verdict should be for the graver or minor offence.

Lastly, in certain cases great inconvenience results from the comparative inequality of the punishment. An old offender, who has been guilty of a simple larceny after a previous conviction, may be sent to penal servitude for a term of ten years, and cannot be sentenced to a less term than seven years, while a man may be repeatedly convicted of the crime of false pretences without being liable to any heavier punishment than five years penal servitude. A second conviction for certain misdemeanours undoubtedly should be attended with the same consequences as a second conviction for felony.

If the present classification of crimes is to continue, the reforms we have suggested in our statute law appear to be indispensable if justice is to be properly administered. The question whether the distinction between felonies and misdemeanours ought altogether to be abolished, or at least considerably modified (which, if practicable, would be far preferable to patching up the present system), we must leave for a future occasion.

SURVIVORSHIP.—ITS PERIOD, ITS MEANING.

WAITE v. VARAH (34 L. T. Rep. N. S. 437).

(Continued from page 153.)

HAVING continued our selection of cases as to the period of survivorship down to the most recent reported, we now proceed to consider those in which survivor has been interpreted to mean other. The last case on this head was decided by the Court of Appeal only a few days since, and is by name Waite v. Varah. The primary or etymological meaning of the word survive was discussed in Waite v. Varah as it had been previously in Re Clark, where Lord Justice Knight Bruce was of opinion that it might be held without impropriety that the words "who shall survive me" mean who shall be living after me, and he was not sure that that was not their strictly correct meaning. He accordingly, with Lord Justice Turner, construed a gift by will to M. C. for life, and after her death to "all and every the children of the said M. C. who shall survive me," so as to include children of M. C. born after the death of the testator: (Re the Estate of Clark, deceased, and Re the Covent Garden Approach and Southwark and Westminster Communication Act 1857, 3 D. J. & S. 111.)

In Doe v. Wainwright (5 Term. Reps. 427) the limitations by deed were to tenants for life, and then to the child or children of one of them in tail as tenants in common, and in case any such child or children should die without issue of his or their bodies, then the part of such child or children should be and remain to the use of the surviving child or children, and the heirs of his, her, or their bodies issuing, and in case all the said children should die without issue, then to remain over in fee. In construing the limitations, Lord Chief Justice Kenyon considered that it was not a question of implication, for cross-remainders to some extent had been created; the extent was the question. Did the creation include not only the individual children, but the several lines of those children? The word "surviving" here, as in the other cases, created the difficulty; or, to use the expression of the Chief Justice, was "the only word that distressed the case." The distress was, however, relieved by the use in the ulterior limitation of the word "all": "In case all the said children shall die without issue, then over and accordingly cross remainders amongst the childrens' children, as well as amongst the children, was held to be the requisite construction." His Lordship also remarked that no technical, precise form of words is necessary to create cross remainders; it is sufficient to say that there shall be cross remainders, though in the verbosity of conveyancers an abundance of words is generally introduced in deeds for this purpose.

In Milsom v. Audry (5 Ves. 465), Lord Alvanley, after considerable hesitation, adopted the strict construction of the word survivor. On the other hand, the great and experienced mind of Lord Chancellor Eldon, in Wilmot v. Wilmot (8 Ves. 10), in order to give effect to the intention construed the word as other. In Eyre v. Marsden, Lord Langdale (2 Keen, 564), and on appeal, Lord Chancellor Cottenham (4 M. & Cr. 231), made a similar construction. Vice-Chancellor Shadwell, in Acton v. Brooks (7 Sim. 204), and Hawkins v. Hamerton (16 Sim. 410) did the same.

Smith v. Osborne (6 H. L. Cas. 376) contained a gift to two as tenants in common in tail; and if either should die without issue, to the survivor in tail, and if both so died, then over. Upon this case the Irish Master of the Rolls, whose judgment was cited with great respect by Vice-Chancellor James in Badger v. Gregory (English L. Rep. 8 Eq. Cas. 78) remarked that such gifts are evidently intended to provide for the line of issue of each of the persons first named, as well as for those persons themselves. By survivorship is meant the continuation of the lines to be provided for, and the devise to the first taker is expressly of a transmissible estate, and not merely for life. The same result has been held to follow on similar reasoning, when the first devise is not of an estate tail, but the will gives life estates with limitations expressly to the issue followed by a gift to survivors and their issue, and a gift over on failure of all and their issues: (Browne v. Bainsford, Ir. L. Rep. 1 Eq. 384). The cases of Re Thorpe (1 De J. & S. 453), Hurry v. Morgan (L. Rep. 3 Eq. 152), Holland v. Alsop (29 Bea. 438), and Re Keep's Will (32 Bea. 122), and also Browne v. Bainsford itself were similar to Doe v. Wainwright, in that the ulterior limitation was in case all the children died without issue.

In Re Corbet's Trusts, Vice-Chancellor Wood (as Lord Alvanley had done before him) adopted the strict construction, considering that the later authorities leant more strongly than the early ones thereto.

In Re Corbet's Trusts (Johnson 591), was as follows: Favouring the literal and strict interpretation, the Vice-Chancellor held that a legacy in trust for A., and to pay the income to her, with limitations over to her issue, and to the survivors of A., B., and C., and their issue, vested absolutely in A., on failure of the subsequent limitations. He also held, on a gift to a class and their issue, and in case of the death of one without leaving issue, to the survivor, or survivors and their issue, that the word survivors could not be read other, merely on the ground of the improbability if the testator intending the interests of the issue to depend on the period of their parent's death.

In Re Ustick (35 Bea. 338), the Master of the Rolls refused to construe the word as other. But Smith v. Osborne (6 H. L. Cas. 375), is an authority for less strictness, though some observations of Lord Cranworth are to the opposite effect. In Badger v. Gregory (21 L. T. Rep. N. S. 137; L. Rep. 8 Eq. Cas. 78), Vice-Chancellor James was satisfied that there was nothing in the contents of the will to distinguish the case from the many reported cases in which, in favour of the general intent the word survivors had been construed others. He thought that there was some vernacular not in uncommon use with testators, in which the word is used in that artificial sense, or that there is a great liability in testators to fall into the same mistake of using the one word instead of the other. In Waite v. Varah Lord Justice James stated that he adhered to his decision in Badger v. Gregory; he desired to uphold decisions; this being so the early decisions were of no consequence. We think the Lord Justice unduly depreciated the early decisions, for Lord Chief Justice Kenyon, Lord Chancellor Eldon, Lord Langdale, Lord Chancellor Cottonham, and Vice-Chancellor Shadwell, had, as we have shown, preceded him in taking the less strict construction.

In Re Charles' Trusts (9 L. Rep. Eq. 378; 22 L. T. Rep. N. S. 151), the testator bequeathed his residue to his wife for life, and after her death one-fifth thereof unto each of his sons, J. and C., absolutely, and to be paid and transferred to them respectively, or to such of them as should be living at the decease of the wife, or the children of such of them as may be then dead, the children taking the deceased parent's share, with benefit of survivorship between the two sons in the event of either dying without issue in the lifetime of the testator. C. survived the testator, but died a bachelor in the lifetime of the widow; J. survived the widow. Vice-Chancellor Malins was of opinion not only that it was the general intention of the testator, but that it is the result of the grammatical construction of his language, that if one son died before the tenant for life, the son who survived the tenant for life should take two-fifths. It may or may not have been the general intention, but the grammatical construction of the language gave the "benefit of survivorship as between the two sons, in the event of either dying without issue, in his (the testator's) lifetime."

In Re Arnold's Trusts (23 L. T. Rep. N. S. 337; 39 L. J. 875, Ch.; L. Rep. 10 Eq. Ca. 252) Vice Chancellor Malins construed other surviving as other; and in Burt v. Hillyer, Vice-Chancellor Malins held an executory bequest to surviving children or their families to mean other children living at the time of possession and the families of such of them as were dead (L. Rep. 14 Eq. Ca. 180). In Melson v. Giles (L. Rep. 5 C.P. 614; 39 L. J. 325; 22 L. T. Rep. N. S. 797) the general intention was held to govern.

In Wade v. Littlewood (L. Rep. 8, Ch. App. 73), Lord Chancellor Selborne said he did not entirely assent to language which is to be found pervading almost all the cases upon questions of this kind; that the question is whether the word survivor is to be read other. He thought there was certainly a very strong probability that anyone using the word survivor did not precisely mean other by it, but had in his mind some idea of survivorship, and if the question was simply whether you were to turn it into other and say it was used merely by mistake for the word other, which was the true word to express the testator's meaning, there was undoubtedly a strong onus probandi cast upon anyone who would do that violence to the literal meaning of the word. On the other hand he thought it would be a strange thing to hold that so many testators were in the habit of using the word survivor when they simply meant "other." Generally speaking a reason of some kind will be found for the use of the word "survivor" where it occurs, though it may very possibly be, and often in these cases is, an imperfect expression not expressing completely and exhaustively the whole intention. If no such explanation can be suggested it is a strong argument against any construction that would reject the word in its proper and primary meaning altogether, and substitute a word which has a different meaning. Nevertheless, Lord Chancellor Selborne, like other able judges, particularly Lord Chancellor Westbury, in Rolfe v. Perry (9 Jur. Rep. N. 853; L. T. Rep. N. S. 441) was of opinion that there can be nothing more certain than that every will is to be construed by itself, not with reference to other wills.

In Cross v. Malby (L. Rep. 20 Eq. Ca. 378), a testator directed the income of the residue of his estate to be divided between all his sons as tenants in common, with benefit of survivorship between them, in case any or either of them should die without issue, and in case any child or children, who should be entitled under the trusts of his will to any principal, money, or income, should die leaving issue, the principal money or share from which the interest of such child or children should be derived, should go and be divided amongst such issue as tenants in common. He left five sons; two died leaving issue, three died without issue; the last survivor was one of the three. Vice-Chancellor Malins thought that there was no magic in the word survivor, that it must be read as other whenever the meaning rendered it necessary, and that the "benefit of survivorship" meant that it was to go over if anyone died without issue.

We now come to the most recent decision, Waite v. Varah, which not only confirms the doctrine as to intention, but will, doubtless, be considered to have settled the law for some time to come. It brings us back to one of the earliest decisions, viz., that by Lord Kenyon, in Doe v. Wainwright.

By will a fund was conveyed to trustees who were to pay the income in equal portions to the three children of the testator during their lives, and after the death of each child the share of the fund to which such child was to be entitled for life, was to go to his issue. And in case, and so often as any of the three children should die without leaving issue, the share as well original as accruing, to which such child should become entitled for life, was to be in trust for the survivors or survivor of the children for their, his, or her respective life or lives in equal shares if more than one. And after the death of each survivor the surviving or accruing share to which such survivor should become entitled for life, was to be in trust for his or her issue. And in case all three children should die without leaving issue the fund was to be in trust for the representatives of the survivor. The three children survived the testator, and they died, only one of them, the one who died second, leaving issue. Vice-Chancellor Hall held that his issue was entitled to the whole fund. The assignee from the child who died last of half the fund appeared.

In this very important case, decided by the Court of Appeal March 17th ult., Lord Chancellor Selborne's judgment in Waite v. Littlewood was held to be undistinguishable and to govern. Lord Justice Baggallay thought the question was one between the liberal interpretation and the testator's intention, ascertained from the whole will and a modified interpretation. Vice-Chancellor Hall, in adopting the former, had not agreed with Vice-Chancellor Wood, in Re Corbet's Trusts. But the testator's three children were the primary objects of his bounty, and equality between the three stirpes was a fair inference. The liberal interpretation in this case would make the issues right to the corpus depend upon surviving the parent—a most unlikely intention. It would also make an intestacy of the corpus. But neither intestacy nor caprice would justify receding from the liberal interpretation unless the whole will required it. There were numerous other indications and certain provisions, though insufficient to effect the intention, were not inconsistent with cross limitations. Lord Justice James agreed, and was of opinion that they must overrule or follow Lord Selborne's decision. The court ought not to look for minute differences in words, but adhere to general rules in order to avoid the heart-burning of litigation. The object in cutting down the life estates was to benefit the children, and he adhered to his own decision in Badger v. Gregory. Lord Justice Mellish agreed the will contained one disposition of property expressing an intention to benefit three children and their issue. One clause alone might not raise an estate in the issue, but the pronoun all in the expression "all my children dying without issue" was most important.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

By fits and starts our columns are inundated with correspondence on one of those many professional questions which every one must wish—for the sake of peace and quiet—to bury and forget, but which will remain as long as the world lasts or until the cause for such grievances is rooted out. We allude to the ten years' clerks question, in regard to which many letters by solicitors and ten years' clerks have been addressed to us during the past few weeks, and including our present issue. The origin of this most recent ebullition of professional feeling on the subject is to be traced to the annual provincial meeting of the Incorporated Law Society held at Oxford last month. On that occasion the whole question was discussed, and some very hard things were said of the ten years' clerks, while some of the objections then raised to the present system of admitting ten years' clerks were certainly neither new nor ill founded. At the Oxford meeting, Mr. Dodd, M.P., a member of the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, said that the educational standard for admission on the roll was at present far too low, and in this opinion we are disposed to concur. Mr. Dodd naturally came during his observations to the ten years' clerks, and said, "I think we should bring our influence to bear upon the judges to prevent the preliminary examination being dispensed with, as it has been systematically for years in the case of ten years' clerks." This is strictly true, but, on a reference to the last annual report of the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, we read that some of the judges have expressed a wish to consult with the council before giving ten years' clerks the relief from the preliminary examination which they have usually hitherto enjoyed. One of the judges went the length of saying that the opinion of the council on this matter, and in such applications, "would always be of great assistance," and the annual report proceeds, "the council have reason to believe that their correspondence with the judges on this subject has been attended with beneficial results, for it is now the practice for two of the judges to consult the council before deciding upon cases of this kind." We can only hope that all the other learned judges will in time pursue a similar course, which, we venture to think, ought to be followed, not less in the interests of the public than for the purpose of keeping up the tone of the Profession. The feelings of solicitors can best be gathered from the fact that an observation at the Oxford meeting by Mr. Smith, of Sheffield, to the effect that "as long as ten years' men are admitted without having to pass the preliminary examination, they would never be able to purify the Profession," was met with loud applause. The preliminary examination has been in vogue since 1866, and no ten years' clerk can now say he entered a solicitor's office hoping to get admission into the Profession at a time when this examination was not heard of. The examination, moreover, cannot be said to be so severe a test as to amount to an insurmountable impediment to capable men. Further, if the Legislature had intended that ten years' clerks should be exempt from passing the preliminary examination it could have so enacted in the 4th section of 23 & 24 Vict. cap. 127, which already offers a boon to ten years' clerks by relieving them from two years' service under articles, which is no mean concession in their interest and in their favour, but further, if the Legislature had so provided, then the whole raison d'être of the preliminary examination would at once disappear, for the evident object of this requirement was to keep men out of the Profession whose general education was of so low an order as to unfit them for a profession in which the best education is none too good. Again, sect. 8 of the Solicitors' Act of 1860 gives the judges power to make regulations for an examination in general knowledge, either before articles or before admission, and a much more reasonable rule would be for the judges to refuse to grant orders dispensing with this examination, but to grant orders in the case of ten years' clerks, allowing them to present themselves at any time before admission on the roll. We are convinced that the power given in the last clause of this sect. 8 never contemplated the wholesale exemption in favour of ten years' clerks, that has so long obtained. Solicitors are however, often themselves responsible for the admission of men, not regularly qualified. It is no uncommon thing for a solicitor, having a useful clerk, to give him articles, simply because by so doing he can secure greater ease and leisure thereby. We could point to many cases in which this has been done in the face of protests by local practitioners who may be regarded as first class men, who labour to uphold the character and social position of their Profession in the locality in which they practise; But we do not wish to be misunderstood. We "into the ranks of our Profession all men" "an years' clerks, have shown themselves fitted on social as well as professional grounds to become solicitors. The more they are the better we shall be pleased, not only because true merit should find its own reward, but because by recruiting our ranks in the direction indicated we add strength and power to our Profession. Subject to compliance with the necessary tests as to education, no reasonable objection can be made to ten years' clerks.

A QUESTION of interest, and indeed importance, to solicitors was raised on Tuesday last in the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court, before Field, J., in a case of Reg. v. Jervis. The trial of this criminal case had been removed from the court below by certiorari, and both when the matter was before the magistrates and subsequently, when the usual recognizances were entered into at the time of the writ of certiorari being granted, a solicitor (Mr. George Lewis) became the surety of the defendant. On learning this fact the learned judge is reported to have said: "I thought it was not considered a right thing that a solicitor should be accepted as bail for his client." In point of law there is no ground whatever for objection, and we should be glad to know in what light it can be considered a wrong thing for a solicitor so far to befriended his client. Solicitors seldom do this, and it is not a course we can recommend, but there may be, indeed often are, circumstances in which it almost becomes the duty of a solicitor to step out of the way thus to assist a client under duress of imprisonment. A notable case occurred not long ago, in which a little girl was charged with stealing some flowers, and the justices having decided upon an adjournment, the solicitor for the defence, from benevolent motives, offered himself as bail, and after some hesitation on the part of the Bench, he was accepted, and the child liberated. This case was referred to by some of the daily papers under the heading of "Justices' Justice," the conviction of the child, which subsequently followed, being condemned by the lay press generally. If Mr. Justice Field—for whose opinion on a professional question of this kind we entertain much regard—would have it go forth to the Profession that a solicitor is doing a wrong thing in offering himself as bail, and that magistrates do a wrong thing in accepting such bail, we venture to protest against this view. We can go no further than to say that generally it is not desirable or expedient, but that it must depend in each case whether a solicitor may offer himself, and if he offers himself it should be considered incumbent on the Bench to accept him as bail, unless, of course, there were any circumstances pointing to the presumption that the defendant and the solicitor were conspiring together to defeat the ends of justice, and which, of course, is possible under any circumstances, and with laymen as well. And here let us say that nothing would be more cruel or unjust than to impute to a solicitor some sinister or corrupt motive merely because in the largeness of his heart, and convinced of the innocence of his client, he steps forward to accept a responsibility outside his professional services. We cannot advocate solicitors taking such extra professional responsibilities, but when we find it resting upon them we can only complain that they have been more benevolent than prudent.

THE following are among the solicitors who were on the 9th inst. elected chief magistrates of cities and boroughs in England and Wales: Brighton, Mr. C. Lamb, admitted Easter Term 1840; Cambridge, Mr. Frederick Barlow, admitted Trinity Term 1833; Dorchester, Mr. H. Lock, admitted Michaelmas Term 1835; Dover, Mr. Alderman Fielding, admitted Michaelmas Term 1849; Gloucester, Mr. Anthony Jones, admitted Hilary Term 1833; Manchester, Mr. Alderman Heywood, admitted Hilary Term 1849; Newark, Mr. W. E. Tallents, admitted Michaelmas Term 1864; Peterborough, Mr. Andrew Percival, admitted Michaelmas Term 1839; Tiverton, Mr. G. W. Cockram, admitted Hilary Term 1847; Truro, Mr. J. G. Chilcott, admitted Hilary Term 1840; Wakefield, Mr. W. H. Gill, admitted Trinity Term 1839; Wigan, Mr. Alderman W. Mayhew, admitted Easter Term 1860. We shall publish a supplemental list in our next issue.

A CASE of Re Elliott before the learned judge of the Croydon County Court, and reported in our last issue, page 30, calls for comment. This was a motion for the removal of proceedings under sect. 80 of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, on the ground that the petitioning creditor was a client of the learned registrar of the Croydon County Court (Mr. W. H. Rowland). No doubt there are many County Court registrars who, by their indiscreet action in rendering professional service to those who are brought, or who come before the courts of which they are registrars, lay themselves open to adverse criticism by their professional brethren. Without casting the slightest imputation upon the learned registrar in this case, it is perfectly clear that some such feeling as the one we have described exists between him and the one hand and some of those solicitors who practice in his court on the other. And the step taken by the eight solicitors who presented a memorial to the judge upon the same point naturally suggests that it was considered as some such feeling existed. The learned judge way out of the supposed difficulty, which in this case, we cannot but think never existed, by pointing out that his registrar should not send any case to him (the judge), in adjudication if the registrar was in any way interested in it, professionally or otherwise. We doubt this should be so, but, speaking generally, we are of opinion that the time has come when County Court registrars should be prohibited from practising in the district within which is court of which they are registrars are situated. This is rendered more than ever necessary, in all events desirable, by the creating of class registries under the Judicature Acts. The jurisdiction of County Courts is three times what it was ten years ago. Of course the restriction which we advocate should be accompanied in all cases by an increase in the remuneration of the learned gentlemen, commensurate with the responsible and quasi-judicial office which they fill to the entire satisfaction of the public.

ALTHOUGH in the time of Queen Anne no man could be admitted on the rolls of any court as a solicitor until admitted of one of the Inns of Court, thereby justifying the contention that solicitors and students for the solicitors' profession, may now fairly ask to be allowed to participate in the wealth of the Inns of Court as applied to legal education; and notwithstanding the demand for a school of law and the reform of the Inns of Court, yet the Bench are as rigid as ever in their exclusion of those who belong to the solicitors' branch of the Profession. For instance, the Bench of the Middle Temple have determined to send annually to students of their society four scholarships of the value of 100 guineas each, and four of 50 guineas each, under such regulations as may be recommended by a committee to be nominated for the purpose. It is hopeless to look for any such scheme in which the narrow prejudices of long days shall find no place, and thus some substantial reform in regard to legal education in this country is nearer than ever. It is impossible to doubt that the solicitors' profession in earlier times contributed largely to what now constitutes the wealth of the Inns of Court.

THE following has appeared in a Manchester newspaper of very recent date:

FOR Legal Advice at a vast saving in any matter of law apply to Mr. Medway, solicitor, 30, New-street, Great Ancoats, between 7 and 8.15 p.m. Can anything be worse?

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE

COURT OF APPEAL (WESTMINSTER).

Wednesday, Nov. 15.

(Before KELLY, C.B., MELLISH, L.J., and BRETT and AMPHLETT, JJ.)

SHIELDS AND CO. v. THE FELLING COAL, IRON, AND CHYMICAL COMPANY.

"No issue to try"—Duty of Judges.

This case raised a curious question as to the operation of the new system. The claim was for £70 for work done in repairing boilers, and the defence was that the work was not done properly, so that £20 was sufficient. The Exchequer Court sent it to the County Court of Northumberland for trial, and the judge sent it back, as there was, he said, "no issue to try," and two of the judges of the Exchequer Division—Kelly, C.B. and Pollock, B.—thought that he was right, thus leaving the case undecided. The plaintiff appealed against this decision, and as Kelly, C.B. was a party to it, he did not take his seat until it was heard.

G. Bruce appeared for the appellant.

THE COURT were quite clear that the County Court judge was wrong, and that, therefore, the decision of the judges in the Exchequer Division upholding it was also wrong, for the substance of the order was that the County Court judge should decide the case.

MELLISH, L.J., said the County Court judge ought to have been astute to find grounds for deciding the case instead of being astute in finding reasons for not deciding it.

BRETT, J.A., said there were not now, strictly speaking, "issues" of mere fact, the facts being set forth by both parties fully in their statements, and on those statements of the case it was not that there were "issues" to be tried, but a case to be determined.

CLARK v. CALLOW.

Pleading—Statute of Frauds.

as illustrated very well what will be the effect of the new system shortly to come into operation under the Act of last session. The defendant, a dealer, entered into an oral contract with the plaintiff, a farmer, to buy of him sixty quarters of barley, at 39s. a quarter, according to sample and upon certain terms, one of which was that the barley was to be delivered at the Marsh Railway Station. The defendant delivered there, but was not accepted, the amount was above £10 it was necessary under the Statute of Frauds, that there should be a contract in writing or an actual delivery and acceptance, which it appeared the defendant denied. The plaintiff in his statement stated the alleged contract, and alleged that the barley was delivered to the defendant at Marsh Station and there received by him. The defendant in his statement denied the case denied the plaintiff's statement, but stating in terms that the contract was alluding in any way to the Statute of Frauds denied the delivery of the barley. The defendant tried at the Assizes at Oakham, before Mr. Field, who, when the defence of the Statute of Frauds was set up, refused to entertain it, and left the question to the jury as to whether the barley, and its being according to sample, and the jury found for the plaintiff for the defendant moved in the Queen's Bench, where the action was brought, to set aside the verdict, on the ground that the question of the Statute of Frauds was really raised, the claim alleged that the barley was to be delivered and received by the defendant, statement of the defence denied it. The case was moved before two other judges, Sir James and Mr. Justice Quain, who had a great deal to say in getting accurately at the facts on the facts of counsel; but in the result they gave judgment for the plaintiff, confirming the view of the court at the trial, and now there was a unanimous decision. Under the new system the case would be moved before the judge who heard the case, and who would have a perfect knowledge of it, having all the evidence on his mind who at the trial would have the power to take into consideration, if necessary, until he was satisfied and could consult the books, and counsel on the question, as Mr. Justice

Field (with Tapping), for the defendant, said this court to set aside the judgment, found that the defence of the Statute of Frauds was really raised between the parties. The court, however, thought otherwise, and would not entertain the application, thus upholding the judgment for the plaintiff. They thought that the defence of the Statute of Frauds was not raised by the defendant, as there was no allusion to it in his statement of defence, the only question raised was as to a contract, which was proved. In this respect there was no difference between the new system and the old, that a party could not at the trial raise a defence he had not set up in his statement of defence.

C.B. said.—If the defendant had intended to admit an oral contract to the effect that he should have said so, and insisted on it, and then the plaintiff replied that the barley was accepted, the defendant could have denied, and thus the question would have been distinctly raised. It was possible to tell from the statement of defence which did not refer to the statute, that it was intended to set it up, for many men thought it discreditable to rely on it. L.J. concurred.—The object of the Statute was that if a party intended to rely on it he should say so.

J.A. was of the same opinion.—As a rule all that was required by the new system was that the parties should state facts, to the judge thereupon to eliminate the dispute. But where the defence was a defence under the Statute of Frauds—it should be distinctly referred to, for such a defence implied that there was a contract, in fact an oral statement, and the defendant, if he intends to rely on it, should say so, and set it up distinctly. J.A. also concurred.

Judgment for the plaintiff.

HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.

CHANCERY DIVISION.

Wednesday, Nov. 15.

Trial by jury.

On behalf of all parties to the legal action of Cave v. Mackenzie, for as to the trial thereof, which, he submitted to be by jury, provided this branch of the court could have a trial before it with a jury. The case, it may be remembered, is the one in which the defendant gave notice requiring a trial by jury; and his Lordship directed issues to be tried by Baron Huddleston, at the last Hertfordshire assizes, which were not tried for want of time, or some other reason.

JESSEL, M.R., said it was a singular thing that since the coming into operation of the Judicature Acts he had directed issues in three cases only, and in each of those cases, from causes over which he had no control, the order had proved abortive. According to his recollection of the present case, it was one which ought not to be tried without jury, the question being simply whether somebody bought property on his own account or as agent for another person. If the parties really wished for a trial by jury he would do his best to gratify them by directing fresh issues, but he was determined not to try any case with a jury unless and until the Court of Appeal should decide that he had power so to try a case.

SPECIMEN OF A DIGEST OF THE LAW RELATING TO SOLICITORS OF THE SUPREME COURT.

ARTICLE I.

DEFINITIONS.

A SOLICITOR of the Supreme Court is an officer whose duty it is, when retained for the purpose, to act for a party to an action or any other judicial proceeding, and to do all things necessary to prosecute or defend in behalf of the party so retaining him.

The person so employing or retaining a solicitor is called his client.

NOTE 1.

Formerly the name of attorney-at-law, solicitor, and proctor were applied to those officers who practised in courts of common law, courts of equity, and in the Ecclesiastical and Admiralty Courts respectively; but since the Judicature Act 1873 came into operation "Solicitor of the Supreme Court" is the appropriate description of all persons hitherto admitted, or who might hereafter, but the passing of the above Act, be designated as solicitors, attorneys, or proctors of any court whose jurisdiction has been transferred to the High Court of Justice or the Court of Appeal.

Judicature Act 1873 (36 & 40 Vict. c. 66), s. 87.

The term "attorney" was common to attorneys of the Superior Courts of Law at Westminster, of the Courts of Common Pleas of Lancaster and Durham. These courts, as well as the High Court of Chancery, the Admiralty, Probate, and Divorce Courts, have been absorbed in the High Court of Justice.

Ib. sect. 10.

All solicitors of the Supreme Court are now admitted by the Master of the Rolls. As far as circumstances will permit, they are entitled to the same privileges and subject to the same obligations as if the Judicature Act had not passed.

Ib. sect. 87.

NOTE 2.

The above definition is limited to solicitors, qua solicitors. It does not, of course, include the various vocations followed by solicitors in addition to their professional duties as solicitors, such, for instance, as those of conveyancers, estate agents, house agents, notaries, parliamentary agents, patent agents, and the like; nor does it include the various offices and employments commonly filled by solicitors, such as those of clerks of the peace, town clerk, vestry clerk, commissioners to take oaths, and the like.

ARTICLE 2.

WHO MAY BE A SOLICITOR.

No person may be admitted as a solicitor unless he has been bound by contract in writing to serve as clerk during a prescribed term—that is to say, for five years as a general rule, but in exceptional cases for terms of three or four years, to a practising attorney or solicitor in England or Wales, and has duly served under such contract during such period, and passed the examinations prescribed.

6 & 7 Vict., c. 73, s. 3; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127.

ARTICLE 3.

SUMMARY OF CONDITIONS TO BE FULFILLED PREVIOUS TO ADMISSION.

(a.) As to the clerk.

1. He must be of proper age on being articulated.
2. He must hold no other office or employment during the period of his articles.
3. He must pass the prescribed examinations.

(b.) As to the solicitor to whom the clerk is articulated.

1. He must be a practising solicitor.
2. He must be practising for himself and not employed as writer or clerk by another solicitor.
3. He must not have more than two articulated clerks.

(c.) As to the service.

1. It must be for the whole period prescribed.
2. It must be continuous.
3. It must be in the business of solicitor.

(d.) As to the contract of service (articles of clerkship).

1. It must be in writing.
2. It must be stamped.

3. It must be enrolled and registered.
4. It must be at least for the time prescribed by law.

ARTICLE 4.

THE AGE OF THE CLERK.

The earliest age at which a clerk should be articulated is the age at which he may be supposed to be capable of applying himself intelligently to the business of a solicitor.

NOTE.

No absolute time can be assigned. The earliest age at which a solicitor can be admitted being twenty-one, and the longest period of serving as articulated clerk being five years, the age of fifteen or sixteen seems to be indicated as the earliest age for entering into articles. The age of nine is too early: (Re Donnan, 3 Swanst. 96n.)

ARTICLE 5.

THE CLERK MUST PASS THE PRESCRIBED EXAMINATIONS.

Three examinations must, as a rule, be passed before a clerk is admitted:—

- (1.) The preliminary, before entering into articles.
- (2.) The intermediate, during articles, in one of the two terms next before, or one of the two terms next after, one half of his term of service.
- (3.) The final, before admission.

NOTE.

This examination consists of two parts:—

Part I.

1. Reading aloud a passage from some English author.
2. Writing from dictation.
3. English grammar.
4. Writing a short English composition.
5. Arithmetic. The first four rules, simple and compound.
6. Geography of Europe and of the British Isles.
7. English history.
8. Elementary knowledge of Latin.

Part II. Two of the following subjects:—

1. Latin.
2. Greek, modern or ancient.
3. French.
4. German.
5. Spanish.
6. Italian.

Persons who produce a certificate of having passed any one of the following examinations will not be required to pass this examination:—

Moderations at Oxford.

The previous examination at Cambridge.

Arts examination for the second year at Durham.

Matriculation (first division only) at Dublin or London Universities.

Barristers and graduates are also excused.

Reg. 2. Hil. Term 1868.

It has become a frequent practice for the judges to dispense with this examination in the case of clerks who have served ten years:

See the proviso 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 8.

Fees (on receiving certificate) in London, £1; in country, 2s.

NOTE 2.

The intermediate is an examination "in such elementary works on the laws of England as may be appointed by the examiners, and in book keeping." The candidate is required to give to the secretary of the examiners one month's notice in writing, and leave with him the articles and assignment (if any) duly stamped and registered, under which he is serving his clerkship, with answers to the questions as to his due service and conduct up to that time.

His certificate of having passed a satisfactory examination must be signed by at least the major part of the examiners present at and conducting the examination.

If he fails to pass he may present himself again in the next and following term without leave of the examiners before the expiration of the second term next after one half of his term of service.

Fees on giving notice, 5s.; on receiving certificate, 15s.

NOTE 3.

Where the service expires in vacation the examination may take place in the preceding term.

23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 12.

This examination extends to all matters of business usually transacted by attorneys or solicitors.

Ib. s. 11.

Fees: 10s. on leaving articles of clerkship for inspection; 40s. for certificate.

ARTICLE 6.

THE SOLICITOR TO WHOM THE CLERK IS ARTICLED.

No attorney or solicitor shall have more than two articulated clerks at one and the same time, nor shall he take, have, or retain any such clerk after he has discontinued or left off practising as, or carrying on the business of, an attorney or solicitor, or whilst retained or employed as a writer or clerk by any other attorney or solicitor, service by any articulated clerk for and during the time his master shall be employed by another attorney or solicitor as writer or clerk, shall not be deemed or accounted as good service under the articles of clerkship.

6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 4.

ARTICLE 7.

WHERE TWO OR MORE SOLICITORS ARE IN PARTNERSHIP.

Where two or more solicitors are in partnership each may have two articulated clerks. These, however, be a separate binding on each.

solicitors to whom the clerk is articulated. The clerk will then be deemed the clerk of each of the solicitors to whom he is bound, and neither of the solicitors will be allowed to have more than one other articulated clerk: (Re Holland, L. Rep. 7, Q.B. 297; 41 L. J. 141, Q. B.; 26 L. T. Rep. N. S. 289.)

Note.

Although articles may be entered into with more than one of the members of a firm, it is obvious that there are sound reasons why articles should be entered into with one partner only. During the continuance of the firm inconvenience results to the partner to whom the clerk is bound, in that none of them can have more than one other such clerk; to the clerk, in that he cannot continue to serve the firm upon a dissolution, but must in that event happen enter into fresh articles: (See Ex parte Bayley, 9 B. & C. 691.)

6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 4.

ARTICLE 8.

OF THE LENGTH OF SERVICE REQUIRED.

As a general rule the articles of clerkship should be for five years. The following persons, however, may be admitted after three years' service:—

(a) The following graduates, provided their degree is not honorary, and* provided it has been taken before they became articulated:

Bachelors of Arts or Laws, in the University of Oxford, Cambridge, Dublin, Durham, or London, or in the Queen's University in Ireland, or in any of the Universities of Scotland.

Masters of Arts or Doctors of Laws in any of the Universities of Scotland.

23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 2, and **Ex parte Bradford*, 1 E. L. & E. 417.

(b) Persons who have been bona fide clerks to solicitors for ten years.

Ib. s. 4.

(c) Writers to the Signet in Scotland.

Ib.

(d) Persons who have been called to the English Bar, and who either before becoming barristers have been bound as articulated clerks for five years, or who, after ceasing to be barristers, have been bound for three years, and have in either case continued in service for three years, provided that in the case of the former the term shall be determined by consent.

Ib. s. 3.

Note 1.

The clerk must go through the ceremony of being disbarred voluntarily by the Inn of Court of which he is a member: (Ex parte Bateman, 6 Q. B. 853.)

Note 2.

A rule of the Inns of Court precludes an articulated clerk from keeping terms.

(e) Members of the Faculty of Advocates in Scotland.

35 & 36 Vict. c. 81.

In the following cases persons may be admitted after a service of four years: Under regulations made by the judges, persons who have successfully passed examinations at the universities may be admitted after having been bound by and having duly served articles for four years.

Ib. s. 5.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

COMPROMISE TO PAY COSTS—CAUSE OF ACTION—PROCEEDING CONCERNING PROPERTY—SECRETARY OF FRIENDLY SOCIETY.—Plaintiff, a solicitor, sued the secretary of a friendly society upon a compromise in a County Court application for relief by plaintiff's client against the society under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 41. The terms of the compromise were that the application should be withdrawn, that the society's appeal committee should entertain the complaint which they had previously refused, and that the society should pay the plaintiff's costs. Held, on demurrer, that a breach of this compromise was a good cause of action, and that this action was a proceeding concerning the property of the society within 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, s. 19, so as to justify its being brought, under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 101, s. 7, against the secretary: (Roberts v. Page, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 325. Q. B. Div.)

RULES OF COURT UNDER THE JUDICATURE ACTS—ORDER XXXVI., RULE 30—TRIAL BY REFEREE.—Order XXXVI., rule 30, of the Rules of Court under the Judicature Acts, relating to trials by referees, is directory only. Therefore, where a special referee did not sit de die in diem, as prescribed by that rule, the court refused to set aside the award: (Robinson v. Robinson, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 337. C. P. Div.)

PRINCIPAL AND SURETY—DISCHARGE OF SURETY BY ALTERATION IN ORIGINAL CONTRACT—DIVISIBILITY OF THE SECURITY—KNOWLEDGE OF THE SURETY.—If the principal creditor deprives the surety of any right he would have had against the original debtor, even though the surety is benefited thereby, the surety is discharged. Although the surety is aware that an alteration is being made in the original contract, he is not bound to express his dissent to the: (Polak v. Everett, 35 L. T. Rep. of App.)

MONEY RECEIVED—FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION—FRAUD.—Defendants, a limited company, had patented in England a process for utilising sewage. Plaintiff, acting ostensibly on his own account, but really on account of the company, bought from defendants, for £15,000, a grant of the exclusive right to use their process in Berlin. Plaintiff then conveyed his interest to L. for £30,000, and L. conveyed it for £30,000 to H.'s clerk, in trust for the intended Berlin company. The Berlin company was formed, and issued a prospectus, stating that they had the exclusive right to use defendants' process in Berlin. The £30,000 was paid to H., who kept £15,000 and paid £15,000 to defendants in satisfaction of plaintiff's obligations. The object of the scheme was to float the Berlin company, in which H. was interested. No exclusive right had been or could be obtained in Berlin, and plaintiff and H. knew this, but defendants' directors did not. In an action to recover the £15,000 paid to defendants, Held (affirming the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division), that plaintiff was not entitled to recover, because, knowing that there was no Berlin patent, he had only bargained for an ostensible grant, which he had got, and because his claim was founded on fraud, and a rule to enter the verdict for defendants was made absolute: Begbie v. Phosphate Sewage Company (Limited), 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 350. Ct. of App.)

MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT—DECREE ABSOLUTE FOR DIVORCE—VARIATION OF SETTLEMENT AFTER DECREE ABSOLUTE.—Where the court has varied a settlement after decree absolute for a divorce, and ordered payment of a fixed income to the wife, if she be an innocent party, the court will not impose the condition dum casta et sola vixerit, or dum sola vixerit: (Gladstone v. Gladstone, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 380. Divorce.)

PATENT—INFRINGEMENT—ACCOUNT—EVIDENCE.—Plaintiff having taken out a patent for improvements in the machinery for clipping horses, defendant offered, if the plaintiff would give him a licence for the manufacture, to pay the sum of 1s. 2d. on all horse clippers sold by him (the defendant) after a certain date, and plaintiff accepted the offer. A bill was filed for specific performance of this contract, and a decree was made, declaring that the agreement ought to be specifically performed, ordering a licence to be granted, and directing an account. On a summons on behalf of the plaintiff to surcharge the defendant on account of certain clippers asserted to have been made according to the plaintiff's invention, the defendant denied that his clippers came within the limits of the patent, and produced the specification of an American patent as evidence of the construction to be put on the specification of the English patent. Held (reversing the decision of Bacon, V.C.), that on the principle that a licensee could not in any way dispute the validity of the patent, the evidence was inadmissible, and further that the clippers made by the defendants were within the plaintiff's patent: (Adie v. Clark, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 349. Ct. of App.)

NEW TRIAL—EVIDENCE PREMATURELY ADMITTED—WITNESS CALLED BUT NOT EXAMINED.—A new trial will not be granted for evidence prematurely admitted, but which becomes admissible in the course of a trial. In an action against the defendants for non-payment of certain money for a machine, the defence was that the machine was faulty in its construction. In opening the case plaintiff's counsel, in order to show that the defence was not bona fide, proposed to read in evidence a letter written by W. (defendant's son), who had the management of the machine, and alone corresponded with the plaintiff. Subsequently W., who was in court, was called as a witness by the defendants, but asked no question; the learned judge then ruled that the letter was receivable in evidence against the defendants. A verdict was found for the plaintiffs, and the defendants have applied for a new trial: Held (per Blackburn and Lush, J.J.), that whether or not the evidence was admissible in the first instance, it subsequently became so by W. being called as a witness, and the fact that W. was not examined by the party calling him, nor asked whether he had acted bona fide, made no difference: (Faunt v. Wallace, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 361. Q. B. Div.)

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless some other claimants sooner appear.]

BRENSFORD (Lord Jno. Geo.), Archbishop of Armagh, and Kenyon (Hon. Edwd.), of Coxheath Hall, Derbyshire, £195 0s. 2d. three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Hon. Edwd. Kenyon, the survivor.

APPOINTMENTS UNDER THE JOINT-STOCK WINDING-UP ACTS.

BAYK CONSOLIDATED MINING COMPANY (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by 10th Jan. their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to A. Good, 7, Poultry, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Jan. 24; at the chambers of V.C. H., at one o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

BAYSWATER CLUB AND SKATING RINK COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up to be heard Nov. 21, 1876. V.C. H.

KOSHER MEAT SUPPLY ASSOCIATION (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Dec. 11 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to G. W. Wood, 4, St. James's court, Basinghall-street, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Dec. 21, at the chambers of V.C. H., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

LAVATORIES COMPANY (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Nov. 30 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to James G. Osborne, 14, Queen's street, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Dec. 11; at the chambers of V.C. H., at one o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

CONWAY (James), 96, Upper Parliament-street, London. Esq. Dec. 9; Wm. Orford, solicitor, Brown-street, Manchester. Dec. 21; M.R., at eleven o'clock.

DEEM (Alfred), 5, Eastcheap, London, and 11, Mansell New Cross, Kent, merchant. Dec. 9; Jas. J. Hall, solicitor, 2, Guildhall-chambers, Basinghall-street, London. Dec. 21; M.R., at eleven o'clock.

FAWCE (Isabella), Tynemouth, spinster. Dec. 15; V. C. H., at ten o'clock.

GLADSTONE (Murray), Manchester, and of Pommersheim, merchant. Dec. 9; Pears and Logan, solicitors, 3, Harrington-street, Liverpool. Dec. 20; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

GLADSTONE (Wm.), 57, Old Broad-street, London. Dec. 30; H. T. Norton, solicitor, 24, Coleman-street, London. Jan. 25; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

GODFREY (Henry Wm.), Bank House, Hatfield, gentleman. Dec. 11; Richard Champney, solicitor, Kingston-upon-Hull. Dec. 22; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

JOHNSON (Samuel), Brades, timber yard, Bowley, Stafford, timber dealer and licensed victualler. Dec. 11; W. H. Griffin, solicitor, Temple-row West, Birmingham. Dec. 21; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

MATTHEW (Augustus S.), 7, Montpelier-row, Titchfield, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 11; C. H. Compton, solicitor, 19, Great George-street, Westminster. Dec. 11; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

MATTHEW (Caroline), 29, Loudoun-road, St. John's, Middlesex, widow. Dec. 15; Watkins and Co., solicitors, 11, Sackville-street, Middlesex. Dec. 21; V.C. H., at one o'clock.

MCBAY (William), 11, Charlotte-street, South Shields, land, master mariner. Dec. 9; Henry Kimber, solicitor, 79, Lombard-street, London. Dec. 19; V.C. H., at one o'clock.

RAWSTON (James), Alden-within Totton High St. Lancaster, cotton spinner and manufacturer. Dec. 11; Chas. Hall, solicitor, Accrington. Dec. 15; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

SMITH (Matilda), Spencer-street, Leamington, spinster. Dec. 31; Gamlen and Son, solicitors, 3, Gray's-inn-square, Middlesex. Jan. 10; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

SYMS (Morris Roberts), 6, Oxford-street, Middlesex, Hall, proprietor. Dec. 10; Wm. Millman, solicitor, Southampton-buildings, Chancery-lane, London. Dec. 11; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

WELLS (Louisa), formerly of 4, Crescent-place, Kensington, but late of 84, Crown-dale-road, Camden-square, Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 6; W. B. Brook, solicitor, 1, Strand, Middlesex. Dec. 15; M.R., at twelve o'clock.

WELLS (James), Bloxwich, Stafford, gentleman. Dec. 4; Wm. Rankin, solicitor, West Bromwich, Stafford. Dec. 14; M.R., at twelve o'clock.

WESTON (Lydia C.), late of Giron Rectory, Oxbridge, and afterwards of Weston Lodge, Redham, Surrey, widow. Dec. 21; Wm. Brewer, solicitor, 6, St. row, London. Jan. 8; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 3.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

ACKWORTH (Geo. F.), Star-hill, Rochester, Kent. Dec. 1; Parker and Clarke, solicitors, Rectory House, 5, Michael's-alley, Cornhill, London.

ANDERSON (William), 71, Seymour-street, Hyde-park, Middlesex, Esq. Dec. 23; Burne and Parker, solicitors, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

BAILEY Wm.), 66, Canterbury-road, Kilburn, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 30; Surr and Co., solicitors, 14, 4 church-lane, London.

BARRELL (Thomas), Keynham, Somerset, veterinary surgeon. Dec. 15; Fox and Whittuck, solicitors, 3, 1st street, Bristol.

BATTERS (Richard), formerly of Hough-hill, Didsley, Chester, but late of 17, Stooks-lane, Stalybridge, Cheshire, yeoman. Dec. 20; Buckley and Miller, solicitors, 8, 4 ford-street, Stalybridge.

BOWELL (Anna), formerly of 1, Markham-square, Chesh. Middlesex, but late of 18, Alford-street, Battersea, Surrey, widow. Jan. 1; G. Badham, 3, Salter's-hall, Cannon-street, London.

BROOKS (Sarah M.), Wilmington, Kent, widow. Dec. 1; Chas. R. Gibson, solicitor, Dartford, Kent.

BETTS (John), Leeds, hatter. Jan. 1; M. Cranswick, solicitor, 18, Park-row, Leeds.

BELGROVE (Thos.), Galleys-lane, Great Brickhill, Bucks. Jan. 1; John Newton, solicitor, Leamington, Leamington.

BROWN (Emily), Clarence-terrace, Regent's Park, NW sex, and of Shirley Cottage, Maidenhead, Berks, wd. Jan. 10; A. Storey, solicitor, 6, King's-road, Bedford's London.

BUTT (Henry Jno.), Surbiton Lodge, Swamond, Ryde, Isle of Wight, Esq. Dec. 22; Wynne and S. solicitors, 46, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

CATT (Henry), Ivy Lodge, Lewisham, Kent, wine merchant. Dec. 11; Parker and Son, solicitors, Lewisham.

CARNEY (Emma), 39, Wellington-terrace, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, spinster. Dec. 30; Charles and Youll, solicitors, 15, Grainger-street West, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

COOPER (Wm.), formerly of 51, Old Market-street, Bristol, and late of 8, Burlington-buildings, Redland, West-upon-Trym, Bristol, surgeon. Jan. 1; Harold B. set solicitor, Guildhall-chambers, Bristol.

CORRIN (James), 23, Hornsey-road, Holloway, Middlesex, butcher. Dec. 21; W. H. Lydall, solicitor, 5, 11 field-street, London.

CRATFORD (Louisa A.), formerly of Sherborne, Dorset, late of 2, Avenue-villas, Old Dover-road, Blackheath, Kent, spinster. Jan. 11; Vandercorn, Law, and its solicitors, 24, Bush-lane, London.

DEAR (Hannah), Pole Green, Northampton, Halifax, Y shire, spinster. Dec. 21; Emmet and Emmet, solicitors, Halifax.

EDGECOMBE (Nathaniel), 12, Lion-hill, Clifton, Bristol, gentleman. Dec. 30; Richardson and Davies, solicitors, 29, Clare-street, Bristol.

FOSTER (Thos.), Oughtershaw, Arncliffe, York, gentle. Nov. 28; T. F. R. Hammond, solicitor, West, Bedford.

Colonel Jos., Rosehill, Abbot's Langley, Herts. Dec. 12; Currie and Co., solicitors, 32, Lincoln's-inn, London.

Mr. L., 48, Grosvenor-street, Middlesex, and in Park, Tadcaster, York. Esq. Dec. 23; Farrer, and Co., solicitors, 68, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

Mr. Olddown, Tockington, Olveston, Gloucester, an. Dec. 14; Crossman and Lloyd, solicitors, 17, Gloucester.

Geo., Epsom, Surrey, Esq. Dec. 31; Parker and solicitors, The Rectory House, St. Michael's-mill, London.

(Chas.), Rowell, Northampton, gentleman. G. and H. Lamb, solicitors, Kettering.

(Jas.), Sheffield, pocket blade forger. Dec. 5; Smith, solicitor, Sheffield.

Benjamin, 9, Upper Avenue-road, Middlesex, Dec. 10; Parkers, solicitors, 17, Bedford-row, London.

(Edwd.), Telford, Wilts. Dec. 6; G. Westbury and agents, Andover.

(Sophia), Chester-place, Plymouth, Devon, Jan. 10; Edmunds and Son, solicitors, 8, Plymouth.

Robert, Hollam House, Titchfield, Southampton, Esq. 1; R. B. Wilkinson, solicitor, 5, Clarence-terrace, Southampton.

Wm. V., Combe-grove, Monckton Combe, Somerset. March 25; Burne and Rooks, solicitors, 37, Bath.

(Jas.), Holywell House, Heswall, Chester, widow. W. and A. Morescroft and Winstanley, solicitors, 8, Liverpool.

(James), Priest-court, Foster-lane, London, merchant. Dec. 9; W. A. Plunkett, solicitor, 37, Lane, London.

(Jno. E.), 14, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden, Esq. Dec. 12; Cobbett, Wheeler, and Cobbett, 5, Brown-street, Manchester.

(Wm.), Denshanger, Pakenham, Northampton, and grazier. Dec. 30; Jno. Parrott, solicitor, Ratford.

(Jno. G.), 21, Harrington-street, and 6, Edgepool, solicitor. Dec. 1; Lawrence and Dixon, 11, Lord-street, Liverpool.

(Sarah E.), Onslow-road, Fairfield, near Liverpool. Dec. 7; Lawrence and Dixon, solicitors, 11, rect, Liverpool.

usually known as SERRON (Jno. Lionel), Sheffield, electrical manager. Dec. 13; Newbould and Gould, 4, Paradise-square, Sheffield.

Amel Pinto, 3, Salter's Hall-court, London, and enue des Champs Elysees, Paris, Esq. Jan. 31; rosse, solicitor, 7, Lancaster-place, Strand, London.

(Joseph), Highlands House, Maidstone, Kent, a clothier. Dec. 31; G. and F. Stanning, solicitor, Earl-street, Maidstone.

Joseph C., Synton, Leicester, Esq. Feb. 8; W. solicitor, 25, Friar-lane, Leicester.

(Wm. M.), St. Helena, Preston, Esq. Jan. 7; and Lane, solicitors, 45, Bedford-row, London.

(James L.), Augusta-place, Lansdowne-road, Surrey, Esq. Dec. 31; Parker and Clarke, solicitors, The Rectory House, St. Michael's-alley, Cornhill.

(Eliza), Churchill, Somerset, widow. Dec. 21; solfrye, solicitor, Banwell, Somerset.

(m. Robt.), Winterborne, Glastonbury, Dorset, yeoman; 1; Symonds and Son, solicitors, Dorchester.

Samuel, West Bromwich, Stafford, gentleman. E. and A. Caddick, solicitors, West Bromwich-donard, formerly of 45, butt lane of 19, Conduit-lane, Middlesex, gentleman. Jan. 1; J. solicitor, 3, Salter's Hall-court, Cannon-street.

arriet, 39, Lorrimer-road, Walworth, Surrey, Dec. 1; Dawes and Son, solicitors, 9, Angel-hogmorton-street, London.

(Richard), 94, Upper-street, Islington, and 12, street, Islington, Middlesex, fancy jeweller. E. G. Lawrence, solicitor, 14, Goddard-street, churchyard.

(Geo.), Pendleton, Lancaster, surgeon. Dec. 30; Leaf, and Co., solicitors, 55, Brown-street, Manchester.

Jno.), Seaborough House, Seaborough, Somerset, in 10; Symonds and Son, solicitors, Dorchester.

Admiral Sir Chas.), K.C.B., formerly of Southsea, of Jral, Bury, Biggleswade, Bedford. Jan. 1; m. T. Ponsonby, Esq., Goldington, Bury, Bedfordshire.

Henry), Highbury Brewery, Highbury, Middlesex, 10 Cottage, Ivy Hatch, Sevenoaks, Kent, brewer. Lake and Co., solicitors, 10, New-square, Lincoln, London.

Herbert Edwd.), formerly a captain in H.M.'s 1ment of Foot, and late of 8, Camden-crescent, Esq. Dec. 15; Bircham and Co., solicitors, 46, ant-street, Westminster.

(Rev. George N.), formerly of Swithland rough, afterwards of 2, Northbrook-terrace, 1, and late of Kenilworth-street, Simons-road, 1, Hants. Jan. 6; Barker and Lane, solicitors, 45, row, London.

Ralph T.), Fence House, Seaton Carew, Stranton, farmer. Jan. 1; Mrs. M. Walker, Fence House, Jarow, Stranton.

(Percy G.), 54, New-street, Kensington Park-road, mariner. Jan. 15; A. Buckler, 50, Chancery-lane, 17 Buckler, 25, Tuffnell Park-road, London.

Emund), late of 68 (formerly 24), Portland-place, 1, and formerly of Melbourne, Australia, Esq. Parker and Clarke, solicitors, The Rectory St. Michael's-alley, Cornhill, London.

(James), Drayton Lodge, Norfolk, gentleman. Winter and Francis, solicitors, St. Giles-street, London.

alph), formerly of Ball Green, Norton-in-the-Stafford, but late of Milton, Norton-in-the-Moors, Dec. 11; Edward W. Hollinshead, solicitor, 1, London.

LOMER (Wm.), Auburn Villa, Heeley, Sheffield, an. Dec. 14; H. Walter Ibbotson, solicitor, 23, alley, Sheffield.

ASON AND HAMLIN AMERICAN ORGANS have simultaneously assigned the first rank in the several of these instruments at the Philadelphia n. They are the only organs assigned this medal and diploma have also been awarded comparative rank and excellence have been ed by the Judges' Reports alone, from which ing is an extract. "The Mason and Hamlin mpany exhibit of organs shows instruments t rank in the several requisites of instruments as—viz., of smoothness and equal distribution sops of expression, resonance and singing reedom and quickness in action of keys and with thoroughness of workmanship combined ility of action." (Signed by all the Judges).

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

Inquiries, as to the several Examinations and as to Admission on the Roll of the Supreme Court, as to being called to the Bar, and as to taking out and renewal of annual certificates, should be addressed to the Editor (Students' Department).

THE following lectures and classes are appointed to be delivered and held in the hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, during the ensuing week, Monday, Conveyancing Class, 4.30 to 6 o'clock p.m., Tuesday, ditto; Wednesday, ditto; Thursday, lecture on Equity, 6 to 7 o'clock p.m. Subscribers are not admitted to the hall after the lectures have commenced. Members of the Society may attend the lectures.

THE next preliminary examination will be held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, and in various provincial towns on the 21st and 22nd of Feb. in the ensuing year. A like examination will be held on the 16th and 17th of May next.

ARTICLES of clerkship, or assignments of articles of clerkship, dated on any day during November must be enrolled and registered at the Petty Bag Office on or before the same day in the month of May next, and when articles or assignments are required to be, and are, enrolled and registered on any day during the month of November, they must be produced and entered at the Law Institution on or before the same day of the month of February next. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 8 and 9, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 7. Failure to comply with these statutory requirements often entails a serious loss of time upon article students.

THE elementary works selected for the intermediate examination of persons under articles of clerkship, for the year 1877 are—Chitty on Contracts, c. 1, 2, 3, with the exception, in c. 3, of a. 1, relating to contracts respecting real property, 9th or 10th edit.; Williams on the Principles of the Law of Real Property, 10th or 11th edit.; Haynes' Outlines of Equity, 3rd or 4th edit.

WHERE articles expire between the 10th Jan. and 15th April 1877, candidates may be examined in Jan. 1877, or, of course, at any subsequent examination.

AN examination certificate is only available for admission on the roll of the Supreme Court within six months from its date, and must otherwise be specially enlarged by an order of the Master of the Rolls, which should be applied for at the Petty Bag Office.

IN case of the death of a principal during articles, fresh articles should always be entered into without loss of time. The time which elapses between the day of the death of the principal and the day of the date of fresh articles being entered into, does not count, so that the further articles must be for a time sufficient to make up for this loss of service, as well as for the unexpired term of the original articles of clerkship.

HULL LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

AT a meeting of the society held on Tuesday, 14th Nov. 1876, Mr. A. Hall, solicitor, in the chair, the following subject was discussed: "Ought a person to be convicted of a crime upon circumstantial evidence alone?" The affirmative was supported by Messrs. Brown, Winter, Lambert, Johnson, Pickering, and Wilson, and the negative by Messrs. Farrell, West, and Martinson. After the chairman had summed up, the question was decided in the affirmative by a majority of six. There were eighteen members present.

LIVERPOOL LAW STUDENTS' ASSOCIATION.

THE fourth meeting of this association for the session 1876-77, was held in the Law Library, Cook-street, on Monday, the 13th Nov., Theodore Melhuish, Esq., in the chair. After the minutes of the last meeting had been read, a letter from Mr. J. F. Wilson, the hon. sec., tendering his resignation, was read by the chairman. Mr. Wilson's resignation having been accepted, it was moved by Mr. Lightbound, seconded by Mr. Milach, and carried unanimously, that Mr. Melhuish be appointed secretary for the remainder of the current year. A vote of thanks to Mr. Wilson for his courtesy and attention to the interests of the society, was then proposed by Mr. Milach and seconded by Mr. Lightbound, which was carried unanimously. The following was the subject for the evening's debate: "Was the case of Ced-dington v. Palego (L. Rep. 2 Ex. 193) rightly decided?" Mr. Milach opened in the affirmative, and was followed by Mr. Ayrton in the negative. Messrs. Style, Lightbound, and Collins joined in the discussion, and, after an interesting debate, the question was put to the meeting and decided in the affirmative by a majority of five. Owing to the badness of the weather there was but a small attendance, only thirteen members being present.

UNITED LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society took place at Clement's Inn Hall on Wednesday evening, Nov. 15th inst., Mr. J. S. Rubinstein in the chair.

Mr. N. W. Roche opened the question for debate, viz., "That the present System of Election of Members of Parliament does not secure a true Representation of the Opinions of the Electors, and is, therefore, unsatisfactory."

A very animated debate ensued, and in the end a large majority were in favour of the motion. Thirty-five members were present.

At next week's meeting Mr. P. Thornton will preside, and the subject for discussion is: "That there is not sufficient evidence to justify a belief in ghosts or spiritualism." Messrs. Tebbutt and Jackson to support, Messrs. Shirley and Dean to oppose.

Queries.

INTERMEDIATE EXAMINATION.—I was article on 26th March, 1873, for five years; when is the earliest time I can go up for my Final Examination? X. Y. Z.

[If of age, in January, 1874.—Ed.]
—I was article in February, 1875; can I go up for my Intermediate in June, 1877? G. L. M.

[If article for five years, not till November.—Ed.]
—I was article on the 16th Sept., 1874; what is the earliest date I can present myself for my Intermediate Examination? A. W. P.

[If for five years, on 26th April next.—Ed.]

SERVICE UNDER ARTICLES.—I presume there is no doubt that under sect. 6 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, an article clerk can serve any part of his articles not exceeding one year with a practising barrister, and, in addition thereto, any part of such articles not exceeding one year with the London agent of his master, and that such service will in each case count as part of his term of five years? The point appears to me to be perfectly clear, and I should not have asked the question had not a doubt been raised with reference to the service of a clerk of mine now in London.

A COUNTRY SOLICITOR.

[No doubt, in case of articles for five or for four years. But not if article for three years. See sect. 7, also sects. 2, 4, and 6 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 137.—Ed.]

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

NOTES ON NEW DECISIONS.

RATING OF RAILWAYS—COMPETING LINES—ENHANCED VALUE OF TRAFFIC ON THE OTHER PART OF THE LINE.—Part of the appellants' line of railway passes through a district where there are two other competing lines for the carriage of passengers and goods. The appellants' gross earnings in the respondents' parish, a part of this district, were more than absorbed by the expenses chargeable for the working thereof, plus the deduction allowed by the Parochial Assessment Act; but on the basis of the receipts derived from the enhancement of the traffic on the other parts of the system, the rateable value of the appellants' line in the parish was equal to 45 per cent. of the gross receipts. Held, upon a case reserved by quarter sessions, that the appellants were rightly rated at this amount: (London and North-Western Railway v. The Churchwardens of Irthingborough, 38 L. T. Rep. N.S. 327. Q.B.)

POOR RATE—RIGHT OF SPORTING SEVERED FROM OCCUPATION—RESERVATION OF RIGHT.—The appellant was owner of a tenement with dwelling-house and other buildings, containing about 19 acres, which he had leased to a person occupying the same, excepting plantations and all timber, and all mines, &c., "and also excepting all manner of game, hares, rabbits, and wildfowl, with liberty of hunting, fowling, and fishing, over and through the said premises at all times during the said term." Held, upon a case stated by quarter sessions, that this lease reserved to the appellant a right of sporting which was severed from the occupation of the land, and therefore rateable within the Rating Act 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 54), ss. 2 and 6: (Rogers v. St. German's Union, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 332. Q.B.)

INNKEEPER'S LICENCE—GAMING—PRIVATE FRIENDS.—The appellant, a private friend of a licensed person, bona fide entertained by him after the hours of closing at his own expense within the Licensing Act 1874, s. 30, was playing cards for money on the licensed premises, and was convicted under the Licensing Act 1872, s. 25, of being on the said premises during the period they were required to be closed. Held, upon a case stated, that the appellant was not on the premises in contravention of the provisions of the Licensing Acts with respect to the clerical licensed premises, and that the case in Boyd v. S. S. L. T. Rep.

1876, 11 L. T. Rep. 111.

THE FRANKONIA.
The following extracts are from the judgment of the Lord Chief Justice of England:
BRITISH TERRITORIAL WATERS.
Possibly, after these precedents and all that has been written on this subject, it may not be too much to say that, independently of treaty, the three-mile belt of sea might at this day be taken as belonging, for these purposes, to the local state. But it is scarcely logical to infer from such treaties alone, that, because nations have agreed to treat the littoral sea as belonging to the country it adjoins, for certain specified objects, they have therefore assented to forgo all other rights previously enjoyed in common, and have submitted themselves, even to the extent of the right of navigation on a portion of the high seas, and the liability of their subjects therein to the criminal law, to the will of the local sovereign and the jurisdiction of the local state. Equally illogical is it, as it seems to me, in the adoption of the three-mile distance in these particular instances, to assume, independently of everything else, a recognition, by the common assent of nations, of the principle that the subjects of one state passing in ships within three miles of the coast of another shall be in all respects subject to the law of the latter. It may be that the maritime nations of the world are prepared to acquiesce in their appropriation of the littoral sea; but I cannot think that these treaties help us much towards arriving at such a conclusion. At all events, the question remains whether judicially I can infer that the nations who have been parties to them, and still further those who have not, have thereby assented to the application of the criminal law of other nations to their subjects on the waters in question, and on the strength of such inference to apply the criminal law of this country. The uncertainty in which we are left, so far as judicial knowledge is concerned, as to the extent of such assent, presents, I think, a very serious obstacle to our assuming the jurisdiction we are called upon to exercise, independently of this, to my mind, still more serious difficulty—that we should be assuming it without legislative warrant. So much for treaties. Usage as to the application of the general law of the local state to foreigners on the littoral sea, notwithstanding reference to usage is frequently made by the publicists in support of their doctrine, there is actually none. No nation has arrogated to itself the right of excluding foreign vessels from the use of its external littoral waters for the purpose of navigation, or has assumed the power of making foreigners in foreign ships passing through these waters subject to its laws, otherwise than in respect of matters connected with the navigation, or with revenue, local fisheries, or neutrality. And it is to these alone that the usage relied on is confined. Nor have the tribunals of any nation held foreigners in these waters amenable generally to the local criminal law in respect of offences. It is for the first time in the annals of jurisprudence that a court is now called upon to apply the criminal law of the country to such a case as the present. It may well be, I say again, that—after all that has been said and done in this respect—after the instances which have been mentioned of the adoption of the three miles distance, and the repeated assertions of this doctrine by the writers on public law, a nation which should now deal with this portion of the sea as its own, so as to make foreigners within it subject to its law, for the prevention and punishment of offences, would not be considered as infringing the rights of other nations. But I apprehend that as the ability so to deal with these waters would result, not from any original or inherent right, but, ex hypothesi, from the acquiescence of other states, some outward manifestation of the national will, in the shape of open practice or municipal legislation, so as to amount, at least constructively, to an occupation of that which was before unappropriated, would be necessary to render the foreigner, not previously amenable to our law, subject to its general control. That such legislation, whether consistent with the general law of nations or not, would be binding on the tribunals of this country—leaving the question of its consistency with international law to be determined between the governments of the respective nations—can of course admit of no doubt. The question is, whether such legislation would not, at all events, be necessary to justify our courts in applying the law of this country to foreigners under entirely novel circumstances in which it has never been applied before. It is obviously one thing to say that the legislature of a nation may, from the common assent of other nations, have acquired the full right to legislate over a part of that which was before high sea and as such common to the world; another and a very different thing to say that the law of the local State becomes thereby at once, without anything

MARITIME LAW.

THE FRANKONIA.

The following extracts are from the judgment of the Lord Chief Justice of England:

BRITISH TERRITORIAL WATERS.

Possibly, after these precedents and all that has been written on this subject, it may not be too much to say that, independently of treaty, the three-mile belt of sea might at this day be taken as belonging, for these purposes, to the local state. But it is scarcely logical to infer from such treaties alone, that, because nations have agreed to treat the littoral sea as belonging to the country it adjoins, for certain specified objects, they have therefore assented to forgo all other rights previously enjoyed in common, and have submitted themselves, even to the extent of the right of navigation on a portion of the high seas, and the liability of their subjects therein to the criminal law, to the will of the local sovereign and the jurisdiction of the local state. Equally illogical is it, as it seems to me, in the adoption of the three-mile distance in these particular instances, to assume, independently of everything else, a recognition, by the common assent of nations, of the principle that the subjects of one state passing in ships within three miles of the coast of another shall be in all respects subject to the law of the latter. It may be that the maritime nations of the world are prepared to acquiesce in their appropriation of the littoral sea; but I cannot think that these treaties help us much towards arriving at such a conclusion. At all events, the question remains whether judicially I can infer that the nations who have been parties to them, and still further those who have not, have thereby assented to the application of the criminal law of other nations to their subjects on the waters in question, and on the strength of such inference to apply the criminal law of this country. The uncertainty in which we are left, so far as judicial knowledge is concerned, as to the extent of such assent, presents, I think, a very serious obstacle to our assuming the jurisdiction we are called upon to exercise, independently of this, to my mind, still more serious difficulty—that we should be assuming it without legislative warrant. So much for treaties. Usage as to the application of the general law of the local state to foreigners on the littoral sea, notwithstanding reference to usage is frequently made by the publicists in support of their doctrine, there is actually none. No nation has arrogated to itself the right of excluding foreign vessels from the use of its external littoral waters for the purpose of navigation, or has assumed the power of making foreigners in foreign ships passing through these waters subject to its laws, otherwise than in respect of matters connected with the navigation, or with revenue, local fisheries, or neutrality. And it is to these alone that the usage relied on is confined. Nor have the tribunals of any nation held foreigners in these waters amenable generally to the local criminal law in respect of offences. It is for the first time in the annals of jurisprudence that a court is now called upon to apply the criminal law of the country to such a case as the present. It may well be, I say again, that—after all that has been said and done in this respect—after the instances which have been mentioned of the adoption of the three miles distance, and the repeated assertions of this doctrine by the writers on public law, a nation which should now deal with this portion of the sea as its own, so as to make foreigners within it subject to its law, for the prevention and punishment of offences, would not be considered as infringing the rights of other nations. But I apprehend that as the ability so to deal with these waters would result, not from any original or inherent right, but, ex hypothesi, from the acquiescence of other states, some outward manifestation of the national will, in the shape of open practice or municipal legislation, so as to amount, at least constructively, to an occupation of that which was before unappropriated, would be necessary to render the foreigner, not previously amenable to our law, subject to its general control. That such legislation, whether consistent with the general law of nations or not, would be binding on the tribunals of this country—leaving the question of its consistency with international law to be determined between the governments of the respective nations—can of course admit of no doubt. The question is, whether such legislation would not, at all events, be necessary to justify our courts in applying the law of this country to foreigners under entirely novel circumstances in which it has never been applied before. It is obviously one thing to say that the legislature of a nation may, from the common assent of other nations, have acquired the full right to legislate over a part of that which was before high sea and as such common to the world; another and a very different thing to say that the law of the local State becomes thereby at once, without anything more applicable to foreigners within such part than to subjects of legislation, the courts of such state can proprio vigore so apply it. The position does not follow from the other: it is essential to keep the two things—the power of Parliament to legislate and the authority of our courts without such legislation to apply criminal law where it could not have been applied before—altogether distinct, which it is evident is not always done. It is unnecessary to the determination of the question whether Parliament has the right to treat the three-mile zone as a part of the realm as distinct from international law. That is a matter on which it is for Parliament itself to decide, and is enough for us that it has the power to do so. The question really is whether, acting judicially, we can treat the power of Parliament to legislate as making up for the absence of actual legislation. I am clearly of opinion that we cannot, and it is only in the instances in which foreigners' offences have been made specially liable to law by statutory enactment that that law can be applied to them.

THE RESULTS.

In the result, looking to the fact that a pretension to sovereignty or jurisdiction over foreign ships in narrow seas has long since been wholly abandoned—to the uncertainty which attaches to the doctrine of the publicists as to the extent of sovereignty and jurisdiction which may be exercised on the so-called territorial sea—to the fact that the right of absolute sovereignty, and of penal jurisdiction over the subjects of other states, has never been expressly assented or conceded among independent nations, as a practice, exercised and acquiesced in, except in violation of neutrality or breach of revenue or fishery laws, which, as has been pointed out, stand on a different footing—as well as to the fact that neither in legislating with reference to ships, nor in respect of the criminal law, has Parliament thought proper to assume territorial sovereignty over the three miles zone, so as to enact that offences committed upon it, by foreigners in foreign ships, should be within the criminal law of this country, but on the contrary, wherever it was thought right to make the foreigner amenable to our law, has done so by express and specific legislation—I cannot think that, in the absence of all precedent, and of any judicial decision of authority applicable to the present purpose, we should be justified in holding an offence committed under such circumstances to be punishable by the law of England, equally as in so holding we must declare the whole body of our penal law to be applicable to the foreigner passing our shores in a foreign vessel on his way to a foreign port. I am by no means insensible to the argument ab inconvenienti pressed upon us by the Solicitor-General. It is no doubt, desirable, looking to the frequency of collisions in the neighbourhood of our coast, and the commanders of foreign vessels, who by unskillful navigation or gross want of care, cause disaster or death, should be as much amenable to the local law as those navigating our own coast, instead of redress having to be sought in the perhaps, distant country of the offender. But the remedy for the deficiency of the law, if it can be made good consistently with international law—to which we are not called upon to pronounce an opinion—should be supplied by the action of the Legislature, with whom the responsibility for any imperfection of the law alone rests, not by a usurpation on our part of a jurisdiction which without legislation we do not judicially possess. The matter has been sometimes discussed upon the assumption that the alternative of the non-exercise of jurisdiction on our part must be the total impunity of foreigners in respect of collisions arising from negligence in the vicinity of our coast. But this is a total mistake. If by the assent of other nations the three-miles belt of sea has been brought under the dominion of the country, so, that, consistently with the rights of other nations, it may be treated as a portion of British territory, it follows as a matter of course that Parliament can legislate in respect of it. Parliament has only to do so, and the Judges of the land will, as in duty bound, apply the law which Parliament shall so create. The question is whether legislative action shall be applied to meet the exigency of the case, or judicial authority shall be strained and misapplied in order to overcome the difficulty. The responsibility is with the Legislature, and there it must rest. Having arrived at this conclusion, it becomes necessary to consider the second point taken on the part of the Crown—namely, that though the negligence which the accused was guilty of occurred on board a foreign ship, yet, the death having taken place on board a British ship, the offence was committed within the jurisdiction of a British Court of Justice. This is the point insisted on by my brothers Denman and Lindley, with the somewhat hesitating and reluctant assent of the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas. I dissent altogether from their opinion. In considering this question

PROFESSIONAL CONGRATULATIONS AT THE BRIGHTON BOROUGH BENCH.

On the election of Mr. Charles Lamb as Mayor, his Worship, accompanied by the Town Clerk, attended at the Police Court and formally subscribed to the customary oath, in the presence of Mr. A. Bigge, the Stipendiary Police Magistrate, and Alderman Ireland, J.P. When his worship had taken his seat upon the Bench as the Chief Magistrate of the Borough,

Mr. T. A. Goodman (the clerk to the justices of the Hove Petty Sessions Division) rose and said that, as the senior member of the legal profession present—(his friend, Mr. J. K. Nye, who also attended, being not the senior in practice, although he was so in years)—he desired to ask permission, on behalf of his professional brethren practising at the court, to congratulate Alderman Lamb upon taking his seat as the chief magistrate of Brighton. It afforded him, he said, the greatest possible pleasure to see the Mayor in the high position to which he had been called, for he (Mr. Goodman) had been associated with his Worship before commencing his professional career—indeed, he might say for a lifetime; and he was sure that all would agree that there was no one more fitted than Mr. Charles Lamb to fill the office. His knowledge of law, his sound wisdom, and his good judgment would, he was certain, lead him at all times to administer justice with mercy, and mercy with discretion. When he looked back to his earliest associations with Mr. Lamb, before he (the learned gentleman) had entered the Profession, it gave him the greatest possible pleasure to be enabled to congratulate him on assuming the dignified office of Mayor of Brighton; and he hoped that his Worship would be spared with health and strength to carry out the important duties of the position, and that his legal brethren would often meet him in his judicial capacity in that court.

Mr. J. C. Penfold, who meanwhile had entered the court, said he could but add his congratulations to those already expressed by Mr. Goodman. He had very great pleasure in seeing Mr. Lamb take his seat upon the bench, and he hoped that his success would induce other and younger members of the Profession to try and emulate his example, and, in future years, hold the position which his Worship now so honourably filled.

The Mayor said he felt very deeply this manifestation of kindly feeling on the part of his professional brethren, and he regarded it as an augury that he should receive their assistance and support during the time he had the honour of occupying a seat upon the Bench. It was from the advocates who appeared before them that the Bench received its greatest strength; and he was quite satisfied they knew sufficient of him to feel assured that he would do the best he possibly could to hold the scales of justice with an impartial hand. He was always happy to meet his professional brethren on business or other occasions; but the police-court was one of those places from which, perhaps, they would rather be absent, for they sometimes witnessed painful scenes there. He was happy to say, however, that this morning there was no business to be transacted. He sincerely thanked them for their kind expressions, which he felt the more because he knew they were dictated by sincerity.

The legal gentleman then retired.

J. HOUNSELL, Esq., Surgeon, Bridport, Dorsetshire writes:—"I consider BUSTED'S NERVE a specific for toothache. Very severe cases under my care have found instantaneous and permanent relief. I therefore recommend its use."—"Toothache and the Public as valuable to all."—"Toothache."—[ADVT.]

to bear in mind—which I am disk has not always been done—that we h this part of the case without any h the theory of the three-mile zone, and properly admitted by the Solicitor-ough the two ships had met, and the d happened, on the ocean. Having into the authorities on this head, the Justice proceeded—But for the opi-d by my brother Denman I should it beyond dispute that a foreign ship,
British waters, but on the high seas, set to our law. Upon this point I that all jurists were unanimous, and e supposed that a doubt could exist.
is the contrary opinion founded?
expediency, which is to prevail over that, it is asked, is to happen if one ers, enforcing your revenue laws, ed or injured by a foreigner on board p? What is to happen if a British ship meeting on the ocean, a British d be killed by a shot fired from a
In either of these cases would not guilty of the offence become amenh law? Could it be endured that he th impunity? If brought within the ish court of justice, could he not punished for the offence, and ought nitted to escape with impunity, or to be tried and punished for such first answer is, that the alternative
He will not “escape with impunity.”
answerable to the laws of his own it is not to be presumed that the law ed people will be such or so ad-that such an offence should escape adequate punishment. As regards ity of the offender under such cir-our own law, it will be time enough the question when the case arrives.
ion and punishment of the offender obtained at the sacrifice of fundaples of established law, I for one that justice should fail in the indi-that established principles, ac-ch alone justice should be adminisbe arrested and strained to meet it.
fore, that both exceptions taken on e Crown to the general rule that a mitting an offence out of the juris-untry which is not his own cannot trial in the courts of the former, appears to me that the general rule and that the defendant, having been ject, on board a foreign ship, on a re, and on the high seas, at the time is committed, is not amenable to the untry; and there was, therefore, no try him, and that, consequently, the is illegal. In the conflict of opinion nately exists, it is a great satisfac-eable to add that the late Mr. Justice ose loses the whole Profession, and so who had the advantage of his acquaintance, must deeply lament, as a most learned, enlightened, ous judge the public has so much ore, having seen my proposed judgicated to me his entire concurrence, nclusion at which I had arrived and n which it is founded. His opinion, re, cannot, of course, be of any avail nt; but as without it the majority are of opinion that the conviction ashed, it must be quashed accord-

LUSH said—I have already an-although I have prepared a separate id not feel it necessary to deliver it, g since perused the judgment which f Justice has just read, I found that irely in our conclusions, and that I main with the reasons upon which ons are founded. I wish, however, lf from being supposed to adopt any easons which may seem to imply a e competency of Parliament to legis-hink fit for these waters. I think that common consent of nations which ernational law have appropriated to the adjacent state to deal with late may deem expedient for its own ey are, therefore, in the language of of international law, termed by a etaphor the territorial waters of and the same or equivalent phrases ne of our statutes denoting that this nder the exclusive dominion of the e dominion is the dominion of Par-the dominion of the common law.
no further than the limits of the reign of Richard II. the realm com-und within the body of the counties.
v water mark was part of the high t period the three-mile radius had t of. International law, which set at least has grown up since that enlarge the area of our municipal law, nor could treaties with all the nations of the world have that effect. That can only be done by Act of Parliament. As no such Act has been passed, it follows that what was out of the realm then is out of the realm now, and what was part of the high seas then is part of the high seas now, and upon the high seas the Admiralty jurisdiction was confined to British ships. Therefore, although as between nation and nation these waters are British territory, as being under the exclusive dominion of Great Britain, in judicial language they are out of the realm, and any exercise of criminal jurisdiction over a foreign ship in these waters must in my judgment be authorised by an Act of Parliament.

COUNTY COURTS.

EAST RETFORD COUNTY COURT.

Wednesday, Oct. 25.

(Before RICHARD WILDMAN, Esq., Judge, and a jury.)

SAVILLE v. THE GREAT NORTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Railway companies—Injury to intending passenger—Implied authority.

THIS was an action brought by the plaintiff, a surgeon practising at East Retford, to recover the sum of £31 17s. 6d. for attendance and visits and operations as a surgeon and apothecary upon, and for medicines supplied to, a person named Hanstock between the 20th of June and August 1875, at the request of the defendants, their servants or agents.

At the trial the following facts were either proved or admitted: On the evening of the 20th June 1875, George Hanstock was on the down passenger platform of the Great Northern Station at Retford for the purpose of taking a ticket by the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway for Sheffield. The Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway Company use the Great Northern Station at Retford. As the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire train arrived, by which the man Hanstock intended to travel, there was a considerable crowd of persons collected upon the platform, and some pushing and jostling ensued, and as Hanstock was running towards the booking office for his ticket he was pushed or fell under the Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire train while it was still in motion. His arm was broken, and he was much bruised and otherwise injured. At the time the accident occurred the station master was absent from the station, and his immediate subordinate, the station inspector was in charge of the station. For the district of East Retford the Great Northern Railway had appointed at the time of the accident a medical attendant for the wants of their servants, and he was the ordinary person to be called in in cases of emergency, whether happen- ing to the company's officials or to other persons injured upon their premises, and for this gentle- man the inspector sent immediately his attention was called to the case, and the company's medical officer promptly attended. By his orders the injured man was removed to a neighbouring hotel, and some wounds about the head were dressed. On examining the patient's arm the company's medical officer was of opinion that it was neces- sary to take it off near the shoulder, and explained this to Hanstock. The injured man, however, re- fused to allow this to be done by the company's medical man, and desired that the plaintiff might be sent for. The station inspector thereupon sent for the plaintiff, who attended upon the injured person, and with the assistance of some of the company's servants removed the wounded arm, and it was in respect of this operation and his subsequent attendance and services that the present claim was instituted.

Harmsworth, barrister, for the company, sub- mitted the following grounds of nonsuit: That there was no original liability in the Great North- ern Company, and therefore it was no part of the duty or business of any officer or servant of the company to engage a medical man or put the company to any expense in the matter. That on the facts there was no evidence that the station inspector did pledge, or attempt to pledge, the credit of the company. That if it should be held that he had pledged, or attempted to pledge, the credit of the company, there was no evidence that he possessed the requisite authority to bind the company for medical attendance. That if there were evidence to show such authority, that author- ity was limited to calling in the company's regular man, and was exhausted by his doing so. It was also submitted that even if the station inspector had the larger authority, there was no evidence that he did retain the plaintiff, but that in sending for him, the inspector, was merely acting on behalf of Hanstock, and not in his capa- city as a servant of the company. The following cases among others were relied upon by the learned counsel: Cox v. The Midland Counties Railway Company (33 Ex. 268); Walker v. The Great Western Railway Company (L. Rep. 2 Ex. 228); and Lanyon v. The Great Western Railway Com- pany (25 L. J. N. S., 577).

His HONOUR nonsuited the plaintiff, on the ground that there was no evidence of any express authority in the station inspector to pledge the credit and bind the company in a contract for medical attendance, and upon the authority of the cases cited that no such authority could be implied upon the part of a person in the position of a station inspector.

SWANSEA COUNTY COURT.

(Before T. FALCONER, Esq., Judge.)

PRUST v. ZUGO.

Ship—Discharging cargo—Liability of consignee for expense.

Held, that when the consignee of a cargo dis- charges the captain from the obligation to dis- charge the cargo alongside, and directs the ship to be placed under a crane to discharge cargo without requiring any contribution on the part of ship to the expense of the crane, the expense of discharging the cargo falls on the consignee, the captain having sufficient hands to discharge alongside and being willing to do so.

R. W. Smith appeared for the plaintiff;

Glascodine for the defendant.

HIS HONOUR said: By a charter party, dated May 31, 1876, and made between John Prust and Zubiria Zugo and Co., the ship Dilhoy, of 272 tons register, and 520 tons burthen or thereabouts, was chartered to proceed to Bilbao and load a cargo of ore, the quantity to be at the master's option, which the charterers bound themselves to ship, not exceeding what she could reasonably stow, and being so loaded to proceed to the north or south dock, Swansea, and deliver the same along- side the merchant's wharf, or, as ordered, on being paid freight at the rate of 9s. 6d. per ton of 20 cwt. delivered. The freight was to be paid on unloading and right delivery of the cargo, in cash; the cargo to be brought to and taken from along- side at merchant's risk and expense. The bill of lading declared that John Richards, the captain, having received on board from the Semorostro Iron Company, Limited, a complete cargo of iron ore of about 500 tons, “the which cargo, when the said ship has arrived at her port of destina- tion I oblige myself to deliver to the order of Messrs Zubiria Zugo and Co., who, after verifying the true delivery of the said cargo, have to pay me freight according to the charter-party, weight unknown; all conditions as per charter-party. In this case payment for freight was made on 465 tons instead of 500, and a payment of £68 0s. 2d. was made on account of the Yniscedwyn Com- pany. The sum of £16 19s. 6d. is sued for. The cargo was delivered without weighing. It is said the weighing should have been alongside the ship, for the ship has nothing to do with the cargo after it is taken from alongside, and it was stated that the harbour authorities do not weigh for the Midland Railway Company, whose trucks re- moved the ore. On the part of the defendants it was stated that on the delivery of ore for the company, tubs and trucks are provided, and the ore is taken charge of by the Midland Railway Company. Previously to delivery they are weighed by the company at the junction. The defendants have no control over the weighing machine, and it is a mile from the works. The trucks were marked Ex Dillwyn. The number of the tubs in each wagon and the number of wagons are kept. The works accept railway weight if there is no harbour weighing. The witness Becker was asked, “Did Prust tell you that if the cargo was to be weighed it must be weighed alongside, but he was willing to take the bill of lading weight?” “He might have said so, but I do not remember it,” was the reply. Mr James, the harbour superintendent, stated that the har- bour trust keep a record of the number of trucks of each cargo and to whom it belongs, but they do not weigh. The book produced shows the number of tubs. In this case the total number of trucks was 72. A captain declares on arrival what he has on board, and in this case he declared for 500 tons. Weighing may delay vessels on their dis- charge. Thomas Cousins, station master at the Gurnos junction, explained the course of weighing, but it was objected that no notice of the weighing had been given. The station master weighs, the clerk puts down the gross weight and numbers, and takes the tare from the truck, and the tare is painted on the wagon. In this case there were 465 tons 15 cwt. and 72 trucks. On the part of the defendant it was affirmed that the correct weight was obtained so soon as it could be ascer- tained. The difficulty I felt in this case is re- moved by what passed in the hearing of the case Coulthurst v. Sweet, (L. Rep. 1. C. P. 653). Cer- tain green bark had been shipped. When the bark was demanded and lighters were sent to re- ceive it, the offer was made to pay freight accord- ing to the bill of lading, “at so much per v

J. P. MURPHY, Q.C., has been made a member of the Middle Temple.

GAL EDUCATION.—On Friday, last week, full parliament of the Masters of the Bench of the Middle Temple, the treasurer, Mr. Powell, in the chair, it was resolved unanimously in addition to the sums now voted annually to the society for purposes of legal education, should be established four scholarships of guineas each, and four scholarships of 50 s. each, to be awarded annually to students of the society, subject to such regulations as a committee of the Benchers should recommend, should be approved by the parliament. We understand it is proposed that the subjects for the scholarships will be awarded should be jurisprudence and civil law, equity, real and personal property, and common law, and that the students will be framed with the object of enabling the students generally to compete for scholarships.

Lord Chancellor entertained at dinner on Tuesday the following gentlemen:—Lord Selborne, Right Hon. Russell Gurney, M.P., Right George Ward Hunt, M.P., Sir Barnes Peacock, Lord Justice Mellish, Sir Henry Keating, Chancellor Hall, Mr. Justice Lush, Mr. Justice Denman, Mr. Baron Huddleston, Sir George Jackson, Bart., Q.C., M.P., Sir Henry G. K.C.B., Sir Francis Sandford, C.B., Mr. St. Q.C., Mr. Forsyth, Q.C., M.P., Dr. Deane, Mr. Butt, Q.C., Mr. Osborne Morgan, Q.C., Mr. Miller, Q.C., Mr. Watkin Williams, Mr. A. G. Marten, Q.C., M.P., Mr. O'Hara, Edward Theisiger.

INSANITY INQUIRY.—On Tuesday, at the Law Institution, Mr. F. Barlow, one of the Masters of the Bench, held an inquiry before a jury of seven, of which Sir James Anderson was foreman, the alleged insanity of Mr. Alexander Richardson, who was said to be worth upwards of £100, and who was an inmate of a private asylum in Paris. The case was one in which a verdict of fifteen could not agree. Mr. D. J. Alexander was counsel in support of the application. Peculiarity of the case was the non attendance of the alleged lunatic. Evidence was given in favour of Mr. Richardson's delusion as to his estate of a "million sterling," and his having been raised to the peerage. He had also delusions of the Prince of Wales being in a conspiracy against his life. The insanity had been produced by diseases. After the medical evidence, Sir James Anderson said the jury did not require any evidence, and they gave an unanimous verdict that Mr. Richardson was in a state of insanity, and incapable of managing his estate. Verdict accordingly.

WINTER ASSIZES.—The arrangements for the Winter Assizes are completed, and in addition to the judges already mentioned, Mr. Justice James will proceed on circuit after his attendance at the Central Criminal Court. The following is a corrected list: Mr. Justice Mellor sits at Exeter on the 22nd inst.; Chester, December 2; Swansea, December 11. Mr. Justice Lush, Exeter, November 22; Winchester, December 13; Exeter, December 13. Mr. Justice Fry and Mr. Justice Lopes, Manchester, November 23; and Liverpool, December 6. Huddleston, Lincoln, November 23; Derby, November 29; Warwick, December 4; and Worcester, December 16. Mr. Justice Hawkins, Durham, November 27; Newcastle, December 4; Leeds, December 11. The new Orders in Council made under the recent Act (39 & 40 c. 58) will take effect both as to the Central Criminal Court and the Winter Assizes. The trial at the Old Bailey commences on Monday the 20th inst., and the Assizes on the 22nd. Nov., Dec., and Jan. the jurisdiction of the Central Criminal Court extends to parts of Sussex, Kent, and Hertfordshire, and such parts of Essex, Kent, and Surrey as are not included in the Central Criminal Court district. By other orders in Council under the same statute, which was passed to prevent the detention of prisoners in gaol waiting for parts of other counties were united together, the Northern and Salford division, Manchester, appointed as the Winter Assize Court. County and city, were united for the winter assizes, and the winter assize county to be held at Exeter; according to another order Lincoln county and city were united, and the assizes to be held at Lincoln. Other orders, all dated the 23rd Oct., issued as to Derby, uniting Leicester and Rutland together, and making Derby the assize town; Warwick was united with Northampton and Buckingham, Warwick being the assize town. Norfolk, Suffolk, and Cambridgeshire were united, the assize to be held at Norwich. Oxford to be united with Worcester, Oxford, Monmouth, and Gloucester, and the assize to be held at Worcester, while Salop to be united with Stafford and the assizes to be held at Stafford. The county of Southampton, Wilts, Dorset to form one county, the assizes to be held at Winchester; Devon, Somerset, and Bristol joined, and the assizes held at Exeter;

Montgomery, Merioneth, Carnarvon, Anglesea, Denbigh, Flint, and Chester to be joined, and the assizes held at Chester; Glamorgan, Carmarthen, Pembroke, Haverfordwest, Cardigan, Brecknock, and Radnor were joined by another order, and the assizes appointed to be held at Swansea. Persons on bail are not to be tried at the winter assizes unless jointly charged with another in actual custody. The orders, unless earlier revoked, are to continue in force until next October.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editors do not hold themselves responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.

THE EDUCATION OF SOLICITORS.—May I be allowed space for a few remarks suggested by the letters of "Amicus Curie" and "A. L. S." in your issues of the 28th Oct. and 4th Nov.? I will endeavour to compress them as much as possible. It seems that the study of law has three sides, or aspects; the metaphysical (or scientific), which treats of the nature of law; the historical, which treats of the history of laws; and the practical, which treats of what at any given time is actually being done. A legal education which leaves out any one of these three must be incomplete in itself, though not necessarily incomplete for the purpose in hand. Law is studied either as a part of a liberal education or as a means of livelihood. In the former case no attention is bestowed on the third branch; in the latter the tendency is to concentrate on it all the attention. Hence in both cases results an incomplete view of the subject, producing in the one case not an imperfectly educated man, but in the other an imperfectly educated lawyer. This will be denied by some, who will say that a lawyer who has acquired a knowledge of the various rules which make up what is called practical knowledge, is sufficiently educated for his profession. Yet it will be evident on a little consideration that the rules of the third (or practical branch), depend on the concurrent action of the principle and facts of the former two; that they are framed partly with a reference to the essential principles of justice partly with a reference to the previous history of the particular body of laws. And if the rules so depend some knowledge of the two former branches will not only be desirable on its own merits, but also as enabling the rules of practice to be more completely understood, comprehensively reviewed, and easily remembered. Is, then, the acquisition of this knowledge to be left to chance, or is it to be the result of an originally well planned method? Surely to a method. And if the present system does not supply that method the following are the alterations I would propose:—That the system to be substituted be as follows: That service under articles be in all cases for three years only. That prior to entering into articles every candidate for admission as a solicitor be required either to have gained such a University degree as now relieves from two years' service, or to have passed an examination by the Incorporated Law Society in (1) the subjects now required in the preliminary examination, (2) some two or more of the following text books, which are enumerated only as examples: Blackstone's Commentaries, Austin's Jurisprudence, Reeves' History of English Law, Sanders' Institutes of Justinian, Hallam's Constitutional History, or portions of them at the discretion of the examiners; that the final examination, as at present, should be an inquiry into the fitness of candidates to be admitted solicitors. The advantages I see reason to expect from the system are the following:—Solicitors would have a guarantee that the youths they admitted into their offices, after passing the Law Society's examination (which might be prepared for in two years or less) were not entirely strange to the work to be set before them, and that an articulated clerk might soon be made an intelligent and useful assistant. Articled clerks would enter an office on better terms, with some idea of what they were about to do, and with some capacity to find for themselves the explanation of difficulties in practical text books and in practice itself. They would be no longer like men attempting to translate a book from a foreign language of which they must learn the rudiments from the book itself. The preparation for this first examination would, I believe, very soon be undertaken by ordinary schools; just in the same way as at present those schools undertake the preliminary training of the future doctor or clergyman by means of natural science and divinity classes or lectures. This would enable those parents who were desirous that their sons should enter on their future calling on attaining majority to continue them at school to eighteen years of age, instead of prematurely removing them at sixteen, as is frequently the case at present. These additional two years would, I believe, be a gain to the youths themselves in general knowledge and discipline. Again, those who began their legal studies together at school would very readily at any future time unite for the furtherance of the interests of their common profession, and a serious blow would thus be struck at that incapacity for combination which is said to be one of the weaknesses of the profession in question. If the ordinary schools did not provide machinery for the purpose there is no doubt that the demand for legal education would produce a body of teachers who, even if they acted separately, would form the nucleus of that school of law which it seems those interested in legal education would do well rather to ask Parliament some day to recognise than at present to create.

G. M. JAMESON.

SUCCESSION DUTY.—A trustee for sale under a will, containing a bare power or trust for sale and for division amongst cestuis que trustent. Can a purchaser of freeholds from such a source insist upon the succession duty receipts being produced on the completion, or can the trustee say the trustee receipt clause in his testator's will exonerates the purchaser? The succession duty is a charge on the land, yet in practice many solicitors argue that the purchaser is discharged by the clause as to trustee's receipts, and that he can require no more. A SUBSCRIBER.

BOOK POSTAGE.—From the experience of your Manchester correspondent, as well as my own, I think it devolves on the Incorporated Law Society to come to an understanding with the Postmaster-General as to the documents which may be sent by the book post; and I appeal to the chairman of the society to take the matter up on behalf of the Profession. J. R.

BOOK POSTAGE.—Referring to the letters which have lately appeared in your columns on this subject, I desire to inform your correspondents that, having suffered from a precisely similar case to theirs, I addressed a letter of remonstrance to the officials of St. Martins-le-Grand, and succeeded in obtaining a repayment of the surcharge. In my letter acknowledging the return of the money, I told the Post Office authorities that if the case were repeated I should use my endeavours to bring the matter before the public, and before Parliament. In my opinion the practice amounts to the crime of obtaining money under false pretences, and if it be continued I counsel my professional brethren to join in bringing the matter to the notice of Parliament. J. W. HOWLETT.

[The crime you impute is wanting in the necessary element of "felonious intent."—Ed.]

BILLS OF SALES ACT AND BANKRUPT ACT.—I quite agree with what has been said by "O" in your last issue, that if the provisions of the reputed ownership section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869 are unaffected by the registration specially provided by the Bills of Sale Act, then so far as the bankruptcy laws are concerned the provisions for registration in the Bills of Sale Act are utterly useless; but I beg to refer "O" to the case of Badger and another v. Shaw and another (1 L. T. Rep. N. S. 323, Q.B.), and which I do not find to have been overruled, but confirmed by subsequent cases affecting the point in question. I shall feel much obliged by any of your correspondents referring to a case overruling, or at all questioning in any material degree, the decision in Badger v. Shaw. R.

SERVING LEGAL NOTICES.—When I read in your number of the 28th Oct. your editorial note ascribing "sharp practice" to a solicitor who expected 6s. 8d. for acceptance of service of a notice in a conveyancing matter, I confess that I felt a little indignant. I have ever been a stickler for the highest proprieties of the Profession, and in my time have incurred some inconvenience and loss in resisting practices that I thought derogatory. Yet I have ever been in the habit, when taking such a notice as the one in question to a solicitor, to accompany it with a tender of 6s. 8d. for his acceptance of service. In doing so, I take into consideration that my legal brother has to give me a certain amount of his time, and when I leave him has to send the notice to his client; or, if the deeds are in his own strong room, has to hunt them up and put the notice with them. For this the fee is moderate enough. Beyond this, I consider that I am generally saved time and trouble, for I know the locale of the solicitor, whilst it might cause me some difficulty to discover that of his client. Moreover, I have the advantage of ascertaining if any change in the possession of the property has occurred, and am possibly saved the risk of serving a person whose interest has ceased by transfer or otherwise. The objection of your correspondent, "A Solicitor of Twenty-two Years' Standing," that he might declared void under particular circumstances by law or by mutual agreement.

The community between ship and cargo is therefore continued in a port of distress even after the unloading of the latter, and it is evident that the expense of unloading, storing, and re-shipping cargo, as well as the contingent expenses in the port of distress are in strict connection with the resolution to enter that port in order to repair damage.

To this obligation of the captain by contract, for the transport of the ship's cargo, such an importance is given in the Spanish law that it does not admit any general average if the ship only enters the port of distress in order to repair a particular damage, and accordingly leaves all the expense thereof to the charge of the ship. The law by this disposition does not take into consideration the fact of the properties being saved from common danger by the determination to enter port.

It is true, the general average being only a law of equity, its limits should be kept within strict bounds, but the fundamental principle ought, on the other hand, to be really applied, and the limits should not be drawn too narrow, as is certainly the case in the Spanish law, but also in the English.

An opposite error lately often occurs in American adjustments, by admitting, when the cargo has been landed in a port of distress, into general average every damage to the goods by breakage or by damage to their casing or covering without further examination, whether the same is proved to be actually the consequence of discharging the goods, or whether it has been caused by the accidents of the sea or by other incidents.

The juste milieu is expressed in the principle that only such further damages are to be admitted as are properly proved to stand in direct connection as between cause and effect with the sacrifice made, but not those which are only an accidental consequence of the same.

This principle and that before mentioned one, concerning the continuation of the community, will, as further emanations from and explanations of the fundamental principle of general average, it may be hoped, find general acknowledgment.

There is a third principle urged, and particularly stated in Mr. Richard Howndes' work on the law of general average—viz., not damage done to ship and appurtenances by extraordinary exertion in their regular service justifies its admission into general average, but only such damage that is caused by their being employed in a service for which they are not purposed.

This principle is expressly laid down by English judges in explanation of their motives for decision in particular cases. It rests on one part on the duty of the captain, to further the transport, to which he is bound by contract, by using all the means which ship and appurtenances offer for the purpose; on the other part, on the consideration that such an extraordinary exertion cannot be properly called a voluntary sacrifice, because the captain expects ship and cargo just to be saved by their power of really doing the service to which they are charged, and not by their destruction.

This principle is motive on one side to the law, not to admit damage by pressing of sails, on the other side to that of admitting damage by voluntary stranding. However, the principle appears not yet to be sufficiently discussed in all its bearings, so as to expect general admission thereof; it is, therefore, not yet mentioned in the following resolutions, but recommended to further discussion.

After having thus agreed upon the fundamental principles of general average, their expansion into a law must be left to a further agreement between the different governments. If they can be induced to take the matter in hand, they will, no doubt, first of all call together an assembly of men both experienced and interested in the matter—chosen from the most important commercial nations, in the way in which for instance the German governments did in codifying the maritime law—in order to agree upon the statute of an international law.

To this assembly, in order to give their deliberations the faculty of concrete formation, must necessarily be a full project of law, to form the basis, and it may be the qu preferable to chose for that purpose a project, worked out entirely new, or to take one of the codifications already in existence. The latter appears to be preferable, at all events, and especially the German law should be recommended for the purpose, not only because it is the latest, but also because it is acknowledgedly the result of the most minute examinations by the most competent men under constant consideration of positive right of the laws of other nations and of commercial wants.

Is that done, then the law, which would be the result of these deliberations, could be placed in the stead of the present laws without much confusion and annoyance on the Continent, where the codifications all have a similar arrangement, and in England, which is hitherto without codification, any form of the same could be acceptable, provided it were in itself conspicuously and well arranged, and the contents fully answered the views which the English had finally adopted.

To the deliberations of the assembly the labours of the three former Congresses would form, moreover, valuable material.

From the foregoing remarks it will appear that if there is to be any prospect of an International agreement, England will have to give up its common safety theory, and confess to the common benefit theory of the other nations. Probably it was particularly the unwillingness to yield in this respect that moved the managers of Lloyds in 1864 to withdraw from the Congress. But the latter was right at the time, in so far that it is for England to take the lead in the movement, because the other States must demand of it beforehand to yield on this point.

There are, happily, signs at present that, in those circles which are most interested, the inclination to conciliate in this respect is much on the increase.

When the ground is so far smoothed, the creation of an International General Average Law appears not to offer any very great difficulties, for then all the differences would rest within the same general principles, and it would, in the whole, only remain to find out and state the true limits of equity.

The question might yet be raised, whether it be advisable to separate one chapter from the whole subject of maritime law, and treat the same by itself. All the topics embraced in it stand more or less in intimate connection with that of general average. However, all of them have, in the different codifications, been treated separately and distinctly by themselves, and alterations in the one do not necessarily involve thorough reformation in the others. Thus, in our German law the title of the ship's crew has been withdrawn, and the mariner's rules (Seemann's Ordnung) have taken its place. The title of general average may very well be treated in the same way.

Besides, we may hope that once a successful beginning having been made, international legislation may the sooner also proceed to other subjects of maritime law.

It is certain that, even though the matter may at once be taken seriously in hand, there will be long consultations required before the different opinions are so far brought in union, that a project of code can be actually drawn up and unanimously accepted. This project has after that to pass all the legislative bodies before it can be constituted as international law. Years will pass, therefore, even under the most favourable circumstances, before we reach the desired aim. In the meantime something could be done even now that would do away with a great part of the evil so deeply felt in the mercantile world, and this might be done by private agreement.

There is already almost everywhere on the continent, the usage, either legally prescribed or voluntarily conceded by the underwriters, to acknowledge every adjustment that is drawn up at the place of destination in legal form and in accordance with the laws of that place, and to pay their share of general average accordingly; this usage is, as above mentioned, also adopted more and more in England. Suppose the same be generally conceded as a rule and taken as regular clause into the policies where it is not prescribed by law. Much double adjusting and consequent loss to the insured would be avoided, and there would be left only one task—under the circumstances certainly a very difficult one—that is, to examine the adjustment as to its legality in the place where it is drawn up. Even the English writers may generally concede this clause without prejudicing thereby their present position; they do not even so yield by it their own law, which may still be applied in full effect to adjustments made up in their own country, only concede to foreign countries the right to have their own views and to act thereupon give to their insured, who are forced to submit themselves to these foreign adjustments, indemnification, which they have a right claim.

As result of these observations the following resolutions are proposed:

1. The fundamental principle of general average is clearly and concisely expressed in the following words of the German code of commercial law: All damage done to ship or cargo, or both, by master or by his order with intent to save from a common danger, as also the consequent damage resulting therefrom, and the expenses incurred for the same purpose, are general average. General average is borne by ship, freight, cargo in common.

2. This fundamental principle finds its full illustration and application in the following additional principles:

a. By a temporary separation between ship and cargo during the voyage in consequence of accidents of the seas, the community between them is not dissolved nor suspended.

b. Only those consequences of the sacrifice made are to be allowed that are proved to stand in direct connection with them as between cause and effect, but those which are only an accidental consequence of the same.

3. On this basis an international general average law can, and ought to be, created; but there is no prospect ever to attain this without its being taken in hand by the different governments and legislative bodies, all the efforts must be directed towards inducing them to do so.

4. A very proper basis for the deliberation of such a law is given in the section of the German Code of the Commercial Law treating of general average. The transactions of the three International General Average Congresses in Hamburg furnish very valuable material for these deliberations.

5. To alleviate in the meantime as much as possible the evils arising from the present differences in the law, the acceptance of the following principle by all the insurance markets is recommended, viz., that the adjustments of general average drawn up at the port of destination in legal form and in conformity with the laws of that place, be everywhere acknowledged, and conformations to general average accordingly repaid by the underwriters.

6. The association nominates a committee charged the same with organising an agency for the formation of resolutions 3 and 5 in proper places, and with keeping the same in proper means.

Mein Herr Wendt, of London, average was the author of two papers, the one on bar the other on maritime tribunals. In the first advocates the adoption by legislators of the statutes: (1) That any person, his aid or abettor, wilfully over-insuring, or causing to do so, as also all concerned in any barratry, shall be guilty of piracy; (2) any person insuring goods not on board vessel shall be guilty of piracy. He supports his argument by adducing the call of the Bremen explosion and other instances of barratry which have occurred in his own experience forbear publishing the papers, either in original German or translated into English we have not had the opportunity of verifying the instances. At the same time we state common opinion, we believe, of Lloyds, of Mr. Plimsoll and Lord Shaftesbury, the obvious offence of barratry is not uncovered by Arson does not so completely cover the crime as barratry, which sinks a ship in ocean or strands her on a desert shore. second paper, that on maritime tribunals, a comprehensive grasp of mind. The opinion the well informed was that he seeks too. We certainly think that he is at least in ad of public opinion.

(To be continued).

LEGAL OBITUARY.

his department of the LAW TIMES, is contributed by AND WALFORD, M.A., and late scholar of Balliol Oxford, and Fellow of the Genealogical and al Society of Great Britain; and, as it is desired it as perfect a record as possible, the families and deceased members of the Profession will oblige arding to the LAW TIMES Office any dates and is required for a biographical notice.

E. BELDAM, ESQ.

Edward Beldam, Esq., F.R.G.S., barrister-at-law, of Banya, Royston, Cambridge. The sixty-fifth year of his age, was the son of the late William Beldam, Esq., of , by his marriage with Marianne, only r of William Woodham, Esq., of Shep- ll, Cambridgeshire. He was born in 1812, called to the Bar by the Honourable Lincoln's Inn, in Trinity Term, 1860. He magistrate for Hertfordshire and Cam- ire, and married, in 1844, Miss Eliza daughter of John Rankin, Esq., of New y whom he has left a family.

O. W. FARRER, ESQ.

Oliver William Farrer, Esq., barrister- of Binnegar Hall, near Wareham, Dorset- died on the 6th inst., in the fifty-eighth his age, was the third son of the late William Farrer, Esq., of Ingleborough, re, by his marriage with Henrietta Elisa- daughter of the late Sir Matthew White Bart., of Blagdon, Northumberland, and of the Hon. John Scott, eldest son of the of Eldon. He was born in the year 1819, educated at Winchester School, under Dr. , and at Balliol College, Oxford, where he bachelor's degree in 1838, and proceeded 1841. He was called to the Bar by the ble society of the Inner Temple in Michael- m 1844, and joined the Northern Circuit, ag for some years at the West Riding i. Mr. Farrer was a magistrate for the of Dorset, and honorary captain of the Rifle Volunteers. He married, in 1848, daughter of the Rev. Robert Bryan

R. HOLMES, ESQ.

Richard Holmes, Esq., solicitor, of Lancashire, who died at his residence, 10, Burnley, on the 3rd inst., in the sixty- ar of his age, was the only son of the late Holmes, Esq., of Linton, near Skipton, re, by Elizabeth, daughter of William , Esq., of Linton. He was born at Linton th June 1811, and was educated at Edward th's Grammar School at Giggleswick, near Yorkshire. He was articled to the late ry Alcock, of Skipton, and was admitted or in Trinity Term 1834, and was head of of Messrs. Holmes and Son, of Burnley. eased gentleman was a perpetual commis- a commissioner in all the courts. He , in 1844, Miss Janet Hogg, a daughter of Marmaduke Hogg, Esq., of Aldborough, roughbridge, Yorkshire, by whom he has living two sons (both of whom are soli- and one daughter. The remains of the gentleman were interred in the family the Cemetery, Burnley, on the 8th inst.

COURTS AND COURT PAPERS.

OF APPEAL, AND HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE (CHANCERY DIVISION).

MICHAELMAS SITTINGS, 1876.

Rota of Registrars in Attendance.

	Court of Appeal.	Master of the Rolls.
Nov. 18	Ward	Pemberton
20	Cloves	Latham
21	Cloves	Merivale
22	Leach	Latham
23	Pemberton	Merivale
24	Cloves	Merivale
25	Leach	Latham
	V.C. Malins.	V.C. Bacon.
Nov. 18	Latham	Farrer
20	Milne	Teesdale
21	King	Ward
22	Milne	Teesdale
23	King	Ward
24	Milne	Teesdale
25	King	Ward
	V.C. Hall.	Certificates of Sale and Transfer.
Nov. 18	Milne	Merivale
20	Farrer	Leach
21	Farrer	Cloves
22	Farrer	King
23	Farrer	Milne
24	Farrer	Latham
25	Farrer	Farrer

Christmas Vacation will commence on Dec. 24, inst. on Jan. 6, both days inclusive.

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

NOTA BENE.—Information intended for publication under the above heading should reach us not later than Thursday morning in each week, as publication is otherwise delayed.

MR. F. RICHARDSON, of Golden-square, has been appointed a Commissioner for Oaths in the Supreme Court of the Colony of Victoria, for London.

MR. G. WINCH, of Chatham, has been appointed Steward of the Manor of Chatham. Mr. Winch is also clerk to the stipendiary magistrate for Sheerness, registrar of Sheerness County Court, and deputy-coroner for Kent.

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

ELCUM and HOOVER, attorneys and solicitors, Bedford-row, Holborn (Hugh W. ELCUM and James H. HOOVER). Oct. 21 Gazette, Nov. 8.

CLARK and SCOTCH, solicitors, King-st, Chesham (George Clark and Joseph Scotch). Oct. 21 Gazette, Nov. 7.

GOVER, JAMES DINWELLY, and NORTON, EDWIN, solicitors, King-st, Chesham. Oct. 21 Gazette, Nov. 7.

KILLMISTER, SON, and PROCTOR, solicitors, Macclesfield (George Ridgway Killmister, George Ridgway Killmister, jun., and Arthur Crabtree Proctor), as regards G. R. Killmister. Nov. 4 PARKER, G. F., and LOCKE, solicitors, Milners-bldgs, Finsbury (George Francis Parker and Charles Wollaston Locke). Oct. 21 Gazette, Nov. 7.

Bankrupts.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Lincoln's Inn-fields.

KNIGHT, DOUGLAS, grocer and builder, Alpha-pl, Canterbury-rd, Kilburn. Pet. Nov. 7. Reg. Haslett. Sols. Morris and Co., Finsbury-circus. Sur. Nov. 23

To surrender in the Country.

HAMBURGER, SAMUEL, Jeweller's factor, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 7. Reg. Cole. Sur. Nov. 20

HUNT, GEORGE WARWICK, gentleman, Hove, near Brighton. Pet. Nov. 18. Reg. Evered. Sur. Nov. 20

MYRING, CHARLES, saddler, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 6. Reg. Parry. Sur. Nov. 24

STAFFORD, FRANCIS, tobacconist, Ilkeston. Pet. Nov. 8. Reg. Waller. Sur. Nov. 20

Gazette, Nov. 14.

To surrender in the Country.

BACKHOUSE, THOMAS, New Beckenham, co. Kent. Pet. Nov. 6. Reg. Rowland. Sur. Nov. 24

EVANS, DAVID, builder, at Llewellyn, near Neath. (Pet. Nov. 8. Reg. J. Jones. Sur. Nov. 27

HUTCHINSON, JOHN JOSEPH WILLIAM clock case manufacturer, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 7. Reg. Parry. Sur. Nov. 20

KAYE, JOHN, rope and twine maker, Huddersfield. Pet. Nov. 9. Reg. P. R. Jones. Sur. Nov. 20

LAWRENCE, JAMES, victualler, Poole, and brick manufacturer, Kinson, near Poole. Pet. Nov. 10. Reg. Dickinson. Sur. Nov. 27

WOOD, CHARLES, innkeeper, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 8. Reg. Marshall. Sur. Dec. 6

Bankruptcies Annulled.

Gazette, Nov. 7.

THOMAS, WILLIAM LYNALL, engineer, Hove. June 20, 1876

Gazette, Nov. 10.

ROBERT, CHARLES, merchant, Mark-la. July 17, 1876

IDA, E. G., Princess-st, Cavendish-sq. Oct. 6, 1876

PRIESTLEY, THOMAS, and PRIESTLEY, SIMON, woollaplers, Halifax. April 25, 1876

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Nov. 10.

AITKEN, MARTIN IRVING, flax dresser, Alford. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 21, at three, at office of Sols. Walker and Co., Alford

ANCHER, WILLIAM, beer-seller, Chorley. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at eleven, at office of Sols. Messrs. Binger, Sheffield

ARMER, CHARLES WINSHIP, grocer, Gateshead. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at eleven, at office of Sols. Allan and Davies, Newcastle

ASHWORTH, WILLIAM, late insurance agent, Nottingham. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at twelve, at office of Sols. Wells and Hind, Nottingham

BARKER, GEORGE, grocer, Wednesbury. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Sols. Sheldon, Wednesbury

BEARDS, BEARDS, general dealer, Wolverhampton. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 23, at eleven, at office of Sols. Stratton and Redland, Wolverhampton

BENNETT, SARAH, draper, Nottingham. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 23, at twelve, at office of Sols. Bell, Nottingham

BENTLEY, JOHN, journeyman tallow chandler, Glascoke, near Tarnworth. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Sols. Boston, Birmingham

BENTLEY, SAMUEL, bookseller, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at one, at office of Sols. Rookes and Midgley, Leeds

BIRD, ALFRED GREENWOOD, shoe merchant, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at two, at office of Sols. Rookes and Midgley, Leeds

BLISS, GEORGE, farmer, Stoke Goldington. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 21, at eleven, at office of Sols. Jellery, Northampton

BLUNT, THOMAS, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 20, at eleven, at office of Sols. Duke, Birmingham

BOOTH, THOMAS, provision dealer, Newcastle. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at three, at office of Sols. Johnston, Newcastle

BRADLEY, PHILIP, horsebreaker, Wakefield. Pet. Nov. 7. Dec. 1, at one, at J. Holmes, the Manor House inn, Wakefield. Sol. Stringer

BREWSTER, GEORGE ENOCH, late smack owner, Hull. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at eleven, at office of Sols. Messrs. Shackles, Hull

BURTON, ROBERT, jun., farmer, Harlethorpe, near Howden. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 24, at eleven, at office of Sols. Burton, Selby

CALN, GEORGE, grocer, Chorley. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Sols. Rutter, Bolton

CALDERWOOD, GEORGE, manufacturer, Castle-st, Falcon-sq. Pet. Nov. 2. Nov. 24, at two, at office of Sols. Webb, Barbican-chmbs, Barbican

CASH, FREDERICK, and DAVIS, JOHN, umbrella furniture manufacturers, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 27, at three, at office of Sols. Rowlands and Bagnall, Birmingham CATCHPOLE, JOHN GRAYSTON, fruiterer, Pont-st, Belgrave-sq, and Byrne-rd, Balham. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 27, at eleven, at the Bedford hotel, Maiden-la, Covent-gdn. Sols. Barton and Co., Henrietta-st, Covent-gdn.

CLARKE, GEORGE, and PIKE, WILLIAM, wholesale boot manufacturers, Tabernacle-walk, Finsbury. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 23, at twelve, at office of Sols. French, Cruickshanks

COLLINS, GEORGE, greengrocer, Cardiff. Pet. Oct. 26. Nov. 20, at eleven, at office of Sols. Morgan, Cardiff

COOPER, EDWIN, victualler, Stratford-on-Avon. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 27, at eleven, at the Falcon hotel, Stratford-on-Avon. Sol. Lane, Stratford-on-Avon

COPE, JOHN, shipwright, Cardiff. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 23, at eleven, at office of Sols. Morgan, Cardiff

COSE, RICHARD LAWRENCE, out of business, Brighton. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 20, at three, at Slater and Pannells, 1, Guildhall-chmbs, Basinghall-st. Sol. Parry, Basinghall-st

CURRY, ROBERT, greengrocer, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Sols. Nordon, Liverpool

DAVIES, EDWARD, contractor, Dinas, near Pontypridd. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at twelve, at the Public-hall office, Treherbert. Sol. Howells

DAWES, WILLIAM, late beerhouse keeper, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 25, at half-past eleven, at office of Sols. Ward, Birmingham

EARL, SAMUEL, farmer, Upper Wealdon. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Sols. Beeke, Northampton

EMERY, ROBERT, merchant, Cardiff. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 23, at three, at office of W. H. Williams and Co., Albert-chmbs, High-st, Cardiff. Sols. Ingledew, Ince, and Vachell, Cardiff

EVERITT, ROBERT, superintendent of police, Ilminster. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 23, at eleven, at office of Sols. Fall, Ilminster

FAULKNER, ISRAEL, late grocer, Houghton. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at three, at the White House hotel, Denton

FLOURY, EUGENE LUCIEN, wholesale dealer in mantles and costumes, Berners-st. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at two, at the Guildhall tavern, Gresham-st. Sol. Froggatt, Argyll-st, Regent-street

FORKWALL, HENRIKIAN, fancy box manufacturer, Leicester. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 24, at three, at office of Sols. Wright, Leicester

FOSTER, FREDERICK, builder, Royal Leamington Spa. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 23, at twelve, at office of Sols. Sanderson, Warwick

FOSTER, JOHN JONES, iron founder, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 27, at three, at office of Sols. Messrs. Yates and Stan-nought, Liverpool

GREGG, PETER WILLIAM, confectioner, Mile-end-rd. Pet. Oct. 26. Nov. 18, at ten, at 153, Westminster-bridge-rd, Lambeth. Sol. Gosly, Bow-st, Covent-gdn

HARRIS, THOMAS, contractor, Victoria, near Ebbw-vale. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 23, at ten, at office of Sols. David, Newport, Mon.

HARRIS, JAMES THOMPSON, grocer, St. Helen's. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Sols. B. Mather, 1, Commerce-st, Harrington-st, Liverpool. Sol. Massey, St. Helen's

HEALD, GEORGE FENTON, organ builder, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at twelve, at office of Sols. Hodgson, Sheffield

HINCHCLIFFE, JAMES, Manchester, and Medlock-vale Hall, near Ashton-under-Lyne, and PILLING, JAMES, Ardwick, grey cloth agents. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 21, at three, at office of Sols. Messrs. Fox, Manchester

HODGSON, WILLIAM, umbrella maker, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at twelve, at office of Sols. Plummer, Bristol

HORNBY, GEORGE, gasfitter, Southampton. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Edmunds, Davis, and Clarke, account-ants, 8, Old Jewry, London. Sol. Shuttle, Southampton

HUNT, HARRY, baker, Aston. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 24, at eleven, at office of Sols. Smith, Birmingham

HUNTON, CHARLES, out of business, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Sols. Hewson, Leeds

HURRELL, ROBERT, carman, St. Mary-at-hill, and Cold Harbour-la, Camberwell. Pet. Oct. 31. Nov. 23, at eleven, at the Masons' Hall tavern, Masons-avenue, Basinghall-st. Sol. Rigby, Berns-ford-st, Walworth

HYDES, JOHN, and JUDD, SAMUEL, bill discounters, Hunslet, under style of the West Riding Loan and Investment Society, pany. Pet. Nov. 2. Nov. 23, at two at the Liverpool and don-chmbs, 63, Albion-st, Leeds. Sols. Simpson and Burrell

JACKSON, WILLIAM, ironmonger, Gainsborough. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at one, at the Exchange hotel, Sheffield. Sols. Oldham and Iveson, Gainsborough

JENKS, THOMAS JONES, black ornament manufacturer, Birming-ham, Aston, and Glasgow. Pet. Oct. 19. Nov. 18, at eleven, at the Union hotel, Birmingham. Sol. East, Birmingham

JOBLING, GEORGE, innkeeper, Leven-bridge, near Yarm. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at half past eleven, at the office of Hudson and Sons, accountants, Dorecot-st, Stockton. Sols. Garbutt and Fawcett, Stockton

JONES, THOMAS GRIFFITHS, iron merchant, Neath. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 23, at twelve, at office of Sols. Leyson, Neath

KAY, MARY ANN, milliner, Workington. Pet. Nov. 7. Dec. 1, at twelve, at the Globe hotel, Cockermouth. Sol. Aiter, White-haven

LANE, MARY, sometimes called Mary Lane Robinson, widow, beerhouse keeper, Kimberley. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 20, at twelve, at office of Sols. Cockayne, Nottingham

LEWIS, WILLIAM, jeweller, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Sols. Jacques, Birmingham

LITTLE, NURBOROUGH ROXLEY JOHN, wine merchant, Fleet-st. Pet. Oct. 30. Nov. 21, at eleven, at Dick's Coffee-house, 3, Fleet-st. Sol. Johnson, Arundel-st, Strand

MARTIN, JOHN ROBERT, joiner, Lincoln. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 18, at eleven, at office of G. Jay, accountant, Bank-st, Lincoln. Sol. Rex, Lincoln

MAXFIELD, HENRY THOMAS, elastic web manufacturer, Leices-ter. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 23, at twelve, at office of Sols. Wright, Leicester

METCALF, GEORGE, farmer, Oak Style, near Grewelthorpe. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at eleven, at the Bay Horse inn, Masham. Sol. Calvert, Masham, via Bedale

MEYER, ALFRED DUFAS, factor, Sheffield. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at eleven, at office of Sols. Messrs. Binger, Sheffield

MOLS, JOHN, bootmaker, Consett. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 23, at two, at office of Sols. Messrs. Joel, Newcastle

MOORE, JOHN MORRIS, farmer, Kenilworth. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at three, at the Globe hotel, Warwick. Sols. Pain and Hawth

NIXON, JAMES, wine merchant, Hastings. Pet. Nov. 2. Nov. 30 at three, at the London Warehousemen's Association, 144, Chesham-st. Sol. Pinkett, Gutter-la, Chesham

PARSONS, RICHARD, corn merchant, Quernmore, Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at two, at office of Sols. Messrs. Sharp, Lancaster

PEEL, ROBERT PEAL, grocer, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 22, at four, at office of Sols. Atkinson, Bradford

PENNEL, WILLIAM, victualler, Dudley. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 21, at eleven, at office of Sols. Whitehouse, Dudley

PHEASANT, HENRY, farmer, Threockingham. Pet. Nov. 4. Nov. 23, at eleven, at the Fortescue Arms inn, Billingham. Sol. Law, Stamford

PICKERING, SAMUEL WHALEY, chemist, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Sols. Shippey, Manchester

READING, WILLIAM, baker, Aldeburgh. Pet. Nov. 7. Dec. 1, at two, at the East Suffolk hotel, Aldeburgh. Sol. Foland, Ipswich

REINHOLD, HERMANN ADOLPH, mechanician, Wellington-st, Woolwich. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Barrett and Patey, 90, London-wall. Sol. Jenkins, Tavistock-st, Strand

RODDA, JOHN, builder, Antrobus-rd, Acton-green. Pet. Nov. 2. Nov. 18, at three, at office of Sols. Clarke, Blomfield-st

ROEBUCK, WILLIAM RICHARDSON, of no occupation, Gray's-inn-sq. Pet. Oct. 27. Nov. 22, at two, at office of Sols. Duncan, Gracechurch-bldgs, Gracechurch-st

ROSE, JAMES, painter, Great Grimsby. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 23, at two, at office of Sols. Messrs. Mason, Great Grimsby

ROYER, RICHARD JOHN, baker, Redcar. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 23, at three, at office of Sols. Bell, West Hartlepool

RUSSELL, DAVID, bookkeeper, Southport. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 21, at eleven, at office of Sols. Williams, Liverpool

SAUL, RICHARD, tailor, Birkenhead. Pet. Nov. 8. Dec. 1 at three, at office of Sols. Lowe, Liverpool

SCOTT, GEORGE, cloth merchant, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 22, at three, at office of J. South, Kirk, and Co., Royal Insurance-bldgs, Park-row, Leeds. Sol. Fulan

SEATON, PHILLIP RICHARD, upholsterer, Mill-st, Hanover-sq. Pet. Nov. 6. Nov. 23, at twelve, at office of Sols. Bridger and Collins, King William-st, city London

SENIOR, JAMES, tailor, Dewsbury. Pet. Nov. 7. Nov. 24, at half past ten, at office of Sols. Messrs. Ridgway, Church-st, Dept-ford

SKELTON, FREDERICK, cabinet manufacturer, Great Dover-street, Borough. Pet. Nov. 8. Nov. 23, at two, at office of Whittington, Bishopsgate-st, Woburn

[Faint, mostly illegible text in the leftmost column, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

[Continuation of faint, mostly illegible text in the leftmost column.]

[Faint, mostly illegible text in the middle column, likely bleed-through from the reverse side of the page.]

[Continuation of faint, mostly illegible text in the middle column.]

Students.

UNIVERSITY OF CAMBRIDGE.

[Faint text listing students and their details.]

UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD.

[Faint text listing students and their details.]

Deaths of Students.

[Faint text listing deaths of students.]

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

[Faint text listing births, marriages, and deaths.]

PARTRIDGE & COOPER

WHOLESALE & RETAIL STATIONERS

22, FLEET-STREET, AND 22, CRANBURY-LANE, LONDON.

[Text describing stationery products and services.]

THE NEW "VELLUM WOVE CLUB-HOUSE" NOW

[Text describing the new vellum wove club-house.]

THE NEW "VELLUM WOVE CLUB-HOUSE" NOW

[Text describing the new vellum wove club-house.]

MUCH TIME AND WORRY SAVED

BY SORTING YOUR PAPERS INTO

STONE'S PATENT BOXES AND CABINETS

[Text describing Stone's Patent Boxes and Cabinets.]

Henry Stone, Manufacturer & Patentee, Banker.

[Text describing Henry Stone's services.]

DORIA'S LAW AND PRACTICE IN

[Text describing Doria's Law and Practice.]

To Readers and Correspondents.

WOULD-BE PUPIL.—There is no etiquette against your entering a solicitor's office.
Anonymous communications are invariably rejected.
All communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.
All communications intended for the EDITOR (SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT) should be so addressed.

CHARGES FOR ADVERTISEMENTS.

Four lines or thirty words..... 3s. 6d. | Every additional ten words..... 0s. 6d.
 Advertisements specially ordered for the first page are charged one-fourth more than the above scale.
 Advertisements must reach the Office not later than five o'clock on Thursday afternoon.

Vol. XIII., Part 4, price 5s. 6d.

COX'S CRIMINAL LAW CASES. Edited by EDWARD W. COX, Serjeant-at-Law, Recorder of Portsmouth. The Parts and Volumes may still be had to complete sets. It is the only complete series of Criminal Cases published in England. An Appendix contains a valuable collection of Precedents of Indictments.
 London: "LAW TIMES" Office, 10, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

Vol. XIII., Part 3, price 5s. 6d.

MARITIME LAW REPORTS (New Series). By J. P. ASPINALL, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, in the Admiralty Courts of England and Ireland, and in all the Superior Courts, with a Selection from the Decisions of the United States Courts with Notes by the Editor. The First Series of "Maritime Law" may now be had complete in Three Volumes, half-bound, price £5 5s. for the set, or any single volume for 2s. Back numbers may be had to complete sets.
 The 1st Vol. of "Aspinall's Maritime Cases," from 1871 to 1873, price half-calf, £2 9s.
 London: "LAW TIMES" Office, 10, Wellington-street Strand.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.	LEADING ARTICLES, &c.
HOUSE OF LORDS.	TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS ..... 53
LEA v. CURRIE AND OTHERS — Banker's Lien—Cheque—Consideration —Post-dated draft—Stamp Act..... 414	LEADING ARTICLES — Topics of the Week..... 53 Remoteness in Regard to Limitations after Estates Tail..... 56 Bills of Sale, Reputed Ownership, and Apparent Possession..... 56 The Reform of Criminal Procedure..... 57 Bankruptcy—Protected Payments..... 57 Agency—Liability of Agent for Negligence..... 58 The Law Reports Digest..... 59
JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.	SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT (Edited by a Solicitor). SOLICITORS' JOURNAL — Topics of the Week..... 59 Notes of New Decisions..... 60 Specimen Digest of the Law relating to Solicitors of the Supreme Court..... 60 The Prosecution of a Solicitor's Clerk and a Solicitor..... 61 Heirs-at-Law and Next of Kin..... 63 Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England..... 63 Appointments under the Joint-Stock Winding-up Acts..... 63 Creditors under Estates in Chancery..... 63 Creditors under 23 & 25 Vict. c. 35..... 63
THE NORMA — Collision—Practice—Vice-Admiralty Court—Preliminary acts—Examination of witnesses—Rule of the road..... 418	LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL — Topics of the Week..... 64 Law Students' Debating Society..... 64 Bristol Law Students' Debating Society..... 64 Hull Law Students' Society..... 64 Huddersfield Law Students' Society..... 64 Leicester Law Students' Society..... 64 Plymouth, Stonehouse, and Devonport Law Students' Society..... 64 Wolverhampton Law Students' Society..... 64 The Council of Legal Education..... 64 Queries..... 65 Answers to Correspondents..... 65
ARCHES COURT OF CANTERBURY.	PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS ..... 63
CLIFTON v. RIDSDALE — Illegal Communion—Number of com- municants—Ceremonial observance— Crucifix—Unauthorised decorations— Appeal no stay..... 432	THE BENCH AND THE BAR — Calls to the Bar..... 65
SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE.	MAGISTRATES' LAW — Notes of New Decisions..... 65 Game Preservation by Parol..... 65
LEA v. LEMAN, &amp;c. v. BARLAND — Bill of sale by non-trader—Registration —First bill of sale not registered— Second bill of sale of same property registered—Bankruptcy of mort- gagor..... 422	MARITIME LAW — Notes of New Decisions..... 66
HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE—COMMON PLEAS DIVISION.	COUNTY COURTS — Halifax County Court..... 66 Manchester County Court..... 66 Liverpool County Court..... 67
IRON v. SAMUEL — Practice—Judicature Act 1875, s. 50— Order LIV. r. 6—Order LXXI. rr. 5, 6— Appeal from chambers, time for..... 426	LEGAL NEWS — On Public Notaries in the Middle Ages..... 67 Miscellaneous..... 67
LAHEY v. ARNOTT — Service of writ of summons—Service out of jurisdiction—Practice—Judica- ture Act 1875..... 434	CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION ..... 67
EXCHEQUER DIVISION.	NOTES AND QUERIES ..... 68
AND v. BRUCE; DUGGAN v. THE SAME; COOPER v. THE SAME — Bill of sale—Amdavit filed on registra- tion—Erroneous statement in date of execution—Clerical error..... 435	LAW SOCIETIES — The Bremen Congress of the Association for the Reform and Codification of the Law of Nations..... 68
PROBATE, DIVORCE, AND ADMIRALTY DIVISION.	THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS — The Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876..... 69 Lancashire Winter Assizes 1876..... 71 Registrars for the ensuing Week..... 71
THE GOODS OF JOHN ENTICHPAP — Probate of copy will—Personal inter- ested in intestacy—Completion of title..... 437	LEGAL ORBITUARY ..... 71
AMES v. SHRIMPTON AND OTHERS — Will—Revocation—Revival—Codicil..... 438	THE GAZETTES ..... 71
JONES v. RIDGE AND RIDGE — Practice—Place of trial..... 438	BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS ..... 72
Admiralty Business.
THE ST. OLAF — Master—Dismissal—Ship's certificate of registry and papers—Refusal to deliver up—Lien..... 436
THE SCUTTER — Forfeiture—Merchant Shipping Act 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104), s. 103—Con- sisting British character—Assuming foreign character..... 439
THE SPACITORIA — Practice—Default in pleading—Signing judgment..... 431

The Law and the Lawyers.

COMPLAINTS are rife concerning the severity of the last examination for the Bar, a large proportion of candidates having been lucked. The papers seem to have been unusually "stiff," and Roman law was fatal to many. We have received a letter from a correspondent vigorously assailing the policy of giving Roman law so much prominence. He writes: "Two gentlemen have been elected, who are (as I am informed), the Professors of Roman Civil law at the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge—gentlemen, of barristers, who devote their lives to this one subject,

VOL. LXII.—No. 1756.

and who naturally look upon it in the exaggerated light common with persons who only study one subject. If barristers had been selected they would properly subordinate the study of this subject, so as not to make it usurp the place of more necessary and practical legal knowledge. Now, Sir, how has this system worked? Last week an examination of students in Roman Civil Law (for the four Inns of Court) took place before the examiner.
 Seventy-five young gentlemen presented themselves. Of these no less than thirty were plucked! Of these, I know as a fact that several were persons of great intelligence and industry, who had for the past twelve months exclusively devoted themselves to the study of Roman Civil Law, and had most certainly acquired a knowledge of it far greater than they would ever require for use in their future professions. Here, then, has been one-third of the preparatory period of study consumed in getting up a subject in which after all they have been deficient." It will be a great evil if this study is made a stumbling block, and we trust that the result of the recent examination will induce the authorities to reconsider the matter. In our opinion, Roman Civil Law should be made the subject of an intermediate examination at the end of a student's first year, in order that the residue of his time might be devoted exclusively to the study of the other branches of study in which he must pass. Our correspondent draws an inference against the examination from the large proportion of rejected candidates. We do not know that this is fair to the examination, but the proportion is so startling that it invites inquiry.

A RECENT Act of Parliament rendered stockbrokers who had received money or any valuable securities with written instructions to apply the same in a particular manner, criminally liable if they fraudulently converted such money to their own use. In a case that was before the Court of Appeal on the 16th inst., a clergyman had verbally instructed his broker to sell for him £4212 Consols, and to reinvest the proceeds in the purchase of London and North-Western Railway stock. It appeared that at the time of giving these instructions he informed the broker that he was dealing with these funds only in the capacity of trustee under his father's will. The broker sold the Consols and paid the amount he received into his bankers; he also entered into a contract for the purchase of the railway stock for the next settling day.
 Between his doing so and the next settling day, however, he became a bankrupt, and was declared a defaulter on the Stock Exchange, and on the settling day the money for the purchase of the railway stock was not forthcoming. Thereupon the broker's principal made an application before Mr. Registrar PEYRS that the money realised by the sale of the Consols, or so much of it as could be traced, should be handed over to him. The Registrar declined to make the order on the ground that the broker stood in the relation of a banker to his client, not in that of a trustee.
 On appeal, this decision was reversed; Lord Justice JAMES and BRAMWELL, J.A., holding that a stockbroker who receives money from a principal for any purpose is in the position of a trustee with respect to the money received until the purpose is fulfilled, and BAGGALLAY, J.A., holding that at all events a broker is in that position when he has notice that the money he is dealing with is a trust fund. So that, according to the ruling of the majority of the court, there can be no doubt that had the broker in question received his instructions in writing, he would have come within the Act we have referred to. It behoves stock-brokers, therefore, to be very careful in separating their clients' money from their own; or they may find that when they imagined that they were merely incurring a debt, they incurred a liability for a criminal breach of trust.

THE event of the week has been the first sitting of the House of Lords, during a prorogation of Parliament, under the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876. The 8th section of that Act provides that "for the purpose of preventing delay in the administration of justice," the House may sit for the purpose of hearing appeals during any prorogation of Parliament "at such time and in such manner as may be appointed by order of the House of Lords, made during the preceding session of Parliament." The requisite standing order of last session having fixed the first day of meeting for the 21st Nov., five law lords, being the LORD CHANCELLOR, LORD O'HAGAN, LORD PENZANCE, LORD GORDON, and LORD BLACKBURN, took part in the hearing of Radley v. London and North Western Railway Company, in which case judgment was deferred. The list contains at present eight more cases, in all of which it is possible that judgment may be delivered before Christmas. An entirely new procedure is called into existence by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, or, rather, by the Standing Orders of the House of Lords made in pursuance of that Act. "An appeal," says the Legislature in the 11th section, "shall not lie from any of the courts from which an appeal to the House of Lords is given by this Act, except in manner provided by this Act, and subject to such conditions as to the value of the subject matter in dispute, and as to giving security for costs, and as to the time within which the appeal shall be brought, and generally as to all matters of practice and procedure, or otherwise, as may be imposed by orders of the House of Lords." Important standing orders under this section have been recently issued. They provide (inter alia) that, except where otherwise provided by statute, no petition of appeal be received unless the same be lodged in the Parliament office within one year from the date of the last judgment appealed from; that all petitions of appeal be signed and the reasonableness thereof certified by two counsel in the case; and that each appellant give security for costs to the amount of £500. They do not make any direct condition "as to the value of the subject matter in dispute;" but we suppose that the requirement of the certificate of counsel is intended to check frivolous appeals. The Appellate Jurisdiction Act contains no provision as to the publication of the standing orders, nor as to their presentation to the House of Commons; and it will be observed that while orders appointing the time of sitting can only be made during a session properly so called, orders as to procedure and practice may be made at any time. We print elsewhere the text of the standing orders already promulgated.

THE case of Re Lazarus, which has been before Mr Registrar HAZLITT in the Court of Bankruptcy, has at least one remarkable feature. It cruelly illustrates the working of our bankruptcy machinery. The total assets realised amounted to £399 1s. 10d. The total expenditure was thus made up:

Rents, rates, and taxes .....	£261	14	3
Law charges .....	201	3	6
Court fees .....	2	5	9
Receiver's costs .....	119	0	1
Trustee's remuneration .....	112	15	0
Incidental outlay .....	168	12	8

Leaving a balance for the creditors of £33 11s. 5d.! This hardly needs commentary.

A VERY extraordinary case, interesting to the legal Profession, was recently before the Colchester bench of magistrates. The life of one BLUMBERG had been insured in various offices for £13,000. He died soon after abroad. The offices resisted payment, and Messrs. PALMER, BULL, and FRY were solicitors for one of them. In the course of the proceedings Mr. BULL received a letter from ENGLISH, a clerk in the office of Mr. JONES, a solicitor of Colchester, enclosing the press copy of a letter, extracted from Mr. JONES's letter book, which is as follows:—

[BLUMBERG.]

Colchester, 25th Sept. 1874.

DEAR SIR,—I suppose Mr. Evans delivered my message to you yesterday. What I recommend you to do is to write and say that Blumberg has gone to Japan, and that you are ready and willing to pay the "extra risk" premium. I should not tell them at present he is dead. We yesterday telegraphed through the Home Office for five certificates of death, including one for you. Can you meet me at Jefferies' on Saturday, as he wants to see you particularly, and will then arrange the matters you wrote about.—Yours truly,

H. JONES.

G. E. Digby, Esq., Solicitor, Maldon.

ENGLISH requested Messrs. PALMER and Co. to return this letter, but Mr. BULL had it photographed and then returned it to Mr. JONES, informing him how it had come into his hands. Thereupon Mr. JONES commenced criminal proceedings, not only against English for felony, but against Mr. BULL for receiving the letter, knowing it to have been stolen. The proceedings ended by the charge against Mr. BULL being dismissed and ENGLISH being committed for trial. We should hardly like to express an opinion of the proceedings against Mr. BULL. Mr. JONES said that Mr. BULL should have returned the letter without reading it. That would have been an act of childish simplicity and self-denial and blindness to clients' interests for which few solicitors would like to receive credit. Having read the letter, as he did as a matter of course, he would have winked at a very questionable transaction, and neglected the interests of his clients, had he failed to preserve copies of the stolen epistle. To say the least, Mr. JONES made a blunder in writing the letter. He committed another when he instituted criminal proceedings against Mr. BULL.

REMOTENESS IN REGARD TO LIMITATIONS AFTER ESTATES TAIL.

In an article on the 16th ult., on the proposed alteration of the law in regard to contingent remainders, we suggested that it would be expedient to provide, that in regard to remoteness, remainders, or other limitations, to take effect after or in defeasance of estates tail, whether legal or equitable, should be protected, if in event they vested, during the continuance of the estate tail, or at the moment of its expiration or determination. In support of this view we adduced the reasoning of the editors of the late Mr. Jarman's "Treatise on Wills," vol. i., pp. 236-238, third edition, as proving that although contingent remainders, properly so called, which might by possibility vest during the continuance of the estate tail, or at the moment of its determination, were not open to objection on the ground of perpetuity, yet that remainders (or, more properly, executory limitations) after equitable estates tail, may in certain cases be void ab initio for remoteness. In applying the ordinary rule as to perpetuities to any executory limitation after an estate tail, it must be borne in mind, as well settled law, that if it can be predicated that such limitation must necessarily vest, if at all, during the continuance of the estate tail, or at the moment of its determination, it is excepted from the operation of the rule, since, being barrable, it is out of the mischief against which the rule is directed. See the authorities referred to at p. 230 of the treatise above mentioned, to which we may add the recent case of Heasman v. Paine (26 L. T. Rep. N. S. 299; L. Rep. 7 Ch. App. 275). In that case Lord Justice James, approving a similar remark by Vice-Chancellor Malins, is reported to say that no limitation after an estate tail could be void for remoteness. It is, however, clear from the nature of the case before him, and from the subsequent remarks that his attention was directed to cases where such limitations would at the latest take effect, if at all, immediately after the estate tail. It would be a perverse straining of a general remark to apply it to cases where, as in Cole v. Sevell and Doe v. Perratt, the limitations, if they had been equitable, instead of being remainders, would not necessarily vest before or at the determination of the estate tail. Take, for example, the case of a gift to A. in equitable tail, with proviso that on failure of issue under the entail or afterwards the land should go to the grandson of B., who should first attain twenty-one. We think most lawyers would entertain a strong opinion that this and similar executory limitations were void in conception for remoteness. For the reasons we have before stated, it seems desirable that such limitations should be allowed, as contingent remainders now are, to await the determination of the estate tail, and to take effect if they should happen to vest thereafter previously.

BILLS OF SALE, REPUTED OWNERSHIP, AND APPARENT POSSESSION.

WE observe that some of our correspondents are considerably exercised on the above topics. Some are of opinion "that if the provisions of the reputed ownership section of the Bankruptcy Act are unaffected by the registration specially provided by the Bills of Sale Act, then, so far as the bankruptcy laws are concerned, the provisions for registration in the Bills of Sale Act are utterly useless." One inquires whether the case of Badger v. Shaw (L. T. Rep. N. S. 323), which decides that registration does not displace the effect of reputed ownership in the event of the assignor's bankruptcy has been overruled, while another thinks that the doctrine in question has been overruled by decided cases. We might refer to several articles in the LAW TIMES on the above subject, especially to "Bills of Sale and Apparent Ownership" (Jan. 6, 1872; LAW TIMES, Vol. lii. 170); also to the case of Ex parte Harding (L. Rep. 15 Eq. 223; 28 L. T. Rep. N. S. 241), where, as in an unreported case of Ex parte Brown, re Scrivener, on 12th Feb. 1872, referred to LAW TIMES, Vol. liv. 299, Sir J. Bacon, C.J.B., acted on the doctrine of Badger v. Shaw. This doctrine, whether politic or the reverse, is unquestionably sound law. In order to understand the Bills of Sale Act, it is necessary as a preliminary to keep firmly in mind that it is an invalidating, and not a validating, statute. It does not render valid as against trustees in bankruptcy or execution creditors, any assignment which apart from the Act, would be invalid. As a consequence, if an assignor, with the consent of the true owner, be allowed to take the possession order or disposition, registration of the bill of sale will not prevent the chattels from passing to the trustee in the assignor's bankruptcy; so also it was decided in the important case of Spackman v. Miller (12 C. B., N. S. 659), that a proviso for enjoyment by the assignor until notice or until default, so as to maintain possession consistent with the title in order to exclude the application of the doctrine of reputed ownership, is a futile device. Though all this is no doubt so, the assertion of our correspondent that registration as against the assignor's bankruptcy is "utterly useless," is, like many other sweeping assertions, very wide of the truth. We will indicate at least three points in which a registered deed would prevail where an unregistered deed would fail. In the first place, if the deed be registered, a bona fide attempt by the assignee to gain possession, showing that he is the true owner, did not consent to further possession by the assignor, would protect the bill of sale; otherwise, if the bill of sale were unregistered—for, as against such bills of sale, apparent possession, with or without consent, is fatal: (Ancona v. Rogers 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 115.) In the second place, if the deed be registered, fixtures would not in any case pass to the trustee in bankruptcy, not being personal chattels within the Bankruptcy Acts (Ex parte Reynal, 2 M. D. & D. 433, where the authorities collected)—otherwise, if the deed be unregistered, for, by the Bills of Sale Act they are, for the purposes of that Act, "chattels personal," and if remaining in "the apparent possession" of the assignor will pass to the trustee on his bankruptcy.

In the third place, if the assignor be not in trade the doctrine of reputed ownership does not apply to his chattels under the Bankruptcy Act 1869, sect. 15, so that a registered deed would be good, but an unregistered deed in the case of the assignor's "apparent ownership" would be invalid. See Re Barron ex parte Cochrane (3 Ch. Div. 324), affirmed by the Court of Appeal on the 16th inst., which shews also that where, as against Trustee in liquidation of a non-trader a first bill of sale is void for want of registration, the holder of a second bill of sale duly registered is entitled to the chattels comprised in it. Indirectly, therefore, as the result of registration coupled with the accident of the assignor's liquidation, the second mortgagee prevailed over the first mortgagee, which he would have been unable to do if the assignor had not gone into liquidation or become bankrupt, or, as in Richards v. James (L. Rep. 2 Q. B. 285; 16 L. T. Rep. N. S. 274), had an execution levied on the chattels.

THE REFORM OF CRIMINAL PROCEDURE.

DISTINCTION BETWEEN FELONIES AND MISDEMEANORS.

We endeavoured to point out in our last article some of the numerous inconsistencies which, at the present time, attended the administration of the criminal law by reason of the meaningless distinctions which are still allowed to exist between felonies and misdemeanours, and suggested amendments which are imperatively called for if such distinctions are still to be maintained in their present form. Unfortunately the injustice that is too frequently the result of the subsisting state of things is not confined to the proceedings at the trial. In most of our prisons the consequences are very different. A man who steals a fowl and undergoes a term of imprisonment for that offence must often feel agreeably surprised to find how much better he is treated when subsequently he is again imprisoned for what is substantially the same offence, namely, obtaining the like by means of a false pretence. This is, however, a result which cannot well, under the existing state of things, be obviated; and defects of this kind must still be permitted to continue so long as the present distribution of offences endures. The main consideration, therefore, is whether the distinction itself ought either to be entirely abolished or, at least, to undergo a substantial modification.

Now a few considerations will probably suffice to show that it is essential that there should be some classification of crimes. The term felony, without doubt, implies a crime which is heinous, and ought to be applied only to such offences as are opprobrious and disgraceful. But to many acts, which are technically speaking crimes by the law of England, society very properly attaches no disgrace whatever. For instance, it would certainly be intolerable that the inhabitants of a parish who had from some cause neglected to repair a highway, and had been found guilty on an indictment preferred against them, should be felons in the eye of the law, such an indictment being really more in the nature of a civil proceeding than anything else. On the other hand, it is almost equally monstrous that a person found guilty of some petty larceny should be branded as a felon for the rest of his days, and though no longer liable to forfeit his goods be subject to disqualifications of a grave nature; while a man who obtains large sums by false pretences escapes on far easier terms. As an example, under the Wine and Beer House Act Amendment Act 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 29) s. 14, enacts that every person convicted of felony shall for ever be disqualified from selling spirits by retail, and no licence to sell spirits by retail shall be granted to any person who shall have been so convicted as aforesaid; and if any person shall, after having been so convicted as aforesaid, take out or have any licence to sell spirits by retail, the same shall be void to all intents and purposes; and every person who, after being so convicted as aforesaid, shall sell any spirits by retail, in any manner whatever, shall incur the penalty for doing so without a licence. This clause was evidently inserted with a view to protect the public; but it is manifest that its operation is not only partial but in some cases most unjust. Then again, the law of arrest, useful as it is, would be intolerable if it were extended to all crimes alike, as an undue interference with the liberty of the subject. Some of the worst criminals would be able to escape unpunished if the law did not authorise their immediate arrest; and various statutes have been passed to obviate any difficulty on that score. To extend such a law, however, to every class of crime, would be unnecessary, and fraught with the greatest injustice. The best reform in this direction (if any such be attempted) therefore, would appear not to abolish entirely the distinction between the two classes of crime, but to reshape it so as to introduce a broad and intelligible principle between them, and so get rid of the confusion which has gradually been increasing. Valuable suggestions have been made as to the alterations that are required by Mr. Greaves and Mr. Fitzjames Stephen, whose knowledge and experience of criminal law are well known, and whose opinions, therefore, are entitled to the highest respect. The object to be gained, of course, is to classify crimes in such a manner that all those that are disgraceful should be felonies, and the rest misdemeanours. But it is difficult, if not impossible, to lay down any fixed law on the subject. Mr. Greaves's suggestion is that all crimes punishable with penal servitude shall be felonies, and those not so punishable misdemeanours. But this proposed test would not be altogether satisfactory, as the law at present stands. Attempts at rape, and many serious common law forgeries are not punishable with penal servitude, though nobody would be found to deny that such offences are in the highest degree disgraceful. The same remark only partially applies to Mr. Fitzjames Stephen's proposed classification by making all crimes punishable by death, penal servitude, or imprisonment with hard labour, felonies, and all other misdemeanours. The latter classification is more comprehensive, and on that account better than Mr. Greaves's, but unless the statute law underwent entire revision would fail to include many felonies and misdemeanours which are still not punishable with hard labour. Again, there are many felonies which, though punishable with penal servitude for life, in no way affect the character; as, for example, manslaughter, where the offence committed may be of the slightest description, and be deserving of but a nominal punishment. These ought obviously to be ranked among the misdemeanours if the classification is to be a satisfactory one, inasmuch as they cannot be regarded as disgraceful. The best alteration, as it appears to us, would be to make all crimes, with a few exceptions, such as the non-repairing of a highway and the like, prima facie punishable with hard labour, and that the test should be not whether a crime is punishable with hard labour, but whether hard labour is actually imposed. The procedure in all cases would thus be the same, and a discretionary power would be given to the judge to determine what the quality of the offence should be, and to which of the two classes it belongs. At all events, there should be some provision by which crimes that vary so much in degree as manslaughter and bigamy should not necessarily belong to the class known as felonies. The subject is no doubt one of grave difficulty, and on which there is a vast difference of opinion. The probabilities, therefore, are that a reform of such magnitude will not be attempted, and that we must content ourselves with amending the present procedure, and while making the distinction between the two classes of crimes in some cases more meaningless than ever, to take care that substantial justice is done to all parties, without the inconvenience and useless expense that are at present incurred, owing to the imperfect machinery with which past legislation has furnished us.

BANKRUPTCY—PROTECTED PAYMENTS.

MUCH has of late been said and written against the policy of the saving clause in the 92nd section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, which protects "the rights of a purchaser, payee, or incumbrancer in good faith and for valuable consideration," from being avoided as a fraudulent preference by the occurrence of the vendor's, payor's, or mortgagor's bankruptcy within three months after the date of the transaction.

It having been conclusively decided by the House of Lords in Butcher v. Stead (33 L. T. Rep. N. S. 354), that where an insolvent debtor, without pressure, pays a particular creditor with a view of giving him a preference over his other creditors, the creditor is protected if unaware of the debtor's insolvency, and of his intention to give such preference, it seems to us that somewhat too much has been made of the remarks of Lord Selborne, who alone dissented from the decision, which was in affirmance of that of the Chief Judge in Bankruptcy, and of the Lords Justices. Lord Selborne thought that the construction adopted "opened a very wide door to frauds upon the bankrupt law." The difficulty, of course, is in bringing home notice or knowledge of the real nature of the transaction as a fraudulent preference to the party preferred, and it may be admitted that for want of such proof many underhand arrangements which ought to be set aside—and if proof were forthcoming, as in the case of Ex parte Tate, in the Appeal Court on the 9th inst., would be set aside—are allowed to remain unimpeached.

However this may be, we are not disposed to look so intently at the misfortunes of the general creditors as to blind ourselves to the rights of particular creditors who have honestly received what they honestly supposed to be payment in due course of a debt bonâ fide due to them. That creditors so circumstanced should, perhaps three months afterwards, be called on to refund what they would naturally consider indefeasibly their own, and who may be assumed to regulate their expenditure and engagements accordingly, does appear to us somewhat intolerable.

In fact the creditor would be placed in a position analogous to that in which, as we pointed out (LAW TIMES, vol. lvi. 321), an execution creditor would have been placed if the original decision of Sir G. Mellish, L. J. (Re Villars, ex parte Rogers, 30 L. T. Rep. N. S., 104, 338) had not happily been set aside on the rehearing before the full Court of Appeal. It would hardly be endured that the law should be put in such a condition that a thoroughly prudent man would be under the necessity of placing every payment he receives to a suspense account for three months. There seems great force in that part of the present Lord Chancellor's judgment in Butcher v. Stead, where he says, "I think it was the intention of the Legislature in defining for the first time the law as to fraudulent preference, and changing the old rule as to contemplation of bankruptcy into a rule which exposed the payment to be impeached for a period so long as three months, to accompany and temper this enactment by a provision of great convenience in mercantile dealings, and giving a protection where it is obviously much required to those who in good faith take money which ought to be paid to them without notice that the person paying is doing anything injurious to his other creditors."

insurance. The defendants were instructed by the plaintiff to effect "a policy for £550 on the ship Expedition and her freight at and from Teneriffe to London." They effected the policy, but did not insert a clause allowing liberty "to touch and stay at all or any of the Canary Islands." Proof was given at the trial that where orders were given to effect such a policy, it was the invariable custom to insert, without instruction, such a clause, inasmuch as ships seldom took in the whole of their cargoes at Teneriffe. Whilst the ship was proceeding to one of those islands, to complete her cargo, she was captured, and the underwriters refused to pay, on the ground of deviation. Lord Ellenborough held that the defendants were liable for not having inserted the clause in the policy, and the plaintiff recovered the sum directed to be insured, deducting the premium.

THE LAW REPORTS DIGEST.

We really do not think it is going too far to ask the Council of Law Reporting to call in this Digest. Our view of its mischievous tendency and its utter uselessness is borne out by a correspondent, who writes thus:

"I was pleased to see that you had called attention to this digest. A more worthless good-for-nothing work was never, I should think, inflicted upon the Profession. The first title that I referred to was "Shipping." Not one single case about shipping was to be found under that title, and after wading through the five columns of references to other parts of the work, I turned to demurrage. There I found no single case on demurrage, but simply references to other pages, and on following these references up, I found that demurrage cases, like cases on other points, were scattered all over the book in the most fantastic manner possible, one being under "Accident to Ship," others under "Lay Days," one under "Time for discharge of Cargo," several others under "Cesser of Charterer's Liability," whilst the rest appeared to be placed under some other titles. I turned to "County Courts Jurisdiction," being one of the references under demurrage, but finding that that heading covered nearly five pages, I did not venture further."

The council may very fairly be called upon to set an example to legal compilers: this digest is simply a disgrace to legal literature, and ought to be immediately suppressed.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

ELSEWHERE we discuss the desirability of some alteration being made in the amount of certificate duty annually payable by London and country solicitors to the Inland Revenue Commissioners. We may here venture to remind solicitors that by sect. 22 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127 (the Solicitors' Act 1860), this annual certificate duty for next year must be paid on or before the 15th Dec. next, when such payment has relation back to the 16th Nov. inst., as of which day the certificate is in such case dated, and that in case of such payment being made after the 15th Dec. next, a solicitor so paying remains unprotected from the penalties under the Stamp Act 1870, and in some measure also under the Solicitors' Act 1874, sect. 12, as from the 16th Nov. inclusive until payment. As to sect. 12 of the Act of 1874, however, many mistaken notions exist as to its aim and operations, especially in the minds of non-professional men, and indeed the very men whose encroachments on professional rights this measure was designed to arrest. This enactment was passed for the purpose of affording an easy means of enforcing a small penalty against so-called accountants, law agents, and others who either wilfully and falsely hold themselves forth as solicitors, or who wilfully and falsely take or use some addition or description implying that they are recognised by law as so qualified, so that when a non-professional man calls himself a "law agent," and offers by advertisement or otherwise to do works which solicitors are usually employed to undertake, it is quite a question whether this would not amount to the false pretence contemplated by the statute. Further, however, there can be no doubt that given the false and wilful pretence, an uncertificated solicitor comes within this enactment.

THE Legal Practitioners' Society will hold its next annual meeting in Clement's-inn Hall, on Monday, the 18th December next, to which we understand members of the Profession are invited, although not members of the society. This society may be looked on as supplementing the work of the Incorporated Law Society, and perhaps also, as assisting the chief law society of solicitors in coming to some understanding with the Benchers of the Inns of Court, in regard to urgent inter-professional questions. That this society has already rendered useful service to the whole Profession cannot be doubted, and the legislation which it has been the means of securing alone justifies its establishment and continued existence. First it was instrumental in procuring the passing of sect. 12 of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 68, under which enactment many unqualified and unauthorised persons have been prosecuted, with advantage to the public and the Profession, to say nothing of the deterrent effect of such an enactment. Then came the Act 38 & 39 Vict. c. 79, affording a further remedy to solicitors against clients who seek to evade payment of taxed costs; and, lastly, this society has given to the Profession 39 & 40 Vict. c. 66, by which solicitors can practice in the provincial courts of York and Canterbury. That this enactment should be extended to the Diocesan Court of London, cannot be doubted, and the society should not fail to secure this extension of their Act of last session at the earliest possible opportunity. There is one feature of the most recent labours of the Parliamentary committee of this society which strikes us as rather remarkable. Solicitors will, no doubt, remember that during the last two years the council of the Incorporated Law Society has been in communication with the Benchers of the Inns of Court, with a view of facilitating the means of passing from one branch of the Profession to the other, and the council actually passed important resolutions to this end. Yet while the council of the chief society has done nothing in the way of seeking assistance from the Legislature, the Legal Practitioners' Society's Bill of last session contained two important clauses dealing with this urgent inter-professional question. True the younger society failed to secure an enactment last session, but it may fairly hope to do so next session. The Council of the chief law society, however, not content with inaction on the subject so far as applying to Parliament is concerned, actually criticised the action of the Legal Practitioners' Society in the last annual report of the chief society, in which we read, "A Bill has since been brought into Parliament by Mr. W. T. Charley and Mr. W. Gordon, in which are incorporated clauses proposed with a view of facilitating the change from one branch of the Profession to the other, but not to the extent suggested by the Council," that is by the resolution of the Council, for, so far as we are aware, the views of the Council were not even expressed by any member of Parliament when the Legal Practitioners' Bill of last session came on for second reading, or indeed at any other time. After criticism of this kind, it is to be hoped that the Incorporated Law Society will be up and doing early in the next session of Parliament, instead of leaving the Legal Practitioners' Society to do the work, and then quietly criticising such society's work adversely. We would rather see this important matter taken in hand by the Incorporated Law Society. On the other hand it must not be forgotten that inasmuch as the Legal Practitioners' Society consists of barristers and solicitors, it is peculiarly fitted to move to secure a freer interchange between the two branches of the Profession. There is, indeed, no reason why these two societies should not pull together in attempting to deal with this question, which we should like to see disposed of once for all. We feel that it is most undesirable that some of the clauses of the Legal Practitioners' Bill of last session with which the honourable members in charge of the Bill could make no headway, should be re-introduced into any future Bill of the society, at all events for some time to come. We refer especially to the clause, three times introduced into Parliament, which aims at giving an easier means of enforcing a reduced penalty against unauthorised persons who undertake for fee or reward, the work of the profession. The efforts of the society in this direction are, we are sure, by no means wholly lost; on the contrary, they have had the effect of arousing the profession to the importance of looking a little more sharply after its own interests, and also to warn so-called accountants and agents that they will not be allowed to disregard the existing law which protects the profession and Her Majesty's revenues. The fact that so many country law societies (see the advertisement in our last issue) have joined the Legal Practitioners' Society, points to the desirability of the council of the Incorporated Law Society taking steps, other than those which already exist, to secure the adhesion and co-operation of all country law societies.

In the course of the next month a sum, much in excess of £100,000, for certificate duty, will be paid into the national exchequer by the solicitors of the Supreme Court, and while we hope we may never have occasion to advocate the complete extinction of this professional impost, we are decidedly of opinion—and have often enough expressed it—that some reduction ought to be made in the amount annually payable by solicitors in the shape of certificate duty. This is especially the case as regards London solicitors, who, through the operation of the Judicature Acts, have in a very large number of cases experienced a considerable reduction in their annual incomes, and inasmuch as the tendency of the Legislature is at present to localise legal business as much as possible as evidenced by the creation of district registries all over the country, we look in vain for arguments in support of the preservation of the existing distinction, between the amount of the rates paid by London solicitors on the one hand and country solicitors on the other. The difference of £28 paid by London solicitors beyond the £6 paid by country solicitors was intelligible enough when almost the whole of the legal business of the country was transacted and disposed of in London, but now the grounds for this distinction do not exist as formerly. We hope during the next session of Parliament the question will be ventilated in the House of Commons with a view to the exaction of a uniform rate of duty—say five guineas; and the consequent loss to the revenue—say £25,000—can easily be made up by imposing a similar tax upon barristers-at-law, medical men, and indeed all others of the chief professions. We are fully aware that there is a large section of the Profession of the solicitors who demand the total extinction of the impost, and many others who consider no change necessary, but we hope and believe that the large majority approve our proposal for some medium course.

THE present power of the judges of the High Court over the question of costs was well illustrated in an action tried at Westminster before Mr Justice Manisty on the 21st inst. (The British Equitable Assurance Company v. Agate), in which the amount claimed was £105, and the verdict for plaintiff for only £22. Upon the application of the defendant's counsel to deprive plaintiff of costs under Order LV. of the Rules of the Supreme Court, the learned judge directed a judgment for £22, but without costs. This is a considerable inroad upon the old order of things, under which costs usually followed the event as a matter of course, and any extensive use of the power given to the judges under this Order LV., will have the effect of driving more business into the County Courts.

As may have been expected, the few important and substantial changes which the Judicature Acts and the Appellate Jurisdiction Act have accomplished, have been kicked against or resisted in many quarters. At the outset of the new régime as regards pleadings, a large number of members of the Bar looked with dismay or alarm upon the change. A plain statement of facts in lieu of the old system of technical pleadings would, we were told, never answer in practice, and many cases have occurred in which it has been urged in open court and during the conduct of cases, that "the pleadings disclose no cause of action." In our last issue, page 43, we noticed a case of Shield and others v. The Felling Coal, Iron, and Chemical Company, in which a learned County Court judge had refused to try a cause sent down to him for the purpose from the Exchequer Division, on the ground that there was "no issue &c."

On the case coming before the Court of Appeal, Mellish, L.J. administered a rebuke to the judge of the County Court, which should not be lost sight of. Formerly it was a common thing for a case to be stopped on technical grounds such as that there was no issue, or that the plaintiff had no cause of action. The aim of the Judicature Acts is to do away with technicalities as far as possible, and accordingly in the case before us the Lord Justice said "the County Court judge ought to have been astute to find grounds for deciding the case instead of looking for reasons for not doing so," and Mr. Justice Brett added, "There are not now, strictly speaking, 'issues of mere fact.'" The statements of the parties of the facts as they allege them, must be read together, and the issue is, in effect, that upon which the parties' respective statements disagree.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

UNDERTAKING—PRINCIPAL AND AGENT—CONTRACT, CONTRACTEE NOT NAMED.—The defendant, who was an agent of the Bebside Colliery Company, with whom B., W., and Co. had previously contracted for a supply of coals, gave to B., W., and Co. an undertaking as follows: "I undertake to load the ship Der Versuch with Bebside coals in ten colliery working days, &c. On account of Bebside Colliery, W. S. Hoggett." This undertaking was obtained by B., W., and Co. because the plaintiff, the captain of the ship Der Versuch, refused (without such an undertaking being procured for him) to sign a charter-party whereby B., W., and Co. chartered the ship Der Versuch to carry a cargo of coals to Elsinore, and in which no provision was made for payment of damages for detention in loading. The undertaking made no mention of the person contracted with by it, but it was communicated by B., W., and Co. to the plaintiff, who then signed the charter-party. The ship being detained beyond the ten days, the plaintiff applied to the defendant for compensation; this the defendant at first refused, but afterwards offered £20, which was declined by the plaintiff. The plaintiff then sued on the undertaking to recover damages for such detention. Held, that there was evidence for a jury that the undertaking was a contract between the plaintiff and defendant, and that, even independently of the offer of £20, there was such evidence, and that the defendant had rendered himself personally liable: (Weidner v. Hoggett, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 368. C. P. Div.)

ORDERS 1875—ORDERS XIII., XXII., RULES 2 AND 9—FORM OF WRIT, APP. F., No. 1—DISCONTINUANCE OF ACTION.—Where a plaintiff has given notice to the defendant to discontinue the action, and the costs have been taxed, no further order of the court is required to enable the chief clerk to issue a writ to enforce payment, and the writ may be varied to suit the circumstances of the case. Order XXIII. has the force of an order of the judge or court: (Bolton v. Bolton, 32 L. T. Rep. N. S. 358. Ch. Div.)

COST OF DEFENDING ACTION—CONTRACTOR AND SUB-CONTRACTOR—INDEMNITY—REMOTE-NESS OF DAMAGE.—The plaintiffs were contractors for the construction and maintenance of a tramway belonging to a tramway company with the company, and in order to carry out their contract they entered into a contract with the defendants by which the defendants undertook the construction and maintenance of the asphalt paving of the tramway. When H. was lawfully driving along the public highway on which the tramway was, he was, by reason of a hole in the asphalt paving of the tramway (due to the negligence of the defendants in carrying out their contract) thrown out of his cart and injured. H. therefore commenced an action to recover compensation against the Tramway Company, who at once gave notice of the action to the plaintiffs, who passed on the notice to the defendants, and claimed to be indemnified by them. The defendants repudiated all responsibility or liability, and refused to have anything to do with the defence of the action. The action was eventually compromised by the plaintiffs, who paid to H. £110 for damages and costs, and also incurred costs themselves in defending the action up to the compromise and in compromising, to the amount of £18 1s. 4d. Held, by the court (Lord Coleridge, C.J., Brett, and Lindley, J.J.), that the plaintiffs could not recover the costs paid to H., or the costs incurred, in defending or compromising the action, although the costs were reasonably incurred, and though the plaintiffs did in fact benefit the defendants in so incurring them by reducing the claim of H. So held, by Brett and Lindley, J.J., solely on the authority of Islandale v. London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company (32 L. T. Rep. N. S. 830; L. Rep. 10 Ex. 35; 44 L. J. 20 Ex.), and by Lord Coleridge, mainly on the authority of that case: (Fisher v. The Val de Travers Paving Company (Limited), 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 366. C. P. Div.)

SPECIMEN DIGEST OF THE LAW AS TO SOLICITORS OF THE SUPREME COURT.

(Continued from page 48.)

ARTICLE 5. [Substituted.] INTERMEDIATE EXAMINATION.

EVERY person serving under articles of clerkship shall be examined within the six calendar months next succeeding the day on which he shall have completed half his term of service.

Note.

1. On receiving certificate after Preliminary	£2 0 0
2. On leaving articles with registrar before Intermediate	0 15 0
On receiving certificate	0 15 0
Gen. Rules, dated 2nd Nov. 1876.

ARTICLE 8.

A part of the time for which an articulated clerk is bound, not exceeding a year, may be served by him as pupil either with a practising barrister, or a certificated special pleader, or the London agent of the solicitor.

6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 3.

It is not necessary that there should have been any service under the articles before the year of pupillage.

The fact that there has been an interval between the termination of the clerk's former service of ten years and the date of the articles is not material:

Ex parte Vosper 4 B. & S. 901; 33 L. J. 113, Q.B.

Illustration.

An articulated clerk applied to be admitted. It appeared that upon the execution of the articles and without any service under them he became pupil to a conveyancer, and continued so for more than a year. Upon the expiration of his pupillage the articles were assigned to another attorney. He served under that and subsequent assignments for more than four years, and the court held that he was entitled to admission, as the year of pupillage was equivalent to a year's service under the articles.

Anon., 25 L. T. Rep. N. S. 161; 39 W. R. 780.

(a) Where the service has been for three years. Cases where admission was refused: A member of the University of Edinburgh who had not taken the degree of M.A., but had been enrolled on the general council, by virtue of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 83, s. 6, previous to a service of three years under articles.

Ex parte Stewart, L. Rep. 7 Ex. 202; 4 L. J. 76, Ex.

Where the admission was granted: A clerk having served ten years, entered into articles for three years after an interval of seven years, during which time he was unemployed, and the court directed the examination of such clerk notwithstanding such interval.

Ex parte Vosper, 33 L. J. 113, Q.B.

2. Where a clerk, before the expiration of ten years' service, entered into articles for five years, under which after the expiration of the ten years he served three years.

Anon., 37 L. J. 82, Q. B.

(b) Where the service has been for four years. A person having successfully passed the middle class examination of Oxford and Cambridge, was articulated for a term of four years. This term was duly served. These examinations were not included in the regulations of the judges, and the court accordingly held that the articles were invalid, and refused to permit him, upon entering into fresh articles, to have the advantage of his four years' previous service.

Ex parte Jones, 22 L. T. Rep. N. S., 900.

ARTICLE 9.

THE CLERK MUST SERVE FOR THE WHOLE PERIOD PRESCRIBED.

The articulated clerk must, during the whole time and term of service specified in the contract (except for the period allowed to be spent with a practising barrister, special pleader, or London agent), continue and be actually employed in the proper business, practice, and employment of a solicitor.

6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 6, 12.

Service under a master who is himself employed as writer or clerk by another solicitor is not good service under the articles.

Id. s. 4.

The following periods will not be allowed to count as service:—

(1) The time that elapses between the death of the master and the assignment of the articles.

Note.

It is immaterial whether the clerk continues to attend to the business in the meanwhile.

Ex parte Wallis, 6 L. T. Rep. N. S. 242; 31 L. J. 176, Q. B.

Ex parte Dalton, 4 Jur. 1187.

(2) The time spent in service with a solicitor other than the clerk's master, and not the town agent.

Ex parte Hill, L. T. Rep. 456; Ex parte Adams, 33 L. T. Rep. N. S. 454; L. Rep. 10, Q. B. 227.

(3) The time between leaving first master and execution of assignment.

Ex parte Harrison, 44 L. J. 103, Q. B.

Note 1.

A fresh contract of service must be entered into for the residue of the term which cannot be completed under the original articles.

Note 2.

Where fresh articles are entered into for the residue of the term, just as in the case of a mere assignment, a stamp duty of £1 15s. will be required.

55 Geo. 3, c. 184. 83h. Articles.

(4) The period spent under articles which expired, unless the clerk can show any of grounds enumerated in Article 10.

ARTICLE 10.

ASSIGNMENT AND DISCHARGE OF ARTICLES.

In case an attorney or solicitor, before the expiration of the term of the contract, becomes bankrupt, or is imprisoned for debt, and remains in prison for the space of twenty-one days, the clerk, where he is admitted, upon the application of the clerk, may order and direct the contract to be discharged or assigned to such person, upon terms and in such manner as the court may think fit.

6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 5.

If the attorney or solicitor happens to die before the expiration of the term for which the clerk is bound, or discontinues practice, or if the contract is by mutual consent of the parties cancelled, the clerk legally discharged before the expiration of the term by any rule or order of the court, wherein the attorney or solicitor has been admitted, the clerk shall and may, in any of these cases, be bound by another contract to any practising attorney or solicitor during the remainder of the term; and the service under this contract will be deemed good and effectual service, provided an affidavit is duly made and filed of the fact and its execution, as in the case of a first original contract.

Id. s. 13.

In addition to the above grounds, the clerk may exercise power to discharge articles:—

- (1) Where the master has absconded.
Ex parte Carnley, 12 L. J. 98, Q. B.
- (2) Where he was convicted for felony.
Anon., 8 Jur. 848.
- (3) Where he became insane.
Ex parte Darbell, 6 D. P. C. 505.

In these cases the service was held to be ended upon the absconding, conviction, or becoming insane.

See Chitty Practice, 40.

Note 1.

From the observations made in Ex parte (38 L. T. Rep. N. S. 121), it might be inferred where a clerk enters into fresh articles to complete service, after the expiration of the original term, will not be allowed to have the benefit of under the previous articles unless he can shew that his case comes within one of the provisions (contained in sects. 5 and 13 in the statute) to the rule that the service must be continuous. This was, doubtless, due to an error for the decision requires no such principle support.

Accordingly, the following may be taken as grounds upon which a clerk who enters into articles (or whose original articles are assigned) claim the benefit of previous service under articles:—

1. Bankruptcy of master.
2. Imprisonment of master for debt for two days.
3. Death of master.
4. Discontinuance of practice by master.
5. Cancellation of articles by mutual consent.
6. Discharge by rule or order of court.
7. Absconding of the master.
8. Conviction of master for felony.
9. Insanity of master.
10. Ill-health of clerk.

Ex parte Moses, 43 L. J. 13, Q. B.; 9 Q. B. 1.

Ex parte Marshall, 22 W. R. 754.

Ex parte de Fina, 31 L. J. 7, Q. B.

Ex parte Rogers, 34 L. J. 136, Q. B.

Where the service under the articles has been interrupted by illness of the clerk, the time reason of such interruption has in some of the cases been reckoned as duly served:

Ex parte Matthews, 1 B. & Ad. 160;

Anon., 9 L. T. Rep. N. S. 324;

Ex parte Beddoe, 13 W. R. 371; 12 L. N. S. 711;

Ex parte Hodge, 2 Jur. 989;

Ex parte Brutten, 23 L. J. 290, Q. B.

Note 2.

In subsequent cases the court has merely the clerk, whose service has been interrupted by sickness, to complete the term of service cases cited Article 10, Note 1.

In Ex parte Moses (43 L. J. 13, Q. B.) the court refused to follow the cases of Ex parte Matthews, Ex parte Hodge, Ex parte Brutten, and laid down that the object of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, in its term of service under articles, was to secure merely sufficient information, but the principle to be obtained in the actual service. At the same time, it was conceded that an absence of month or two with the consent of the principal was not a break in the service.

In Ex parte Cross (12 L. J. 138, Q. B.; 2 682), an articulated clerk had, whilst under articles to sea by medical advice, and with the consent of his master, and after a lapse of five months, entered at Harvard University, in the United States, where he diligently pursued the study of the law for seven months, and then returned to the office of his articles. He was allowed to be examined as if he had served five years, including the period of his absence. This case is on all fours with Beddoe (sup.).

The authorities cannot be reconciled unless be said that proof of diligent study of law during illness as well as of the illness itself will allow the period of interruption to be counted as proof of illness only will suffice to enable the clerk to reckon the time actually served.

Illustrations.

Cancellation by mutual consent.

1. An article clerk having obtained a writership in India, being then under age, joined with his master and his father in an application to vacate the articles.
Anon. 8 Jur. 652.

2. A son was article to his father in 1856, and served two years. On the recommendation of medical men his father bought a commission for him in the army in 1859. He remained in the army until 1870. These facts were held to amount to a virtual cancellation by mutual consent, so as to enable the son to take advantage of the service under the articles upon his entering into fresh articles in 1871.
Ex parte Trenchard, L. Rep. 9 Q. B. 406.

(To be continued.)

THE PROSECUTION OF A SOLICITOR'S CLERK AND A SOLICITOR.

At a special sitting of the Colchester Borough Magistrates, held on Tuesday, the 14th inst., the Mayor (Major Bishop) in the chair, and present J. H. Hawkins, J. B. Harvey, E. A. Round, J. Savill, J. A. Tabor, and E. Williams, M.D., Esqrs., Mr. George William English, formerly clerk in the employ of Mr. Henry Jones, solicitor, Colchester, was charged with stealing the pressed copy of a letter belonging to his employer; and Mr. Charles Bull, of the firm of Palmer, Bull, and Fry, solicitors, 24, Bedford-row, London, was summoned for having feloniously received the same, well knowing it to have been stolen.

W. Wightman Wood appeared on behalf of the prosecution;

Grantham for Mr. Bull;
Laxton for English.

The case excited the greatest possible amount of interest, and the court was crowded throughout the hearing, which lasted from noon until past even o'clock, nearly every solicitor in the town being present.

After the Magistrates had taken their seats upon the Bench, more than half an hour was occupied by a private consultation between Mr. Wightman Wood and Mr. Grantham, apparently with the object of arranging the matter so far as Mr. Bull was concerned, but in the end the consultation was fruitless.

Wightman Wood, in opening the case for the prosecution, apologised for this delay, and remarking that he had considerable reluctance in proceeding for the prosecution in a case of this sort, intimated that the object of the delay had been to save the Bench from the trouble and the ain of entering upon the proceedings, and he retorted that his attempt had not been successful. He then suggested that as the charges against the two defendants were inseparably connected, they should be heard together (a course which Mr. Grantham consented to), and proceeded to give a brief epitome of the case for the prosecution. The prisoner English had been for some time up to only last in the employ of Mr. Jones, and he was charged with having stolen the pressed copy of a letter which Mr. Jones had written to a gentleman at Maldon, on behalf of a client, in reference to a pending law suit. The letter so stolen was sent by the prisoner to Messrs. Palmer, Bull, and Fry, well-known solicitors, of London, (who were concerned against Mr. Jones in the litigation, and as to his motive for this conduct, the learned counsel said he should be able to prove that English, who was discharged by Mr. Jones on the 1st July, had resented this and spoken of revenge, and of his probably being able to get something out of the insurance office for whom Messrs. Palmer, Bull, and Fry were acting. The letter was taken from the letter book only the day before he left, and sent at once to the gentlemen named in London, favouring them with the document. The case against English, therefore, was a very simple one; he was clearly guilty of larceny, but he should so proceed against him under a recent Act (38 & 39 Vict. c. 24), which enacted that any clerk who wilfully, and with intent to defraud, mutilated any book, paper, &c., belonging to his employer, as guilty of a misdemeanour. He should also proceed against Mr. Bull for being an accessory to the fact.

Grantham and Laxton urged that it was unfair to bring forward this second charge after the prisoner English had been remanded on the charge of stealing alone, and Mr. Bull had been summoned merely for feloniously receiving.

Wood, however, contended that he was only exercising a legal right, and that it was not at all uncommon thing. He then went on to argue that it was clearly the obvious duty of Mr. Bull, receiving the letter from English, to have returned it at once to Mr. Jones, with an intimation where he got it from, and to have made no use of it in any way. So far from acting in this manner, Mr. Bull did not return it for twelve days, when it was sent to Mr. Jones, with an intimation that photographic copies had been taken of it, and which photographic copies Mr. Jones had since been unable to obtain. He contended, therefore, that they had practically converted the letter to their own use, and exercised rights of property over it, when they must have known all the time it was the property of Mr. Jones, and was taken from him against his consent. After he had completed his case, he should ask the magistrates to commit the parties for trial.

Mr. Jones, the prosecutor, stated that the prisoner had been in his employ for several years up to the latter end of May, when he gave him notice to leave on the 1st of July. He left on the 1st of July. Prosecutor produced his letter-book, in which letters connected with his business were copied by the pressing process. One page (824) was missing. About the middle of July he received a communication with reference to page 824; and he now produced the page, which he received in a registered letter from Messrs. Palmer, Bull, and Fry, and which was as follows:—

28, Bedford-row, London, W.C., 12th July, 1876.
Dear Sir,—Your clerk, Mr. English, sent us a short time since, for our inspection, the accompanying pressed copy of your letter to Mr. Digby, of the 25th Sept. 1874, re Blumberg, which appears to have been torn from your letter-book. Instead of complying with his request, by returning the document to him to be replaced, we have thought it right to send it to you direct, and we will thank you to acknowledge its receipt. We informed your clerk on his calling here that we entirely disapproved of his sending us the press copy letter, but have had photographic copies taken of it, one of which we send you herewith. The other copies are open to your inspection here at any time.

Yours truly,
PALMER, BULL, AND FRY.
Henry Jones, Esq., Solicitor, Colchester.

[Re BLUMBERG.] Colchester, 25th Sept. 1874.
Dear Sir,—I suppose Mr. Evans delivered my message to you yesterday. What I recommend you to do is to write and say that Blumberg has gone to Japan, and that you are ready and willing to pay the "extra risk" premium. I should not tell them at present he is dead. We yesterday telegraphed through the Home Office for five certificates of death, including one for you. Can you meet me at Jefferies' on Saturday, as he wants to see you particularly, and will then arrange the matters you wrote about.—Yours truly,
H. JONES.

G. E. Digby, Esq., Solicitor, Maldon.
Prosecutor, continuing, said he wrote to Messrs. Palmer, Bull, and Fry, in reply, as follows:—

[Re BLUMBERG.] Colchester, 21st July 1876.
Gentlemen,—I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 18th inst., with enclosures therein referred to, and which I should have done earlier, but have been much engaged in preparing for our assizes and otherwise. I am very much surprised at the course you have adopted in the matter, as I should have thought you would in no way have entertained or countenanced such conduct as my discharged clerk, G. W. English, has been guilty of, but that as soon as the copy of my letter reached your hands, under the circumstances that it did, you would have felt bound to return it to me, if possible, unread. As it is, I must request you will immediately forward to me every photographic and other copy you may have in your possession of the letter in question, the whole property in which is mine, and which it is clear you have no right to retain. Will you also be good enough to inform me, when, where, and under what circumstances you made the acquaintance of Mr. English, and how it was that the copy letter got in your possession.—Yours truly,
H. JONES.

Messrs. Palmer, Bull, and Fry, Solicitors,
24, Bedford-row.

After waiting a week without receiving a reply, he wrote again, and he then received the following:—

[Re BLUMBERG.]
24, Bedford-row, London, W.C., 5th Aug. 1876.
Sir—Your letter of the 21st ult. has duly reached us. We must decline to enter into a discussion with you as to the course which we should or ought to have adopted on the receipt from your clerk, Mr. English, of the copy of your letter to Mr. Digby, and we do not admit the accuracy of your contention that we have no right to retain the photographic copies. With regard to your inquiry as to when, where, and under what circumstances we made the acquaintance of Mr. English, and how it was that the copy letter got into our possession, we send you a copy of Mr. English's first letter to us, which reached us on the 1st ult., and you will probably accept our assurance that we have never previously heard of such a person, and that we had never directly or indirectly endeavoured to obtain any information from him or any clerk of yours. On the 1st ult. Mr. English wrote us requesting the return of the copy letter, in order that he might replace it, but we made no communication to him in reply to either of his letters, and on the 6th ult., during the absence of our Mr. Bull, who attends to this matter, he called here and saw Mr. Fry, who declined to return him the copy letter, and informed him that we entirely disapproved of the course he had taken, and we have not since had any communication with him. We take this opportunity of informing you that it is our intention to forward to the secretary of the Law Institution one of the photographic copies of your letter, together with such copies of pleadings in the suits and a notice respecting policies on the life of Mr. Blumberg, to which your client Mr. Jefferies is a party, as we may deem requisite.—We are, Sir, yours obediently,
PALMER, BULL, AND FRY.
H. JONES, Esq.

[Re BLUMBERG.]
4, Trinity-terrace, Maldon-road, Colchester.

Gentlemen—I believe you are concerned for the insurance office in this matter; I enclose some information, and could give you more, but this I think will be enough for you. If you find out the date of the telegram to Japan, the extra premiums were not then paid. I may be in want of a favour one day and will then call upon you.—Yours obediently,
G. W. ENGLISH.

He had no further correspondence with Messrs. Palmer, Bull, and Fry, or with English. He had not received the photographic copies of the letter, which he had demanded.

On cross-examination by Laxton, the witness said certain premiums had probably been paid to the insurance companies on Blumberg's life; when the policies were taken out he was in England; I don't know whether he went to China; I have heard he went to Japan; I don't know when the extra premiums for his going abroad were paid to the insuring offices; I know some were paid afterwards; I believe Mr. J. S. Jefferies held the policies; I was not acting for Jefferies when Blumberg assigned the policies to him, nor did I know of their existence.

Wood was about to interpose, but Mr. Jones said he had no desire to be thin-skinned in this matter, but on the contrary he courted the fullest inquiry.

Laxton (continuing his examination) asked Mr. Jones what he meant by the expression, "What I recommend you to do is to write, saying that he is gone to Japan."

Prosecutor: That I had heard from his family solicitor that he had gone to Japan. I meant that Mr. Digby was to write to the insurance offices. When I said, "I should not at present tell them he is dead," I did not know he was dead, but I had heard he was. That remark of mine had reference to the message which I had previously sent by Mr. Evans, and it meant this, that the person who told me he understood Blumberg was dead, said he could not state it positively, but that he should know more about it in October.

Q. You say you had heard he was dead?—A. His family solicitor told me he had heard he was dead, but whether he was or not he could not say. That was in Sept. 1874.

Q. Having heard that, what do you mean by recommending payment of the extra risk premiums?—A. Which the offices had agreed to in the April preceding. It was according to a contract they had entered into, as I understood.

Q. Were you not recommending Digby to pay extra risk premiums to the insurance offices when you thought the man was dead?—A. When I had heard the man was dead, yes; and I should have considered the offices bound to take the money if the man had lain dead on their premises at the time—they had agreed to accept it, and his death had nothing whatever to do with it.

Q. If so, why did you advise that they should not at present be informed he was dead?—A. Because I thought the offices perhaps might demur to taking the extra risk premiums, although they had agreed to do so. There were four insurance companies concerned—The Liverpool and Globe, the Briton, the Royal Exchange, and the Sovereign; and the total amount of the policies was £12,000 or £13,000. All of the offices, as I understood, had agreed in writing to take the extra risk premiums; it was not, however, arranged by me; I have not possession of the writing I refer to; we did not telegraph to the Home Office for five certificates of death—that is a mistake; I don't consider it a strange mistake to make in my letter; it was not an invention or a delusion; we telegraphed through, not to, the Foreign Office—the word "Home" was a mistake; I could have explained this before if you had asked me, instead of talking about its being a curious mistake, an invention, and so on; I telegraphed through the Foreign Office on the 24th Sept., but did not tell the insurance offices I had done so, not considering it was my duty; I do not even now consider it was my duty; I think I obtained the certificates in Nov. or Dec., certifying Blumberg's death in Japan, and each of the offices had a copy; I cannot give you the dates when the offices were furnished with information of his death, but it was in writing; it was in 1874, no doubt; English left my service on the 1st July, and was not, to my knowledge, in the office afterwards; he left the town a few days afterwards; I have not seen the letter English wrote, asking for the document to be returned. Letter produced and read as follows:

[Re BLUMBERG.]
4, Trinity-terrace, Maldon-road, Colchester,
1st July 1876.

Gentlemen.—Yesterday I sent you a copy letter herein. I should be obliged if you will make copy, and return me same, and I will replace it, and you can give notice to produce same. At the same time I trust you will keep my name quiet, or it may be a serious injury to me, and if you do not make use of the information until the last moment it would be better. I myself do not want to suffer in consequence of the letter, so think it would be better in its proper place.—I am, Gentlemen, yours truly,
G. W. ENGLISH.

Messrs. Palmer, Bull, and Fry, Solicitors,
24, Bedford-row, Holborn.

A warrant was issued against English on 10th August; I have since heard that he went to America; I wrote a letter to Jefferies on the 15th of October 1874.

Laxton asked that the letter (which witness had found in his letter book) might be—
Mr. Jones objected, as it was his.

and was written in the course of business between solicitor and client.

Grantham supported Larton's argument that the letter must be put in, which Wood opposed; and the Bench, acting on the advice of their clerk, held that it was a privileged communication, and need not be produced.

Cross-examined by Grantham.—When I wrote to Digby I had heard Blumberg had gone to Japan, because I had heard he died there; there is no dispute about his having died, but I cannot remember the date; I heard of it in September, and until then I had not heard of his having gone to China or Japan; the same day that I wrote to Digby, advising him not to say at present that Blumberg was dead, I wrote to the secretary of the Liverpool, London, and Globe Office, that I had just heard he (Blumberg) had gone to Japan, and offering the extra risk premium; I certainly did not consider it was my duty to have suggested that I had heard he was dead, nor do I consider so now.

Q. Had you any doubt that he was dead?—A. I knew nothing about it; I know no more than Mr. Murray, Blumberg's family solicitor, told me.

Q. How came he to tell you?—A. I went and asked him where Blumberg was; I had been making inquiries as to his whereabouts; I wrote to Mr. Murray on the 22nd May, telling him that a client of mine had a policy on the life of Blumberg, and asking where he was, so that if necessary I might arrange for payment of the extra risk premium. I don't remember that Mr. Murray wrote back next day "Blumberg sailed last January for China, and I have not since heard from him and don't know where he is;" I don't remember to have heard a word about Blumberg going to Japan until Mr. Murray told me in Sept. 1874; I called on Mr. Murray repeatedly during Sept. 1874, but he did not tell me then that he had received a letter from Messrs. Gelatly and Co., stating that they had received from Yokohama information of Blumberg's death on the 25th July; I know that Mr. Murray has sworn this in an affidavit, and I know what I have sworn; all he said was what I have told you—he merely read to me from a piece of paper "Blumberg died on the 25th July;" I know that ordinarily it is necessary before a person goes abroad to pay an extra risk premium and obtain a licence from the office. If a person had gone abroad and died, there would be a risk of losing his policy unless the extra risk premium had been paid or agreed for, but where there was a special agreement I should have thought that with an honourable office there would not have been the slightest risk.

Q. Do you know of your own knowledge that it was agreed with all the offices?—Yes, from information derived from my client. I never asked the offices. I had known my client Jefferies about seven years. He kept the Nag's Head, in Covent Garden, for some time. I do not know that the Nag's Head has the reputation of being a notorious night house. He did not keep the house long—only about seven months, I believe. I never heard that Blumberg was a man of dissipated habits, who used to frequent the Nag's Head. I never asked Jefferies who Blumberg was, or how he became possessed of the policies. I knew nothing of the policies, either directly or indirectly, until May 1874.

Wood objected that the matters on which Mr. Grantham was examining Mr. Jones were irrelevant.

Mr. Jones said he did not mind answering the questions. If they could pin a charge of fraud upon him let them do it.

Wood said although perhaps Mr. Jones would not wish him to take the objection, yet he felt bound to do so. There were several civil actions pending, and it was unfair that the other side should come and have the benefit of a preliminary cross-examination of Mr. Jones. The present inquiry should be limited strictly as to the piece of paper which Mr. English and Mr. Bull were severally charged with stealing and receiving. The character of the Nag's Head and the habits of Mr. Blumberg were altogether irrelevant.

Grantham said his client was brought there by Mr. Jones, and accused of a crime, and it was necessary to show his position when the piece of paper got into his hands. Mr. Bull was solicitor to a Fire Insurance Office, which with three other offices became involved in legal proceedings—they considered they had been defrauded in reference to these policies, all of which were taken out in 1878 upon the life of a man who was a bankrupt. Claims were made upon them to the amount of £13,250, and the result was that bills were filed in Chancery alleging distinct frauds.

Prosecutor.—Yes; I was made a defendant in one of the bills, which was dismissed by the court as against me, and my costs ordered to be paid by the company.

After a legal argument, the court allowed the cross-examination to be continued. In reply to a question, Mr. Jones ad-mation that he had of English having taken the letter was from Messrs. Palmer, Bull, and Fry.

Re-examined by Wood.—In the Chancery proceedings it was decided that the fact of Blumberg's death did not invalidate the special agreement made with the company to take the "extra risk" premiums.

Grantham.—That is one company—the Briton. Prosecutor.—It has been decided in one of the actions, at all events.

To Wood.—It is a fact that Blumberg disappeared from this country, and my client did not know where he was; all these matters have been stated in a bill in Chancery.

Q. Did the part of the letter to Mr. Digby about the death of Blumberg refer to anything more than the rumour that he was dead?—A. Certainly not; that is all I knew.

Q. I believed from the dates it was not possible anyone could have known more than the rumour?—A. I should say so.

Q. Of course you and your client took different views of the facts from those of the insurance companies?—A. No doubt we did; we don't seem to be agreed upon many at present. (Laughter.)

To Wood.—When the prisoner English left my employ he thanked me for all the kindness I had shown him, and was extremely glad that we parted good friends, when only the day before he had sent this letter. I should like to add that not one of the insurance offices ever made directly or indirectly to me any inquiries as to the state of health of the assured when they renewed the policies—not one of them.

John William Howe, a clerk in the employ of the prosecutor, spoke to a conversation he had with the prisoner in the presence of another clerk, in the course of which the prisoner said, alluding to the notice he had received to leave, "Do you think the governor (prosecutor) will ask me to stop?" Witness replied, "Yes," when prisoner added, "He knows I could do him a lot of harm in that matter of Jefferies, and I don't think the insurance company would mind spending a little money."

In reply to Wood, witness said that he saw prisoner in his employer's office on two occasions after he was discharged, but on neither occasion did he touch the letter book.

In cross-examination by Larton, witness said he did not see the prisoner put the pressed copy of the letter in question into an envelope, nor did prisoner say anything at all to him about the letter.

George Mercer, the head constable of the borough police, was called to repeat a statement of the prisoner in his presence to the effect that he landed in America on the 28th July last.

Samuel Fry, a member of the firm carrying on business as Messrs. Palmer, Bull, and Fry, said the defendant, Mr. Bull, was his partner. The firm were solicitors for the Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Company in the law suits in Re Jefferies, of which the defendant Mr. Bull had the principal conduct. Witness believed he had seen the letter produced, signed "G. W. English," and which contained the pressed copy in question. He believed the copy was the subject of conversation between him and his partner, but he could not recollect any particular conversation.

Wood.—Did either of you speak of it as coming from Mr. Jones?

Witness.—No, not to my knowledge. I believe I proposed to Mr. Bull that the letter should be returned to Mr. Jones, but not at once; my impression is that we did not have any conversation about it for some days.

Q. Did you know that the letter had been torn out of a letter book?—A. I certainly thought it had, and should think it more than likely that I expressed an opinion to that effect to Mr. Bull; a second letter was received from English, and no doubt it was discussed between us, but I don't recollect any conversation; after the receipt of the second letter Mr. Bull had to go to the Sussex Assizes in his capacity as under sheriff of the county; English had not at that time called at the office, but he did so whilst Mr. Bull was away; Mr. Bull went away on the 5th July, and, I believe, returned to the office, if only for a short time, on the 8th; when English called I saw him, and I believe he told me how he became possessed of the letter.

Q. Have you any doubt about it?—A. I have no doubt about it; he did not say anything about whether Mr. Jones knew he took the letter, but the impression left upon my mind was that Mr. Jones did not.

Q. Did English say he thought he should get into trouble about it?—A. He said he did not wish to get into trouble about it, and was evidently in fear that he should; I declined to return the letter to him on that occasion; he asked me to do so, in order that he might return it to the letter-book; he did not tell me he had been discharged by Mr. Jones, and my impression was that he was still in Mr. Jones's employ; in the meantime I wrote to Mr. Bull, telling him that English had been, and under instructions subsequently received from him I had the letter photographed, and then returned it to Mr. Jones with one of the photographic copies.

To Dr. WILLIAMS.—After we knew that English had obtained the letter improperly, we thought our duty to our clients to have it photographed.

To Wood.—Under no circumstances should we have felt justified in returning the letter to English; the photographic copies were in my possession some time; all I did in the matter was with the concurrence of Mr. Bull; I have had no communication in any shape with English since he left the 8th July.

Cross-examined by Larton.—English asked for the letter in order that he might replace it.

Q. Did he ever say one word to you that ever wished you to pay him one shilling for what he had done?—A. Not a syllable.

Q. Did he ever suggest that he should be rewarded?—A. No.

Wood.—Except in the first letter.

Larton was asking with reference to witness's mouth.

Witness.—He never did.

Cross-examined by Grantham.—I thought I knew the handwriting in the letter to be that of Mr. Jones; had never seen Mr. Jones; Mr. Bull thought the matter was a hoax.

Q. Do you know whether it is customary for solicitors and secretaries of insurance offices to have false evidence offered to them?

Wood objected to the question; but the Bench held that it was admissible, Grantham remarking that the prosecution charged Mr. Bull with fraud, and the course he was taking was necessary to show there was no ground for the charge.

Witness.—There is no doubt that fraud is constantly practised on insurance companies, and we have to be extremely careful.

Grantham.—Had you ever the slightest intention of retaining the letter?

Witness.—Never, never; I knew at the time that there were actions going on in reference to the policies involved, with the exception of the one in the Sovereign Office. The actions were all regarded to upward of £10,000.

Q. Did you know that Mr. Jones's clerk Jefferies, was accused in those actions of obtaining the policies fraudulently and by misrepresentation of facts?—A. Yes; they were all taken out in 1873, and the amount of the policies was £13,250.

Q. Do you know that at the time the policies were taken out Blumberg was an unrecorded bankrupt?—A. Yes; and I understood he had means whatever out of which to pay the premiums.

Q. And did you at that time know that there had been a suppression of the fact of the death of Blumberg?—A. Oh, yes; we were perfectly satisfied of that from the evidence we had retained; the letter of English was discussed between Mr. Bull and the solicitors of the other insurance offices; there was no unnecessary delay whatever in returning the letter to Mr. Jones; there was any delay it was on the part of the photographer, who kept it some days.

Grantham put in the correspondence which took place between witness and Mr. Bull, with the letter was in Sussex.

Cross-examination continued.—We felt ourselves in great difficulty as to the best course to adopt with regard to the letter; and the result of our discussions was that we thought we should not be justified in returning it to Mr. Jones without having some copy of it, and decided to have it photographed; when English called we told him in the plainest terms that we considered his conduct. We have in no way used this letter with reference to the suits in Chancery; we did not want it at all; it has only been photographed as record of the fact, and we sent copies to the various offices concerned.

Q. Do you consider that in all that has been done you are as responsible as Mr. Bull?—A. Yes.

Dr. WILLIAMS.—Did you consider it was correct—it being a private letter—in having it photographed?

Witness.—Yes; I considered it was justified, as it showed conclusively that Mr. Jones had been guilty of a fraud upon the insurance offices; and we considered it also our duty to write and tell Mr. Jones what we thought of the matter in the terms of my letter.

Re-examined by Wood.—When Mr. Bull said he thought it was a hoax, I pointed out to him that the handwriting was that of Mr. Jones, but he still thought it was a hoax; cannot tell whether he still thought so after English's second letter; did not think it advisable to write to Mr. Jones and ask him if it was a hoax; we were considering the matter when Mr. Bull left for the assizes; have never known, in the course of my experience, a hoaxing letter similar to this; cannot say whether Mr. Bull had any cause from his experience to suppose so.

Q. Why were you in a difficulty about returning the letter to Mr. Jones when you knew you could have given Mr. Jones notice to produce it?—

A. It might have crossed my mind that the letter would not be forthcoming.

Q. You could have given secondary evidence of it?—A. We thought the best secondary evidence would be a photographic copy; we could prove in another way that Mr. Jones knew of the death of Blumberg; it is a fact that we disapproved of the conduct of English.

Q. How did you disapprove of it when you say it is to be justified by its exposing a fraud?—A. I thought it was most improper; and do not think we was justified in doing it. We did not send the photographic copy of the letter, &c., to the Law Institution, as one of the gentlemen interested in the companies was a member of the council of the Institute, and we thought it would prejudice Mr. Jones.

Wood handed in the bill in answer of Jefferies in one of the actions in Chancery, in which he averred there was as much said as in the letter in question with regard to the death of Blumberg; and asked the witness how he could justify his assertion that the letter was conclusive evidence of fraud when it contained no more than was contained in the bill and answer?

Witness: I thought it would be well to keep it in further proof.

This being the case for the prosecution, English, in reply to the usual caution, handed in the following statement, which was read by the clerk;

I am not guilty. I took the letter, and made no secret of it—the clerks knew of it, and I told other persons. I believed a fraud was attempted, and sent the copy letter merely for the purpose of disclosing the attempted fraud by Jefferies. I intended to replace it in the book, and wrote for that purpose next day; as I did not receive it I went to London for it. Mr. Bull was away from home. I saw Mr. Fry, and told him my intention. I had no intention of stealing. I should certainly have replaced it in the book. I had every opportunity had it been returned to me. I went to Mr. Jones's offices several times after I left his service. The clerks know it. I declare I had no intention to steal. I admit I did an indiscreet act; but I thought I ought to make known what was going on. It is not likely I should have written to a firm of solicitors, giving my name, if I had committed a theft.

At the conclusion of the speeches of counsel,

The Mayor said the Bench had decided to commit English for trial at the quarter sessions. With regard to Mr. Bull, his Worship said they had listened with the greatest possible attention to the counsel, and to the case generally throughout, and to the best of their judgment they had come to the conclusion that the charge against Mr. Bull had not been sustained.

HEIRS AT LAW AND NEXT OF KIN.

FITZGERALD (Eleanor Ann) (widow of the late John A. Fitzgerald), formerly Eleanor A. McGee, otherwise Eleanor A. Fogg, formerly of North-street, Brighton, afterwards carrying on business of a dyer at 42, Marchmont-street, Brunswick-square, then of Sutherland-place, Baywater, afterwards of 35, Camden-park-road, and late of 13, Burton-street, Burton-crescent, all in the county of Middlesex. Next of kin to come in by Jan. 8, at the chambers of the M.R. Jan. 22; at the said chambers, at eleven o'clock, is the time for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless some other claimants sooner appear.]

ADAMS (Robert Desmond), of Brinning, Moreton Hampstead, Devonshire, Esq.; £1502 1s. 10d. Reduced Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant said B. D. Adams.

ADAMS (Robert Desmond), of Brinning, Devon, Esq.; £2750 Three per Cent. Annuities; claimant said B. D. Adams.

CRUTTELL (Chas. Jas.), of New-square, Lincoln's-inn, Esq.; £1400 Three per Cent. Annuities; claimant said C. J. Cruttell.

GILLOTT (Eliza), of Broomhall-street, Sheffield, widow; £228 18s. 9d. Three per Cent. Annuities; claimant said E. GilloTT.

APPOINTMENTS UNDER THE JOINT-STOCK WINDING-UP ACTS.

ALEXANDRA PALACE COMPANY (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Dec. 23 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any) to Robert Fletcher, 3, Lothbury, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Jan. 12, at the chambers of V.C. M., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

CENTRAL PALACE AND SOUTH JUNCTION RAILWAY COMPANY. Creditors to send in by Dec. 20 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to C. E. Long, solicitor, 6, Great Winchester-street buildings, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Jan. 17, at the chambers of V.C. H., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

LONDON CHAMBERLAIN COMPANY (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Dec. 14 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to T. Southam, the official liquidator of the said company, to the care of Duigan and Smiles, solicitors, 13, Bedford-row, Middlesex. Dec. 21, at the chambers of V.C. H., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

ALLCHURCH (Thos.), Stourbridge, Worcester, Dec. 20; Thos. Homer, solicitor, Brierley Hill, Stafford, Jan. 6; V.C. B. at twelve o'clock.

CRANE (Chas.), Leighton-road, Kentish town, Middlesex, builder. Jan. 1; Fielder and Sumner, solicitors, 14, Goddard-street, Doctor's Commons, London. Jan. 16; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

COTTELL (Edwin), Upton-upon-Severn, Worcester, timber dealer. Dec. 7; F. Jones, solicitor, 8, St. Jean's Inn, Fleet-street, London. Dec. 14; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

DUSOLLY (Froila), Florence, Italy, widow. Jan. 16; S. B. Somerville, solicitor, 48, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London. Jan. 20; V.C. B. at twelve o'clock.

GRAY (Sarah), Highbury Park, North Highbury, Middlesex, widow. Dec. 14; J. F. Holcombe, solicitor, 15, Great James-street, Bedford-row, Middlesex. Dec. 21; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

HUTCHINGS (Jas.), Bishopwearmouth, Durham, ship-builder. Dec. 20; C. Kidson, solicitor, 66, John-street, Sunderland, Jan. 11; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

HEWLETT (Geo.), Kneller's Court, Farnham, Southampton, gentleman. Dec. 12; Edgar Goble, solicitor, Farnham, Hants. Dec. 20; V.C. B. at twelve o'clock.

MOSS (John J.), West Park, White Ladies-road, Bristol. Dec. 9; Brittan and Co., solicitors, Albion Chambers, Bristol. Dec. 20; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

MURPHY (Frederick), 29, Cambridge-road, Bethnal-green, Middlesex, builder. Dec. 5; G. and W. Webb, solicitors, 11, Anstey-street, London. Dec. 19; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

MIDDLETON (Harriet M.), Hampton Court Palace, Middlesex, widow. Dec. 20; Bridges and Co., solicitors, 23, Red Lion-square, Middlesex. Jan. 9; M. R. at twelve o'clock.

MIDDLETON (Colonel Wm. A.), C. B., The Limes, Southfields, Surrey. Dec. 20; Bridges and Co., solicitors, 23, Red Lion-square, Middlesex. Jan. 9; M. R. at twelve o'clock.

MITCHELL (Thos. A.), M.P., 50, Charles-street, Berkeley-square, Middlesex, Esq. Dec. 9; H. Masterman, solicitor, 21, New Broad-street, London. Dec. 20; V.C. B. at twelve o'clock.

PALMER (Robert), 20, Pensonby-place, Millbank, Middlesex, traveller. Dec. 20; H. A. Deane, solicitor, 11, South-square, Gray's-inn, London. Jan. 10; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

PALMER (Wm.), 11, America-square, London, wine merchant. Dec. 9; J. T. Davies, solicitor, 71, Moorgate-street, London. Dec. 22; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

SOUTHWATE (Wm.), 14, Margaret-street, Haggarstone, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 15; C. A. Briggs, solicitor, 25, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex. Jan. 8; M. R. at eleven o'clock.

TREMBLE (Lot), Thursty, Cumberland, yeoman. Dec. 15; John Norman, solicitor, Carlisle. Dec. 22; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

TAYLOR (Ann), Newark-upon-Trent, widow. Dec. 11; William Newton, solicitor, Newark-upon-Trent. Dec. 16; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 23 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

ACWORTH (Geo. B.), Star-hill, Rochester, Kent. Dec. 31; Parker and Clarke, solicitors, Rectory House, St. Michael's-alley, Cornhill, London.

ATKINS (John S.), Winchester-street, Salisbury, and of Milford, Wilts, wine and spirit merchant. Jan. 1; Francis Hodding, solicitor, Market House, Salisbury.

APPLEBY, otherwise Naylor (Sarah Ann), 316, City-road, Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 20; Thomas Clark and Son, solicitors, 3, Gray's-inn-square, London.

BOWELL (Anna), formerly 1, Markham-square, Chelsea, Middlesex, but late of 15, Alfred-street, Battersea-park, Surrey, widow. Jan. 1; G. Badham, 3, Salter's Hall-court, Cannon-street, London.

BARKER (Wm.), Ipswich, gentleman. Jan. 1; H. Rodwell, solicitor, 29, Providence-street, Ipswich.

BENSON (Chas. F.), Gordon, Manchester, of 1, Stanley-grove, Manchester, and of Llanfyllis Hall, Denbigh, mechanical engineer. Jan. 31; Gill, Radford, and Gill, solicitors, 19, Cooper-street, Manchester.

BONSALL (Thos.), Glanrhedol, Cardigan, Esq. Dec. 26; F. R. Roberts, solicitor, Aberystwyth.

BOTTING (James), Billingshurst, Sussex, maltster. Dec. 28; A. and C. J. Daintree, solicitors, Petworth, Sussex.

BISHOP (Rev. Freeman H.), Basingbourne Vicarage, Cambridge. Jan. 1; Park and Co., solicitors, 11, Essex-street, Strand.

BISHOP (Rev. Freeman H.), Basingbourne Vicarage, Cambridge. Jan. 1; Park Nelson, and Morgan, solicitors, 11, Essex-street, Strand, Middlesex.

CURHAM (Thos.), 3, St. Peter's-square, Wolverhampton, fruit dealer. Dec. 20; Jno. Riley, solicitor, 32, Queen-street, Wolverhampton.

CRIST (Mary), formerly of Gedgrave, and late of Orford, Suffolk, widow. May 16; Robert Crisp, Esq., Orford.

COOPER (Henry), Gloucester Villa, Park-street, Slough, Bucks, gentleman. Dec. 30; F. M. B. Calcott, solicitor, 32, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

CALVERLEY (Tibbs), Royd House, Lindley-cum-Quarby, Huddersfield, woollen cloth manufacturer. Feb. 1; Allan H. Owen, solicitor, Station-street, Huddersfield.

COLLINGTON (Geo. Isaac), Hanley, Stafford, labourer. Dec. 13; Arthur Challinor, solicitor, Hanley.

CRUTTELL (Mary), 4, Perry-mead, Bath, spinster. Feb. 28; T. W. Gibbs, solicitor, 4, Northumberland-buildings, Bath.

CRUTTELL (Thos. M.), formerly of Bath, solicitor, and CRUTTELL (Mary), his widow. Feb. 28; Thos. W. Gibbs, solicitor, 4, Northumberland-buildings, Bath.

DEBBAN (Andrew), formerly of Belvedere, Co. Down, Ireland, and late 1 Russell-street, Bath, Esq. Dec. 27; T. H. Meyhill, solicitor, 37, Castle-street, Hobart, London.

DAVIS (Henry), formerly of 103, Sloane-street, Chelsea, Middlesex, and late of 14, St. Michael's-road, Stockwell, Surrey, gentleman. Dec. 31; J. H. Child, solicitor, 2, William-street, Albert-gate.

DENNIS (Chas.), Winchfield House, Hants, farmer. Dec. 31; Lamb and Brooks, solicitors, Odham, Hants.

EDGECOMBE (Nathaniel), 15, Lion-hill, Clifton, Bristol, gentleman. Dec. 30; Richardson and Davies, solicitors, 20 Clare-street, Bristol.

ETOUOH (Mary), formerly of Stamford, and late of 40, Brunswick-road, Brighton, widow. Jan. 30; E. S. Carr, solicitor, 5, St. Mildred's-court, Poultry, London.

FARRAR (Wm.), Carlisle, banker. Dec. 15; Joseph Bendle, solicitor, 1, Hodgson's-court, Carlisle.

FOGITT (Jno.), nape, near Bedale, York, innkeeper. Dec. 28; A. Abrahams, solicitor, Salmon Hall, Snape, near Bedale.

FLETCHER (Susanah), Beasley Heath, Kent, widow. Dec. 31; J. H. Child, solicitor, 2, William-street, Albert-gate.

FORTESCUE (Henry), South House, Oxted, Surrey, Esq. Jan. 31; Pearless and Son, solicitors, East Grinstead, Sussex.

GREENHOW (Dorothy), Kandal, Westmoreland, spinster. Dec. 30; J. Swainson, jun., solicitor, Kendal.

GARLAND (Ellen), widow. Dec. 30; Duncan and Pritchard, solicitors, 64, Bridge-street, Chester.

HARRIS (Henry Jno.), 31, Brunswick-terrace, Brighton, Sussex, gentleman. Dec. 15; Satchell and Chapple, solicitors, 4, Queen-street, Cheshire, London.

HAWETT (John), Kent Wood Villa, Tilehurst, Berks, gentleman. Dec. 31; Lamb and Brooks, solicitors, Odham, Hants.

HALLEY (Rev. Robert, D.D.), formerly of New College, New Finchley-road, Middlesex, afterwards of Spring-hill College, Birmingham, but late of 88, Downs-road, Lower Clapton, Middlesex. Jan. 1; H. J. and T. Child, solicitors, Bakehouse-court, Doctors-commons, London.

HARVEY (Jeffery G.), Reeves Hall, East Mersea, Essex. Dec. 31; Turner, Deane, and Co., solicitors, East Hill, Colchester.

HILDYARD (Robt. H.), Catherstone, near Charnmouth, Dorset, Esq. Jan. 20; Norton, Rose, and Co., solicitors, 6, Victoria-street, Westminster.

JONES (Thomas P.), High-treet, Conway, Carnarvon, solicitor. Dec. 10; Parry, Jones, and Jameson, solicitors, High-street, Conway.

JOHNSON (Peter Jos.), Cambridge, and of 54, Vigo-street, London, tailor and robe maker. Jan. 1; F. Grain, solicitor, 1, Mill-lane, Cambridge.

JONES (Thos.), Lenny Bridge, Brecon, Esq. Dec. 31; Rev. David Jones, Llanfechain Rectory, Oswestry.

KERSHAW (Jno. E.), 18, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, Middlesex. Dec. 12; Cobbett and Co., solicitors, 61, Brown-street, Manchester.

LUNELL (Samuel), Clifton, Esq. Dec. 6; Isaac Cooke and Sons, solicitors, Shannon-court, Bristol.

LEEDHAM (Wm.), Highfield, near Andover, Southampton, Esq. Jan. 31; Lindsay, Mason, and Greenfield, solicitors, 84, Basinghall-street, London.

LANNER (Jno.), Ampney Crucis, Gloucester, yeoman. Jan. 2; Mullings, Elliott, and Co., solicitors, Cirencester.

MAY (Thos.), Swan Field, Whitstable, Kent, oyster dredger. Jan. 1; Cheeseman and Lake, solicitors, Gravesend.

MATTHEWMAN (Wm.), 90, Leadmill-road, Sheffield, York, two blade grinder. Dec. 21; Binney and Sons, solicitors, Queen-street Chambers, Sheffield.

MCGARRELL (Chas.), 2, Belgrave-square, Middlesex, and of Magheramorne, co. Antrim, Ireland, Esq. Jan. 1; Maples, Teesdale, and Co., solicitors, 6, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry, London.

NICHOL (Francis, otherwise Frank), High Heske, Cumberland, gentleman. Dec. 4; Jas. Bendle, solicitor, 1, Hodgson's-court, Carlisle.

OATWAY (Mark), Plough Inn, Bedminster, Somerset, innkeeper. Jan. 15; J. H. Shortland, solicitor, Dundry, near Bristol.

PHILLIPS (Barnet S.), formerly of Clement's-lane, London, but late of 19, Birch-lane London, and 50, Queen's-gardens, Baywater, Middlesex, Esq. Dec. 31; Travers, Smith, and Co., solicitors, 25, Throgmorton-street, London.

POTTER (Rowley Edwd.), Dartford, Kent, gentleman. Dec. 30; Chas. R. Gibson, solicitor, Dartford, Kent.

ROOSE (Gustav E.), 61, Mark-lane, London, oil and seed broker. Jan. 31; J. R. Bailey, solicitor, 8, Tokenhouse-yard, London.

ROBERTSON (Jno.), 19, Princess-street, Hanover-square, and of 34, London-street, Fitzroy-square, Middlesex, tailor. Dec. 31; G. B. Wheeler, solicitor, 21, Queen Victoria-street, London.

RUST (Edwin), Hatfield, Peverel, Essex, brewer. Jan. 1; Stevens and Bawtree, solicitors, Witham, Essex.

REYNOLDS (Jno.), 73, Hoxton-street, Shoreditch, Middlesex, theatrical printer. Dec. 31; R. Miller and Wiggins, solicitors, 6, Copthall-court, Throgmorton-street, London.

REYNOLDS (Wm.), Chesterton, Cambridge, retired publican. Jan. 1; F. Grain, solicitor, 1, Mill-lane, Cambridge.

ROBINSON (Benjamin), Old Hall, near Burnley, farmer. Dec. 20; T. Nowell, solicitor, Burnley.

SATCHELL (Thos. H.), Lord-street, Liverpool, and of Heathfield, Village-road, Oxted, Birkenhead, hatter. Dec. 31; Bellinger and Linton, solicitors, 24, North John-street, Liverpool.

STARR (Potter), 15, Victoria-road, Putney, Surrey, gentleman. Dec. 12; Jno. F. Weymouth, solicitors, 30, Essex-street, Strand, London.

SPRATT (Isaac), 18, Brook-street (formerly called Little Brook-street), Hanover-square, Middlesex, toyman. Nov. 30; Wm. F. Low, solicitor, 67, Wimpole-street, Cavendish-square, London.

SPARSHOLD (Jno. A.), Harley-lane, Todmorden, York, cotton spinner and manufacturer. Dec. 23; Horace M. Smith, solicitor, Halifax, York, and Wm. Sager, solicitor, Todmorden.

SENHOUSE (Johanna), formerly of Harecroft, Gasforth, Cumberland, and of Villa de Saintenon, Brancolar, Nice, France, but late of Maison Ravel Avenue, Beauvieu, Nice, spinster. Feb. 14; G. Cowburn, solicitor, 43, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

SHAW (Samuel), Quick View, Moseley, Saddleworth, West Riding, York, yeoman. Jan. 1; Toy and Broadbent, solicitors, 2, Park-parade, Ashton-under-Lyne.

THORNHILL (Wm.), the elder, Beeston, Nottingham. Dec. 26; Rothera and Sons, solicitors, High-street-place, Nottingham.

TOMLIN (Frederick D.), 8, Charles-street, Westminster, surgeon. Dec. 30; G. Cowburn, solicitor, 43, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

TOPHAM (Christopher), The Hall, Middleham, York, Esq. Dec. 1; T. F. R. Hammond, solicitor, West Burton, Bedale.

TOPHAM (Anne), The Hall, Middleham, York, widow. Dec. 1; T. F. R. Hammond, solicitor, West Burton, Bedale.

TIXON (Geo.), Potters Bar, Middlesex, cattle dealer. Jan. 1; Van Sandan and Cumming, solicitors, 13, King-street, Cheapside, London.

WOOLCOMBE (Thos.), Devonport, Esq. Dec. 31; Woolcombe and Co., solicitors, 27, Ker-street, Devonport.

WESTLEY (Edmund), late of 65 (formerly 24), Portland-place, Middlesex, and formerly of Melbourne, Australia. April 30; Parker and Clarke, solicitors, Rectory House, St. Michael's-alley, Cornhill, London.

WATSON (Herbert), Shanghai, China, and 67, Earl's Court-road, Kensington, Middlesex, merchant. Jan. 4; Watson and Co., solicitors, 12, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

WILKINSON (Geo. H.), Arimley, Leeds, waste dealer. Jan. 13; Bulmer and Son, solicitors, 73, Albion-street, Leeds.

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

NOTA BENE.—Information intended for publication under the above heading should reach us not later than Thursday morning in each week, as publication is otherwise delayed.

MR. CHARLES ROBBINS, of the firm of Bolton, Robbins, and Busk, of 1, Lincoln's Inn, W.C., has been appointed a Perpetual Commissioner for Taking the Acknowledgments of Deeds by Married Women, in and for the cities of London and Westminster, and the counties of Middlesex, Essex, and Surrey.

MR. F. DARWIN HUISE, of the firm of Clark and Huish, solicitors, Derby, has been appointed Clerk to the Magistrates of the Smalley Division of the County of Derby.

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

Inquiries, as to the several Examinations and as to Admission on the Roll of the Supreme Court, as to being called to the Bar, and as to taking out and renewal of annual certificates, should be addressed to the Editor (Students' Department).

THE following lectures and classes are appointed to be delivered and held in the hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, during the ensuing week: Monday, Equity Class, 4.30 to 6 o'clock p.m.; Tuesday, ditto; Wednesday, ditto; Thursday, lecture on Conveyancing, 6 to 7 o'clock p.m. Subscribers are not admitted to the hall after the lectures have commenced. Members of the Society may attend the lectures.

WHERE articles expire between the 10th Jan. and 15th April 1877, candidates may be examined in Jan. 1877, or, of course, at any subsequent examination.

THE next preliminary examination will be held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, and in various provincial towns on the 21st and 22nd of Feb. in the ensuing year.

ARTICLES of clerkship, or assignments of articles of clerkship, dated on any day during November must be enrolled and registered at the Petty Bag Office on or before the same days in the month of May next, and when articles or assignments are required to be, and are, enrolled and registered on any day during the month of November, they must be produced and entered at the Law Institution or before the same day of the month of February next. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 8 and 9, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 7. Failure to comply with these statutory requirements often entails a serious loss of time upon articulated students.

In case of the death of a principal during articles, fresh articles should always be entered into without loss of time. The time which elapses between the day of the death of the principal and the day of the date of fresh articles being entered into, does not count, so that the further article must be for a time sufficient to make up for this loss of service, as well as for the unexpired term of the original articles of clerkship.

AN examination certificate is only available for admission on the roll of the Supreme Court within six months from its date, and must otherwise be specially enlarged by an order of the Master of the Rolls, which should be applied for at the Petty Bag Office.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

At the meeting of this society on Tuesday last, held at the Law Institution (Mr. Fell, B.A., in the chair), the question discussed was as follows: "Is a shipowner, not being a common carrier, who carries goods on board his vessel for hire, in the absence of express stipulation to the contrary, subject to the liability of an insurer except as against the act of God or of the Queen's enemies?" The subject was stated to be one without any definite authority on either side, but on the part of the affirmative the extra judicial remarks of Brett, J., in Nugent v. Smith (L. Rep. 1 C. P. Div. 19), were relied on, and on the part of the negative the dissension of the Lord Chief Justice in the same case on appeal (L. Rep. 1 C. P. Div. 423). The debate was opened in the affirmative by Mr. Hargreaves, and in the negative by Mr. Indermaur (for Mr. Gane), and was ultimately decided in the negative by a majority of four votes. Twenty members were present.

The question to be discussed by this society on Tuesday next is as follows: "Is it desirable that in criminal cases the accused person should be competent to give evidence?"

BRISTOL LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

At a meeting of this society, held in the Law Library, Small-street, on Tuesday week, Mr. A. Hingeston Dymond (in the absence of Mr. O'Donoghue), took the chair, and called upon Mr. Foster (hon. sec.) to open the following subject in the affirmative, viz.: "That the 'birth settlement' should be the only settlement recognised by our Poor Laws." The negative side was led by Mr. Pease, and seconded by Mr. A. H. Hughes, whilst Mr. Stachan seconded the affirmative. An interesting debate was obtained, and the subject being a novel one, there was ample scope for original remarks to be made. The following gentlemen joined in the discussion: Messrs. Fenwick, Carpenter, Gane, Kilby. The chairman summed up, and the question was then put to the vote, when it was negatived by a majority of three. The thanks of the meeting were given to Mr. Dymond for presiding.

HULL LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

THE weekly meeting of this society was held on Tuesday, the 21st Nov. 1876, Mr. A. M. Jackson, solicitor, in the chair. Nineteen members were present. The question appointed for debate was as follows: "If goods are sold by a trader in the ordinary way of his business on a Sunday, and the purchaser afterwards promises to pay therefore, can the trader maintain an action for the price?" (Wennall v. Adney). Mr. Wilson led off in the affirmative, and was followed on the same side by Messrs. Redfern, Lambert, and Shaw; Mr. Martinson spoke in the negative, as did also Messrs. Adamson, Johnson, and Hobson. The affirmative was ultimately carried by a majority of six.

HUDDERSFIELD LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

THE ordinary fortnightly meeting of this society was held last Monday night, at the County Court House, Queen-street, Mr. J. W. Piercy presiding. There was an unusually large attendance of members. The rules of the society underwent a thorough revision, a number of amendments being proposed by Mr. James Yeoman, the secretary, and adopted. Proposals were then made by the secretary, which are calculated to increase the usefulness of society, and to extend the sphere of its operations. These proposals having been considered and approved of, and the committee having been instructed to carry them into effect, the chairman called upon Mr. B. Crook to open the evening's discussion on the following proposition: "That the suppression of the agreement in Gover's Case; re Coal Economising Gas Company (L. Rep. 1 Ch. Div. 182), rendered the prospectus fraudulent under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 131, s. 38, on the part of the company, and that the applicant shareholder was entitled to have her name removed from the list." The facts of Gover's Case are shortly these:—A person called Mappin agreed with the owner of a patent to purchase the patent for £65,000, to be paid partly in cash and partly in the shares of a company to be formed by Mappin. Three months afterwards Mappin made an agreement with a trustee of an intended company to sell the patent to the trustee for £125,000, payable partly in cash and partly in shares in the company. Shortly afterwards the company was formed, Mappin being a director. The prospectus issued by the promoters did not mention the first agreement for purchase.

Mr. Crook was supported by Mr. A. W. Preston, and opposed by Mr. J. R. Haigh.

The debate was a most instructive one, and was well sustained throughout. On being put to the meeting the proposition was negatived by a majority of three.

Mr. J. A. Slater, B.A., from the office of Messrs. Leary, Leary, and Morrison, was elected an ordinary member of the society.

[The Portsmouth solicitors are not so fortunate as the law students of Huddersfield, for the former are obliged to apply to the Office of Works in London before they are permitted by the learned registrar of the Portsmouth County Court to have the use of the court.—ED. SOLS' DEPT.]

LEICESTER LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

THE fourth meeting of this society for the session 1876, 1877, was held in the Law Library, Friar-lane, Leicester, on Wednesday, the 15th inst., W. M. Moore, Esq., in the chair. The subject for debate was as follows: "Is there such a legal duty on the part of a banker not to disclose the state of his customer's accounts as will make such disclosure the ground of an action without showing special damage?" (Harley v. Vesey and others, L. Rep. 3 Ex. 107). Mr. Hincks opened the debate in the affirmative, and was followed by Mr. Frisby and Mr. Harvey in the negative. The chairman summed up, and the negative was carried unanimously.

PLYMOUTH, STONEHOUSE, AND DEVONPORT LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

THE last meeting of this society was held at the Athenæum, Plymouth, on Friday, the 17th inst. (James Loye, Esq., in the chair). After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting, Mr. Benson proposed that a special meeting of the society be held on Friday, the 24th inst., to consider the proposed new rules, which would then be submitted by the revision committee, and the motion was carried unanimously. The subject for discussion, "That persons accused of crimes should be allowed to give evidence on their trial," was then brought forward, Mr. E. Matthews and P. B. Pugh speaking in support, and Messrs. M. Harrison and C. Prance opposing; Messrs. Adams, Gay, Benson, Fox, and Helpman afterwards joined in the discussion, which was carried on to a late hour. On the summing up of the chairman the question was put to the vote, and decided in the affirmative by a majority of three.

WOLVERHAMPTON LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of the society was held on Tuesday evening, Nov. 9, 1876, S. W. Page, Esq., in the chair, when the following question was discussed: "Where A. contracts with B. through his agent C., and C. induces B. to contract by authorised fraud, can B. successfully maintain an action of tort against A. for such fraud?" Mr. Cresswell opened the debate in the affirmative, and was supported by Messrs. Andrews and Clay. Mr. Lawrence replied for the negative, and was supported by Mr. E. Smith. The decision was in favour of the affirmative. Mr. Lawrence has taken a preliminary objection to the conduct of the question, neither he nor his supporters voted on it as put to the meeting. A vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the proceedings.

COUNCIL OF LEGAL EDUCATION.

HILARY EXAMINATION, 1877.

THE attention of students is requested to the following rules:

As an encouragement to students to study jurisprudence and Roman civil law, twelve studentships of 100 guineas each shall be established, divided equally into two classes; the first class studentships to continue for two years, and be open for competition to any student as to whom not more than four terms shall have elapsed since he kept his first term; and the second class studentships to continue for one year only, and to be open for competition to any student, not then entitled to a studentship, as to whom not less than four and not more than eight terms shall have elapsed since he kept his first term; two of each class of such studentships to be awarded by the council, on the recommendation of the committee after every examination before Hilary and Trinity Terms respectively, to the two students of each set of competitors who shall have passed the examination in both jurisprudence and Roman civil law. But the committee shall not be obliged to recommend any studentship to be awarded the result of the examination be such as in its opinion not to justify such recommendation.

No student admitted after the 31st Dec. 1876 shall receive from the council the certificate of fitness for call to the Bar required by the Inns of Court unless he shall have passed a satisfactory examination in the following subjects, viz., first, Roman civil law; secondly, the law of real and personal property; thirdly, common law; and, fourthly, equity.

No student admitted after the 31st Dec. 1876 shall be examined for call to the Bar until he shall have kept nine terms; except that students admitted after that day shall have the option of passing the examination in Roman Civil Law any time after having kept four terms.

An examination will be held in December in January next, to which a student of any of the Inns of Court, who is desirous of becoming a candidate for a studentship, or honors, or of obtaining a certificate of fitness for being called to the Bar, or of passing the examination in Roman Civil Law only, will be admissible.

Each student proposing to submit himself for examination will be required to enter his name personally or by letter, at the treasurer's or steward's office of the Inn of Court to which he belongs, on or before Wednesday, the 13th day of December next; and he will further be required to state in writing whether his object in offering himself for examination is to compete for a studentship, or honors, or of obtaining a certificate preliminary to a call to the Bar, or whether he is merely desirous of passing the examination in Roman Civil Law under the above-stated regulations.

The examination will take place in the hall of Lincoln's Inn, and the doors will be closed five minutes after the time appointed for the commencement of the examination.

The examination by printed questions will be conducted in the following order:

Friday and Saturday, 29th and 30th Dec. at ten until one, and from two until five on each day, the examination of candidates for studentships in Jurisprudence and Roman Civil Law.

The examination of candidates for honors: pass certificates, and for pass in Roman Civil Law only, will take place as follows:

Monday morning, 1st Jan. at ten, on the Law of Real and Personal Property.

Tuesday morning, 2nd Jan., at ten, on Equity; Wednesday morning, 3rd Jan., at ten, on Common Law.

Thursday morning, 4th Jan., at ten, on Jurisprudence and Roman Civil Law; in the afternoon at two, on Constitutional Law and Legal History.

The oral examination will be conducted in the same order, and on the same subjects, as at appointed for the examination by printed questions.

NOTE.—Students admitted prior to 1st Jan. 1873, who are candidates for a pass certificate only, have the option of passing in (1) Constitutional Law and Legal History, or Roman Civil Law; (2) Common Law Equity; and (3) Real and Personal Property Law.

RUDDENCE, CIVIL AND INTERNATIONAL LAW, AND ROMAN CIVIL LAW.

tes for the studentships will be examined e following subjects :

stitutes of Gaius and Institutes of Justine titles of the Digest De Acquirendo Dominio (XLI., 1) and De Acquirenda vel da possessione (XLI., 2).

History of Roman Law. Principles of Jurisprudence, with special e to the writings of Bentham, Austin, and ements of International Law. Principles of Private International Law. dates for honours will be examined in umbered 1, 3, and 4; candidates for a pass e in the Institutes of Justinian.

XAMINERS IN CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HISTORY will examine in the following nd subjects :

bbes' Constitutional History of England. Ham's Constitutional History. om's Constitutional Law. e Principal State Trials of the Stuart

e concluding chapter of Blackstone's Com-es, being that "On the Progress of the England."

dates for honours will be examined in all ve-mentioned books and subjects; candi-r a pass certificate only will be examined l and No. 3 only, or in No. 2 and No. 3 the foregoing subjects, at their option.

XAMINER IN EQUITY will examine in the g subjects :—

ists. ministrations of Estates by Deceased ersons. rtership.

dates for honours will be examined in all ve-mentioned subjects. Candidates for a tificate only, in those numbered 1 and 2.

XAMINER IN THE LAW OF REAL AND PER-PROPERTY will examine in the following :-

ates, Rights, and Interests in Real and ersonal Property; and Assurances and ontracts concerning the same.

a Feudal Law, as adopted in England, in-dependently of and as affected by Statute; ortmain, and Testamentary Disposition.

dates for a pass certificate only will be d in the elements of the foregoing subjects; tes for honours will have a higher exami-

XAMINER IN COMMON LAW will examine llowing subjects :—

rcantile Law. e Law relating to Bills of Exchange. e Law of Evidence. ninal Law.

dates for a pass certificate only will be d on general and elementary principles of id from candidates for honours the ex-ill require a more advanced knowledge of lication of those principles, and a know-the leading decisions.

(By Order of the Council), (Signed) S. H. WALPOLE, Chairman.

Queries.

EDIATE EXAMINATION.—I was a candidate for mediate Examination held on the 11th inst. a tuform me (through the columns of the es) when I may expect to be informed of the y endeavours ? INTERMEDIATE. out a week's time.]

as articulated on the 31st Oct., 1874, for five years. up for my Intermediate Examination in April, til June, 1877 ? H. J. G. ill 21st June, 1877.]

as articulated 20th May, 1875, for a term of five ill you inform me when I can present myself ntermediate Examination at the earliest ? y, 1878.] LECTURUS.

MENT OF ARTICLES.—INTERMEDIATE EXAMINA-as articulated on 22nd Dec., 1874, and my master the 24th Sept. last past. The date of my assign-articles is 14th Oct. ult. (a space of about lays being thus lost). Shall I be able to present r the Intermediate Examination which is held ne next ? If not, I suppose there will not be opportunity before November. NORTH. iced for five years, not till 8th Nov., 1877.]

EG FOR THE FINAL.—I have only the first edition hen's Commentaries." Is it advisable to read e, or go to the expense of a later edition ? LECTURUS.

atest edition is to be preferred.]

UTH, STONEHOUSE, AND DEVONPORT LAW e SOCIETY.—We are to hold a special meeting y next to consider the proposed new rules. Is hile to send any account of the meeting, as ort would necessarily be very long ? C. M. hink not.]

Answers to Correspondents.

B. O. BARTRUM.—You overlook the pith of the ques-tion, which was, can a clerk serve not only one year with the London agent, but further one year with a barrister? and we reply that he can if articulated for five or four years but not if articulated for three years. No doubt all clerks may serve one year with the London agent.]

THE BENCH AND THE BAR.

CALLS TO THE BAR.

THE following gentlemen have this week been called to the Bar :—

LINCOLN'S INN.—Arthur Matheson Fraser, Esq., B.A. and LL.B., Cambridge, and of the University of London; Henry Philip Rooke, Esq.; Frederic William Maitland, Esq., B.A., Cam-bridge; Isaac Saunders Leadam, Esq., M.A., Oxford, Fellow of Brasenose College; Alexander Gordon, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Andrew John Leach, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Henry Alleyne Bovell, Esq., University of London; and Frederic Charles Aplin, Esq., B.A., Oxford.

INNER TEMPLE.—John Harvey Templer, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; John Bagnall Evans, Esq., M.A., Oxford; Walter W. Rouse Ball, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Samuel Evan Butler, Esq., M.A., Oxford; John Skirrow Follett, Esq., B.A., Cam-bridge; Arthur Hammond Robin, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Henry W. Eaden, Esq., B.A., Cam-bridge; Hon. Mark Francis Napier, B.A., Cam-bridge; Ernest Mackean, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Philip Francis Walker, Esq.; Granville Geo. Miller, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Cuthbert John Ottaway, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Walter Shirley Shirley, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Charles Henry Lomax, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Thomas Marshall Todd, Esq., M.A., Oxford; James Parsons, Esq., B.A., Oxford; Henry Thomas Hyde, Esq., LL.B., Cambridge; Edward Bennet Calvert, Esq., B.A., Cambridge; Johannes Hornius Lange, Esq., LL.B., Cambridge; and William Wills, Esq., B.A., Cambridge.

MIDDLE TEMPLE.—Louis Kossuth Laurie, Esq., Nanda Lal Dey, Esq.; Francis William Bradney Dunne, Esq., of King's-inn, barrister-at-law, and of Trinity College, Dublin, B.A., LL.B.; Arthur Francis Leach, Esq., B.A., New College, Oxford, and Fellow of All Souls', Oxford; Granville George Greenwood, Esq., of Trinity College, B.A., Cambridge; Radhikaprasad Ghosh, Esq.; Francis Taylor Piggot, Esq., B.A., Trinity College, Cam-bridge; Edwin Flynn, Esq.; William Tucker, Esq., B.A., Lincoln College, Oxford; Arthur Child, Esq.; Samuel Henry Day, Esq.; Walter Talbot Cairns, Esq.; Thomas Charles Hedder-wick, Esq., M.A., Glasgow University; Joseph Edwin Crawford Munro, Esq., LL.B., Downing College, Cambridge, and of the Queen's University, Ireland, holder of a Studentship in Roman Law and Jurisprudence from the Council of Legal Education; and Samuel Smith-Dorset, Esq.

GRAY'S INN.—John Joseph Francis, Esq., of the London University; and Edward Cant-Wall, Esq.

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

NOTES ON NEW DECISIONS.

METROPOLIS MANAGEMENT—APPORTION-MENT OF EXPENSES—ONE SIDE OF A STREET.—The plaintiffs, acting under the Metropolis Management Acts, resolved that a portion (to wit, the eastern side) of a new street should be paved throughout the whole length for a uniform breadth of 12ft., measured from the eastern bound-ary; and that the owners of the houses forming the eastern side should pay the estimated ex-penses. In an action against the defendants for contribution to these expenses, their workhouse being part of the eastern side of the street, it was stated in defence that there were houses and land on the western side liable to contribute; and it was replied that these houses and land did not bound or abut on any part of the street to be paved. Held, upon demurrer to the reply (affirm-ing decision of the Queen's Bench Division), that the plaintiffs had no power to charge the owners of one side of the street only, and that the action could not be maintained: (Vestry of Mile End Old Town v. Guardians of Whitechapel Union, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 351. Ct. of App.)

PUBLIC HEALTH ACT—RATE MADE BY LOCAL BOARD UNDER A REPEALED ACT.—A local board of health gave notice of their intention to make a district rate under the Public Health Act 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63) and amended Acts. At the time the rate was made the Acts in question were repealed (though the local board were unaware of the fact) by the Public Health Act 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), which, however, provided that the repeal should not affect anything "duly done" under any enactment thereby repealed. The new Act authorised the levying of a rate for substantially the same purposes as the repealed

Acts upon giving similar notices. Held, that the rate was good as a rate under the new Act, and that the notice given was a thing "duly done" under the saving clause: (Reg. v. Justices of West Riding of Yorkshire, 35 L. T. Rep. N.S. 358. Q. R.)

HIGHWAY—LIABILITY TO REPAIR PORTION OF ROAD CARRIED AWAY BY A LANDSLIP.—The in-habitants of the defendant pariah were indicted for the non-repair of a highway. It appeared that a portion of the highway in question had been carried away by a landslip, and its place sup-plied and filled up with earth, stones, and other débris. No trace remained of the old metalled road, but the line of it was known and admitted. At the trial a verdict of guilty was entered, sub-ject to the report of an engineer on certain points, leave being given to either party to state a special case on such report. The engineer found that the road was absolutely destroyed to an extent of 253yds., but that it was practicable to form a permanent and passable road along the old track at a cost of £341. A special case was afterwards stated. The court had power to draw inferences of fact. Held (per Blackburn and Quain, JJ.), that though the metalled portion of the road had been carried away, the line itself was still known, and that consequently there was no such total destruction of the road as would extinguish the li-ability which ordinarily attaches to a pariah: (Reg. v. Inhabitants of Greenhow, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 363. Q. B. Div.)

NOTICE OF APPEAL, TIME FOR—WHETHER TIME RUNS FROM DATE OF ORDER OR SERVICE OF ORDER.—The time for giving notice of appeal against an order of justices runs from the date of the making of the order appealed against, and not from the date of service of a written form of order upon the appellant. By the Public Health Act 1875, s. 48, where any ditch lying near the bound-ary between the district of any local authority and any adjoining district is foul, a justice may, on the application of the local authority whose district is injuriously affected thereby, summon the local authority of the adjoining district to show cause why an order should not be made for cleansing the ditch; and the court, "after hearing the parties, or ex parte in case of the default of any of them to appear, may make such order," as to the cleansing of the ditch as may seem reason-able. By sect. 269, a person deeming himself aggrieved by any rate, order, conviction, or thing done under the Act, may appeal, first to the next sessions held not less than twenty-one days "after the demand of the rate or the decision of the court;" and, secondly, on giving notice to the other party and the court within fourteen days "after the cause of appeal has arisen": Held, that "cause of appeal" means the determination of the justices to make the order, and not the ser-vice of the order upon the appellant: (Reg. v. St. Albans Sanitary Authority, on the Prosecution of the Sanitary Authority of Barnet, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 362. Q. B. Div.)

GAME PRESERVATION BY PAROL.

AT Lawford's Gate (Gloucestershire) Petty Sessions, 2nd Nov. 1876, there was a summons against three persons for trespassing in search of game on lands belonging to a gentleman whose keeper was the complainant. [It appeared that the land was let to a yearly tenant by word of mouth. Whereupon the defendant's advocate objected that the prosecution must fail, because game could not be reserved to a landlord on a parol demise, for which he cited 40 J. P. 605, 638, and 719, in the first of which it is stated, "The land-lord can only reserve the rabbits to himself by agreement under seal;" in the second the after-mentioned cases are cited as an authority for that position; and in the third (attention having been drawn to the distinction between "reserving a right which you possess" and "granting such right to a stranger" it is said, "The view that a reservation by a landlord is a regrant by the tenant was laid down in Ewart v. Graham (7 H. L. C. 331), and has been repeated in subsequent cases." The matter was adjourned for consideration of the cases so cited, viz., Brigstocke v. Rayner (40 J. P. 245), Bird v. Higginson (2 A. & E. 696), Thomas v. Fredericks (10 Q. B. 775), and Ewart v. Graham (as above).]

On 16th Nov. the judgment of the court was given by Mr. Brooke Smith to the following pur-port:

We think that the dictum in the justice of the peace, to the effect that game cannot be reserved to a landlord on a parol demise, is not well founded.

The cases cited are not in point. In Ewart v. Graham the question was whether, under a special Act of Parliament for enfranchising copyhold lands held in fee simple, subject to an exclusive right to the game in the lord of the manor, such right was continued to him by the statute after the enfranchisement. But that was a question whether A. had the right of sporting over held by B. in fee simple, and had no relation to an ordinary tenancy for years.

Bird v. Higginson is cited by Mr. Paterson in his work on the Game Laws merely as an authority that "the right of free warren is an incorporeal hereditament, and therefore can only be conveyed by deed."

Thomas v. Fredericks is also cited by Mr. Paterson to show the right of a tenant to sue for damages under an unsealed agreement, by which the shootings were let by the landlord to the person committing the damage, thereby showing that shootings may be let by parol. It is also cited as follows: "How conveyed. The right of shooting and hunting over lands, as a separate right, is an incorporeal hereditament lying in grant and passing only by deed."

So in Brigstocke v. Rayner, the question was whether the right of an owner, to sport over lands in the several occupations of himself and his tenants, could be granted to a third party otherwise than by a deed. But that case (as well as the others) does not apply to a reservation between landlord and tenant or an ordinary parol demise.

No one contends that an incorporeal hereditament can be conveyed by one person to another except by deed, as was said by Blackburn, J., in Brigstocke v. Rayner. But we have no doubt that it may, to use the words of sect. 8 of the Game Act (1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32), be "reserved or retained by any lessor or landlord, by any written or parol demise or contract," which position is distinctly recognised and established in and by Reg. v. Thurstone, Inhabitants (28 L. J. 106, M. C.; 5 Jur. N.S. 821; 1 F. & E. 502, cited by Mr. Paterson; and Coleman v. Bathurst, 35 J. P. 630; 6 Q. B. 366), in which it is expressly laid down and admitted, that as between landlord and tenant, the game may be reserved to the landlord by a parol demise or contract according to the statute, Lush, J., holding that in point of law it was so reserved in that case, though the majority of the court held that in point of fact the wording of the unsealed agreement was not sufficient for that purpose.

We therefore hold that game may be well reserved to a landlord in and by a parol demise or contract.

But we say that in a prosecution of this kind, under sect. 30 of the Game Act, it is wholly immaterial to whom the game belongs, unless and until the defendant sets up either a claim of right, which, if substantial, would oust the jurisdiction, or leave and license by the actual occupier, which, when proved, would oblige the prosecutor to show that such occupier had no right to give that license; in which case the statute declares that the landlord shall be deemed to be the legal occupier, and the license by the actual occupier is made unavailing.

No such defence was set up in this case; and, as the trespass has been proved, the only question is the amount of the penalty, which we fix at one guinea and costs, or one month's imprisonment, for each of the defendants.

MARITIME LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

COLLISION—FOREIGN JUDGMENT—ESTOPPEL—RES ADJUDICATA.—In an action of collision a judgment of a foreign court given in a cause between the same parties cannot be pleaded as an estoppel unless such judgment was obtained prior to the institution of the action in this country; there being no res judicata, but only lis alibi pendens, when the plaintiff instituted his action here, he can claim to proceed to judgment in this country if he chooses. Semble, a judgment in a foreign court against a person not subject to the jurisdiction of that court to an estoppel, must be a judgment on the merits, and not merely by default. (The Delta, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 376, Adm. Ct.)

PRACTICE—COLLISION—BRITISH AND FOREIGN SHIPS—JURISDICTION—SERVICE.—Where an English ship is damaged in collision upon the high seas, outside any territorial jurisdiction, by a ship owned by a foreign country established abroad, there is no power to issue a writ for service out of the jurisdiction upon, or of which notice is to be given out of the jurisdiction to, the foreign company, and claiming damage in respect of the collision. Semble, that "within the jurisdiction," in Orders II. and XI. of the Supreme Court rules, means within the territorial jurisdiction: (Re Smith, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 380, Adm. Ct.)

J. HOUNSELL, Esq., Surgeon, Bristol writes:—"I consider BURTON'S NERVOUS TOOTHACHE. Very severe cases are found instantaneous and permanent relief to the sufferer. Invaluable to all who suffer from it."

COUNTY COURTS.

HALIFAX COUNTY COURT.

Tuesday, Oct. 30.

(Before J. W. DE L. GIFFARD, Esq., Judge.)

BROWN v. LANCASHIRE AND YORKSHIRE RAILWAY COMPANY.

Carriers' Act—Personal luggage—Declaration of value—Notice—"Conspicuous part."

HIS HONOUR.—In this case, on the 16th Aug. 1876, the plaintiff took a ticket at the Halifax station of the railway company for Diggle, near Marsden, having with her a portmanteau containing property of considerable value. On reaching Diggle the portmanteau was missing, and has not since been found, and the plaintiff by this action now seeks to recover £50, the value of the portmanteau and its contents. The defendants admit the receipt and the loss of the portmanteau, but rest their defence on the provisions of the Carriers' Act, which requires that articles of a particular description, exceeding in value £10, must be declared as such, and the extra rate paid or arranged for prior to commencing the journey. It is admitted by the plaintiff that no declaration was made or extra rate paid by her. The articles contained in the portmanteau were exclusively wearing apparel and such other things as a lady would or might require when going on a visit for a short time, and have been proven to be of the value claimed. Those objected to as belonging to the class enumerated in the Carriers' Act (1 Will. 4, c. 68), as to which a declaration of value must be made before the commencement of the journey, were principally as follows: A sealakin jacket value £21; a silk dress, value £17 12s.; ivory bracelets, £2 2s.; lace (Honiton) made by hand; hand glass, &c., amounting altogether at first cost to upwards of £60. It was contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the silk dress and ivory bracelets were not within the meaning of the statute, and the case of Davey v. Mason was cited in support of that contention. But Davey v. Mason has been virtually overruled by the late case of Bernstein v. Bazendale, and it seems to be now well settled that a silk dress made up, ivory bracelets, glass, brooches, &c., are within the meaning of the statute, and are articles which should be declared if above the prescribed value. The result would be to reduce the plaintiff's claim to an amount agreed to be stated at the sum of £18 7s. if the matter rested there. But it was further contended on behalf of the plaintiff that the provision contained in the 2nd section of the statute has not been complied with by the defendants, and that the plaintiff is consequently not affected with the statutory notice. The language of the second section as to this point is briefly as follows: "That when any parcel containing any of the articles specified shall be so delivered, and its value declared as aforesaid, the carrier may demand and receive an increased rate of charge, to be notified by some notice affixed in legible characters in some public and conspicuous part of the office, warehouse, or other receiving house where such parcels are received by them for the purpose of conveyance, stating the increased rate of charge . . . and all persons sending such valuable articles shall be bound by such notice without further proof of the same having come to their knowledge." I think the words "such notice" must be taken to mean "such notice so affixed." The 3rd section provides that if such notice shall not have been so affixed the carrier shall not be entitled to the benefit of this Act, but shall be responsible as at common law." The effect of these two sections, read together, would seem to be that where the carrier has in a conspicuous part of his office, warehouse, or receiving house affixed this notice, he is not bound to prove that it was called to the attention of the sender or passenger, but that where he fails to affix such notice his liability at common law remains. In the present case a notice sufficiently legible to a person standing near it, and explicit in its terms, was affixed on the platform, about fifteen feet to the left of the door leading from the booking office to the platform, at an elevation from the ground. The station at Halifax is of considerable length. The booking office, which is situated nearly in the centre, is approached from the outside, and a passenger having taken his ticket would pass through a door leading on to the platform. At the left, about forty yards along the platform, is a viaduct to enable passengers to cross the line. The notice, as I have said before, was placed fifteen feet from the door the opposite direction from the viaduct. The question I have to consider is whether a notice affixed in such a spot is a sufficient compliance with the statute; and, after much consideration, I can arrive at no other than a negative conclusion. The platform is certainly not an office, warehouse, or receiving house, but at the same time I should be most unwilling to render nugatory the intention of the Legislature, unless compelled to do so, upon a mere technical criticism of expression.

The present case it seems to me the objection is one of substance. The obvious intention of the Legislature in directing the notice to be affixed in a "conspicuous part of the office, warehouse, or receiving house," is that customers passengers when sending their goods or their tickets may have their attention called to the terms on which the carriers consent to receive goods or luggage. Possibly any position, whether office, warehouse, or receiving house, where this object was attained would in law be sufficient; but it certainly would in reason, be sufficient; but a notice on the platform 15ft. from the door leading from the booking office in such a position is clearly not in view of passengers taking their tickets, neither is it certain that a passenger having taken his ticket and going straight to his carriage would ever see it, unless, indeed, the carriage were immediately opposite the notice. The probabilities are that such a passenger would not see the notice hanging up among other notices and advertisements on the station walls, which are frequently seen. Still less would a passenger by this way, who had to cross the line as the plaintiff had, going to Diggle, be likely to see such a notice either if she crossed the line opposite the door or turned to the left to cross by the bridge. I have already said I think the company failed in substance to comply with the duty imposed on them by the Act, inasmuch as they did not affix the notice in a conspicuous place where persons travelling by their railway would be likely to see it. The plaintiff swears that she never saw or was aware of such notice, and no one who heard her evidence could doubt for a moment the truth of her statement. It would be perfectly easy for the company to affix that notice on the window of the booking office through which the tickets are obtained, so as to bring it unmistakably to the attention of all travellers. The verdict is therefore for the amount claimed, though the sake of the plaintiff I am disposed to reserve conclusion at which I have arrived, as I do but feel that in a case of this kind the company is entitled to take the opinion of the Supreme Court.

Verdict for the plaintiff, £18 7s.

MANCHESTER COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Nov. 16.

(Before J. A. RUSSELL, Q.C., Judge.)

Obligations of innkeepers to provide accommodation—Discretion in rejecting guests.

JAMES RAVENSCROFT and others brought action against William Walker, the landlord of the General Birch Inn, at Ardwick, to recover damages for an alleged refusal by the defendant to provide the plaintiffs with accommodation for themselves and their horses, although the defendant was well able to afford such accommodation, and the plaintiffs were prepared to pay what was supplied to them.

The plaintiffs were represented by Smyly, the defendant by W. Cobbett.

Smyly, in opening his case, said James B. Croft was a carter living at Ashton-under-Lyme. On the 2nd Sept. last he and his brother Ravenscroft, and another man were engaged to convey a number of members of the Ashton of Hope from Ashton to Philips Park, Manchester. After leaving their passengers at the plaintiffs' public-house, the General Birch at Ardwick. The horses, five in number, placed in the stables, the luries were drawn to a position indicated by the ostler, and the driver was enjoying a feed of corn when the defendant came up, called the attention of the plaintiff to the presence of a temperance banner on the cart, used some very strong language, and peremptorily ordered the party to "clear out." They remonstrated with him, but without effect. They said they were not teetotalers, but he said that it did not matter, they belonged to the gang, and he would not have them at his premises. The horses were then removed to the park gates, where they remained. A band of Hope members were ready to accompany Mr. Smyly submitted that a gross wrong had been committed to his clients. Very great pressure was allowed to licensed victuallers, who were bound to provide accommodation for the public. The mere presence of a banner on the cart in his eyes was no excuse for the defendant's conduct in this instance.

The plaintiff and his witnesses gave evidence in support of the above statement. They cross-examination that the luries for obstruction to the entrance of the inn they used any insulting or jeering language.

Cobbett, in opening the defendant's case, contended that a publican was not legally bound to provide accommodation for any but his regular customers. His Honour reminded him that the and shown that the plaintiff and his friends were about to become guests, that they purposed entering his house and partaking of refreshments, but the defendant repelled them, saying he would neither have them nor their horses. They must all turn out. The case was analogous to a man travelling with his own post chaise. The first thing he did was to put up his carriage and horses and then seek refreshment for himself. With respect to damages, he did not see that there had been anything more than a nominal right infringed, and he thought it ought to have been made the subject matter of an indictment.

Cobbett said that whether the men were tea-stallers or not, they were the charioteers of that articular party, and it could not be supposed that the spirit of the party, which might to some extent be supposed to extend to the drivers, was altogether favourable to the keeper of a public-house. He should show also by the evidence of the landlord and others that the luries were placed in a most inconvenient position so as to be an obstruction to his customers. Could there be anything more offensive, he asked, than to place a lury in front of his door with a flaunting device upon it, so that his customers could not get in? Moreover, he was informed that the plaintiff and his friends insultingly called the defendant "Mr. Bonifacio," reminded him of his pledges at the licensing sessions, and caused a large crowd to gather round the door of his house.

Evidence was then heard for the defence. The defendant alleged that he was insulted by the plaintiffs, and that the waggons were in an inconvenient position. He also expressed his belief that the plaintiffs had travelled all the way from the park to his residence for the purpose of annoying him. The ostler also gave evidence, but admitted, in cross examination, that the objection was to the banner and not to the lury stall.

Empty, in summing up his case, remarked on what the Judge had said as to the landlord's refusal being made the subject of an indictment. It always seemed rather harsh to enforce the criminal law against a man in the position of the defendant, and the plaintiffs had therefore refrained from so doing.

His HONOUR said the complaint was that the defendant, having been requested to accommodate the plaintiff and his horse, wrongfully refused to do so. The law was clear on that point. Providing a landlord had room for an intending guest, and there was accommodation for horses, he was bound to entertain that guest and receive his horse, unless there was some conduct in the guest or the mode in which he applied for accommodation which justified the innkeeper in refusing to grant accommodation. There was no doubt that if the plaintiff and those with him had conducted themselves in a disorderly manner the defendant would have been justified in doing what he did; but the question was whether they did anything in point of fact which would justify the landlord in refusing the accommodation which by law they were entitled to. It was obvious the defendant was a man of intemperate spirit, for he had the hardihood to say he thought the men had gone there purposely to annoy him. Is (the judge) was perfectly satisfied that accommodation was refused and without any justification. While acquiescing in every word which Mr. Empty had said about the hardihood of putting the criminal law in motion, he still adhered to the law he had previously expressed, because, as the case came before him, he was bound by law not to inflict a penalty, but such damages as might have been sustained. In point of fact no damage was sustained. The men were put to some inconvenience. They had a clear right, but the infringement of that right did not constitute damages. He was sorry he had no power to impose a penalty, for he thought there had been a gross violation of the right possessed by the plaintiff, and one which ought not to be visited merely with censure, with which he did visit it, but by some pecuniary penalty which would make the man pay for the excess of temper which he showed. He was not in a position, however, to do that. All he could do was to give judgment for the plaintiff for 20s. and costs.

LIVERPOOL COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Nov. 16.
(Before T. P. THOMPSON, Esq., Judge.)
TIPPER v. ROONEY.

The "necessaries" of a minor.

HIS was an action brought by Henry Tipper, owner, 170, Park-road, against John Rooney, licitor's clerk, 19, Dombey-street, to recover the sum of £39s. 6d. damages sustained by a vehicle used by defendant from plaintiff.

Lowe appeared for the plaintiff.

Dr. Connors for the defendant.

From the evidence it appeared that on the 7th inst. last the defendant hired a trap to convey himself, a friend, and two young ladies to Hale.

All went well and pleasantly on the outward journey, and the party had tea at the Wellington Hotel, Hale. In returning, they took a round-about road, and in the course of the journey the back seat slipped, the trap flew up, the shafts were snapped, and the four occupants were thrown out of the machine, the whip being lost.

For the defendant it was pleaded that he was a minor.

His HONOUR held that he was liable, and that a "drive into the country" was within the legal definition of "necessaries" to a minor.

After hearing the evidence adduced for the defendant, however,

His HONOUR considered that the shafts of the vehicle were not sound, and consequently he allowed the plaintiff only the value of the whip.

LEGAL NEWS.

ON PUBLIC NOTARIES IN THE MIDDLE AGES.

SELDEN informs us that Counts Palatine had power to create notaries, but this, according to him, was only the delegation of the more ancient authority of the Pope and the Emperors of Germany, who claimed to be sovereigns of Rome, till the reign of Edward II. They were appointed in this country by the Court of Rome or its deputies; but this monarch claimed power to appoint them himself. He tells us that notaries began to be common about the reign of Henry III. Selden mentions a case where Roger di Monte Flaxon, one of the Counts Palatine, at the request of the Prior of Winchester, who lived about the end of the reign of Edward I., grants to him power to create two notaries, and to invest them with pen, reed, and paper. The following translation of the authority given to him contains some curious matter, which may be interesting to the legal reader:—

"To the venerable and discreet Prior St. Swithin, of Winton, Roger de Monte Florem, by the grace of God Count Palatine, peace, joy, and health. A wise knowledge of human affairs, compared with the fugitive memory of mankind, lest those things of daily occurrence which are done between contracting parties should be subject to oblivion, interposes the office of the scribe, by which the wishes of contracting parties are written down, and writings are kept by an authorised power, for a long period. Wherefore, when on your part when there appeared a humble petition that we would commit to you the authority with which we and our successors are honoured by the most noble Emperors, for making notaries, that you might appoint two proper clerks, sufficiently learned, whom you might select. We in full confidence of your discretion, nor less of your diligence in this matter committed to you by us, of which we have full confidence, having regard to your petition, and to those things committed to us, having made diligent examination of the fitness of the persons, having also received from them the Holy Seal of the Church of Rome and the Holy Empire, as well as the office of the Faithful (the Sacrament), according as is testified below, and the personal oath which we desire you to administer in this respect to those to whom we grant the aforesaid office by investiture of pen, reed, and paper, giving and granting to them by this present authority full license, power, and liberty, of writing, copying, and publishing, instruments, deeds, administrations, codicils, and protocols, of whatsoever sort and description, and to reduce them into common form; to examine witnesses, and receive and take examinations, and publish depositions of witnesses, of making wills, and also the wills of persons dying (nuncupative wills), as well as whatsoever instruments, upon whatsoever contracts, matters, or things soever, with full power as well of writing, copying, and publishing, and reducing to form allegations, exceptions, and cases, and of writing and registering the same, and of doing all and singular those things which commonly belong to the aforesaid office, that those matters everywhere may be faithfully and lawfully done, and for this purpose have recourse both to notaries and public scribes as often as occasion shall require."

MR. JOHN ELLIS, solicitor, has been elected by a large majority as a representative of Boughton Ward, in the Chester Town Council.

THE name of Mr. John Blossett Maule, Q.C., has been added to the commission appointed to inquire into certain municipal corporations not subject to the Municipal Corporations Act.

MR. WALTER MAYHEW (of the firm of Messrs. Mayhew and Adcock, solicitors, Wigan, Lancashire) has been unanimously elected mayor for the borough of Wigan for the ensuing year. Mr. Mayhew has been an alderman of the borough for many years.

THE Society of Apothecaries have recovered a penalty of £20 in the Exchequer Division from a chemist and druggist named Wetherington, who lives in Wandsworth-road, and who had prescribed for various persons residing in his neighbourhood.

NEW RECORDERS.—Mr. Charles Greville Prideaux, Q.C., of the Western Circuit, has been appointed to the Recordership of Exeter, rendered vacant by the elevation of Mr. Lopes to the Bench. Mr. Prideaux was called to the Bar in 1836, and has for some years past held the post of Recorder of Halston, which latter appointment has been conferred on Mr. Gabriel Prior Goldney, of the Western Circuit, son of Mr. G. Goldney, M.P. for Chippenham.

THE ENGLISH BAR.—The examinations for candidates at the Bar in England are growing more severe. This year, at the final Bar examination, out of sixty-three candidates no less than thirty-four [were] rejected, and only twenty-nine passed. There is a great deal of grumbling among those who have failed, especially those who have come up with high University reputations, and who have been plucked more than once in their examination.—Irish Law Times.

PROLIX JUDGMENTS.—The number and voluminousness of the judgments delivered by the judges in the case of the Franconia, have placed the Law Reporting Society in some difficulty. The points to which they refer is so important that they ought to be all put on record, but they would occupy nearly a volume themselves. The judgment of the Lord Chief Justice alone occupied three hours in delivery. It is estimated that the cost of printing them to the society would be £2850, and the reporters naturally hesitate to incur such an expense. It is probable, I believe, that the matter will be compounded by the printing of two of the judgments on each side of the question.—Irish Law Times.

A JUDGE'S CLERK.—At the Judges' Chambers, on Saturday last, a testimonial in the shape of an address and a solid silver inkstand, with a suitable inscription, was presented to Mr. J. E. Saunders, the chamber clerk of Sir George Bramwell, on his retirement consequent on the appointment of Sir George as one of the judges of the Appeal Court, after a service of more than fifty years at the chambers as clerk to several of the judges. His Lordship gave his approbation to the movement, and declared that Mr. Saunders well deserved the testimonial. Mr. Saunders was cordially thanked for his kindness, courtesy, and assistance to the law clerks in their difficulties, and he had set an excellent example to the other clerks at the judges' chambers. Mr. Saunders expressed in feeling terms his appreciation of the testimonial. He had been clerk to Mr. Justice Holroyd, Mr. Justice Taunton, Mr. Justice Patteson, Baron Parke (Lord Wensleydale), and Baron Bramwell. He had been, he said, twenty-one years with Baron Bramwell, and a kinder and better man never lived. The inscription on the inkstand was in the following terms: "Presented to Mr. J. E. Saunders, by the managing clerks attending the common law judges' chambers, as a mark of their esteem for his uniform kindness to them during the very many years he had been clerk to Barons Parke and Bramwell." Mr. Giles, Mr. Parker, and other members of the committee were accorded a vote of thanks.

THE Manchester Guardian of Nov. 7 contained the following among a number of other advertisements:—

FOR Legal Advice at a vast saving in any matter of law apply to Mr. Medway, solicitor, 39, Tamewell-street, Great Ancoats, between 7 and 8.15 p.m.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editors do not hold themselves responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.

POWERS OF COMMISSIONERS TO TAKE AFFIDAVITS IN THE IRISH COURTS.—I forwarded to my correspondent in Dublin a copy of Mr. Saxton's letter which appeared in the LAW TIMES of the 4th inst., and desired him to call the attention of the official who had to decide as to the validity of affidavits to be used in the Landed Estates Court to the authorities which Mr. Saxton cited. My correspondent informs me that the court has directed that affidavits sworn before a commissioner of the High Court of Judicature are to be received, and has sent me a form of jurat, which complies with the general orders and must be in the form prescribed. As this form may be of service to some of your readers, I subjoin it:

"Sworn before me this _____ day of _____ 187, at _____, in the county of _____, the alterations and interlineations having been first made as intimated by me and I know the deponent. A. B., A Commissioner to administer oaths for the High Court of Judicature in England."

Nov. 16, 1876. LEX.

[This form may satisfy the Landed Estates Court, but it is clearly incorrect, as there is no such court as "the High Court of Judicature."—ED. SOLS. DEPT.]

TEN YEARS' MEN AND OTHER GRIEVANCES.—I am one of those who think that the exclusion from articles of all who have not passed the Preliminary Examination would be a powerful "purifier" of our Profession, and only a reasonable precaution against underbred and under-learned solicitors, but as such exclusion could not be effected without an Act of Parliament, I would very briefly refer to another means of "purifying" ready to hand, and not dependent on the will of the Legislature. There is a considerable number of our brethren who do not deem it inconsistent with their duties to their profession to admit to articles useful writing and general clerks, whose premium they return in the shape of weekly wages, and thus retain the services of the clerk at no cost to themselves. Without saying anything invidious, it is indisputable that men so admitted do not and cannot make the stuff of which we wish to see the Profession composed, and until this practice is abandoned, although at the expense sometimes of economy and convenience, the "purifying" processes alluded to by your correspondents will be applied in vain. NIGEL.

[We quite agree with you.—ED. SOLS. DEPT.]

SOLICITOR'S CLERK TO ANOTHER SOLICITOR.—RIGHT TO ACT AS AN ADVOCATE.—In reply to the letter of "Articled Clerk" in the LAW TIMES of 21st ult., I think he must never have looked at the case that was quoted in "Subscriber's Clerk's" letter (7 Bar. Rep. p. 479), otherwise he would never have referred him to the case of Mr. Rogers, decided by the judge of Circuit No. 48, for that gentleman obtained a rule calling upon the judge to show cause why he (Mr. E.) should not be heard as the attorney for the plaintiff on the hearing, &c., and although the rule was discharged, yet three judges held "that there was nothing to prevent an attorney who was employed as clerk to another attorney from practising in a County Court, providing he was engaged generally as attorney in the cause." I am of opinion that "Subscriber's Clerk" should have been heard if he were acting bona fide in the action, notwithstanding that he might never have had the business if he had not been in the office of his employers. F. W.

[Your view is entirely in keeping with that expressed by us at the time.—ED. SOLS. DEPT.]

MUNICIPAL OATHS.—I see by the Standard that the Lord Mayor, on his appointment, made the declaration prescribed by 9 Geo. 4, c. 17, and the oath prescribed by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 48. In the country the mayor makes the declaration prescribed by 5 & 6 Wm. 4, c. 76, s. 50, and the oath of allegiance and judicial oath prescribed by the Promissory Oaths Act, 31 & 32 Vict. c. 72. How is it the practice is not uniform—why do not the Lord Mayor and provincial mayors make the same oaths and declarations? In construing the Municipal Corporation Acts are they to be construed liberally or strictly, and must all the members of the council present at a meeting vote, or may any be neutral or not vote at all? Z. Y.

SUCCESSION DUTY.—It appears to me that the proceeds arising from the sale mentioned would be liable to legacy not succession duty, that there would not be any charge upon the land, the trustee being bound to see the duty paid. See 4 Geo. 3, c. 28, ss. 4, 5. F. P.

IMPROVEMENT IN FORM OF DEED OF CONVEYANCE, &c.—Will you kindly permit me to ask the readers of the LAW TIMES whether, in their opinion, some alteration could not justly be made in the words employed to connect the introductory with the operative part of an indenture containing one recital, at least. The deed commences, "This indenture, made such a day, between certain parties. Then follow the recital and subsequently the testatum, beginning, "Now this indenture witnesseth." From the wording of an indenture which does not contain a recital, it will be seen that the first words, "This indenture," are intended to form the nominative to the verb "witnesseth," in the operative part. It appears, therefore, to be hardly grammatical for the nominative to be repeated before the verb in the testatum merely because a recital is introduced into the deed. A difference is made in the commencement of a deed-poll when it contains a recital, and, under similar circumstances, would it not be correct to vary the commencement of an indenture? I would suggest that the part preceding the recital should, in such a case, be considered as the heading of the deed; and if, on were to be substituted for the first word this, and on inserted in its proper place before the date, the different parts of the deed, if not more closely connected, would be complete in themselves. I am, Sir, very truly, Sir, your obedient servant, J. B. C.

we are indebted for the recent improvements in legal phraseology have perhaps deemed undeserving of notice. H. J. B.

[The query you raise has often occurred to us in practice, but looking at the tenacity with which conveyancers adhere to old forms and precedents, it is hopeless to expect any improvement; for instance, the declaration to bar dower, would, nine times out of ten, be omitted in a conveyance, if its operation were explained to the purchaser.—ED. SOLS. DEPT.]

NOTES AND QUERIES.

None are inserted unless the name and address of the writer are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

15. THE LICENSING ACTS.—Have the justices power to grant a beer and wine license under the wine and beerhouse act, 1869 (not to be consumed on the premises), at one of the special sessions appointed for transferring licenses, &c.? And, if they refused, can they be compelled to do so, providing the applicant and the house are duly qualified as required by 32 & 33 Vict., c. 27, s. 8? A. J. C.

16. LOST DOCUMENT.—SECONDARY EVIDENCE.—An agreement in writing is lost. B., a party, gives secondary evidence of it, by relating its contents from memory. He proposes also to give in evidence, a stipulation contemporaneously but verbally agreed upon between the parties, and which is a variation of the lost written contract. As parole evidence of the written contract is once let in, can the evidence go further and include the verbal stipulation? Is it admissible on principle or on authority? When entries against interest are admitted other facts in the entry are also let in. Is there any analogy in principle? J. J.

17. AFFILIATION ORDER.—COMPOSITION.—An order is made on A. He pays the amount ordered per week, for a year. He then pays the mother a sum for the future support of the child, and she signs an agreement to support the child. The child becomes chargeable on the parish. Can the parish authorities compel A. to contribute to the support of the child? J. H. S.

18. CHAPEL TRUST DEED.—ENROLMENT.—Land (unbuilt upon) is to be leased to the trustees of a United Methodist Free Church, reserving a rent. The assignment contains a declaration that the land is held upon certain trusts contained in a model trust deed duly enrolled. Is it necessary to enrol the present assignment? J. H. S.

Answers.

(Q. 1) STAMPS.—If "Ned" will refer to the Stamp Act 1870, sect. 57, he will find that a deed of appointment of new trustees is chargeable with a duty of 10s. Sect. 78 provides that no conveyance or transfer made for effectuating the appointment of new trustees is to be charged with any higher duty than 10s. From the wording of sect. 78 it seems to me that it only applies to a conveyance of trust property from old to new trustees, who have been already appointed by a separate deed, and that an appointment of new trustees containing a conveyance of the trust property should therefore be stamped with two 10s. stamps. This construction of the act is in accordance with the practice of the Chancery Division in the case of orders appointing new trustees, and vesting land or the right to sue for choses in action in them, made under the Trustee Relief Act, 1850. The registrars require these orders to be stamped with two stamps of 10s. each. A. L. L.

(Q. 9) WILL.—As the interest of C. and D. is a reversionary one in personal estate accruing under an instrument made after 31st Dec., 1837 (see 20 & 21 Vict. c. 57), the husbands will have to be made parties and the deed acknowledged in the manner required by 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 74. H. L.

(Q. 13) BANKRUPTCY.—"Trustee" should read ss. 23 and 24, and sect. 125 ss. 7 of the Bankruptcy Act 1869. E. CLAYTON.

(Q. 194) ISLE OF MAN.—(1) There is a registry for deeds affecting land in the Isle of Man, the office is in Douglas, and the law of registration notice and kindred branches is much the same in the Isle of Man as it is in Eng. and. (2) There is no stamp duty on deeds affecting lands in the Isle of Man. (3) Manx deeds resemble as to their form English deeds, but the principles of conveyancing in the Isle of Man differ in some very material points from those recognised in England, for instance, in the Isle of Man there is no such statute as the English statute "De Donis Conditionalibus," and generally speaking a limitation in a deed or will which in Eng. and would give a fee tail will in the Isle of Man give a fee conditional at common law. (4) The rule in Shelley's case is not law in the Isle of Man. (5) The law of dower is very peculiar in the Isle of Man. (6) There is no Manx statute similar to the English "Statute of Uses," and all modifications of the beneficial interest in lands in the Isle of Man are trusts enforceable only in equity. (7) The tenure of the greatest bulk of the lands in the Isle of Man is not pure freehold but a species of customary freehold held by copy of court roll. The mines and minerals are in the lady of the manor. These with their results are a few of the material differences between the principles of English and Manx conveyancing. I shall be happy to answer any queries "A. B. C." may put to me privately. He can obtain my name and address from the editor of the LAW TIMES. A MANX ADVOCATE.

(Q. 11) ORDER XXII, RULE 3.—There can be no doubt this rule requires a defendant obtaining leave to defend under Order XVI., rule 1, to deliver his defence within 8 days from the order giving him such leave.

And this rule seems to apply where the master induces the summons "No order." If the defence is not delivered within 8 days, a judgment signed Order XXII., rule 3, would be quite regular. This has been already decided by the cases of Atlas v. I. (L. T., Jan. 15, 1876), and The Margate Pier and Ice Company v. Perry (L. T., Feb. 5, 1876), to which I should refer. W. H.

—It appears that the defendant must deliver his defence within 8 days after the order; otherwise plaintiff may sign judgment under Order XXII., rule 3. W. H.

(Q. 188) INFANT'S CONTRACTS.—R. Clayton finds if he reads the Act carefully that it enacts no action shall be brought whereby to charge person upon any ratification made after full age of a contract made during infancy. And the Act goes on to provide that even a new consideration in ratification makes no difference. In the face of sweeping words it would be interesting to know Mr. Clayton arrives at his conclusion that as I may now enter into a binding contract for the purchase of an estate. I quite agree that sect. 1 of the Act seems to be aimed at; A. contracts for repayment of money lent, B. for goods supplied, and C. as stated, but sect. 2, which I have set out above, evidently a much wider scope. W. H.

LAW SOCIETIES.

THE BREMEN CONGRESS OF THE ASSOCIATION.

FOR THE REFORM AND CODIFICATION OF LAW OF NATIONS.

(Continued from page 52.)

THE following paper upon "General Average and Maritime Insurance" was addressed to Congress by Mr. Schneider, as well as the papers forwarded to us by Mr. Griffith, one of the association:

It has long been the desire of merchants and insurers in all maritime countries to see the law of general average assimilated, because the contributions to general average are regulated by laws of the country where ship and cargo are, and are very often to be recovered in several countries.

The assimilation of the insurance laws is the same degree important, it being optional for insurers whether they will extend their assurance to foreign property and foreign countries; the similarity of the insurance laws is certainly very desirable; as it happens constantly the proprietors and insurers of property reside in different countries.

When the draft of law, of which I have the number of copies at the disposal of the President of this assembly, was originally prepared, I could not have had the faintest expectation that I should ever have an opportunity to submit it to so distinguished a conference as this present. I hope that its defects will be overruled if one or two points in it are found deserving consideration. I feel highly honoured to be admitted by the council of this association to some of the more important points on which the law appears to me desirable.

GENERAL AVERAGE.

1. (Sect. 1). Expenses of Ships during detention by Governments and other superior Power.

By the laws of some countries these expenses are to be partitioned as general average. In opinion it is erroneous to assume that the detention of laden ships are always on one side. Very frequently, when the cargo is owing to forced detention, too late for the ship to have been calculated on at the time of departure, the owners of it are suffering greater loss than the owner of the ship is subject to. Insurance can be had against decline of value of the cargo, but the shipowner can insure himself against loss from every extraordinary detention. The party should therefore bear its own loss if ships are involuntarily delayed. The shipowner like every other trader, knows that, in particular circumstances, he may be involved in expense and should indemnify himself in the freight. Accidents he may be exposed to, or for the purpose of the insurance that protects him.

2. (Sect. 14). Expenses in a Port of distress. What has been said before applies equally to the port charges and the expenses for the maintenance of the crew when a ship is compelled to enter a port in order to repair part of the cargo, or to procure necessities for the crew. It is the owner's duty to keep his ship in condition to enable her to perform the duty. This duty, which the shipowner owes to the proprietors of the cargo, cannot be lessened by dangers to which these are exposed when neglected; it should be heightened in proportion to the imminence of the danger to them. The practice of dividing such expenses as general average practice alleviating the burden of the assured has undertaken to protect the shipowner from accidents, and throwing a part of it on the insurers who get no premium from the ship for it.

it is necessary to take the cargo out of the ship, in order to repair her, the expense of discharge and reloading the vessel should be borne by the owners of the cargo, whose property must not be the way of the shipowner who shall fulfil his duty. Such cases are comparatively rare; the larger part of cases do not involve the discharge of the cargo.

If the laws were altered, as I propose, the proprietors of cargo would be released from the pressing claims for contribution, which are unnecessary for the safety of the shipowner. The owners of ship and freight are justly liable for all expenses of this sort. General average would then be confined to voluntary sacrifices for the benefit of all concerned, which are only justification for them.

3. (Sect. 35). Damage from Collision.

It is particularly desirable that the laws on this point should be assimilated. In case of collision cannot be attributed either to one or to the other of the commanders of the colliding ships, it is natural that the loss or damage should lie on it falls. If the commander of one of the ships is to blame it is a matter of course that he and his ship alone is liable. When the commanders of both vessels are in fault they are not in position to make claims against each other. It is recognised by the German law, but that it is silent as to the claims of the proprietors of cargoes for damage from the collision. It appeared to me that these could lay hold of that commander only to whom they had entrusted their cargo; but after my draft of law was published I read somewhere that the German Supreme Court had decided the proprietors of cargoes could hold the ships of either commander liable for their losses. This is certainly high authority for me to contend against. I must mention why I took a different view. I thought the answer of the defendant commander, that the plaintiff's (proprietor of cargo) cargo ought not to have been in his way, was decisive, whether it applied to the owner of the ship or to the owner of the cargo, because both had been under the conduct of the commander, to whom they were entrusted, and who was as much liable as the defendant commander. It seemed to me no distinction could be made between the owners of the ship and cargo when they came against the opposite guilty commander. Cargo, as well as the ship, that got the worst was guilty of being in the place where the collision occurred. I concluded, therefore, that the proprietor of the cargo must stick to the commander to whose conduct he had confided his cargo.

Besides this, I thought, as a rule, the question should be between the insurers. If the insurer of the cargo that was miscarried triumphed over the insurer of the equally misconducted ship on opposite side, that did not seem to me to be correct. Both insurers stand in the place of guilty commanders, for whose misconduct they undertook for a premium to be responsible. They were permitted to throw off the loss on the other's shoulders it would give rise to a troublesome litigation and frequent detention of cargo that must be injurious to all parties interested in the voyages.

MARITIME INSURANCE.

4. (Sect. 25). Insurance of Ships.

The laws about the valuation of ships for insurance are rather indistinct. The insurable value of a ship is correctly her value at the commencement of the voyage, after deduction of usual wear and tear during such voyage. This wear and tear is refunded by the freight, and if not deducted from the value of the ship, should, in case of total loss, be paid twice, when ship and freight are insured.

The deduction that is to be made for wear and tear must depend on the materials of the ship, and the question for builders and commanders of ships should be settled for the guidance of shipowners and underwriters, at a certain percentage, for a period of a month or a year, and should be related for each voyage, in proportion to the wear that is usually required to perform it. It has been the custom of underwriters to deduct in cases one-third of the expense of repairs, as equivalent for wear and tear. That is a very satisfactory custom, as ships differ so much in age and quality. The deduction should vary with age and class of each ship, and might be related to the classifications of ships published by recognised societies, for the guidance of owners and merchants.

5. (Sect. 64). Insurance of Freight.

Freight is a return, not only for the wear and tear of a ship, but also for the wages and maintenance of the crew, the portcharges, the insurance of the cargo, and the capital invested in the ship and outfit. If the wages and maintenance increased by any accident, that increase should be borne by the insurer of the freight. The practice, to make the insurer of the ship bear it, is inconsistent. An insurance of the ship should mean the substance of the ship and nothing else. To make the insurer of the ship answerable for the profit of the freight, when that decreases by accidental delay, is perfect confusion, particularly if the freight is separately insured. An insurance of freight can only mean the profit secured by the stipulation of the freight; consequently, all return that is comprised in the stipulated freight and saved, in case the ship is lost, is to be deducted from the amount payable by the insurer. For the same reason, the insurer of freight cannot complain of being made answerable for diminution, by accident, of the shipowner's profit, as he is paid premium for all ingredients of the freight.

6. (Sect. 67). Insurance of Goods.
The present mode of calculating the amount to be paid by the insurer of goods, in case of damage, is to deduct the sale value of the damaged goods from the gross value, which they would have fetched in sound condition, and to proportion the difference to the insured amount, if that is lower than the sound gross value, adding the extraordinary expenses sustained on the damaged goods. If the insured amount is higher than the sound gross value, the actual difference only, between this and the sale value, is paid. This is not an exact indemnification of the proprietor of the goods, who is left to bear that proportion of damages which arises from the freight and ordinary expenses, payable at the place of destination. If the proprietor of the goods wants to cover himself against all loss, he must take a second insurance for the amount of the freight and ordinary charges, and if he does this he gets in all cases, except when the gross value tallies exactly with the insured amount of the goods and charges, something more than he actually loses, as is more fully explained in the motives to my draft. It seems to me it were simple and preferable if the insurer were, by one assurance, to place himself in the position of the insured, and to pay, in case of damage, the exact amount the latter loses, so far as he has assured him. The insurer must of course have an increased premium for such an insurance in comparison with present rates, and he would have to exercise greater circumspection in his business; but he would never pay more than the insured loses, and the assurance would then deserve the name of an assurance, that is, it would be an exact indemnification of the insured.

The present practice is also inconsistent in this respect, that instead of the insurer of the freight and charges, it is the insurer of the goods who is liable, if the said freight and charges are increased, when the original ship is disabled, and the goods must be forwarded by another ship, yet the difference between the calculation by the net and the gross values is nothing else than an increase of freight and charges in proportion to the reduced value arising from the deterioration of the goods.

7. (Sect. 69). Insurance of imaginary Profit on Goods.
The laws on this subject vary much, and in some countries imaginary profit cannot be insured at all; there seems, however, to be no good reason why the insurance of imaginary profit should not be permitted, if the insurer is liable only for diminution of profit when the goods are damaged, or for loss of profit when the goods are lost, provided that the insured is bound to show the goods might have been sold at a profit had they arrived at the place of destination after the usual duration of the voyage. By the German law the insurer has, in case the goods are lost, to pay the whole amount of the assured imaginary profit, unless he does show that this amount exceeded the profit that could, according to mercantile notions, have been expected at the time of the contract. It seems to me it were safer for the insurer that the insured should prove by market reports and other documents, that the profit could have been obtained had the ship performed the voyage in the usual time. Mercantile notions at the time of shipment or contract of possible profit are too difficult to contest. The market might also have been high at the time of shipment, and might have declined when the ship should have arrived. The insurer would then, in case the goods were lost, be liable to pay the assured profit, although the goods might have been sold at a loss had they arrived.

8. (Sect. 71). Insurance of bottomry Bonds.
The subject of bottomry bonds deserves the special attention of your association, because the loan is almost always made in one country and repaid in another. There is much diversity in the existing laws, and all of them are open to more or less objections. These are some of the principal points that seem to me to deserve the attention of gentlemen intent on the reform and codification of international laws. It would take up too much time to go into others. It would require the appointment of a special commission to investigate such matters thoroughly, and to make propositions for general adoption. The association for the reform and codification of the law of nations, having members in all parts of the world, seems to me to be eminently fitted to undertake such a task.

THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS.

APPELLATE JURISDICTION ACT 1876.

FORM OF APPEAL, METHOD OF PROCEDURE, AND STANDING ORDERS.

Applicable to all Appeals presented to the House of Lords on and after 1st Nov. 1876.

[Form of Appeal (Standing Order No. I.)] To the Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual and Temporal in Parliament assembled:

The humble petition and appeal of A.

Your petitioner humbly prays that the matter of the order (or orders, or judgment, or interlocutor) set forth in the schedule hereto (a) (or, so far as therein stated to be appealed against) may be reviewed before her Majesty the Queen in her Court of Parliament, and that the said order (or, so far as aforesaid) may be reversed, varied, or altered, or that the petitioner may have such other relief (if specific relief be desired, it can be so stated in the prayer) in the premises as to her Majesty the Queen, in her Court of Parliament, may seem meet: and that (here name the respondents) may be required to lodge such printed cases as they may be advised, and the circumstances of the cause may require, in answer to this appeal; and that service of such order on the solicitors in the cause of the said respondents may be deemed good service.

[Standing Order, No. II. (Certificate of Counsel).] To be signed by two counsel.
(Here insert schedule.)

FORM OF SCHEDULE.

"From Her Majesty's Court of Appeal (England)."

"In a certain cause (or matter) wherein A. was plaintiff and B. was defendant.

"The order appealed from is in the words following, viz. (set forth order complained of), or, the order referred to in the above prayer is in the words following, the portion appealed from being printed in italics (set forth order, the portion complained of being printed in italics)."

We humbly conceive this to be a proper case to be heard before your lordships by way of appeal.

[Standing Order No. II.] To be signed by two counsel.

[Notice to Respondents.] I, clerk to Messrs. , of solicitors for the appellants within named, hereby certify that that on the day of , I served Messrs. , of solicitors for the within named respondents, with a correct copy of the foregoing appeal, and with a notice that on the day of , or as soon after as conveniently may be, the petition of appeal would be presented to the House of Lords on behalf of the appellant. (b)

DIRECTIONS FOR AGENTS.

Method of Procedure.

[Presentation of the Appeal.—Order of Service, see Standing Order No. III.] In accordance with the foregoing notice, the appeal, printed on parchment (quarto size, in such form as will enable paper copies thereof to be hereafter bound up with the printed cases, is to be lodged in the Parliament office for presentation to the House, and (if the House be then sitting, or, if not, on the next ensuing meeting of the House) an order thereon for service on the respondents, or their solicitors, ordering the respondents to lodge cases in answer to the appeal, will be issued to the appellant's agent, such order, together with an affidavit of due service entered thereon, to be returned to the Parliament office within the period granted to the appellant for lodging his printed case under Standing Order No. V.

[Security for Costs.—see Standing Order, No. IV.] Each appellant, where there are more than one, is required to enter into the recognizance. The appellants are required to submit to the Clerk of the Parliaments within one week after the date of the presentation of the appeal (unless the sum of two hundred pounds, as required by the Standing Order, be paid to the Receiver of Fees to the Parliament office for receipt into the fee fund of the House of Lords) (c) the names of the sureties who propose entering into the

(a) The schedule must set out the title of the parties to the cause or matter; and the decrees, orders, judgments, or interlocutors appealed against, and where the appeal is not against the whole decree, the part appealed against must be defined.

(b) Not less than two clear days' notice to be given of the intention to present an appeal.

(c) All drafts and cheques to be made payable to "House of Lords Fee Fund," and to be crossed "Bank of England, Western Branch."

bond; and, in the event of a substitute being proposed to enter into the recognizance in lieu of the appellants, the name of such substitute. Two clear days' previous notice of the names so proposed (for bond and recognizance) is to be given to the solicitor or agent of the respondents, and at the time of submitting the said names to the Clerk of the Parliaments a certificate from the solicitor or agent of the appellants is to be lodged in the Parliament office, certifying his belief in the sufficiency of the sureties and substitutes so proposed. At the termination of one week from the lodgment of such certificate, the bond and recognizance are to be issued to the solicitor or agent of the appellants for execution before a commissioner appointed to administer oaths in the Supreme Court of Judicature in England, or a commissioner appointed to administer oaths in Chancery in Ireland, or before a justice of the peace in Scotland. The bond and the recognizance (whether entered into by the appellants or by a substitute) are to be returned to the Parliament office within one week from the date of the issue thereof to the solicitor or agent of the appellants.

The solicitors of those respondents who purpose lodging printed cases in answer to the appeal should attend at the Parliament office for the purpose of ascertaining the due execution of the recognizance and bond, and entering their names in the appearance book. (Notice of the meeting of the appeal committee is only sent to the solicitors of respondents who have thus signified their appearance in the cause.)

[Printed Cases and Appendix, and "setting down" Cause for Hearing—see Standing Order No. V.] In English appeals six weeks' time, and in Irish and Scotch appeals eight weeks' time, from the date of the presentation of the appeal, is granted to all parties to lodge printed cases and the appendices thereto. (a)

In appeals in which the parties are able to agree in their statement of the subject-matter, it is optional to lodge a joint case with reasons pro and con, following the practice heretofore in use in common law appeals on a special case.

[Appendix.] It is obligatory on the appellant, within the respective periods so limited as above, to lodge his printed cases, or the joint case before mentioned, and a printed appendix consisting of such documents, or parts thereof, used in evidence in the court below, as may be necessary for reference on the argument of the appeal.

It is the duty of the appellant, with as little delay as possible after the presentation of the appeal, to furnish to the respondent a list of the proposed documents, and in due course a proof copy of the appendix. The proof is to be examined with the original documents by the respective solicitors of the parties. Ten copies of the appendix, as soon as printed, to be delivered to the solicitor of the respondent. The respondent is allowed to print any additional documents, used in evidence in the court below, which may be necessary for the support of his case on the argument of the appeal, such documents to be pagged consecutively with the appendix. (The proof to be examined, as aforesaid, by the respective solicitors, and prints delivered to the solicitor of the appellant.)

The costs incurred in printing the appendix will, in the first instance, be borne by the appellant, and the costs of the additional documents by the respondent, but these costs will ultimately be subject to the decision of the House with regard to the costs of the appeal.

[Signature of Counsel to Case, see Standing Order No. V.] The case and appendix must be printed quarto size, with seven or eight letters in the margin for facilitating reference, and should be submitted in proof to the clerks in the judicial office. Forty copies of the case and appendix are required to be lodged in the Parliament office; and subsequently, on the lodgment of the respondent's case, ten bound copies, (see directions in the appendix hereto, as to binding printed cases.)

Where reference is made to a document printed in the appendix, the case must contain a marginal note of the page of the appendix containing such document.

There is no penalty on respondents who do not lodge their printed cases within the time limited by Standing Order No. V., but the respondents can only appear at the bar on a printed case.

As soon as the printed cases of all parties and the appendix thereto have been lodged, it is optional for either side to set down the cause for hearing, but it is obligatory on the appellant, upon the lodgment of his printed cases and the appendix, to set down the cause for hearing within the time limited by Standing Order No. V. (ex parte as to those respondents who have not already lodged printed cases, upon proof, by affidavit, of the due service of the before-mentioned "order of service" upon the respondents or their solicitors). A respondent who has lodged his

(a) Petitions for extension of time for the presentation of the case, do not prevent the Form of Petition see Appen printed cases is at liberty to set down the cause for hearing on the first sitting day after the expiration of the time limited by the Standing Order for lodging printed cases.

The cause will then be ripe for hearing, and will take its position on the effective cause list.

STANDING ORDERS APPLICABLE TO ALL APPEALS PRESENTED TO THE HOUSE OF LORDS ON OR AFTER THE 1ST DAY ON NOV. 1876.

STANDING ORDER I.

[Time limited for presenting Appeals.] Ordered, that, except where otherwise provided by statute, no petition of appeal be received by this House unless the same be lodged in the Parliament office for presentation to the House within one year from the date of the last decree, order, judgment, or interlocutor appealed from.

[Applicable to all Decrees, &c., pronounced on and after the 1st day of November 1876.] In cases in which the person entitled to appeal be within the age of one and twenty years, or covert, non compos mentis, imprisoned, or out of Great Britain and Ireland, such person may be at liberty to present his appeal to the House, provided that the same be lodged in the Parliament office within one year next after full age, discovery, coming of sound mind, enlargement out of prison, or coming into Great Britain or Ireland. But in no case shall any person or persons be allowed a longer time, on account of mere absence, to present an appeal, than five years from the date of the last decree, order, judgment, or interlocutor appealed against.

STANDING ORDER II.

[Appeals to be signed and certified by counsel.] Ordered, that all petitions of appeal be signed, and the reasonableness thereof certified, by two counsel who shall have attended as counsel in the court below, or shall purpose attending as counsel at the hearing in this House.

STANDING ORDER III.

["Order of service."] Ordered, that the "order of service," issued upon the presentation of an appeal for service on the respondent or his solicitor, be returned to the Parliament office, together with an affidavit of due service entered thereon, within the time limited for the appellant to lodge his printed cases unless within that period all the respondents shall have lodged their printed cases; in default, the appeal to stand dismissed.

STANDING ORDER IV.

[Recognizance.] Ordered, in all appeals that the appellant or appellants do give security to the clerk of the Parliaments by recognizance to be entered into, in person or by substitute, to the Queen of the penalty of five hundred pounds, conditioned to pay to the respondent or respondents all such costs as may be ordered to be paid by the House in the matter of the appeal; and further, that the appellant or appellants do procure two sufficient sureties to the satisfaction of the clerk of the Parliaments, to enter into a joint and several bond to the amount of two hundred pounds, or do pay into the account of the fee fund of the House of Lords the sum of two hundred pounds; such bond, or such sum of two hundred pounds, to be subject to the order of the House with regard to the costs of the appeal: Ordered, that within one week after the presentation of the appeal the appellant or appellants do pay into the account of the fee fund of the House of Lords the said sum of two hundred pounds, or submit to the clerk of the Parliaments the names of the sureties proposed to enter into the said bond; and, in the event of a substitute being proposed to enter into the said recognizance, the name of such substitute; two clear days' previous notice of the names so proposed for bond and recognizance, to be given to the solicitor or agent of the respondent: Ordered, that the said bond and the recognizance (whether entered into by the appellants or by a substitute) be returned to the Parliament office, duly executed, within one week from the date of the issue thereof to the solicitor or agent of the appellant or appellants. On default by the appellant or appellants in complying with the above conditions, the appeal to stand dismissed.

STANDING ORDER V.

1. [Printed cases, time limited for lodging, and for setting down the cause for hearing.] Ordered, that in English appeals the printed cases and the appendix thereto be lodged in the Parliament office within six weeks from the date of the presentation of the appeal to the House; in Scotch and Irish appeals, within eight weeks; and the appeal set down for hearing on the first sitting day after the expiration of those respective periods (or as soon before, at the option of either party, as all the printed cases and the appendix shall have been lodged): on default by the appellant the appeal to stand dismissed.

2. [Scotch appeals.] Ordered, that in all appeals from Scotland the appellant alone, in his printed case or in the appendix thereto, shall lay before this House a printed copy of authenticated by the Lord Ordine with a supplement containing an account argument or statement of other further steps which have been taken since the record was completed, and also copies of the interlocutors or interlocutors complained of: and each party their cases lay before the House a case presented by them respectively of Session, if any such case was pre with a short summary of any addition upon which he means to insist: shall have been no case presented to Session, then each party shall set case the reasons upon which he found ment, as shortly and succinctly as possible.

3. [Printed cases to be signed.] Ordered, that all printed cases be signed more counsel, who shall have attended in the court below, or shall purpose counsel at the hearing in this House.

STANDING ORDER VI.

[Cross appeals.] Ordered, that appeals be presented to the House with allowed by Standing Order No. V cases in the original appeal.

STANDING ORDER VII.

[Expiry of time during recess.] (regard to appeals in which the period dating from the presentation of the Standing Orders Nos. III., IV., V expire during the recess of the House periods be extended to the third sitting next ensuing meeting of the House.)

STANDING ORDER VIII.

[Supplemental cases to be deliv appeals are revived or parties added that where any party or parties to a die pending the same, subsequently cases having been lodged, and the a revived against his or her representatives as the person or persons the place of the person or persons aforesaid, a supplemental case shall the party or parties so reviving the tively, stating the order or orders made by the House in such case.

The like rule shall be observed by and respondent respectively, where persons, party or parties in the court been omitted to be made a party or appeal before this House, and shall the House, upon petition or otherwise as a party or parties to the said the printed cases in such appeal shall lodged.

STANDING ORDER IX.

[Scotch Appeals.—Certificate of le ence of opinion to be signed by counsel.] Ordered, that when any petition of be presented to this House from any judgment of either division of the Session in Scotland, the counsel w the said petition, or two of the co party or parties in the court below, certificate or declaration, stating eith was given by that division of the nouncing such interlocutory judg appellant or appellants to present of appeal, or that there was a differ amongst the judges of the said divis ing such interlocutory judgment.

STANDING ORDER X.

[Taxation of costs.] Ordered, that in which this House shall make a payment of costs by any party or p cause without specifying the amount the Parliaments or Clerk Assistant the application of either party, appo son as he shall think fit to tax such person so appointed may tax and amount thereof, and shall report the Clerk of the Parliaments or Clerk and it is further ordered, that the s be demanded from and paid by the p for such taxation for and in respect now or shall be fixed by any resol House concerning such fees; and th so appointed to tax such costs may, fit, either add or deduct the whole such fees at the foot of his report: of the Parliaments or Clerk Assistant certificate of such costs, expressing so reported to him as aforesaid; an in money certified by him in such be the sum to be demanded and paid virtue of such order as aforesaid fo costs.

APPENDIX A.

(Certificate of Sufficiency of Sur Lodged in the Parliament office on of 18 . In the House of Lords. "A. and others v. B. and oti In compliance with Standing Ord nit the names of (full name) of (address) name) of (address) {as fit and proper } or, as a fit and } to enter into the { bond } thereby required: and I (we) certify in belief, that the said (full name) and the name) {are each } worth upwards of over and above {his } just debts. Certificate may be signed by the country or agent of the appellants. certify that a copy of the above certificate clear days' notice of the intention to same in the Parliament office has been a the solicitors or agents of the respondents signed by the London solicitor or agent pellants.

APPENDIX B.

is for binding printed Cases for the use of the Law Lords. copies bound in purple cloth; two of the interleaved, as regards the cases only. rt title of cause on the back. al on side, stating short title of cause and of the volume, thus:

1— and others v. B— and others." inted copy of the appeal. pellants' case. spondent B.'s case. spondent C.'s case. pendix.

volume to be indented, and the names of es written on the indentations to their s cases.

rences to the reports of the cause in the low, or the words "Not reported," to be n the fly sheet.

bound copies to be lodged immediately respondent's cases are delivered in.

ents are requested to use their discretion size of the volume, arrangement of the d appendix. In dealing with bulky cases, s found advisable to bind the appendix arate volume, and also to divide the ap- and respondents' cases into separate e duty of the appellants' agent to carry directions.

APPENDIX C.

for extension of Time to lodge Cases, &c.) engrossed on foolscap paper, and (unless respondent's agent be obtained) a copy, clear days' notice of intention to present, on to respondent's agent).

House of Lords. (Insert short title of Right Honourable the Lords Spiritual poral in Parliament assembled: umber petition of the appellant h. That your petitioner presented of appeal on the day of com- of (insert dates of orders or interlocutors ed of).

be time allowed by Standing Order No. V. aded by your Lordships' order of the te) for the appellant to lodge his printed i the appendix, will expire on the (state our petitioner (set forth cause of etitioner therefore humbly prays r Lordships will be pleased to grant him a time required) further time to lodge his ases, and the appendix, and set down e for hearing. And your petitioner will Agents for the appellant. sent to the prayer of the above petition. Agents for the respondent.

ASHIRE WINTER ASSIZES, 1876.

for trial at Liverpool can be entered ally at the office of the prothonotary and 13, Harrington-street Liverpool, on and Tuesday, the 4th and 5th Dec., fice hours.

try of causes at Manchester and Liver- ectively will commence at the Assize Manchester, and St. George's Hall, Liver- mediately after the opening of the com- and will close at nine o'clock on the f the commission day.

usiness at Manchester will not be taken nesday, the 28th Nov., at ten o'clock in oon. The court will sit at Liverpool on y, the 7th Dec., at eleven o'clock in the ial of special jury causes will commence uester on Thursday, the 30th Nov., at ten e forenoon, and at Liverpool on Monday, the 11th Dec. at the same hour, unless the court shall otherwise order.

A list of causes for trial at Manchester and Liverpool respectively each day (except the first) will be exhibited in the corridor of the court and in the library. By order of the judges,

T. E. PAGET.

Prothonotary's Office, Liverpool.
16th Nov. 1876.

COURT OF APPEAL, AND HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE (CHANCERY DIVISION).

MICHAELMAS SITTINGS, 1876.

Notes of Registrars in Attendance.

		Court of Appeals.	Master of the Rolls.
Saturday, Nov. 25	.....	Leach	Latham
Monday	.....	Merivale	King
Tuesday	.....	Latham	Farrer
Wednesday	.....	Milne	King
Thursday	.....	Latham	Farrer
Friday	.....	Merivale	Farrer
Saturday	.....	Milne	King
Saturday, Nov. 25	.....	V.C. Malins.	V.C. Bacon.
Monday	.....	Holdship	Ward
Tuesday	.....	Teesdale	Clowes
Wednesday	.....	Holdship	Leach
Thursday	.....	Teesdale	Clowes
Friday	.....	Holdship	Leach
Saturday	.....	Teesdale	Clowes

		V.C. Hall.	Certificates of Sale and Transfer.
Saturday, Nov. 25	.....	Holdship	Farrer
Monday	.....	Ward	Teesdale
Tuesday	.....	Pemberton	Holdship
Wednesday	.....	Ward	Farrer
Thursday	.....	Pemberton	Merivale
Friday	.....	Ward	Milne
Saturday	.....	Pemberton	Latham

The Christmas Vacation will commence on Dec. 24, and terminate on Jan. 6, both days inclusive.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES is contributed by EDWARD WALTON, M.A., and late scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, and Fellow of the Genealogical and Historical Society of Great Britain; and, as it is desired to make it as perfect a record as possible, the families and friends of deceased members of the Profession will oblige by forwarding to the LAW TIMES Office any dates and materials required for a biographical notice.

SIR W. EMERSON-TENNENT, BART.

THE late Sir William W. Emerson-Tennent, Bart., barrister-at-law, of Tempo Manor, in the county of Fermanagh, who died on the 15th inst., in the forty-second year of his age, was the only son of the late Sir James Emerson-Tennent, Bart., of Tempo Manor, who was formerly secretary to the India Board, subsequently secretary to the Colonial Government of Ceylon, and afterwards secretary to the Poor Law Board and to the Board of Trade; his mother was Letitia, daughter of William Tennent, Esq., of Tempo Manor (whose name his father assumed by royal licence), and he was born in the year 1835. He was educated at Rugby, and was called to the Bar by the honourable society of the Inner Temple in Hilary Term 1859, but did not care to practise. He succeeded to the title as second baronet on the death of his father in 1869. Sir William Emerson-Tennent was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for county Fermanagh, for which he served as high sheriff in 1873. He married, in 1870, Sarah, third daughter of Thomas Armstrong, Esq., of Eden Hall, county Armagh, by whom he has left two daughters. The baronetcy, which was created in 1867, is presumed to have become extinct.

F. F. PINDER, ESQ.

THE late Francis Ford Pinder, Esq., barrister-at-law, of Brookfield, Bath, Somerset, who died at 129, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, on the 3rd inst., in the fifty-fourth year of his age, was the eldest son of the late William Maynard Pinder, Esq., of Brookfield, by Anne, fifth daughter of Edward Applewhite, Esq., barrister-at-law. He was born at Hotterhall, in the Island of Barbados, in the year 1822, and was educated at Winchester, under Dr. Moberly. He proceeded to Trinity College, Cambridge, as a pupil to the Rev. T. G. Kennedy, who had a high opinion of his classical scholarship. Having graduated in 1844, he at once became a student of the Inner Temple, and was called to the Bar in Michaelmas Term, 1857. Entering on the profession of law without interest, with little ambition, and a singular diffidence of his high abilities, he gradually won his way by clearness of head, untiring industry, soundness of legal knowledge, and conscientious discharge of all business, to a very high position as a junior on the Western Circuit. He held for some years the office of revising barrister, which he relinquished on being appointed by Lord Coleridge counsel to the Inland Revenue. He was on the eve of taking silk on the promotion of Mr. Lopes to the Bench, when he was out off in the midst of a successful and widening career, beloved by the few who knew him well, esteemed by all who possessed in any degree his acquaintance. The remains of the deceased gentleman were interred in the cemetery, at Weston, near Bath.

THE GAZETTES.

Professional Partnerships Dissolved.

Gazette, Nov. 10.

GRESHAM, WILLIAM, and GRESHAM, THOMAS, solicitors and attorneys, Bevington-st. Oct. 30
HANDLEY, SAM. WALKDEN, solicitors and conveyancers, Mansfield (John James Handley and George Walkden). Deceased by Handley. Jan. 1

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Nov. 17.

To surrender at the Bankruptcy Court, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
BAYLIS, CHARLES, solicitor, Poultry. Pet. Nov. 14. Reg. Har. 11th. Sols. Minet Smith, Son, and Co., New Broad-st. Sur. Nov. 29
FRENCH, THOMAS, boot and shoe manufacturer, Barnet-grove, Betham-green-rd. Pet. Nov. 16. Reg. Popsy. Sol. Montague, Bucklersbury. Sur. Dec. 6
MAIDSTONE, VISCOUNT, Victoria-st. Westminster. Pet. Nov. 15. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sols. Dod and Co., Brompton-st. Oxford-st. Sur. Nov. 28
PHILLIPS, JOHN, forwarding agent, St. Mary-at-Hill, and Chiswell-st. Pet. Nov. 15. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sol. Curtis, King-st. Cheapside. Sur. Nov. 28
PRESTON, CHARLES, solicitor, East India-avenue, Leadenhall-st. Pet. Nov. 16. Reg. Popsy. Sur. Dec. 6
BERRY, HENRY, jun., grocer and tea dealer, Holloway-rd. Pet. Nov. 15. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sol. Sharman, Little Tower-st. Sur. Nov. 28
To surrender in the County.
BOWEN, JOHN BEANLAND, timber merchant, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 14. Reg. Robinson. Sur. Dec. 1
CLAYTON, THOMAS WATERHOUSE, farmer, Cornborough. Pet. Nov. 6. Reg. Woodall. Sur. Nov. 29
DEACON, MATTHEW, grocer and provision dealer, Brandon. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Marshall. Sur. Nov. 28
DUNN, FREDERICK WILLIAM CONSTANTINE, commission agent, Eastbourne. Pet. Nov. 13. Reg. Blaker. Sur. Dec. 1
FULLER, CHARLES, grocer and provision dealer, Askam-in-Furness. Pet. Nov. 14. Reg. Postlethwaite. Sur. Dec. 1
GRAY, EDWARD, innkeeper, Cambridge. Pet. Nov. 15. Reg. Eades. Sur. Nov. 29
GOODFELLOW, WILLIAM RICHARD, surgeon and apothecary, Roche. Pet. Nov. 14. Reg. Chilcott. Sur. Nov. 29
POCHIN, GEORGE, wheelwright, Cosby. Pet. Nov. 15. Reg. Ingram. Sur. Nov. 28
TUTMAN, ALFRED, jeweller and boot rivet manufacturer, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 1. Reg. Parry. Sur. Nov. 30

Gazette, Nov. 21.

To surrender at the Bankruptcy Court, Lincoln's-inn-fields.
WRIGHT, A. D., Union-st. Old Broad-st. Pet. Nov. 17. Reg. Keene. Sur. Dec. 4
To surrender in the County.
CHURCH, WILLIAM, silk mercer, Nantwich. Pet. Nov. 15. Dep. Reg. Speakman. Sur. Dec. 7
COTTERILL, GEORGE THOMAS, waterman pilot, Milton-next-Gravesend. Pet. Nov. 16. Reg. Hayward. Sur. Dec. 11
HINDS, JOHN, coal merchant, West Cross, near Swansea. Pet. Nov. 16. Reg. Jones. Sur. Dec. 2
HORNE, FREDERICK, straw hat and bonnet manufacturer, Luton. Pet. Nov. 16. Reg. Cooke. Sur. Dec. 2
JACKSON, WILLIAM, carpenter, Walsall. Pet. Nov. 16. Reg. Clarke. Sur. Dec. 4
JOHN, ERNEST, late an officer in Her Majesty's army, Bishopstoke. Pet. Nov. 15. Reg. Godwin. Sur. Dec. 4
MORGAN, JOHN, master mariner, Penclawdd. Pet. July 28. Reg. Jones. Sur. Dec. 2 RIGHT, JAMES, chemist, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 17. Reg. Bellringer. Sur. Dec. 4
SWETE, HENRY JOHN BEAUMONT, gentleman, Babblecombe. Pet. Nov. 16. Reg. Daw. Sur. Dec. 7
THORN, RICHARD, draper, Plymouth. Pet. Nov. 16. Reg. Edmonds. Sur. Dec. 2

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Nov. 17.

BABBAGE, SAMUEL WILLIAM, butcher, Canterbury-cottages, Lower-rd. Islington. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 1, at two, at offices of Sol. Attenborough, St. Paul's-churchyard
BARNARD, FULKE LANCELOT WADE, accountant, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 28, at two, at offices of Sols. Fassel, Pritchard, and Swann, Bristol
BARROW, ROBERT WILLIAM, carpenter, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 15. Nov. 25, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Essery, Bristol
BENSON, WILLIAM WILKINSON, tobacconist, Newington, par. Kireella. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 24, at three, at offices of T. Brown, accountant, Chancery-lodge, Manor-cd. Hall. Sol. Jackson
BINGHAM, GEORGE JOHN, dyer, Dryolsden. Pet. Nov. 15. Dec. 1, at three, at office of Sol. Law, Manchester
BRADFORD, HENRY, builder, Cannock. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 29, at two, at office of Sol. Gover, Walsall
BROWN, GEORGE JOHN, timber merchant, Blackburn. Pet. Nov. 14. Nov. 30, at two, at offices of Sol. Hall, Blackburn
BURROWS, ROBERT HARWOOD, auctioneer, Loughborough. Pet. Nov. 15. Nov. 29, at twelve, at the King's Head hotel, Loughborough. Sol. G. G. Lowe, Loughborough
CLARK, JOSEPH, pawnbroker, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 29, at twelve, at offices of Sols. Newstead and Wilson, Leeds
CLARKSON, CHARLES, grocer, Pendlebury. Pet. Nov. 14. Dec. 4, at three, at offices of Sol. Horner, Manchester
COLLET, JOSEPH, butcher, Burdett-rd. Mile End. Pet. Nov. 14. Nov. 30, at three, at offices of Sol. Freeman, Bedford-row
COWHAM, JOSEPH HENRY, flour dealer, Wolverhampton. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 30, at eleven, at offices of Sols. Stratton and Redland, Wolverhampton
CRABTREE, MARY, china dealer, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 30, at half-past three, at office of Sol. Nell, Bradford
CROOK, GEORGE, gardener, Margam. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 5, at three, at offices of Sols. Tennant and Jones, Aberavon
DEAKIN, DAVID PROWETT, lithographer, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 29, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Fallows, Birmingham
DEWS, PHILIP, woollen manufacturer, Horbury and Dewsbury. Pet. Nov. 15. Nov. 30, at three, at offices of Sol. Barton, Wakefield
DICKINSON, FREDERICK, common brewer, Selby. Pet. Nov. 11. Dec. 4, at twelve, at the Lonsdale-borough Arms hotel, Selby. Sols. Weddall and Parker, Selby
DYKE, JAMES HENRY, jeweller, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 11. Nov. 28, at three, at offices of Sol. Beaton, Birmingham
EATON, GEORGE, farmer, Danish-Booth Farm, near Rochdale. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 29, at three, at the King's Arms hotel, York-shire-st. Oldham. Sol. Ashworth, Rochdale
EDDERSHAW, FRANCIS CLEMENT, bookseller, Swansea. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 27, at three, at offices of Sols. Smith, Lewis, and Jones, Swansea
FOSTER, WILLIAM JAMES, merchant's clerk, Woodford. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 30, at ten, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Fisher Leicester-sq
GALES, WILLIAM HENRY, sailmaker, Emmott-st. Poplar. Pet. Nov. 13. Dec. 4, at two, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Hilbery Cratched-friars
GOODMAN, THOMAS, bootseller, Landport. Pet. Nov. 14. Nov. 30, at half-past two, at the Chamber of Commerce, 145, Cheapside, London. Sol. King, Portsea
GOTTLIFFE, ISAAC, sailor, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 15. Nov. 30, at three, at offices of Sol. Billington, Leeds
GREENWOOD, BENJAMIN, woollapier, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 14. Nov. 28, at three, at offices of Sol. Rawson, George, and Wade, Bradford
GRIFFIN, JOSEPH, greengrocer, Birkenhead. Pet. Nov. 14. Nov. 30, at two, at offices of Thompson and Stumm, accountants, Birkenhead
GUNDY, EDWARD, late licensed victualler, Southampton. Pet. Nov. 13. Nov. 30, at two, at office of Sol. Kilby, Southampton
HALL, DAVID, gardener, Alma-lodge, Alma-rd, Bournemouth. Pet. Nov. 3. Nov. 25, at three, at 10, Bangor-ter, Langdale-rd. Peckham
HALLIDAY, JOHN, general dealer Scarborough. Pet. Nov. 10. Nov. 27, at ten, at 20, Manor row, Bradford
HARRISON, JOHN, saddler, Macleodfield. Pet. Nov. 14. Nov. 30, at seven, at offices of Sols. Messrs. Bannock, Bannock

[illegible]

To Readers and Correspondents.

certainly not.

on our space necessitates our holding over much matter till our next as communications are invariably rejected.

unications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer nearby for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

unications intended for the EDITOR (SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT) should dressed.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

THE COMMERCIAL ASSURANCE

re policy—Construction—Lotion of policy ..... 445

OF BANKRUPTCY.

f. f. a.—Seizure under—Liquidation—Injunction—Sale with of—Contempt of court ..... 489

IN CASES RESERVED.

ENFAM—
Bailor—BUI of exchange—
dent conversion—24 & 25 Vict.
3 ..... 490

ERICAN REPORTS.

insurance—Lien for premiums
ed States law ..... 492

THE COURT OF JUDICA- TURE.

F APPEAL, LINCOLN'S INN.
TAYLOR—states—Lease—Tenant for life sinderman and trustee—Con-ce ..... 450

RADDOCK—
Pleading—Scandalous and ant matters—Striking out ent of claim ..... 453

LLOYD—
Law Amendment Act (15 & 16
83), s. 41—Patent suit—Partiof objections—Insufficiency ..... 454

THE GOVERNOR AND GOVERN-
NEW ZEALAND—
Service of writ—Substituted —Action against Colonial Gov-—Rules of Court 1875, Order
2 ..... 454

ROBINSON—
Expiration of foreign patent—h letters patent dated pre-to, but sealed after the exa ..... 457

ET OF JUSTICE—CHANCERY DIVISION.

ORLAND—
in duty—Reversionary charge section Duty Act (16 & 17 Vict.
..... 458

PIERCY—
—Number of legatees—Mistake ber—Evidence as to identity ..... 461

SOPWITE—
y trustees—Covenant for re-at a like rent—Specific perce ..... 463

MORTGAGE—
e mortgage—Mortgaged pro-ken by corporation—Payment share-money into court ..... 465

RD (an infant)—
infant's property—1 Will, 4, c.
7—Infant entitled subject to er's tenancy by the curtesy—ction of the court ..... 468

v. BASHAM—ton—Bankruptcy or Chancery Vict. c. 70—Application to re-ced or to charge trustees with neglect or default ..... 467

RE—
r—Intended litigation—Liaof third parties to give dis-
..... 468

EN'S BENCH DIVISION.

EDMAN AND HOLT—hip—Joint debtors—Arrange-between partners—Disolution lity ..... 470

LD v. LONDON, BRIGHTON,
THE COAST RAILWAY COM-

release—Fraudulent misrepre—Invalidation of deed ..... 473

DEVONSHIRE v. HERMITAGE SPANY (LIMITED)— iron mines—Deduction from re—Reservation in lease—Lia-f lessor ..... 474

MON PLEAS DIVISION.

SE MANCHESTER CARRIAGE
(LIMITED)— lights—Sale of adjacent land—
f purchaser to build ..... 476

EXCHEQUER DIVISION.

MURPHY v. PHILLIPS—
Master and servant—Defective machinery—Accident to servant arising from—Master's duty to examine machinery—Liability of master ..... 477

HOLDER AND WIFE v. KING—
Assault—Action for aggravated assault on woman—Conviction before justices of same assault in form of common assault ..... 479

DIVISIONAL COURT FOR APPEALS FROM
INFERIOR COURTS.

THE WAKEFIELD LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH (appeal) v. LEE AND ANOTHER (repleas)—
Public Health Act 1848 (11 & 12 Vict. c.
63), s. 68—Premises "fronting, adjoining, or abutting upon" street ..... 481

COUSINS v. LOMBARD DEPOSIT BANK
(LIMITED)— Jurisdiction of court—Appeal from County Court—Motion against evidence—Motion against evidence—35
& 36 Vict. c. 50, s. 6 ..... 484

MUSSETT v. BURCH—
Justices' jurisdiction—Breach of claim of right—Navigable non-tidal river—
Public right of fishing ..... 486

SCOTT v. LEGG—
Covering in new building without party wall—Addition to old building ..... 487

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS ..... 73

LEADING ARTICLES—
Topics of the Week ..... 73

The Repair of Highways ..... 74

Trial by Jury in the Chancery Division ..... 75

Is a Broker or Factor a Trustee of his Client's Money ..... 76

The New Rules of Court ..... 78

Agent—Liability of Agent for Negligence ..... 77

SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT

(Edited by a Solicitor).

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL—
Topics of the Week ..... 77

Notes of New Decisions ..... 79

Courts of Appeal, Westminster ..... 79

High Court of Justice—Exchequer Division ..... 79

Appointments under the Joint-Stock
Winding-up Acts ..... 80

Creditors under Estates in Chancery ..... 80

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 ..... 80

Reports of Sales ..... 80

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL—
Topics of the Week ..... 80

Bradford Law Students' Society ..... 80

Brighton and Sussex Law Students'
Society ..... 81

Dublin Law Students' Debating Society ..... 81

Hull Law Students' Society ..... 82

Law Students' Debating Society ..... 82

Liverpool Law Students' Association ..... 82

Manchester Law Students' Debating
Society ..... 82

Plymouth, Stonehouse, and Devonport
Law Students' Society ..... 82

United Law Students' Society ..... 82

Queries ..... 82

MAGISTRATES' LAW—
The Divided Fines and Poor Law
Amendment Act 1875 ..... 82

Licensing Acts—Brewster Sessions ..... 82

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING—
Notes of New Decisions ..... 83

LEGAL NEWS ..... 83

BANKRUPTCY LAW—
Notes of New Decisions ..... 84

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY ..... 84

COUNTY COURTS—
Birmingham County Court ..... 84

Oldbury County Court ..... 84

Weston-super-Mare County Court ..... 84

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION ..... 85

NOTES AND QUERIES ..... 85

LAW SOCIETIES—
Legal Practitioners' Society ..... 85

Leeds Incorporated Law Society ..... 87

THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS—
Rules of the Supreme Court ..... 88

December Sittings of the Supreme Court of Judicature ..... 88

Registrars for the ensuing Week ..... 89

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS ..... 89

THE GAZETTE ..... 89

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS ..... 90

Court Judge on a question of fact on the ground that it was against the weight of the evidence. The Court said that, as of old, appeals must be confined to matters of law.

OWNERS of property in the metropolis will do well to take note of the important case of Scott v. Legg (35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 487), which we report this week. The question arose upon the construction of ss. 9, 27, and 28 of the Metropolitan Building Act 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 122). By the 27th section any warehouse containing more than 216,000 cubic feet must be divided by party walls, in such manner that no part contains a greater cubic measurement.
By the 9th section any addition to an old building is, to the extent of such addition, to be subject to the regulations of the Act, which, according to the usual practice of legislation in dealing with vested interests, does not apply to "old buildings." By the 28th section it is provided that no buildings shall be united if when so united they shall be in contravention of the Act. The appellant having an old building, containing more than 216,000 cubic feet, added a new building to it, containing less than 216,000 feet, without any party walls between them. The court, in a written judgment, pronounced the statute applied to the case. The decision appears to be not only correct in principle, but also to be borne out by the earlier authority of Ashby v. Woodthorp (33 L. J.
68, M. C.); but looking to the importance of it, we are glad to observe that leave was given to appeal.

THE World newspaper is unable to understand why Mr. LEWIS, having failed to make absolute his rule for a criminal information, was nevertheless relieved by the court from the payment of costs.
Our contemporary, considers that by the order to pay its own costs it is punished by the court for having sinned against what the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE called good taste in journalism.
If the writer of this complaint knew a little more of legal procedure he would be aware that in the Chancery Division actions are from time to time dismissed without costs because there is some equity in the case which would make it unjust that the defendant should recover costs against the plaintiff. That is to say, although the plaintiff cannot get relief which he seeks by legal proceedings, there are circumstances disentitling the defendant to reap all the fruit of a successful resistance. Every one of such defendants, and they have been many, would be entitled to complain in the same way as the World, but fortunately they have not in their hands so ready a means of making themselves heard. We shall probably find that the course so often taken hitherto in Lincoln's Inn will, under the new procedure, be as frequently adopted at Westminster; and when the Legislature sees fit to arm judges with discretionary power over the costs of proceedings in their courts, it is idle for persons involved to complain that the power is exercised. A criminal information for libel is, of all others, a case in which the court will look very closely into the conduct of a newspaper in determining whether a successful resistance should carry with it the costs incurred. The course taken by the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE was thoroughly within ancient precedent, and, in our opinion, was a very proper exercise of judicial discretion.

It will take a considerable time to completely settle the meaning of the 19th section of the Judicature Act, and its effect upon the right of appeal in criminal cases, notwithstanding the plain direction of the 47th section of the same Act that "no appeal shall lie to the Court of Appeal in any criminal cause or matter." In Reg. v. Steel (not yet reported) it was decided that no appeal lies in a criminal information. But in the judgments in that case the court did not define the meaning of the expression "criminal cause or matter;"
and in Reg. v. Fletcher, decided 24th Nov., what the Times calls "another attempt to establish an appeal in Crown cases" was made with respect to a summary conviction removed by certiorari.
It was urged for the defendant that the case was practically a civil one, although the Crown was prosecutor, and the supposed analogy of quo warranto, in which an appeal had already been entertained, in Reg. v. Collins (not yet reported) was much pressed. But the court was unanimous in rejecting the appeal.
Lord Justice MELLISH seems rather to have rested his judgment on the policy of criminal appeal than on the words of the statute.
"The effect of establishing an appeal in such cases," observed that learned judge, "will be an enormous increase of litigation. I should be very sorry if an appeal in such cases lay to this court, for if it does it would lie to the House of Lords; and if it would lie for the party when he has been convicted, it would lie equally for the prosecution if he is acquitted." The other two judges (BRETT and AMPLETT, J.J.A.), appear to have rested their judgments more upon the plain words of the statute, although they both concurred in the opinion of Lord Justice MELLISH as to the policy of the law. We see no reason to question the correctness of the decision, which is a very important one. But it is desirable to call attention to the fact that the extent of the appeal given by the 19th section of the Judicature Act is not quite settled by the judgment. "The view we take," observed Lord Justice MELLISH, "does not exclude appeals in all Crown Cases, for some Crown Cases are of a civil character."

The Law and the Lawyers.

on Our Judicial System, from the pen of Mr. FINLASON, press, and may be expected in a few days. We believe it in an exhaustive manner and a critical spirit with recent n and the working of our judicial machinery.

isional Court of Appeal has decided that the County ct of 1875 gives no new right of appeal. This decision ted by an attempt to reverse the finding of a County
LXII.—No. 1757.

A list of all Crown cases of a civil character would be very acceptable. Prohibition and mandamus would doubtless come within that list, though looking to the piecemeal manner in which the 19th section is construed, perhaps even these points may be contested, and furnish work for law reporters. But what of habeas corpus? Of all cases this is the most important. But Lord Justice MELLISH observes in Reg. v. Fletcher, "On an application for a writ of habeas corpus, it is the privilege of the subject to apply to every court in Westminster Hall in succession, because it involves personal liberty; but could the applicant also appeal to this court and the House of Lords on each refusal of an application?" The question is asked as if the answer "No" were expected; but, with all deference to Lord Justice MELLISH, we ourselves should rather be inclined to answer "Yes."

We are glad to see that the remarks upon the judgment of the Chief Judge in Ex parte Caldecott, re Moplebank (35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 172), which appeared recently in an article in the LAW TIMES (Oct. 14, p. 393), are supported by the judgment of the Court of Appeal, delivered on Thursday last. In this case it will be recollected that a trader, being indebted at the time to one of his creditors in the amount of £100, forged that creditor's name to a bill for another £100 for the purpose of meeting a debt. Having done so, and being unable to meet the bill when it became due, he told the creditor whose name he had forged what he had done, and at the same time offered to give a bill of sale over his property, provided the creditor would furnish money to meet the bill. The creditor did so, and the security was given. The CHIEF JUDGE upset the decision of the County Court Judge before whom the case originally came, and declared that the bill of sale under the circumstances was given in consideration of the compounding of a felony. "I thought," observed the CHIEF JUDGE, "it was the duty of every citizen of these realms, if a crime were committed against him, to prosecute the offender. This is a prima facie duty. I thought it was unlawful for him to sell that duty, or make any bargain about it. In this case it has been most abundantly established that that has been done, and I repeat that to sell that duty is unlawful, and an offence against public policy." In dealing with these observations of his Lordship, we ventured to submit that not one of the authorities quoted in the arguments or judgment was conclusive upon the question raised; that in Ex parte Caldecott there was no evidence of a compounding of a felony. The Court of Appeal has so decided; the order of the CHIEF JUDGE was discharged with costs. We have before us merely a brief note of the judgment of that court. When the judgment is fully reported it cannot fail to afford a useful illustration of this branch of law.

In the European Assurance Arbitration Mr. REILLY has decided a question of novation, where the policyholder has done nothing more than pay his premiums to the transferee company, and accept that company's receipts. Usually the question has been more or less affected by something extraneous, as, for example, by a circular informing the policyholder of the amalgamation, and holding out inducements to him to accept the arrangement. But it has now been determined in Barton's case that the mere payment of premiums and acceptance of receipts do not of themselves constitute a novation. When this question comes on before the Court of Appeal an opportunity will be afforded for the enunciation of the principles on which the doctrine of novation should be founded. In the same case the arbitrator laid down the distinction between an "amalgamation" and the transfer of a business by one company to another. To make an arrangement amount to an amalgamation there must be, he thought, some dealing with the share capital—at the very least the admission, or intended or proffered admission, of members of the one company into membership of the other company. In the case of the arrangement between the British Nation Association and the European Assurance Society, there was an intended or proffered admission of all the shareholders of the former company into membership of the latter. Moreover, both companies had treated the arrangement as an amalgamation. It seemed, therefore, to Mr. REILLY that there had been an effectual amalgamation of the two companies in accordance with the British Nation's deed of settlement. This amalgamation, however, did not defeat Mr. BARTON'S claim against his original company, the British Nation; for there had been no formal or attempted dissolution of the British Nation, and the amalgamation did not of itself effect a dissolution. The policyholder, consequently, is still able to claim against the unpaid share capital of the British Nation.

THE views adopted by the House of Lords in the much-discussed case of Butcher v. Stead, were referred to a few days ago in a case before the Court of Appeal (Ex parte Tate) as an authority in determining another question in the law of fraudulent preference, which brings out more clearly the position of trustees as opposed to those of favoured creditors. A miller, continuing business, became bankrupt on 8th May 1875. He had previously he and his father had been appoin maternal uncle, and a sum of 1918*l.* Consols was transferred to their names. The mother of the bankrupt was entitled to income from this fund for her life. During the years 1871-1873 the trustees sold out the whole of the funds with the knowledge of the mother. Of the proceeds the bankrupt received 1415*l.* Consols for his own benefit. He was pressed by his creditors in April 1875, writs were issued against him, and his solicitor demanded the immediate replacement of the 1415*l.* Consols, and threatened to file a bill in Chancery. These demands were made on the 28th April, and subsequently, on the 6th May, the bankrupt invested 400*l.* in the purchase of Consols in the name of the trustees under the will. Was this transaction within the protection of the proviso at the end of sect. 92 of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, which avoids every conveyance or transfer of property except in the case of purchasers, payees, or transferees in good faith, and for valuable consideration? In other words, was the transaction a fraudulent preference? Under the law previous to the Bankruptcy Act 1869, to make out a fraudulent preference required two proofs; first, that the debtor's act was voluntary; and, secondly, that it was done in contemplation of bankruptcy. Under the Act of 1869, however, the proofs required are, first, that the act should be done by a debtor who was unable to pay his debts as they become due; and, secondly, that it should be done with the view of giving one creditor a preference over other creditors. The County Court Judge at Bristol thought that the transaction could not be impeached. His decision, however, was overruled by the Court of Appeal on the ground that the pressure was not bona fide, and the Court of Appeal has affirmed his judgment. In Stead v. Stead decided that a creditor who receives money by way of fraudulent preference, but in good faith, cannot be compelled to repay the money so received to the trustee. "I think," said Lord Cairns in that case, "it was the intention of the Legislature, in defining, for the first time, the law as to fraudulent preference, and changing the old rule as to contemplation of bankruptcy, to lay a rule which exposed the payment to be impeached for a period so long as three months, to accompany and temper this enactment by a provision of great convenience in mercantile dealings." It was also intended, in the opinion of his Lordship, to give a protection where a protection was otherwise required, namely, to those who in good faith take money ought to be paid to them, without notice that the person paying is doing anything injurious to his other creditors. The Court of Appeal decided that the receiver of the money so advanced had shown that he took it in good faith, and without notice that the person paying it was doing anything injurious to his other creditors. The onus probandi is on the recipient. "The debtor," said Sir G. BRAMWELL, "parted with what was substantially the whole of his property to pay an antecedent debt, and the evidence showed that this was done with the knowledge of his father and mother. He did that which was prohibited by the law with the knowledge of the person who received the money." Inasmuch as the evidence went to show that the co-trustee was aware of the debtor's insolvency, the case was clearly not governed by the decision in Butcher v. Stead. The objections which have been made to the latter decision on the ground that it enables a debtor to favour one creditor at the expense of the others, would have had much more force if the appeal in Ex parte Tate had been successful. It may now be taken for granted that the court will not extend the protection given by the 92nd section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, to a case in which the claimant as against a trustee cannot show that he acted in good faith and without knowledge of the debtor's insolvent circumstances.

THE REPAIR OF HIGHWAYS.

THERE is no subject of greater interest or importance in country districts than that which is connected with the government of highways. Difficult questions from time to time arise as to whether a particular road is or is not a highway, or as to the ownership of the soil in a highway under certain circumstances, and lastly as to the liability to repair a highway. On this latter point the case of R. v. The Inhabitants of Greenhow, recently decided by the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court, and reported in us (35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 363), is of very considerable importance.

It is now thoroughly well settled that of common right, that is to say, by the common law of England, the general charge of repairing a highway within a parish lies on the occupiers of land therein. But though this is the general law, the common law liability, which prima facie attaches to parishioners, has not frequently been laid on particular individuals, either by prescription or in respect of an inclosure, and has been greatly modified by statute so far as regards roads constructed by private individuals. Where, however, the liability to repair exists, complex questions not unfrequently arise as to the extent of the obligation, or in other words, as to what is included in the repair of a highway. This was the important point raised in R. v. The Inhabitants of Greenhow. The facts were shortly as follows: An indictment was preferred against the parish of Greenhow, in the North Riding of the county of York, for the non-repair of a highway in ownship. The highway in question was an ordinary metalled a portion of which ran along the slope of a hill, al hundred feet above the level of the valley beneath, the being a very precipitous one. A great landslip occurred on ope of the hill, comprising many acres of land, and extend- from the top of the slope to about 170 yards below the high-

The result was that a very considerable portion of the road bsolutely destroyed, that is to say, was carried away into alley below, and its place supplied and filled up with earth, s, and other débris of landslip. The débris, consisting of soil, stones, and shale, varied in depth, and occupied the line old highway. In fact, no trace of the old metalled road red, though its line could still be distinguished. The case riginally tried at the York Assizes, before Sir R. Amphlett, y his direction an engineer was appointed to view the locus o. The engineer reported that the old road had been carried and overlaid by a landslip to an extent of 252 yards or abouts, and to that extent was absolutely destroyed; but a permanent and passable road along the old track could be id for three hundred pounds odd. On this report a case was l for the opinion of the Judges of the Queen's Bench Divi- which raised the question whether, under the circumstances, existed a legal duty or obligation upon the parish to make maintain an available carriage road in the line of the old precise point involved had never before arisen, though nly the authorities appeared at first blush to be in favour of fendants, and have undoubtedly been acted upon in some ces, where, as it now turns out, they had in reality no appli- . In one of these (E. v. the Inhabitants of Paul, 2 Moo. & R. he road passed over the top of a sea wall, which was washed by the sea. There Manle, J., is reported to have said, "The uption of the passage is not from the want of repair, but the sea having washed away the wall or embankment, and is no longer anything to repair. The parish cannot be to rebuild the wall." A similar decision was arrived at years later in E. v. Bamber (13 L. J. 13, M. C.), where a n of a highway was swept clean away by the encroachment a sea; for there, as Lord Denman, C. J., pointed out, "all aterials of which a road could be made, had been swept by the act of God." The last case, however, on the subject, he one whose features most closely resembled the one under ssion, is E. v. the Inhabitants of Hornsea (23 L. J. 59 M. C.) a public highway originally ran down to the sea at right s to the shore, the land gently sloping towards the water's

For many years past the sea had been making encroach- s on that part of the coast, sometimes sweeping away as as five yards of the cliff in a year, and on one occasion siderable portion of the road was swept away, so that was left a cliff, twenty feet above the beach, running to the and then terminating abruptly. The natural consequence of was that it was impossible for any carriage or cart to get to the beach, and the question raised was whether, under ircumstances, the parish was bound to afford proper means of unication. The court, we think very properly, held that they not. A little consideration will show that the kind of lia- contemplated by the common law, was repairs which could one by the farmers and their labourers, and it could never been intended to extend the liability to roads which have destroyed by the encroachments of the sea. Moreover, the achments would, in the nature of things, continue every and the road could not have been made permanently passable out considerable engineering work, involving a large outlay penditure, which it would be altogether unreasonable to bind ish to execute.

ow, it is obvious on examination that the state of things which occurred at Greenhow is not identical with the case of roads, inating abruptly by reason of a portion thereof being carried into the sea. Still, the great difficulty consists in drawing line between what constitutes repairing a road as distin- hed from making a new one. The former the inhabitants of rish can be compelled to do; the latter they cannot. If the way had terminated abruptly by reason of the landslip ng carried away one end of it, there would have been great ulty in seeing by what process of law a parish would be d to make good the damage that had been done. But at hnow, though in one sense an intermediate part of the high- had been absolutely destroyed, according to the report of the neer; that is to say, the metalled part of the road had been ed away, still there was the old line or track still remaining. e had in reality been only a partial destruction as distin- hed from an entire destruction. It was found also that the age done could be effectually and lastingly repaired at a erate cost, and the element of expense ought certainly not e left altogether out of consideration. On the ques- of what is, or is not, reasonable, it makes all the rence whether 200l. or 300l., or as many thousands, to be provided out of the pockets of an agricul- l parish. These are the considerations on which the court kburn and Quain, J.J. founded their judgment, in holding the inhabitants of Greenhow were liable to contribute towards the cost of repairing the road in question, there being no such distinction as relieved them from the common law liability that attaches. This parish liability, it is worth while mentioning, is not affected by the fact that the road complained of is comprised in a highway district. For although a highway board are autho- rised by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 101, ss. 47 and 48, under certain condi- tions, to make improvements in the highways within their district (borrowing money for defraying the expenses, with the approval of the justices in general and quarter sessions), one of which improvements is declared "to be the doing of any other work in respect of highways beyond ordinary repairs essential to placing any existing highway in a proper state of repair," still the matter is one which is entirely within the discretion of the board, and unless the members constituting such board think fit to execute the necessary works, the public have no available remedy against them.

TRIAL BY JURY IN THE CHANCERY DIVISION.

It would be useless, in the face of the strong expression of opinion made use of by the Master of the Rolls, in the recent case of Cave v. Mackenzie, to enter into a further discussion on the stubbornly-contested controversy whether the Judges of the Chan- cery Division can or cannot try with a jury. But it may, we think, with propriety, be pointed out that while the opinion of the Master of the Rolls was shared by Vice-Chancellor Hall in the case of Clarke v. Cookson (L. Rep. 2 Ch. D. 746), as well as by Vice-Chancellor Malins and Vice-Chancellor Bacon, the Lord Chan- cellor, in the case of Cannot v. Morgan (L. Rep. 1 Ch. D. 1) (after the passing of the Judicature Acts) said, "as regards the argu- ment connected with trial by jury, the action can be tried by a jury in the Chancery Division." The question is at a deadlock, and can be settled only by the Court of Appeal or the Legislature. Meanwhile, however, the Chancery Division Judges positively refuse so to try a case. That this is a serious inconvenience becomes apparent when we consider the extensive views the courts are taking as to their powers to transfer causes to that division. A good illustration of this is afforded by the case of Holmes v. Harvey, decided in the Exchequer Division on the 21st Nov.

The action was brought for breach of an agreement, and for a false and fraudulent representation concerning the subject matter of that agreement, and a cross action was also brought by the defendant in that action in the Chancery Division for the specific performance of the same agreement. After issue had been joined in both actions, and when the action in the Exchequer Division was ready for hearing, an application was made at chambers to Mr. Justice Lopes for an order to transfer the action to the Chancery Division. The learned Judge, however, refused the application, on the ground that the action involved a question of fraud, which was a fit subject to be tried by a jury at common law; and the question then came before the Exchequer Division on appeal from that decision. The counsel for the plaintiff, in opposing the motion, urged strongly upon the court the fact that the action involved a question of fraud, and one therefore which was peculiarly of a nature which ought to be submitted to a jury, and he pointed out that if the cause was transferred this could not be done, in consequence of the attitude taken up by the judges of the Chancery Division. The court, however, held that as the cross action involved a claim of specific performance the whole dispute could be more conveniently tried in the Chancery Division, and they made the order of transfer accordingly. Baron Cleasby, in the course of his judgment said, "When we find the case is one properly cognizable in the Chancery Division, we ought not, I think, to hesitate to send it there, simply for the reason that a fact arising in it might be properly tried at common law. The reason for transferring this case to the Chancery Division is, that the argument that the whole question can be properly disposed of there, is more weighty than the argument that one fact in the case can be properly tried here." That, no doubt, is a sound principle, but is it a fact that the whole question can be properly disposed of in the Chancery Division? One of the main issues, and it may be the main issue, is whether a false and fraudulent representation was made. Now, no doubt, as Baron Cleasby pointed out in another part of his judgment, fraud is one of the main grounds of the jurisdiction of the court of equity; but, as the plaintiff urged, this was a question of fraud which ought to be submitted to a jury, and which he was anxious to have submitted to a jury. In fact, by exercising these extensive powers of transfer the courts practically interfere with the plaintiff's right to have his case so tried.

In the case of Sugg v. Silber (L. Rep. 1 Q. B. D. 362) it was held that where the plaintiff gives notice of trial before a Judge sitting with assessors, the defendant has a right, under Order XXXVI., rule 3, by giving notice within the time specified, to insist on a trial before a Judge and jury; and the Acts and rules do not give power to the court or a judge to deprive the defend- ant of that right. That case, no doubt, was under a different rule; but it seems to be as much within the spirit of the Act that the power of transfer should not be so extensive as to deprive a plaintiff of his undoubted right to have his case tried by a jury.

Indeed, in the case of Clarke v. Cookson, quoted above, where the plaintiff in a suit for administration intimated to the defendant that the trial would be before the judge alone, and the case was set down for hearing, but the defendant claimed to have a jury, it was held that under Order XXXVI., rule 3, the defendant had the right which he claimed, and accordingly Vice-Chancellor Hall, under Order XXXVI., rule 29, directed issues to be settled and tried at the sittings in Middlesex. Baron Huddleston, in the course of his judgment in the case of Holmes v. Harvey, dealing with this difficulty as to trial by jury, said, "If any difficulty arises upon that, there could be none under Order XXXVI., rule 29, which enacts that in any case the court or a Judge of the Division to which the cause is assigned may at any time, or from time to time, order the trial and determination of any question or issue of fact, or partly of fact and partly of law, by any commissioner or commissioners appointed in pursuance of the 29th section of the Act, or at the sitting to be held in Middlesex or London, and such question or issue shall be tried and determined accordingly." Now, in the first place, this power is discretionary, and very possibly the Master of the Rolls, to whose court the cause has been transferred, may not adopt that course. But even if this course is adopted by him, it will only be done after considerable delay, and it will practically be doing in a roundabout way what the plaintiff endeavoured to do in the first instance, and which could now be done almost immediately, seeing that the cause is ready for hearing. It would be most expedient, no doubt, that the whole dispute between the parties should be settled in one and the same court, and in a manner agreeable to both parties; but it seems to us to be rather doubtful whether it is expedient for that purpose to deprive a plaintiff of a fair and adequate mode of trial which is his of right.

IS A BROKER OR FACTOR A TRUSTEE OF HIS CLIENT'S MONEY?

THE question proposed in the above heading we should have thought had long since been settled in the affirmative so far, at all events, as the right of the client, or, more properly speaking, the principal, to follow the money (or the proceeds of the money) placed in the hands of the agent for a specific purpose, was concerned.

The point was very fully and ably argued in the year 1815, in the case of Taylor v. Plumer (3 Mau. & Sel. 562) in the Court of King's Bench, before four Judges, including Lord Ellenborough and Mr. Justice Bayley. It seems impossible to add anything of importance to the judgments then delivered.

In the case of Re Strachan, decided by the Court of Appeal on the 16th inst., there was the additional circumstance in favour of the right of the principal to follow the money, viz., that the broker had been informed of the fact that the money which the principal had placed in his hands for investment was trust money. On this narrower and a fortiori ground Sir W. M. James, L.J., and Sir R. Baggallay, J.A., following the case of Pennell v. Deffell (4 De G. M. & G. 389), and without finding it necessary to determine as appeal judges, as to the nature or extent of the general right of the principal to follow money given to a broker for investment, decided that the broker under the special circumstances taking with notice of the trust, became himself a trustee, and that, therefore, the money could be followed. Sir G. Bramwell, J.A., with whom, if we may venture so to say, we entirely agree, held the case to be indistinguishable in principle from Taylor v. Plumer, and governed by it.

The right to follow money may often be much clearer than the method or means of tracing it—which is matter of detail,—of proof—of the unravelling of accounts or transactions, sometimes of a complicated character. Thus, if a broker having received money to invest in a particular stock should with the money in his pocket or desk commit an act of bankruptcy on which adjudication should take place, it would be monstrous to suppose that general creditors could set up any claim to it. The money was not lent to the broker for an hour or a minute; the contract was simply one of agency. Of course, if the broker in fraud of his duty pays away the client's money, in satisfaction of lawful claims on himself, to persons having no notice of the fraud, the right to follow the currency of the realm is intercepted by the jus tertii. Again, if, following the ordinary course of business, the money should be paid by the broker to the credit of his current account with his banker, there might be considerable difficulty in tracing it, but as we should imagine few cases would present themselves in which the difficulty in distinguishing how much of the ultimate balance was properly attributable to such payment, would be insuperable to an ordinary accountant.

Strictly speaking, and although for convenience' sake it has become universal, a broker is not justified in paying in his client's money (other than such as is given him in the form of crossed cheques) to his own banker, i.e., in lending it to his banker. When the broker's banking account is overdrawn, such a payment of a client's money would, in favour of the banker receiving it, without notice of the special circumstances, be instantly and irretrievably appropriated towards satisfaction of his claim: (Currie v. L. Rep. 10 Ex. 153.) Such a payment might or might not amount to a fraud cognisable by the criminal law; but having regard to the almost universal prevalence of the banking system in mercantile affairs, very strong evidence of a fraudulent intent is inferred ultra the mere fact of payment into a banking account though overdrawn at the time, would probably be necessary for conviction. A very similar point, after much discussion, decided on the 18th inst. by the Court of Criminal Appeal in the case of The Queen v. Tallock.

THE NEW RULES OF COURT.

THE new Rules of Court, which bear the official title of "Rules of the Supreme Court, Dec. 1876," are eleven in number. We print them in extenso elsewhere, but it will be well to draw attention here to the more important amongst them. It was observed at the outset that, in accordance with sect. 17 of the Appellate Jurisdiction Act, 1876, these rules are, and all that will in future be, promulgated under the authority not of the whole Supreme Court, but of a committee of nine Judges, the Lord Chancellor, the Master of the Rolls, the chiefs of the three Common Law Divisions, and four Judges selected by Lord Chancellor. The four Judges selected to assist in framing the present rules, who act until 1st Jan. 1878, are Justices B. Lush, and Manisty, and Baron Pollock.

Before dealing with the principal subject of the rules—the disposal of a whole action by a single Judge in the Common Law Divisions—we must say a few words on the rather curious provision which owes its existence, we presume, to the fact that a Judge assize declined to try the action of Cave v. Mackenzie, which the Master of the Rolls had sent down for trial at those assizes. (Order XXXVI., rule 29a) is as follows:

Where in any action in the Chancery Division the action or any question at issue in the action is ordered to be tried before any commissioner or commissioners of assize, or at the London or Middlesex sittings of division other than the Chancery Division, the order directing such trial shall state on its face the reason for which it is expedient that the question, or issue should be so tried, and should not be tried in the Chancery Division.

Lord Cairns seems to have been of opinion, in Cannock v. May (33 L. T. Rep. N. S. 402), that a Judge of the Chancery Division might try an action with a jury in such division. But in the case of Clarke v. Cookson (L. Rep. 2 Ch. Div. 746), Vice-Chancellor Hall, after consulting with the three other Judges of the Chancery Division, is reported to have expressed a contrary opinion. More recently Jessel, M.R., in Cave v. Mackenzie, has declined to try an action with a jury until the Court of Appeal should give a decision on the point. The new rule does not quite clear up the difficulty, but seems to contemplate that the question is to be argued as one of discretion before the Judge at Nisi Prius. If this be so, the question will shortly be raised before the Court of Appeal under sect. 19 of the Act of 1873.

Coming to the disposal of actions in the common law divisions before a single judge, we find the new rules providing that where a trial has been before a Judge without a jury, the application for a new trial is to be made to the Court of Appeal; but where a trial has been by a jury the application is to be made to a Divisional Court. So far the old state of things is but little altered. But it is further provided that motions for judgment are to be made to the Court of Appeal in cases where the Judge at Nisi Prius has directed that judgment be entered, and that it is necessary that leave should be reserved. Here, no doubt, a great change, which will have the effect of considerably increasing the business of the Court of Appeal. A rather long list of divisions of proceedings which shall continue to be heard before divisional courts is given in "Order LVII. A." This list includes ten heads of business, of which the more important are: Court appeals, railway commissioners' cases, revenue proceedings, appeals from chambers, and "applications for new trials, the action has been tried by a jury." We think the list is a large one. Finally, as to the new Divisional Court for Appeals from Inferior Courts. After Baron Cleasby's remark that a court would never sit again, we had expected a more radical alteration than that effected by Order LVIII., rule 19, which annuls (or rather repeals, for that is the term used in the new set of rules) rule 16 of the Rules of Dec. 1875 (which established a tribunal of five judges only), and provides that a Judge of the High Court shall be a Judge to hear and determine appeals from inferior courts under sect. 45 of the Judicature Act of 1873. "All such appeals," proceeds the rule, "Admiralty appeals from inferior courts, which until now shall be assigned as heretofore (see The Two B. L. Rep. 1 P. D. A. 72) to the present Judge of the Admiralty Court (sic) shall be entered in one list by the Lord Chancellor of the Crown Office, and shall be heard by such Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer Division as the Judges of those divisions shall from time to time direct. The chief change affected by this order seems to be that Judges of the Chancery Division will now no longer give assistance in the hearing of County Court appeals on matters of difficulty. The enlargement, however, of the circle out of which the Judges of the Divisional Court may be taken, will doubtless tend to make its sittings more regular and continuous—a consummation which is devoutly to be wished, looking to the fact that there have been more than forty out of the original fifty-five cases set down for hearing at the beginning of the present sittings.

AGENCY.—LIABILITY OF AGENT FOR NEGLIGENCE.(a)

MEASURE OF DAMAGES.

(Continued from page 59.)

Insurance to commence from the loading of goods at a certain point will not attach on goods previously laden: (Robinson v. French, 4 East. 130; Mellish v. Allnutt, 2 M. & S. 106.) Hence here an insurance broker, employed to insure goods from a certain point in their voyage home, effected a policy "at and from" at that point, "beginning the adventure from the loading thereof on board," the Court of Common Pleas held him guilty of gross negligence. The amount of the insurance was £1000. Of this sum £400 had been paid by two underwriters for £200 each. Another underwriter for £200 had become bankrupt, and Gibbs, C.J., directed this sum as well as the £400 to be deducted from the damages. The plaintiff thus obtained a verdict for £400. Nothing appears to have been said about deducting the premium: (Park Hamond, 4 Camp, 344, s.c. 6 Tannt. 495, 815.)

In Davis v. Garratt (6 Bing. 716), 1830, the defendants had undertaken to carry the plaintiff's lime from the Medway to London. The master of the barge in which it was stored deviated unnecessarily from the usual course. A storm came on during the deviation, and the lime was wetted. Owing to the wetting of the lime the barge caught fire, and the whole cargo was lost. The underwriters refused to pay, on the ground of deviation. A verdict having been found for the plaintiff, the defendants applied for a new trial, on the ground that the deviation was not the cause of the loss of the lime sufficiently proximate to entitle the plaintiff to recover, inasmuch as the loss might have been occasioned by the same tempest if the barge had proceeded in her direct course. A new trial was refused. The court took time to deliver judgment, which was delivered by Chief Justice Tindal, and is valuable as indicating the connection that must exist between the damage suffered and the agent's act or omission. On the above objection to the right of the plaintiff to recover his ship replied, "We think the real answer to the objection is, no wrongdoer can be allowed to apportion or qualify his wrong, and that as a loss has actually happened whilst his wrongful act was in operation and force, and which is attributable to his wrongful act, he cannot set up as an answer to the action the bare possibility of a loss, if his wrongful act had never been done. It might admit of a different construction if he could show, only that the same loss might have happened, but that it might have happened if the act complained of had not been done." It is difficult to account for the fact that the court in this case put any stress upon the fact that the loss occurred whilst the agent's wrongful act was in operation. The unnecessary deviation, which rendered the policy void. If the barge had regained the usual course before the storm came on, the rights of the assured as against the defendants would not have been affected. A deviation deprived the assured of his rights to recover from the underwriters in the event of a loss; by deviating the defendant violated his duty to plaintiff, hence the application of the principles respecting the liability of agents is easy.

Some of the observations of the Judges in Charles v. Allin (15 B. 56), 1854, may be usefully referred to in estimating the damages. "That which is complained of in the plea," said Maule, J., "would give the defendant a right of action against the plaintiffs so soon as they were guilty of the negligence charged, and the defendant was thereby damaged. That which happened subsequently does not necessarily determine the amount of damages the defendant would be entitled to. A jury might have given exactly the same amount of damages before as after the loss. The question is, what damage has the party sustained at the time the cause of action vested in him? If nothing had happened, and a policy might then have been effected, the jury would consider what was probable; if the loss had then happened, they perhaps might have given the full amount; but they were not bound to do so. There were a variety of circumstances which they might properly take into their consideration. Therefore, it is not a necessary and conclusive thing that the sum to be insured by the policy, neither more nor less, is the sum which the plaintiff would have to pay, but a compensation for the injury resulting from their negligence. The amount of the loss actually sustained, if a loss has happened, and there is nothing peculiar in the circumstances, is a matter very fit to be considered by the jury in estimating the damages; but they are not bound by it. They are to take all the circumstances into their consideration, and to say what damage the party is upon the whole reasonably entitled to recover for the non-performance of that which he has contracted to perform. The jury, indeed, are not bound to give more than the amount of loss which has actually been sustained. The loss is not, however, to be necessarily treated as a liquidated amount—an amount by which the jury are to be bound." Chief Justice Jervis observed that the amount of the loss is the reasonable and not the ascertained legal measure of damage which the party is entitled to.

In the Stearns, &c., Company v. Heintzmann (17 C. B., N. S., 56), 1864, the defendants were employed as agents for the plaintiffs to sell candles upon commission. Having been instructed by the plaintiffs not to part with goods to a customer named except for cash, they violated these instructions, and Sir W. Erle, C.J., left the whole case to the jury; a verdict for the plaintiffs was returned for the value of the goods and expenses incurred by them in respect of a bill of exchange drawn for the price, drawn in accordance with the instructions. A rule for a new trial was refused by the full court. "In coming to the conclusion that there was evidence on which the jury might find that the contract was made in substance as alleged," said Chief Justice Erle, in delivering the judgment of the court, "we have in effect decided that there was also evidence on which they might find that the breach was proved. It also follows, in our opinion, that the jury were right in giving the value of the goods, which were lost to the plaintiffs, and the expenses incurred by them in respect of the bill of exchange for the price drawn according to the terms of the letter of the 19th June."

The principles which may be taken as the result of the cases already quoted with respect to the measure of the damages to which an agent is liable are the following:—

- (1.) Nominal damages may be recovered against him upon proof of breach of contract.
- (2.) Substantial damages will be recovered against him upon proof that his principal has suffered actual loss by reason of the agent's breach of duty; and the measure of these damages will be the actual loss of which the agent's conduct has been the proximate cause.
- (3.) It follows as a corollary from the second proposition that the agent will not be liable in substantial damages if he proves that implicit obedience to the instructions of his principal could have been attended with no advantageous result.
- (4.) It is submitted, however, that the agent under those circumstances would still be liable in nominal damages.

(a) By WILLIAM EVANS, Esq., of the South Wales Circuit.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

have received the annual reports of four law societies—the Legal Practitioners' Society, established in 1873; the Incorporated Law Society of London, established in 1805 and incorporated in 1871; the Incorporated Law Society of Liverpool, founded in 1827 and incorporated in 1869; and the Bolton Law Society, established in 1871, which latter society it is proposed to incorporate at once under the Companies' Acts. The rapid creation and development of country societies means the collecting of a force which, when thoroughly organised and set on foot, will be irresistible when directed to the procuring of reforms in the constitution of the legal profession. No one looking fully at the reports, which are published in another column, can fail to see this. We have already dealt (in our last issue) with the report of the Legal Practitioners' Society. The oldest of the remaining three societies whose annual reports are before us, is the Leeds Society, the prime mover in which still is Mr. Thomas Marshall, the learned registrar of the Leeds County Court. The finances are in a flourishing condition, and the society consists of 56 members, all solicitors. From the report we gather that greater facilities are to be given to Leeds solicitors to join the society, and that joint action is being taken with a view to put a stop to the wholesale exemption from passing the preliminary examination before entering into articles, which now obtains in certain cases. We can only hope that the resolution of the society upon this subject will be strictly adhered to. A resolution was also passed at the annual meeting condemning as unprofessional a condition of sale of real estate, which provided that costs, charges, and expenses of and attending the investigation and proof of title with production of deeds, the preparation, approval, and execution of the conveyance, and the completion of the purchase, shall be borne and paid by the purchaser." All we have had to complain of before has been that vendors' solicitors offer conveyances to the purchasers for a fixed sum, the conveyance being a printed form. In some cases it has been made compulsory upon purchasers to take such conveyances, in others it has been only optional. It really seems that there are members of the profession who, forgetting etiquette and long established precedent and usage, and forgetful also of the interests of the profession, are ready to turn upside down and inside out the whole system of conveyancing. In our mind the danger of these attempted innovations can hardly be exaggerated. They mean, in fine, the uprooting of conveyancing as a separate branch of practice. At this same meeting a resolution was passed as to securing the right of solicitors as parliamentary agents, and as to preserving the long established custom of "agency" in such business. These views are on all fours with those embodied in the petition to both Houses of Parliament presented by the Council of the Incorporated Law Society. In the annual report of the Leeds Society it is stated that application has been made to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for permission to send deeds for stamping direct to Somerset House, from the Leeds Inland Revenue office, as is now done in the case of agreements. It would certainly be a great convenience if country solicitors could have this facility afforded to them. We will take next the annual report of the Incorporated Law Society of Liverpool, an organisation which, under the influence of the Judiciary Acts and District Registries, ought now to grow in importance and influence very rapidly. This society consists of about 200 members, and the annual report of the committee is all that can be wished. Barristers and others, to the number of nineteen, subscribe to the library. The committee urge the necessity of increasing the usefulness of the law library belonging to the society. We have always pointed out the great importance of securing good law libraries for country law societies, which we regard as one of the most important features of such organisations. A deputation of members of the society waited on the County Court Judges of Liverpool to urge certain reforms in the mode of conducting the business of these courts there, and certainly this is an example which might usefully be followed in other parts of the country; and so with Public Sale Conditions, which, in the case of the Liverpool Law Society, are prepared and settled by the committee. Such a system prevents those unfortunate disputes or complaints which we noticed in connection with the report of the Leeds Society. The Liverpool Society joined with the Leeds Society in the action taken by the hon. secretary of the latter society, in regard to the proposed reforms in the office of Parliamentary agents. Altogether, the report of the Liverpool Society, which is now before us, is one of the most interesting and instructive ever issued by the society. The Bolton Law Society consists of forty-eight members, and is a subscribing member to the associated law societies by an annual payment of 3 guineas, and to the Legal Practitioners' Society by a like payment of 1 guinea. Many additions have been made to their law library. It would be a great advantage if the Incorporated Law Society could receive subscriptions from country law societies as in the above cases; but there is no doubt that the associated provincial law societies are doing much useful work in the interests of solicitors. Perhaps the chief point dealt with in the report before us is that connected with unprofessional proceedings by solicitors, especially in connection with conveyancing business. A case of "malpractice," referred to in the report, should not be overlooked, as showing what a useful influence local law societies exercise on professional morality. In the reports before us there is ample evidence that organisation among country solicitors is proceeding slowly but surely. We publish the reports of two societies, and are compelled to hold the others over till next week.

If ever a case called for the attention of the society whose raison d'être is to check the growing practice on the part of accountants and others of acting as solicitors, that of The Attorney-General v. Tett, which came before the Exchequer Division on Tuesday last, is that case. This was an information filed by the chief law officer of the Crown against the defendant, an accountant, to recover a penalty of £50, under section 60 of the Stamp Act 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 97), which provided that "every person who (not being a serjeant-at-law, barrister, or a duly certificated attorney, solicitor, proctor, notary public, writer to the signet, agent, procurator, conveyancer, special pleader, or draughtsman in equity), either directly or indirectly, for or in expectation of any fee, gain, or reward, draws or prepares any instrument relating to real or personal estate or any proceeding in law or equity, shall forfeit the sum of £50." From the report of the case in another column it will be seen that the accountant in question prepared a bill of sale, for which he charged £10 10s., but this is not all. It appears from the statement of the Attorney-General, that Mr. Tett, the defendant, resorted to the device of placing on his office door, in the west of London, a brass plate thus inscribed, "Hill and Co., solicitors," there being no such firm in existence. The deception, however, does not end here, for the name of a genuine solicitor, Mr. Berridge, appeared on the bill of sale as if registered by him, the fact being that this gentleman never authorised his name to be used. The defendant had pleaded "Not guilty," but on the hearing withdrew this plea and pleaded "Guilty," and the jury returned a verdict for the full penalty of £50, the costs of the event. So much for the action of the Crown for the protection of the revenues. But we hope the Legal Practitioners' Society will feel it its duty to move in this case, provided a closer investigation of the circumstances warrant action being taken under sect. 12 of the Solicitors' Act 1874. In the meantime, we trust that accountants, law agents, and law stationers will learn in time a lesson from the action of the Crown in this case, the information of which we are in possession, warranting us in asserting that thousands of bills of sale are prepared as in this case, every year by unauthorised persons. We understand that proceedings in the present case are due to the action of the Incorporated Law Society; if this be so, the chief society deserves the thanks of the entire Profession, both barristers and solicitors. The case, as reported in the daily press, presents the feature of being a scandalous infraction of professional rights in more senses than one. What solicitor would think of charging 10 guineas for such a bill of sale, assuming it to have been properly drawn and registered, and this, to say nothing of commission on the loan? It is in this way that discredit is brought upon the Profession, and the interests of the public, not less than those of the Profession, require that cases of this gross character should be dealt with in a manner which has a deterrent effect. It is now about five years since the statute was put in force in the same way, but unauthorised persons may depend upon it that latterly the Profession has been aroused to the necessity for greater vigilance, so that in future we may expect to hear of further prosecutions of a like character.

In another column we publish a letter from a correspondent who inquires whether he can give information for a non-official law list, by referring the intended publisher to the official Law List for his full name, date of admission, London agents, and appointments, in order to save himself the trouble of copying it out himself and sending it to such publisher, the point being that such publisher asserts that he cannot take such extract, though so authorised, on the ground that copyright is claimed in the Law List, although it is an annual publication compiled by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue from slips which solicitors are compelled to fill up on Government forms. The point is certainly one of some difficulty. [We find in the first page of the Law List the following: "So far as relates to special pleaders, draftsmen, conveyancers, solicitors, proctors, and notaries, compiled by William Henry Cousins, of the Inland Revenue office, Somerset House, W.C., registrar of certificates, and published by the authority of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue." We do not suppose that the "registrar of certificates" claims copyright, certainly not in the slips; nor, as it seems to us, can the commissioners, at all events in the part here referred to. There are, no doubt, other parts of the Law List in which there is copyright, for instance, the valuable index of country solicitors at the end, because the words "so far as relates to," &c., at the beginning of the above extract, clearly suggest that the publishers themselves compile all not therein referred to. There is clearly no copyright in mere names. But we direct the attention of our correspondent to sects. 20 and 21 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, which provide for the keeping at the Petty Bag Office of an alphabetical roll of solicitors, with the date of admission on the roll, &c.; and of a similar list by the registrar of solicitors, both of which are open to public inspection without fee or reward. Again, sect. 23 of the same Act makes it compulsory upon solicitors to give to the registrar of solicitors, his full name, address, and date of admission on the roll, and this annually; and a duplicate (see sect. 20 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127), is presented to the Inland Revenue Commissioners, and all these particulars are "to be entered in a proper book to be kept for that purpose, which shall be open to the inspection and examination of all persons, without fee or reward." Again, sect. 17 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, provided for the clerk of the Petty Bag forwarding a copy of the roll of solicitors to the registrar of solicitors (Mr. Williamson), who must not be confounded with the "registrar of certificates" at Somerset House. Sect. 20 of the Solicitors' Act of 1860 moreover speaks of the duplicate declaration which solicitors have to make and give to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue as "the note in writing required by law to be delivered to the Commissioners or their officer;" that is, Mr. Cousins, we suppose. In like manner sect. 30 of the Act of 1860 provides that a registry of all commissioners for oaths shall be kept at the Law Institution, which "book shall at all times be open to public inspection during office hours without fee or reward." Looking at the position of the commissioners, and the other public servants who assist in compiling the official government list of country solicitors, and looking at the provisions of the solicitors' Acts of 1843 and 1860, we cannot doubt that solicitors have clearly a right to rely on the publisher of a law list to the official record supplied by himself to the commissioners without imposing the person so referred to, an action for infringement of copyright.

It seems hardly consistent that while the Solicitors' Act 1860, s. 22, regulates the time for taking out solicitors' certificates in Essex and Wales, the Stamp Act 1870, regulates taking out of such certificates in all the cases, and with a view, as it would seem, to further confusion, the Stamp Act 1870, s. 1, imposes a penalty of £50 upon solicitors practicing without a certificate, while other penalties imposed upon solicitors under certain circumstances, are to be found in the several Solicitors' Acts. As we have already urged, the creation of district registries by the Judicature Act removes much of the reason which formerly existed for having a higher rate of duty for London certificates. While upon the subject of annual certificates, let us point out that although the duty be paid after the 15th Dec., the name of a solicitor so paying the duty must be before the 1st Jan. next, will appear in the Law List for 1877, which, by section 22 of the Act of 1860, is prima facie evidence that he is a solicitor holding a certificate. Annual certificates issued after the 1st of Jan. bear date on the day on which they are issued, and only take effect as such from the day when they are stamped. Such a certificate must, by section 21 of the Act of 1860, be produced to the Registrar of Solicitors within a month of the payment of the duty, otherwise it takes effect only from the day of such production.

It is pretty plain that a number of country solicitors have a mistaken notion of the meaning and operation of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 78, and the Real Property Acts passed in 1874. It is coming quite a common practice for some country solicitors to instruct their London agents to take counsel's opinion as to the operation of this Act in connection with cases upon which such Acts have no bearing whatever. We refer especially to cases in which an escape from difficulties in connection with conveyancing matters is sought to be found by regarding trustees, mortgagees, and their representatives as "bare trustees." It must not be forgotten that two of the principal sections of this Act have been repealed; especially 38 & 39 Vict. c. 87, s. 43, which repealed the first-named Act, and re-enacted it in a new and limited form. The Act, therefore, as it at present stands, has a very limited operation. The case of Christie v. Overton (L. Rep. 1 Chan. Div. 281), must not be overlooked, where the Master of the Rolls is reported to have said that, "When a bare trustee is a question of general practical importance. Where there is a trustee whose duty is to convey, and the time has arrived for a conveyance by him, he is, I think, a bare trustee." Lord Westbury, in the case of Robson v. Phipps (34 L. J. Ch. 226), drew a distinction between "bare trustee" and "a trust power requiring discretion in exercise." Sect. 6 of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 78, is probably surrounded with as much uncertainty and doubt as sect. 5 was, and as sect. 4 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 87, now is; but as to this matter (6) it will most usually apply to cases where a married woman is a legal personal representative as well as a "bare trustee." But in the case of a married woman who is a "bare trustee," the section of 37 & 38 Vict. c. 78, enables the wife to act independently of her husband, and appears to avoid the expense attendant upon an acknowledgment under the Fines and Recoveries Act (34 Will. 4, c. 74). It seems doubtful as to how this section applies to the case of a married woman who becomes a mortgagee when a woman in trust for an infant, who, on coming of age, calls for a transfer to himself, alleging that the wife is, under this section, unnecessary.

In a case of Nagle-Gillman v. Christopher, which came before the Master of the Rolls on Tuesday last, the main object of the action was to compel the trustees of a marriage settlement to execute a deed of appointment executed by the wife in favour of her husband. It appeared that the deed of appointment was prepared by the solicitor who had the custody of the marriage settlement, but instructions given to him by the husband, as the deed was sent to the parties for execution without the draft having been first submitted to the wife. Under these circumstances his lordship is reported to have reprobated the course taken by the solicitor, who, his lordship said, ought have communicated with the lady before preparing such a deed, and added that such conduct was deserving of some censure for this want of caution, which really occasioned the suit. Assuming that the relations between the husband and wife were what they should be, the complaint hardly a fair one against the solicitor. It to have been a rupture between husband and wife at the time, but no evidence to show that either who prepared the dead knew it.

INGUISHED volunteer officer died last week, Col. Emmet—a member of one of the firms of solicitors in the West Riding of Yorkshire—that of Messrs. Emmet and Emmet. The gentleman's unflinching zeal secured a position which the many aim at but few fill. A further notice will in due course appear in our Obituary.

V. HILL, solicitor of the Supreme Court, was elected Mayor of Helston. He was elected in 1853, and is clerk to the county council. Mr. Hill has filled this office of chief clerk on two previous occasions, and holds public offices in the said borough.

HAWKINS, the newly created judge of the High Court of Chancery, is the son of Mr. Hawkins, a well-known solicitor practising in Hertfordshire, who was admitted in Term 1813, and who is still the senior partner in the firm of Hawkins, Son, and Lind. There is probably no man in the county who is held in higher esteem or regard than the late learned baron.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

TRIAL—VERDICT AGAINST EVIDENCE—OF FIRST TRIAL—STAT. 17 & 18 VICT. c. 41.—The plaintiff brought an action for arrears carried by three ships belonging to defendants, and which were lost during the voyage. As regards two of these parcels, a verdict was found for the plaintiff; as to the other, the defendants succeeded. The defendants subsequently applied for and obtained a new trial, the ground of which was that they got an entire verdict (reversing the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division), that as there had been no default on the part of the defendants, and the plaintiffs exercised the power which they possessed of bringing a nolle prosequi, or of intimating that they did not intend to pursue further the proceedings found against them on the first trial, the defendants were entitled, under the circumstances, to recover the costs of the first trial, and the issue found in their favour. On account of costs, the master declined to allow the costs of the defendants at the second trial, and the shorthand writer's notes. Held (affirming the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division), that the trial was within the discretion of the court to allow or disallow these items, and that it was not the practice of the court to interfere at discretion, except in cases of gross misconduct. (Marcus v. General Steam Navigation Co. (Limited), 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 353. Ct.

MESS. MEASURE OF—REMOTENESS OF—TELEGRAPHIC MESSAGE.—Where a telegraphic message is sent, for reward, to receive messages for transmission, and the sender transmits them by telegraph to places where he had no means of understanding it, and negligently transmitted it, so that the plaintiff, the sender of the message, lost a profitable contract, it was held, that nominal damages could be recovered by the plaintiff in an action brought by him against the telegraph company. (Saunders v. Stewart, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 370. C. P. Div.)

PLACE OF TRIAL.—By Order in rule 1, the statement of claim must contain a paragraph stating the place where the trial of the case shall take place, except under special circumstances the court may allow causes to be tried out of Midland, if the application is made in the statement of claim in pursuance of this order: (Ridge and Ridge, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 428.

REVOCATION—REVIVAL—CODICIL.—A will made before marriage, and was revoked by marriage, but revived and ratified by a will which also made provision for the wife, after marriage. The wife predeceased the testator, who on her death destroyed the will, that the testator did not by the will of the codicil after his wife's death: (James v. Shrimpton and others, Rep. N. S. 428. Prob.)

APPEAL FROM CHAMBERS, TIME FOR APPEAL.—Orders made in vacation by a judge at chambers must be appealed from within eight days of the date of the making of such orders; divisional court sits for hearing of such appeals within eight days, there can be no appeal unless the time for appealing is enlarged by order of the court, or by a court of appeal under L.VII., r. 6: (Crom v. 25 L. T. Rep. N. S. 423. C. P. Div.)

SERVICE OF WRIT OF SUMMONS—SERVICE OUT OF JURISDICTION—PRACTICE.—Where the cause of action is a slander published in Ireland of a personal chattel situate in England, leave will not be given under Order XI., rules 1 and 3, to serve a writ of summons in Ireland. Such a writ is not an "act or thing," "affecting" property situate within the jurisdiction, within the meaning of those words in Order XI., rule 1: (Casey v. Arnott, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 424. C. P. Div.)

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE.

COURT OF APPEAL, WESTMINSTER.

Monday, Nov. 27.

(Before MELLISH, L.J. BRETT, and AMPHLETT, JJ.A.)

Business of the court—Postponement of cases on account of the circuits.

AT the sitting of the court, applications were made by counsel of the Northern Circuit who had cases pending in this court to postpone the hearing of those cases during the Winter Assizes on that circuit, at Liverpool and Manchester, which, it will be seen, this court declined to do, on the ground that they had no right thus to delay the sittings, leaving it to counsel, on their own responsibility, to make such arrangements as they thought proper by mutual consent. On one of these applications being made by Mr. Wheeler, in a case in which Mr. Baylis, Q.C., Judge of the Court of Passage at Liverpool, was engaged, the application being made on the ground that he would be engaged in the business of his court,

C. Russell, one of the leaders of the Northern Circuit, said there were many cases in which he and other counsel of that circuit were engaged, and they had a great interest in their Lordships' decision on this point—as to the postponement of cases in which they were engaged. In many of those cases, he said, the appeals turned on the facts, and could not be fairly heard in the absence of the counsel who were engaged in the cases at the trial. He asked, therefore, that these cases should be postponed during the winter assizes.

Edwards, Q.C., another of the leading counsel on the Northern Circuit, made a similar appeal, observing that it was for the benefit of the suitors that the counsel engaged in the cases at the trial should be present at the hearing of the appeals where the questions turned upon the facts.

MELLISH, L.J. said, if the court put off cases on account of the convenience of counsel, complaints might be made by the suitors.

BRETT, J.A.—And the court will be blamed, not the counsel. This is a court of appeal from all the common law divisions, and, as a similar appeal may be made from other circuits, if we accede to it the result will be virtually to close the Court of Appeal.

MELLISH, L.J., after consulting with his colleagues, said,—We cannot assent to a general postponement of cases on this ground. Counsel must make themselves responsible for their clients' interests and wishes by agreeing to postpone the cases, if their clients assent to it.

C. Russell said, if the court would allow cases to be postponed by the mutual consent of counsel on both sides, it would be sufficient, and they would be quite satisfied.

MELLISH, L.J.—Counsel acting for their clients on both sides.

BRETT, J.A.—And making themselves responsible, as such, for their clients' interests and wishes; let that be understood.

To this counsel assented.

A little later Ambrose, Q.C., and Edwards, Q.C., mentioned a similar case, which, they said, had already been tried twice, and they desired to know whether they might, by mutual consent, take advantage of this permission, to which the court assented, on the understanding already explained.

Wheeler then pressed his application for postponement in a case in which, he said, Mr. Baylis, Q.C., Judge of the Passage Court of Liverpool, was counsel, and would be engaged in a conference with the Vice-Chancellor of Lancaster as to the extension of the Judicature Act to his court. As this was public business, he applied for a postponement of the case.

It appeared, however, that the case was one in which the appeal was by the prosecutor in a Crown case from a decision of the Court of Appeal from Inferior Courts, and on this,

MELLISH, L.J. said this seemed a case in which, according to their recent decision, it would appear that there was no jurisdiction, but in which, for obvious reasons, a postponement should not be allowed without consent.

Arbuthnot, on the other side, did not assent to the postponement.

Wheeler, for the appellant, said the man had been discharged, the Court of Appeal from Inferior Courts having reversed the decision; but MELLISH, L.J. said, as it was an appeal in a Crown case, assuming that this court had jurisdiction, it could not be postponed without consent.

EXCHEQUER DIVISION.

Tuesday, Nov. 28.

(Before POLLOCK, B. and a Special Jury.)

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL v. TETT.

Unqualified person practising as a solicitor—Stamp Act 1870—Penalty £50 for preparing a bill of sale.

THIS was an information filed by the Attorney-General on behalf of the Crown against the defendant to recover a penalty of £50, incurred by the latter by reason of his having drawn a certain bill of sale without being duly qualified, contrary to the statute. The defendant pleaded "Not Guilty."

The Attorney-General, the Solicitor-General, and Dicey appeared for the Crown.

Wilkey Wright for the defendant.

The Attorney-General, in opening the case, said that this was a proceeding for a penalty incurred by the defendant under the provisions of the 33rd & 34th Vict. c. 97, s. 60, which provided that—"Every person who (not being a serjeant-at-law, barrister, or a duly certificated attorney, solicitor, proctor, notary public, writer to the signet, agent, procurator, conveyancer, special pleader, or draughtsman in equity) either directly or indirectly, for or in expectation of any fee, gain, or reward, draws or prepares any instrument relating to real or personal estate, or any proceeding in law or equity, shall forfeit the sum of £50." The result of that provision was that every unqualified person who drew certain legal instruments incurred a penalty, and in his opinion the provision was a wise one, and necessary for the protection of properly qualified practitioners as well as for the public. It was very hard upon a man who had gone through a long, a laborious, and an expensive training, and who had thereby duly qualified himself for the practice of the law, that he should be subject to the competition of those who were unqualified, and, as a rule, were quite unfit to undertake the conduct of legal matters; and it was for the interest of the public that their legal affairs should be transacted by duly qualified persons, who, in case of want of skill or negligence, were liable to an action or were subject to the control of the courts. The facts of the case were short and simple. In 1874 the defendant, who appeared to be an accountant, took a part of a house in Westbourne-park from Mr. Smith, from whom he obtained permission to place on the door a brass plate with "Hill and Co., Solicitors," upon it, the fact being that there was no such firm in existence, and it therefore was a mere pretence. He then seemed to have entered into the transaction of legal business of various kinds. In August 1874, a gentleman who was in want of money obtained through the defendant the loan of £147 from the defendant's landlord. How much of that sum eventually reached the hands of the borrower it was difficult to say, but there were considerable sums deducted from it for interest and commission. The loan, however, was to be secured by a bill of sale on the borrower's furniture. He was in a position to show that that bill of sale was prepared by the defendant, who wrote it and got it executed, and who charged for his services in that respect the sum of 10 guineas, the amount being deducted from the sum lent before it reached the borrower's hands. The bill of sale was ultimately registered as though it had been prepared by Mr. Berridge, a solicitor; but that gentleman would state that he had never given his authority for his name to be used in the matter. It was under these circumstances that the Crown had felt bound to institute the present proceedings.

Wilkey Wright said he appeared on behalf of the defendant, by whom he was instructed to say that he fully and entirely owned his offence. Had he chosen to contest the facts he would have been able to place a very different complexion upon them from what the learned Attorney-General had done, but the defendant preferred to submit himself to the merciful consideration of the authorities rather than to fight the case. If the defendant were required to pay the full penalty and the cost of these proceedings the result would be absolute ruin to him. Of course, as far as that court was concerned, the defendant could not expect to receive any favour; and the verdict would be taken for the full amount of the penalty; but, inasmuch as the defendant had inadvertently broken the law, he trusted that his present conduct would be accepted as some atonement for his offence, and that his Lordship would say a few words in his favour.

The Attorney-General said that if the defendant could satisfy the Commissioners of Inland Revenue that he had acted from inadvertence they would, no doubt, consider the matter favourably in his behalf.

The defendant then withdrew his plea of "Not guilty" and pleaded "Guilty."

POLLOCK, B., said that neither the Attorney-General nor himself had power to express an opinion on the case, but no doubt the word "inadvertently," which had been used by the learned counsel for the defendant, was the important one in the consideration of the case. No doubt, if the Inland Revenue Commissioners were of opinion that the defendant had committed the offence through inadvertence they would look upon his case favourably.

The jury returned a verdict for the Crown for £50, being the full amount of the penalty.

APPOINTMENTS UNDER THE JOINT-STOCK WINDING-UP ACTS.

CHINESE AND INDIAN TEA COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up to be heard Dec. 5 before V.C.M.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF.

BARNARD (Fulke T.), Huntingdon Villa, Clifton, Bristol. Jan. 1; Warty, Robins, and Burges, solicitors, 9, Lincoln's Inn-fields, London. Jan. 15; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

BLENKINSOP (Wm.), Linthorpe, Middlesborough, North Riding, York, farmer. Dec. 23; Jos. Dodds, solicitor, Stockton-on-Tees, Durham. Jan. 8; M.R., at eleven o'clock.

BRATTON (Christian F.), Coventry-street, Haymarket, Middlesex, confectioner. Jan. 1; Sharpe and Co., solicitors, 41, Bedford-row, Middlesex. Jan. 11; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

FORD (Wm. H.), 1, Great Pulteney-street, Golden-square, Middlesex, hosier and tailor's trimmings seller. Dec. 30; L. Hunter, solicitor, 1, Gresham Buildings, Guildhall, London. Jan. 12; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

GIBBS (Thos.), New Brompton, Gillingham, Kent. Dec. 30; Jno. Thos. Frail, solicitor, Rochester, Kent. Jan. 10; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

GODFREY (Henry Wm.), Bank House, Hatfield, York, gentleman. Dec. 11; Richard Champney, solicitor, Kingston-upon-Hull. Dec. 22; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

GULLIVER (Wm.), Swadlow, Oxford, farmer. Dec. 30; Poole and Hughes, solicitors, 33, Chancery-lane, London. Jan. 10; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

HARRIS (Daniel), Longwells Green, Bilton, Gloucester yeoman. Dec. 23; Henry S. Washbrough, solicitor, Bristol. Jan. 10; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

HATTON (Thos.), formerly of Bilston, Stafford, agent. Jan. 1; Jos. G. James, solicitor, Bilston. Jan. 13; M.R., at twelve o'clock.

HOMER (Wm. L.), North Shields, Northumberland, master mariner. Dec. 2; Finley, Adamson, and Adamson, solicitors, 99, Howard-street, North Shields. Jan. 11; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

KINGHAM (Thirza), 174, Brompton-road, Middlesex, spinster. Jan. 1; Wm. King, solicitor, 11, Queen Victoria-street, London. Jan. 19; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

MAYHEW (Augustus S.), 7, Montpelier-row, Twickenham Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 11; C. H. Compton, solicitor, 13, Great George-street, Westminster. Dec. 22; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

PATTON (Jno.), North-end Lodge, Fulham, Middlesex. Dec. 25; Wm. Pitman, solicitor, 27, Nicholas-lane, Lombard-street, London. Jan. 13; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

SHIBBS (Francis), High-street, Croydon, Surrey, and of Mason's-bill, Bromley, Kent, grocer and tea dealer. Jan. 1; W. H. Rowland, solicitor, 103, High-street, Croydon, Surrey. Jan. 12; V.C.M., at twelve o'clock.

SIXNOTT (Wm.), Nayland, Suffolk, shipowner. Dec. 22; Brooks, Jenkins, and Co., solicitors, 7, Goddard-street, Doctor's-commons, London. Jan. 10; V.C.B., at twelve o'clock.

TALLEMACH (Matilda), 94, Marylebone-road, Middlesex, spinster. Dec. 31; J. Vincent, solicitor, 10, South-square, Gray's Inn, London. Jan. 1; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

TAYLOR (Henry Wm.), 127, Camden-street, Camden-town, Middlesex, carpet planner. Dec. 21; T. J. Holmes, solicitor, 4, Eastcheap, London. Jan. 8; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

ALLISON, otherwise Allison (James), late an inmate of the Union Workhouse, Alton, Hants, and formerly of Shirley, near Croydon, Surrey, labourer and wire worker. Aug. 1; Walker, Twyford, Belward, and Whitfield, solicitors, 3, Southampton-street, London, W.C.

BAGWELL (Louisa G.), Portbury, Bristol. Dec. 30; J. W. S. Dix, solicitor, Exchange, Bristol.

BARRILL (Thos.), Keynsham, Somerset, veterinary surgeon. Dec. 15; Fox and Whitlock, solicitors, 35, Corn-street, Bristol.

BARTHELMY (Mary), New-street, Borough-road, Surrey, widow. Jan. 1; Hewitt and Alexander, solicitors, 27, Ely-place, London, E.C.

BAYLIS (Jno. H.), Swansea, Glamorganshire, architect. Jan. 1; Watkins and Co., solicitors, 11, Sackville-street, London.

BENNETT (Fanny), 23, Hunter-street, Brunswick-square, Middlesex, widow. Dec. 30; G. E. Spencer, solicitor, 3, Verulam-buildings, Gray's Inn, London.

BOWERMAN (Richard), Uckfield, Devon, solicitor. Dec. 23; R. Jno. Bowerman, solicitor, 4, Gray's Inn-square, London.

BOYES (Jane), Great Driffield, York, widow. Dec. 30; Arthur H. Jackson, solicitors, Malton, Yorkshire.

BROWN (Peter), Perth, Western Australia, colonial secretary of said colony. Dec. 31; Geo. W. Leak, solicitor, Perth, Western Australia; and Wilkinson and Drew, solicitors, 131, Berners-street, London.

BURTON (Admiral Jas. R.), R.N., 15, Park-square, Middlesex. Dec. 25; Farrar, Overy, and Co., solicitors, 68, Lincoln's Inn-fields, Middlesex.

BUTCHER (Robt. V.), Mare-street, Hackney, Middlesex, butcher. Jan. 6; R. T. Wragg, solicitor, 7, Great St. Helens, London.

CARRER (Rev. Richd. F.), Bowyer, near Fareham, Southampton. Jan. 1; Hellard and Son, solicitors, 132, High-street, Portsmouth.

CLARK (Geo.), Eyre-street, Sheffield, gentleman. Dec. 22; Geo. J. Simpson, solicitor, Wharfedale-chambers, Bank-street, Sheffield.

CLARK (Walter), Rawtheth, Essex, farmer. Jan. 1; E. Woodward, solicitor, 2, Ingram-court, Fenchurch-street, London, and Blicheray, Essex.

COLLYER (Georgina), Masella, near Brentwood, Essex, spinster. Jan. 1; Lawton and Warne, solicitors, Eyo Suffolk.

CRANMER (Jno.), Hunsar Tavern, Great Brook-street, Birmingham, beer retailer and cab proprietor. Jan. 12; J. C. Fowke, solicitor, 47, Ann-street, Birmingham.

CURPHY (Rev. Wm. Thos.), Lodons, Dorset. Jan. 22; Richd. N. Howard, solicitor, East-street, Weymouth, Dorset.

"Katheth", Hoddesdon, Hertford, widow. Jan. 15; Wks. and Phillips, solicitors, Hertford.

DRAKEFIELD (David), formerly of Brookside, Sussex, but late of Elm Grove, Sydenham, Kent, Esq. Dec. 30; Norris, Allen and Carter, solicitors, 20, Bedford-row, London.

DUBOIS (Theodore), Windsor Chambers, Great St. Helens, London, and of Loggan, near Bordeaux, France, wine merchant. Dec. 31; Baker and Nairne, solicitors, 3, Crosby-square, London.

EDBROOK (Harriet, otherwise Harriet), formerly of 3, Cleveland-terrace, Bath, but late Wington, Somerset, spinster. Dec. 30; Wm. E. Perham, solicitor, Wington, near Bristol.

ETTLER (Jno.), formerly of Lord Arden's Arms, New Bond-street, and of the Oxford and Cambridge Store, New Oxford-street, London, and late of Gunley Lodge, Little Ealing, Middlesex. Jan. 1; Fry and Hudson, solicitors, 5 and 6, Hart-street, Mark-lane, London.

FARR (Elisha), Weston, Hertford, farmer. Jan. 31; Samuel Veasey, solicitor, Baldock, Herts.

FAYELL (Jeremiah B.), Sawley-hall, near Ripon, York, Esq. Jan. 19; Stewart and Sons, solicitors, Bank-buildings, Wakefield.

FEIST (Chas. Thos.), 11, Harcombe-road, Stoke Newington, Middlesex, solicitors' clerk. Jan. 1; Chas. Seaman, 32, St. George's-street, Commercial-road, Peckham, London.

FORESHAW (Mary G.), Malseyhampton, widow. Jan. 1; C. W. Lawrence, solicitor, Cirencester.

FORESHAW (Wm.), Malseyhampton, Gloucester, gentleman. Jan. 1; C. W. Lawrence, solicitor, Cirencester.

GRAHAM (Dr. Thos. Jno.), M.D., Epson, Surrey. Jan. 1; Geo. White, solicitor, Court House, Epson.

HARRISON (Lieut. Col. Thos. P.), Barham, near Canterbury, Kent. Feb. 17; Pridaues and Son, solicitors, Goldsmith Hall, London, E.C.

HICKS (Jno.), Sarswich, Kent, auctioneer, cabinet maker, upholsterer, and undertaker. Jan. 31; Thos. Dorman, solicitor, Sandwich.

HUNT (Wm. A.), Teignmouth, Devon, Esq. Jan. 29; Cookson and Co., solicitors, 6, New-square, Lincoln's Inn, London.

JACKSON (Geo.), George House, Vicarage-lane, Stratford, Essex, contractor. Jan. 1; Wilson and Son, solicitors, 68, Basinghall-street, London.

JONES (Mary Ann), Clarence-square, Brighton, Sussex, widow. Dec. 31; Milne, Riddle, and Mellor, solicitors, 2, Harcourt-buildings, Temple, London.

KEMPLEY (Thos.), York, gentleman. Feb. 1; Wm. Walker, solicitor, 18, Lendal, York.

LEWIS (Jno. F.), R.A., Walton-on-Thames, Surrey, Esq. Jan. 1; Hewitt and Alexander, solicitors, 27, Ely-place, Holborn, Middlesex.

LIECH (Thos. C.), Hylton Lodge, North Shields, gentleman. March 1; Liech, Dodd, and Bramwell, solicitors, 22, Howard-street, North Shields.

LOCKYER (Thos.), formerly of Plymouth, afterwards of 20, Grove-street, Liverpool, and late of 41, Brock-road, Everton, near Liverpool, gentleman. Feb. 23; Hooker, Matthews, and Harrison, solicitors, Frankfort-chambers, Plymouth.

LOWE (Alexander), 5, Colville-gardens, Notting-hill, Middlesex, a retired colonel in H.M.'s Madras Engineers. Jan. 1; Bridges and Co., solicitors, 23, Red Lion-square, Middlesex, W.C.

LYND (Anna M.), 6, Bertie-terrace, Leamington, Warwick, spinster. Dec. 23; Meynell and Pemberton, solicitors, 29, Whitehall-place, London.

LYND (Margaret), 6, Bertie-terrace, Leamington, spinster. Dec. 23; Meynell and Pemberton, solicitors, 29, Whitehall-place, London.

LYND (Wm.), Tamworth, Warwick, Esq. Dec. 23; Meynell and Pemberton, solicitors, 29, Whitehall-place, London.

MARKS (Jos.), 7, Tilley-street, Spitalfields, Middlesex, metal merchant. Feb. 10; Saxton and Son, solicitors, 11, Queen Victoria-street, London.

MOS (Alexander), 1, Portland-street, Oxford-street, Middlesex, licensed victualler. Jan. 17; Shuen, Roscoe, and Massey, solicitors, 8, Bedford-row, Holborn.

MORRIS (Richard), Upholland, Lancaster, gentleman. Jan. 1; Scott and Ellis, solicitors, The Arcade, King-street, Wigan.

NAME (Ellen), 25, Orchard-street, St. Dunstan, near Canterbury, spinster. Jan. 27; A. H. Gardner, 3, Bouvier-square, Finsbury, London.

NEDHAM (Anna O.), 27, University-street, Euston-road, Middlesex, spinster. Jan. 6; R. T. Wragg, solicitor, 7, Great St. Helens, London.

ONBARD (Eliza), Cheltenham, spinster. Jan. 30; A. S. Edmunds, solicitor, 11, St. Bride's Avenue, Fleet-street, London.

OXENSHAW (Jno.), formerly of Grendon, Tavistock, Devon, but late of Chester-place, Plymouth, retired yeoman. March 25; J. W. Matthews, solicitor, Frankfort-chambers, Plymouth.

PAGE (Wm. Jas.), Tufnell Arms Hotel, Tufnell-park, Holloway, Middlesex, licensed victualler and cricket bat manufacturer. Jan. 1; Wm. Easton, solicitor, 13, Clifford's Inn, London.

PHILLIPS (Philip), Cefnary, Llywel, Brecon, farmer. Dec. 31; David Thomas, solicitor, High-street, Brecon.

PINTO-LEITE (Mansel), 3, Salter's-hall-court, London, and of 70, Avenue des Champs Elysees, Paris, France, Esq. Jan. 31; E. W. Crosse, solicitor, 7, Lancaster-place, Strand, London.

SHALLIS (Edwin), Ferne Lodge, Lee-road, Kidbrook, Kent, auctioneer. Jan. 1; W. W. Young, solicitor, 13, Newgate-square, London.

STEWART (Elizabeth P.), 2, Camden-villas, Grove-road, South Hackney, widow. Jan. 1; W. W. Young, solicitor, 13, Newgate-square, London.

STRINGER (Thos.), Sandbach, Chester, gentleman. Dec. 30; Arthur H. Thompson, Sandbach.

THOWER (Geo.), Southover, Lewes, brewer and maltster. Jan. 1; Henry Jno. Jones, solicitor, Lewes.

VERDERIA (Rafael), formerly of 7, Jernyn-street, Middlesex, wine merchant, but late of Vineria Lodge, Wellington-road, Hounslow, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 31; W. J. Foster, solicitor, 21, Birch-lane, Cornhill, London.

WALLER (Mary), East Bank, Fallowfield, Lancaster, spinster. Feb. 1; Chapman and Co., solicitors, 32, Fountain-street, Manchester.

WALKER (Jno.), Victoria House, King Edward's-road, South Hackney, Middlesex, Esq. Jan. 1; W. W. Young, solicitor, 13, Newgate-square, London.

WARNER (Thornston), formerly of Trinidad, West Indies, but late Garden Reach, Calcutta, West Indies, Esq. Dec. 18; Frank H. Tanner, solicitor, Wimborne-Minster, Dorset.

WHITTON (Jos.), formerly of Barton Villa, Farnworth, but late of Penman, 1, 1; O. Northgraves, solicitor, 91, Bradshaw-gate, Bolton.

REPORTS OF SALES.

Wednesday, Nov. 23.

By Messrs. E. WYATT and SOX, at Chichester.
Three plots of land, containing 5a. 2r. 18p.—sold for £200.

Tuesday, Nov. 23.

By Mr. S. WALKER, at the Mart.
City of London.—No. 48, Shoe-lane, term 22 years—sold for £1230.

By Mr. J. H. GREEN, at the Mart.

Hammersmith.—No. 16, Bath-terrace, term 30 years—sold for £310.

By Messrs. HARVEY and DAVIES, at the Mart.
Chelsea.—No. 23, Margaretta-terrace, term 6 years—sold for £310.

By Messrs. CHICKOCK, GALSWORTHY, and COLLIER, at the Mart.
Portman Estate.—No. 69, Upper Berkeley-street, term 30 years—sold for £220.

By Mr. W. H. MOORE, at the Mart.
Greenwich.—Freehold ground rent of £25 per annum—sold for £700.

Barnes.—Nos. 1 and 2, Merthyr-terrace, term 2 years—sold for £635.

Poplar.—Nos. 41 to 44, Hebondale-street, term 5 years—sold for £200.

By Messrs. FULLER and FULLER, at the Mart.
Wheatstone.—Nos. 7 to 15, St. John's-row, No. 6, St. John's-terrace, and the "Three Horse Shoe" house, term 40 years—sold for £1000.

Kentish-town.—Nos. 92 and 94, Islip-street, term 3 years—sold for £240.

By Messrs. HARDS, VAUGHAN, and JENKINS, at the Mart.
Dorset, Buckland Newton.—The New Inn public-house cottage adjoining, freehold—sold for £750.

By Messrs. J. JACOB and SON, at the Mart.
Islington, Essex-road.—The lease and goodwill of "Old Queen's Head," term 24 years—sold for £200.

By Messrs. MARKS and WALKER, at the Mart.
Great Doyers-street.—The lease and goodwill of "The House," term 20 years—sold for £2800.

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

Inquiries, as to the several Examinations, to Admission on the Roll of the Supreme Court, as to being called to the Bar, and as to the out and renewal of annual certificates, should be addressed to the Editor (Students' Department).

THE following lectures and classes are open to be delivered and held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, during ensuing week: Monday, Conveyancing (10 to 6 o'clock p.m.); Tuesday, ditto; Wednesday, ditto; Thursday, lecture on Equity, 6 to 8 p.m. Subscribers are not admitted to the after the lectures have commenced.

THE next preliminary examination will be held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, various provincial towns on the 21st and 22nd Feb. in the ensuing year.

WHERE articles expire between the 10th and 15th April 1877, candidates may be called Jan. 1877, or, of course, at any subsequent date.

IN case of the death of a principal dupes fresh articles should always be entered up out of loss of time. The time which elapses between the day of the death of the principal and the date of fresh articles being called does not count, so that the further articles be for a time sufficient to make up for the service, as well as for the unexpired term of original articles of clerkship.

AN examination certificate is only available on admission on the roll of the Supreme Court six months from its date, and must otherwise specially enlarged by an order of the Master of the Rolls, which should be applied for at the Bag Office.

ARTICLES of clerkship, or assignments of a clerkship, dated on any day during Dec. must be enrolled and registered at the Bag Office on or before the same days in the June next, and when articles or assignments required to be, and are, enrolled and registered any day during the month of December, they be produced and entered at the Law Office or before the same day of the month of next. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 8 and 9, and 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 7. Failure to comply with statutory requirements often entails a loss of time upon article students.

BRADFORD LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.
THE annual dinner in connection with the Bradford Law Students' Society was held on 1 evening, 13th Nov., at Leuchter's Restaurant. Mr. W. T. S. Daniel, Q.C., the president of the society, occupied the chair, and among present were Mr. Wheelhouse, M.P., Mr. Tindal Atkinson, Mr. George Robinson (Clerk of the Bradford County Court), Mr. McGowen (Town Clerk), Alderman T. H. F. Killick, Mr. S. Robinson, Mr. W. G. and Mr. J. G. Hutchinson. At the close of the feast, which was served in Mr. Leuchter's best style, the usual loyal toasts were given and duly responded to.

The President, in moving "Our President," said that he would revert for a few moments to the position of the Profession at the present time. He had himself probably been a member of the Profession longer than any man in the room was entering on the fifty-third year since he became an article clerk. He began on the steps of the ladder, and though he had mounted very high, it had always been his to stand steady and firm on every step that took, not caring about a rapid flight upwards such as being quite sure and firm where he was. It had always been his fond desire—some might call it a Quixotic notion—that the Profession should be made of such a character that its practitioners should become objects not of respect but of confidence, that it should be thought a singular and an extraordinary thing that a man should have for his epitaph, "Here lies an honest lawyer," but that the Profession should be so conducted from the highest to the lowest that, making all allowance for conventional distinctions between the highest judge and the humblest practitioner, the same feeling of respect should be felt by all who came within the sphere of the one or the influence of the other. He eyed such a state of things as capable of being realised. If it could be realised by one individual there was no limit to the number of individuals by whom it might be realised, and as the character of the bulk depended on the character of the individual grains of which it was composed, if each individual was good, the bulk must be good too. He said then, to his younger friends who were present, and whose arrests they were met more particularly to serve, that the Profession was now, as it were, in a transition state in this respect, that the almost naive social distinctions which existed between one branch and the other were dying away, that the difference in social status between the one and the other had almost, if not entirely, ceased. In London, the centre of prejudice and intimate adherence to that which was old, whether it was valuable or not, these distinctions had to a great extent given way. He would recommend to young friends, without relaxing to any extent their diligence in the discharge of their special duties at the present, to look onwards and upwards. The late meeting of the Incorporated Law Society at Oxford suggested views to the article which he held throughout the country which they ought to consider, and, if they could, to take advantage of by combining with the study of the practical part of their profession the cultivation of a more liberal education. Don't let them think of confining themselves to books of practice or to cases on law; let them make themselves familiar with science in its various forms. He supported the suggestion that had been made that a term of five years should be shortened to three in favour of students who could pass proper examinations at Oxford or Cambridge. It was by proving themselves in those branches of knowledge which were distinct from the practice of their profession that the younger members could separate themselves for obtaining equality in social position with the members of the Bar. He did not wish to suggest the notion that there could be no distinction, but his notion was that no distinction should be simply that which arose from the difference between advocacy and practice, and that facilities should be given by the House of Court, who had the power of calling persons to the Bar, and by the regulations of the Incorporated Law Society, who had the privilege of granting certificates of fitness for admission to a roll of solicitors—that facilities should be given of such a character on both sides that if young men desired to become members of the Bar, and when they had attained to that position and that circumstances caused them to desire to degrade themselves or to go lower, but to rise from the one branch of the profession to the other, the means of transition should be easy. On the other hand, he desired to see that if a man became a solicitor, and he found that he had powers within him which would enable him to be the branch of advocacy in preference to that of agency, greater facilities than now existed should be provided for the passage from the one branch to the other. The regulations were at present such that very few men would undergo any disadvantages. Instances had occasionally occurred, as that of Mr. Field, formerly the junior partner in a firm of solicitors in London, and that of Mr. Manisty, who was articled in Newcastle, and who also afterwards became a junior member of a firm of solicitors in London, which showed that sometimes men were able to rise from the one branch of the profession to the highest position in the other. He very little doubted, if the transition was rendered more easy, that a greater number of such cases would occur, because, he did not hesitate to say that a solicitor's office, where the business was conducted by men of experience, men of principle, and men of honour, was the very best school in which a man could gain, for the purpose of qualifying himself to attain to the very highest position at the Bar. Mr. J. T. Last, in proposing the toast of "The President," said that the success of a society such as theirs depended in a large measure on the support it received from gentlemen of position in the Profession. In this respect the Bradford Law Students' Society was greatly favoured in having its respected County Court judge as its president. The society in a great degree owed its success to his presidency and support; he was always ready to assist the members of the society in every way in his power, and the members of the society were proud to have such a gentleman at their head. The toast having been drunk with musical honours and "three times three,"

The President, in responding, asked whether, if it should fall to his lot on the following day to hear a case in which some of those present should think his decision was wrong, and that he had been very obstinate and determined to have his own way, he would be "a jolly good fellow" then? Apart from all joking, however, he did not think that he had done anything beyond what was necessarily involved in that which he had undertaken when they had conferred on him the distinction of being the president of their society. They would allow him to say, however, that the one object of his ambition had been to try to satisfy the public and the Profession within the area in which he lived that it was possible for a judge to reside amongst those who were subject to his jurisdiction, and yet to retain their respect. One of the greatest objections urged by people who lived in the narrow sphere of London—for London, notwithstanding its numbers, was really a little place, where opinion moved in certain small grooves and circles—was that justice could not be administered in the manner in which it ought to be administered by a judge living in the midst of those who were subject to his jurisdiction; that he must get prejudices; that there would be sure to be some influence exercised by gentlemen whose hospitality he enjoyed; and that it was impossible for a judge of an inferior court to have the proper status with the Profession. In London he knew that this was the notion, and when he went up to London twice a year to take his seat at Lincoln's Inn, he could not help feeling that there was a want of respect, because it was thought that he had stepped down by accepting the position which he held. That was not his notion; he thought it had been a step upwards. He felt that if a man did his duty in that position, with all the disadvantages of a want of social position and a supposed professional degradation, that he was rising in his profession, and not falling. He believed that it was possible for a man to do his duty, and he owed a debt to those who had enabled him to feel that he was able to live among them, and to decide against them; to receive their hospitality and yet be one of them, and yet in his seat of judgment to have respect paid to him.

Mr. Hird proposed "The Vice-Presidents," which was acknowledged by Mr. W. T. McGowen, who congratulated their president on his having been removed from the "little sphere" of London to a district where his usefulness was far greater than it could have been if he had been appointed to a higher position in the metropolis. Speaking to the younger members of the Profession who were present, he reminded them that though their profession was not a profitable one, it was an honourable one; and one thing they could be sure of, that they never need have an idle hour on their hands, because there was not a man living who knew the law of England from beginning to end.

The Secretary (Mr. J. K. Holmes) read the report of the society for the past session, which stated that the interest awakened upon the society's formation had been fully maintained was proved by the continued attendance of old members, by the increased number of members, and by the practical work accomplished. The society's early struggles into existence had been safely passed, and it now presented every promise of vitality. In November last, the society joined the United Law Students' Society, and, by the union thereby effected, members of the former society were entitled to become members of the latter, without election or payment of entrance fees. They might also join the Legal Correspondence Department of that society without entrance fee. Full particulars might be obtained of the secretary, who received regularly the circular and other papers of the United Law Students' Society, which were open to the inspection of members. There had not been many changes among the officers of the society during the past session, but still there had been a few, of which the following are the most important:—Mr. Thomas Senior had been appointed a vice-president of the society, in the place of the late Mr. Joseph Dawson. It was also found necessary to appoint a librarian, and Mr. Barlow was elected to that post. In consequence of the successful efforts which were made to induce members to join the society at its commencement, it could hardly have been expected that any increase would occur in number during the second year. It was the more gratifying to be able to announce that the list of 1876 comprised two more names than did that of 1875, the numbers for those years being eighty-four and eighty-two respectively, of whom fifty-nine were honorary members and twenty-five ordinary members. Eighteen meetings had been held during the past session, at which nine legal and seven jurisprudential or social questions had been debated, and several motions passed in connection with the constitution of the society. The average attendance at each meeting had been fifteen, and the average number of speakers at each meeting, six. The lively interest shown by the honorary members in the society was evidenced by the fact that twelve of the above meetings had been presided over by honorary members, who, whilst their presence had been very encouraging to the students, thus showing an appreciation of the labours of the latter, had also materially assisted them in acquiring an accurate knowledge of the law, and helped them in rightly deciding the several matters under discussion. In November last Mr. J. Tanner Ray offered a prize of the value of £5 5s. to the author of the best essay on a subject to be chosen by the president, with whom was to be left the decision as to the merits of the essays sent in. The subject chosen by him was as follows: "The law of fraudulent preference as depending on the Bankruptcy Act 1869, and its comparative advantages and disadvantages to debtors and creditors." The society also offered a prize of the value of £2 10s. to the author of the second best essay on the same subject. The president having given his decision, it was arranged that the prizes should be distributed by him at the last meeting but one of the session; and on that occasion (17th May), in making the presentation, Mr. Daniel observed that he was glad to see the amount of diligence, the attentive reading, and the careful attention that had been given by those gentlemen who had sent in papers for the competition for the prizes. Mr. W. H. Clough, articled to Messrs. Terry and Robinson was awarded the first honorary member's prize, consisting of Smith's Compendium of Real and Personal Property, and Dart's Vendors and Purchasers. Mr. C. J. Vint, articled to Messrs. Wood and Killick, was awarded the second (Society's) prize, consisting of Wharton's Law Lexicon, and Smith's Manual of Equity. The committee sincerely regretted that there were only four competitors, and hoped that the members would more fully show their appreciation of the kindness of the honorary members in forwarding the interests of the society by competing in larger numbers for the prize which Mr. Dickons had kindly offered for competition during the next session. The committee felt that the sincerest thanks of the society were due to the President, not only for his careful and painstaking consideration of the essays, and for his more than kindness in presenting two extra prizes, but also for the uniform interest which he had always shown in the society and its welfare. The following members had passed the Incorporated Law Society's examinations since the issue of the last report—viz., Mr. H. Saville, articled to Messrs. Yewdall and Son, intermediate; Mr. C. H. Douthwaite, articled to Mr. George Curry, final; Mr. W. Tunncliffe, articled to Messrs. Peel and Gaunt, final. The late session concluded with the trial of an imaginary action at Nisi Prius, for breach of contract, before Mr. J. H. Wade, as judge, and a special jury, consisting of the members present on the occasion and not otherwise engaged in the case. The trial was looked forward to with much interest by the society, and brought together the largest meeting of the session. It was as successful as any innovation can expect to be, and the committee suggested that it should be made the annual ending of each session. There were at present fifteen works in the library, mostly text books and guides. Since the opening of the library in Nov. last, there had been seventy issues of books. Taking into consideration that there were only fifteen works in the library, it might be said that it had been very extensively used, and if enlarged would doubtless add to the success of the society. The committee had to thank Mr. T. Spink for his generous offer to lend books to the society. The committee had pleasure in reporting that the finances were in a flourishing condition. The expenditure had been £50 3s. 7½d., and the receipts £53 1s. 6d., thus making, with the surplus of last year, a balance of £62 1s. 10d. In conclusion, the committee trusted that the society might continue to deserve the support, both pecuniary and otherwise, which had been so lavishly bestowed upon it; and that the ordinary members would take care to lay hold of every opportunity for advancement in knowledge which the society held out to them.

BRIGHTON AND SUSSEX LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of law students was held in the Mayor's room, Town Hall, Brighton, on Monday evening last. Present, Messrs. Booth, Boxall, Buckwell, Fabling, Goldsmid, Nye, Phillips, Pope, Smithurst, and Stuckey, to consider the desirability of forming a Society of Law Students in Brighton. Mr. Schneider was voted to the chair, and after discussion it was resolved to establish a Law Students' Society for gentlemen articled to solicitors in Brighton, and that gentlemen articled to solicitors practising in any other part of the county should be eligible for election. Mr. Bacon Phillips was elected hon. treasurer, and Mr. Booth hon. secretary. An executive committee consisting of Messrs. Boxall, Phillips, Schneider, and Stuckey was elected to arrange preliminaries and prepare a draft of the rules. After passing a vote of thanks to his Worship the Mayor, for allowing the use of his room the meeting was adjourned to Monday next at eight o'clock.

DUBLIN LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

A general meeting of the society was held in the Lecture Hall, King's Inns, on Monday evening, 27th November, when the following subject was debated: "That the recent action of Mr. Gladstone deserves our approval." (What "recent action" is referred to does not appear.)

HULL LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

At an ordinary meeting of the society, held on Tuesday, 28th Nov. 1876, Mr. Lambert (in the absence of the appointed chairman) in the chair, the following point was discussed: "Articles of food are supplied by a victualler to B. by order, and at the expense of A. The food is bad, and injures B.'s health. Can B. sue the victualler?" The voting was in favour of the negative.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

At the meeting of this society, held at the Law Institution on Tuesday evening last, Mr. C. A. Betts in the chair, the question discussed was: "Is it desirable that in criminal cases the accused person should be competent to give evidence?" Mr. S. Garrett, B.A., opened the debate by supporting the affirmative, and after a good and animated, though rather short, discussion, the society came to a decision for the negative by a majority of one.

LIVERPOOL LAW STUDENTS' ASSOCIATION.

THE fifth meeting of this association for the session 1876-77, was held in the Law Library, Cook-street, on Monday, the 27th Nov., E. H. Bleas, Esq., in the chair. The following was the subject for discussion: "A. is seized with two closes of land B. and C.; a house is erected on C., the eaves of which overhang B., A. sells B. to D., and afterwards C. to F.; can D. compel F. to remove the eaves?" Mr. Melhuish opened in the negative, and was followed by Mr. Thompson in the affirmative. An animated discussion ensued in which Messrs. Sparrow, Collins, Norton, Pride, and Rogers, joined. Mr. Melhuish having replied, the question was put to the meeting, and decided in the negative by a majority of five. There were twenty-three members present.

THE MANCHESTER LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

THE second ordinary meeting of the above society was held on Tuesday evening, 21st Nov., at the Law Library, Cross-street Chambers. The chair was taken by Joseph Maghull Yates, Esq., B.A., barrister-at-law. The subject for discussion was as follows: "A., whose business it is to let out barges for hire for the conveyance of goods—he providing the necessary crew, but the hirer having in each case to fix the points of the barges' arrival and departure—lets a barge to B. to carry a cargo from M. to N. On the passage a portion of the cargo is, without any negligence on the part of A. or his servants, damaged by water. Is A. liable as a common carrier for such loss?"

The following members were present: Messrs. Farrington, Simpson, Hampeon, Higham, Hislop, Wilde, E. Hewitt, Etheridge, A. Walmsley, W. Slater, Lawson, Watts, Barlow, Openshaw, Napier, Attkins, Hardman, Sykes, Flower, Jones, Wallis, Richardson, Williams, and the secretary.

Mr. Barlow opened the discussion in the affirmative, referring to Lyon v. Melis, but relied chiefly on the decision in Liver Alkali Company v. Johnson, which he contended was not affected by Nugent v. Smith, where the peculiar character of the article carried was the ground of decision.

The Honorary Secretary (Mr. Philip Casper) followed on the part of the negative, and remarked that Lyon v. Melis was not directly applicable, because in that case there was admitted negligence, whereas in the case before the meeting no negligence was admitted or shown. He also based his arguments on the presumption that there was a special contract in the case arising from the nature of the transaction.

Mr. Sykes supported Mr. Barlow, quoting the case of Liver v. Drury (8 Ex. 166) to prove that the bargeowner must come under the denomination of a general carrier.

Mr. Flower followed in the negative, referring to Saury on Bailments, s. 301, and to Brind v. Moon & R. S., wherein it was decided that a town carrier who did not carry for everybody generally was not a common carrier.

Mr. Watts, in the absence of Mr. Smith, supported the affirmative, quoting Rich v. Kneeland (Cro. Jac. 330), and was followed by Mr. Hislop in the negative.

Mr. Barlow replied on all the arguments.

After the meeting had been severally addressed by Messrs. Lawson, Hampson, and Atkins in the affirmative, and Messrs. Hardman and Simpson in the negative, the Chairman proceeded to sum up the arguments brought forward, and explained that in olden times the liability of common carriers was extended to that of insurers, in order to prevent collusion between the carrier and third persons.

On the question being put to the meeting, fourteen members voted in the affirmative and ten in the negative, the point being thus carried by a majority of four votes.

Mr. Arthur Ellis, solicitor, of Burslem, was duly elected an honorary member of the society.

A vote of thanks to the chairman, proposed by Mr. Watts, seconded by Mr. Lawson, and responded to, concluded the proceedings.

PLYMOUTH, STONEHOUSE, AND DEVONPORT LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

At a special meeting held at the Athenaeum, Plymouth on the 24th inst., a draft of the proposed new rules was laid before the society by the revision committee. After a long debate the further consideration of the rules was adjourned.

UNITED LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at Clement's-inn Hall, on Wednesday evening, the 22nd Nov. Mr. Dowson opened the subject for the evening's debate, viz., "That there is not sufficient evidence to justify a belief in ghosts or spiritualism." The motion gave rise to an animated discussion, and was in the end carried by a majority of nine. Thirty members were present. At the meeting to be held next week the following subject will be discussed: "That it is desirable to abolish all restriction on the sale of intoxicating liquors." To be supported by Messrs. Simpson and Mayle; to be opposed by Messrs. Seely and Merton.

Another meeting was held at Clement's-inn Hall on Wednesday, 29th Nov. 1876. Mr. Shirley Shirley, B.A., in the chair. Mr. W. Simpson opened the question for debate, viz.: "That it is desirable to abolish all Restrictions on the Sale of Intoxicating Liquors." The negative was carried by a considerable majority. Twenty-seven members were present. At next week's meeting the following adjourned debate will be further discussed: "That the Learned Professions should be open to Women."

Queries.

READING FOR THE FINAL.—I shall be much obliged if you will inform me which are the best books to read for the final in the three essential subjects, so as to ensure a pass?

[Among the books which should be read and studied are: Stephen's Commentaries, Williams' Real and Williams' Personal Property, Smith's Action at Law (last edition), Smith's Manual of Common Law, Smith's Manual of Equity, The Judicature Acts and Rules, The Common Law Procedure Acts, Smith's Equity Manual.—Ed.]

FINAL EXAMINATION.—Will you please inform me when I can present myself for the Final Examination, my articles expiring on the 29th July, 1877?

[If of age, in June 1877.—Ed.]

—I was articulated on the 8th June, 1873, for five years; when can I go up for my Final? I think there is an examination in April, but do not know the day; can I go in for that?

[Not till June 1877.—Ed.]

—I was articulated on the 27th Oct., 1873, for five years, kindly inform me the earliest time at which I can present myself for the above examination?

[June 1878.—Ed.]

ARTICLED CLERKS AND THE LONDON UNIVERSITY.—In your issue of the 24th ult. (Solicitors' Journal), you mention that the London University offers facilities for articled clerks taking degrees in law. Does that University allow the preliminary examination to stand in the room of the matriculation? I always understood that they required the matriculation to be passed by everybody before examination for degrees.

—You are correct in your view on the particular point.—Ed.]

J. HUNTER, Esq., Surgeon, Bridport, Dorsetshire writes:—"I consider BRACE'S NERVINE a specific for toothache. Very severe cases under my care have found instantaneous and permanent relief. I therefore recommend its use to the Profession and the Public as invaluable to all who suffer from toothache."—Adv.

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

THE DIVIDED PARISHES AND POOR LAW AMENDMENT ACT 1876.

THE 34TH SECTION OF THE 39 & 40 VICT. c. 61 IN a former number we drew attention to the 34th section of "The Divided Parishes and Poor Law Amendment Act 1876," which gives a settlement in the shape of a three years' tenuous residence in a union. The words of the section, it will be observed, are, "where a person shall have resided for the term of three years in any parish, in such manner and at such circumstances in each of such years, would, in accordance with the several statutes that behalf, render him irremovable, he shall be deemed to be settled therein until he shall acquire a settlement in some other parish by a licence or otherwise," and in considering this question we came to the conclusion that when a settlement was once acquired it remained operation until another like settlement was required, and this, notwithstanding he may be removed from the parish or union, and no longer have retained his residence there. If this section, however, a far more important question arises, namely, whether or not this settlement can be acquired only in future? In judgment of many, the section has reference to a three years' residence enjoyed only after passing of the Act; whilst in that of others it confers a settlement upon all who at the time its passing had fulfilled the condition of three years' residence. This difference of opinion serves a careful consideration, for it is observed; that if the former view of the scope of the section be the correct one, the section be altogether inoperative for the next three years.

Upon mature reflection we have come to the opinion that the section operates at once on three years' residence, and, therefore, at this time a party chargeable has resided tinnously for three years in a parish or union has acquired a settlement under the section.

A graver question, however, arises, as to whether or not, where at this time, a pauper is not in the parish of a former three years' residence such former three years' residence can be to be within the terms of the statute. Let us suppose that during the year 1873 and two years a pauper had resided continuously in the parish of the union of A., and that in the year 1876 he had resided in a parish in the union of B., and there become chargeable—order of removal be made for his removal from the union of A. as being the union in which his settlement was included by virtue of his three years' residence? The terms of the statute are, "where any person shall have resided for the term of three years in any parish," &c. words clearly indicate a past residence; they have been, "where any person shall have resided for the term of three years," &c. a future residence would obviously alone confer the settlement. We can, moreover, see no good reason in the Legislature, when making such radical changes in the law of parochial settlement, as it does in a single section, the derivative settlements, should not at once upon all, this new settlement. No injury be done to any parties by such an interpretation, but on the contrary, the obvious object of the Legislature will be promoted.

The question must shortly come under consideration of the Queen's Bench Division until then it will no doubt give rise to diversity of opinion.

LICENSING ACTS—BREWSTER SESSIONS.

WE have received the following from Mr. Smith, J.P. for Gloucestershire:

The numbers of LAW TIMES for the 23rd and 30th Sept., 1876, contain four on the above subject. No. 1 having reference to "The new licence;" No. 2, to renewal of a licence; No. 3, to "The trade licence;" and No. 4, to "Confirmation peals." They are all exceedingly well written; useful; but in some parts they are somewhat not quite accurate or correct.

No. 1 begins: "The general annual meeting, commonly called 'Brewster Sessions,' that is, the 'Brewster Sessions,' with the articles are headed, are identical 'General annual licensing meetings' section 1 of the Alehouse Act, 1823, only; and, therefore, the expression applicable to any of the 'Special sessions' appointed under section 4 of that Act, namely 'Petty sessions.' This must be mind in considering some of the following provisions.

In No. 2 it is said, that under the Act the holder of a licence had not the least a title to ask for a "renewal," that occurring in the Act. But it is apparent section 1 gave that right by implication the "The general annual licensing meeting" be holden for the purpose of granting licences to persons keeping or being about to keep a house, and the former expression necessarily refers to a person already licensed, which therefore means a renewal.

The effect of Reg. v. Rowell is not accurately stated. The question was really whether, under the circumstances of that case, the justices had authority to refuse the grant of a beerhouse licence, notwithstanding sect. 19 of the Act of 1872. And the court held not only that they had jurisdiction, but it was very doubtful whether they had jurisdiction to entertain the application—licences having expired.

Section 3 states very correctly that transfers of cases are made under ss. 4, 14 of the above Act at "special sessions." But, as already served, "special sessions," are not "brewster sessions," and it is clear, from the definition of a transfer of a licence, as contained in sect. 72 of the Act of 1872, that it can only be made "in special sessions," under ss. 4, 14 of 1872—the sum to the contrary in Messrs. Lely and Clarke's work on the Licensing Acts, 2nd ed., p. 207 notwithstanding.

The power to grant licences under sect. 1 of the Act is clearly limited to new licences and renewals, whereas that contained in sect. 4 applies "is limited to persons intending to keep inns, and theretofore kept by other persons," the two being altogether separate and distinct, and being an acknowledged rule that where there is express power none can arise by implication.

Therefore, No. 3 was intended to infer that a transfer of a licence can be made at "Brewster sessions," it is considered to be erroneous; and it were not, it ought not to have been put forward as a heading.

The same error occurs as to Reg. v. Powell. The reference to 5 & 6 Vict. c. 44, is not accurate. Justices in petty sessions are not thereby empowered to transfer a licence until a special session. Their power is confined to giving an independent authority to a person to whom a licence is intended to be transferred, to carry on a business without a licence, until the then next special session.

By sect. 27 of 1828 a right of appeal is given to a person who is aggrieved by any act of any justice in or concerning the execution of that Act. Surely the grant of a transfer licence is as much an act of justices under that Act as the refusal would be. All the cases on that question (see cited) show that if the party who opposes a grant be really and substantially aggrieved by the grant, he may appeal to quarter sessions.

In Reg. v. Justices of Middlesex, the excise case had not expired; and therefore it was the court held that the justices in special session had jurisdiction to grant a transfer licence to a new tenant, notwithstanding the refusal of the Brewster Sessions to grant a renewal to the present tenant.

In Reg. v. Taylor the facts were exactly the same as in the Middlesex case, except that in the latter, the application for a renewal had been made by the outgoing tenant (being the only person to whom a renewal could be granted), and in Reg. v. Taylor it was made by the new tenant, suo suo, and without any previous transfer to him. In all that the court held was that under those circumstances Taylor was not entitled to a grant under sect. 14, as in the case of the old tenant being omitted or neglected to apply for a renewal.

In Claydon v. Green there was, in fact, no licence on the day on which the purchase was to have been completed; and the decision is, simply, that the purchaser was not bound to accept a new licence that had since been granted to another party, in lieu of a transfer of the licence which he had contracted.

No. 4 the same question is repeated as to the right to appeal against the grant of a licence as is done in No. 3, but with less confidence. "There must be no appeal. We do not believe that question has been raised since 1872, but we line to think that he who opposes a renewal must make out his case before the justices below, and has no locus standi in quarter sessions." No reason is given for that opinion, and, as before observed, all the cases are against it. Reg. v. Deane (2 Q. B. 96); Reg. v. Justices of Cheshire (11 A. & E. 139); Reg. v. Justices of Middlesex (3 B. & Adol. 938); Winn v. Wismann (L. Rep. Ex. 292; 38 L. J. 200 Ex.); see Davies v. Douglas (38 L. J. 193, M. C.; 23 P. 135); 1872 forms no dividing line, as suggested. The appeals are still, as formerly, made under sect. 27 of 1828; and, as noticed in No. 2, sect. 42 of the Act of 1872, preserves and continues the law as to renewals just as it was before, subject to appeal to quarter sessions.

The 19th section of the Judicature Act 1873, has no reference to licensing cases, unless they have previously brought under the cognizance of the High Court of Justice, or a judge thereof.

The case referred to at the end as "not reported" is Reg. v. Justices of Birmingham (40 J. P. 132).

There is no appeal to quarter sessions respecting the grant, renewal, or transfer of beerhouse certificates. As to new certificates, sect. 27 of 1874 is conclusive. As to transfers, if, according to R. v. Smith (alias R. v. Southport Justices) sect. 27 of 1828 had been inserted in ipsis verbis in sect. 8 of 1869, it would only have given an appeal from acts of justices in or concerning the execution of that Act—the Act of 1869. Transfers are not made under that Act, but under 1870. Therefore, the appeal so given would not apply to transfers. As to renewals, the appeal was given by means of sect. 27 of the Act of 1828 being incorporated in sect. 8 of 1869, by the words "and as to appear from any act of any justice." Sect. 27 of 1828 is the only enactment to which sect. 27 of 1874 can refer as "a repealed enactment." Therefore the incorporation of that repealed enactment, as so made, was repealed by sect. 27 of 1874, and sect. 8 of 1869 must be read as if no such incorporation had ever been made.

So there is now no enactment that gives any right of appeal to quarter sessions from any Act of any justice in relation to the grant or refusal of beerhouse certificates, whether new, renewal, or transfer.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

LEASE—CONSTRUCTION OF—LEASE AND COUNTERPART—HABENDUM AND REDDENDUM.—Where the habendum of a lease differs from the reddendum as to the duration of the term, the statement in the habendum must prevail. So even where the counterpart of the lease confirms the reddendum and contradicts the habendum. In the habendum of a lease granted in 1784, the term was expressed to be for ninety-four and a quarter years, whilst in the reddendum it was for ninety-one and a quarter years, and in the counterpart it was expressed, both in the reddendum and habendum, to be for ninety-one and a quarter years. Held, that as between the assignee of the reversion and the assignee of the lease there could be no reformation of the lease, even if the circumstances under which the lease was executed showed that the intention of the parties was that it should be a lease for ninety-one and a quarter years, but that the habendum must prevail and the lease be regarded as one for ninety-four and a quarter years: (Bushell v. Clark, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 372, C. P.)

PAYMENT OF TESTATOR'S DEBTS—MARSHALLING OF ASSETS—PECUUNIARY LEGATEES—RESIDUARY DEVISEES.—The rule laid down by Lord Chelmsford in Hensman v. Fryer (17 L. T. Rep. N. S. 394; L. Rep. Ch. 420), that when the residuary personal estate of a testator is insufficient for the payment of debts, the residuary devisees must contribute ratably with the pecuniary legatees, is at variance with the settled rule of the court. The pecuniary legacies must be exhausted before the residuary devise is charged. That case not followed. Mirrehouse v. Scarfe (2 My. & Cr. 695), Collins v. Lewis (L. Rep. 8 Eq. 708), Dugdale v. Dugdale (27 L. T. Rep. N. S. 705; L. Rep. 14 Eq. 234), and Tomkins v. Colthurst (1 L. Rep. Ch. D. 626) followed: (Farquharson v. Floyer, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 355, Chan. Div.)

BILL OF SALE—AFFIDAVIT FILED ON REGISTRATION.—The affidavit filed on registering a bill of sale, which latter was executed and bore date on the 17th Feb., 1876, stated that the bill of sale "was given on the day on which it bore date," and further stated that it was executed and bore date on the "17th Feb. 1806." It then proceeded to state the residence and occupation of the attesting witness as follows, a clerk at No. 43, Lombard-street, and it gave also his domestic residence at another address. Objections having been taken to the validity of the bill of sale by reason of the affidavit containing an erroneous statement of the date of the bill of sale, and an insufficient description of the occupation of the attesting witness as a "clerk." Held by the court (Cookburn, C.J., and Pollock, B.) first, that "1806" was an obvious and palpable clerical error for "1876," the means of correcting which were afforded in the affidavits, which stated that the bill of sale was given on the day it bore date, so that no creditor could be misled thereby; and that on the principle of "Utile per inutile non vitiatur" the bill of sale was not invalidated by such clerical error. Secondly, that the description of the occupation of the attesting witness as a "clerk," being true, and his residence being also correctly given was a sufficient description of such "occupation." (Lamb v. Bruce; Duggan v. the Same; Cooper v. the Same, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 425, Ex. Div.)

LEGAL NEWS.

Mr. S. D. WADDY, Q.C., M.P. for Barnstaple, and Mr. P. C. GATES, Q.C., have been elected Benchers of the Hon. Society of the Inner Temple, in place of Mr. H. W. Cole, Q.C., and Mr. P. A. Pickering, Q.C., deceased.

The prize of £20 offered by Archdeacon Hessey, preacher to Gray's-inn, to the student of that society who shall pass the best examination in the first book of Hooker's "Ecclesiastical Polity," and Butler's "Sermons on Human Nature," has been gained by Mr. Ernest C. Thomas, B.A. (and scholar) of Trinity College, Oxford. Mr. Thomas is also "Bacon" scholar (1875) of his inn.

A CASE was called on on Thursday in the Court of Appeal, when it appeared that, although it was impossible for the court to deal with it unless they had the evidence before them, no copy of the judge's notes at the trial was forthcoming, none having been bespoken by the solicitor for the appellants. Lord Justice Mellish, in ordering the case to be adjourned for the production of the notes, commented on the frequency of similar cases of neglect of duty on the part of solicitors, who ought by this time to know the rules laid down in such cases.

AWFUL NEWS FOR ARTICLED CLERKS.—A correspondent writes: "In some pleasant papers, entitled 'Recollections of Writers,' contributed to the Gentleman's Magazine by Mr. and Mrs. Cowden Clarke, occurs the following passage, relative to the career of Mr. Clarke's father:—'As a youth he was articled to a lawyer, at Northampton; but from the first he felt a growing repugnance to the Profession, and this repugnance was brought to unbearable excess by having to spend one whole night in seeking a substitute for performing the duty which devolved upon him, from the sheriff's unwillingness to fulfil the absent executioner's office of hanging a culprit condemned to die on the following morning.' After forty-five years' practice as a solicitor, this comes to me as rather startling intelligence. The duty above referred to must have been construed to come under that clause in the articles, 'his master's lawful commands everywhere gladly do;' but I fancy Mr. Clarke did not quite like the adverb in it! Truly the ignorance of literary men as to law and lawyers is something astounding!"

WAREHAM, DORSET, NOV. 25.—At a special meeting of the Mayor and capital burgesses, in whom the election is vested, held this morning, Mr. Freeland Filliter, of St. Martin's House, Wareham, solicitor, was unanimously appointed recorder under the charter granted to the town by Queen Anne, in the place of the late Oliver William Farrer, deceased, and whose obituary lately appeared in our columns. The present new recorder's predecessors have all been barristers, except in the case of Mr. Thomas Bartlett, an influential solicitor of the town, who was recorder for some years, being eligible as such under the charter. Those who have held the office before Mr. Filliter, included—besides Mr. Farrer—the Right Honourable Nathaniel Bond, a leading barrister in the Western Circuit of his day, and who also held the important office of Judge Advocate-General under Geo. III. and the beginning of the reign of Geo. IV., besides several others, members of this ancient family, well known and respected in this part of Dorsetshire. The recorder's duties now are chiefly the useful ones of an official justice of the peace for the borough, as much of the original jurisdiction conferred by the charter has become obsolete and transferred to the county quarter sessions, and County Court for the Wareham district. This corporation has lately appeared before the Municipal Corporation Commissioners, sitting at 2, Victoria-street, Westminster, under very favourable circumstances.

MIDDLE TEMPLE.—On the Grand day of Michaelmas term, the Benchers of the Middle Temple, according to custom, entertained several of Her Majesty's Judges and other distinguished guests at dinner in their ancient hall. There was a large attendance of barristers and students. The treasurer (Mr. J. J. Powell, Q.C.) presided, and the guests included the Rev. Dr. Vaughan, Master of the Temple, the Earl of Carnarvon, Lord Coleridge, Sir George Bramwell, Vice-Chancellor Malins, Mr. Justice Manisty, the Treasurer of Gray's-inn, the Treasurer of New-inn, Master Brewer, the Rev. Alfred Ainger, Reader at the Temple Church, Mr. Park Nelson, and Mr. Charles Shaw, the under-treasurer. The Benchers present were Sir Robert Phillimore, Sir John Karlake, Vice-Chancellor Hall, Mr. Anderson, Q.C., the Common Serjeant, M.P., Mr. Kenyon, Q.C., Mr. Johnson, Q.C., Mr. Aspinall, Q.C., Mr. Milward, Q.C., Mr. Cripps, Q.C., Mr. Prentice, Q.C., Mr. Cole, Q.C., M.P., Mr. Roxburgh, Q.C., Mr. Edlin, Q.C., Sir Henry James, M.P., Mr. Pope, Q.C., Mr. Clark, Q.C., Mr. McIntyre, Q.C., Mr. Day, Q.C., Master Beavan, Sir Erskine May, Sir Henry Maine, Mr. Leith, Q.C., M.P., Mr. Wills, Q.C., Mr. Cowie, Q.C., Mr. Speed, Mr. Hosack, Mr. Bowen, Q.C., Mr. Bagshaw, Q.C., and Mr.

Murphy, Q.C. The only toast given was that of "Her Majesty the Queen," which was warmly received. After dinner, on passing down the hall, the principal guests were loudly cheered.

ADVOCATES IN THE LEEDS COUNTY COURT.—In this court (before Mr. Serjt. Tinsal Atkinson, the judge) David Gibbon, plumber and contractor, Little Woodhouse-street, Leeds, sued the Harrogate Gas Company Limited: to recover £6 10s. for goods supplied. Mr. Hardwick appeared for the plaintiff. Mr. Benjamin Hall, the plaintiff's traveller, said that in accordance with an order given him by Mr. Wilkinson, secretary to the defendants, the plaintiff supplied them with nine dozen smoke consumers, the charge for which, including a packing case, was £6 10s. The company kept the goods for a month or six weeks, exhibiting them in their shop window, and then returned them to the plaintiff with a letter stating that they were not according to order, and did not answer the purpose which it was said they would. Mr. Wilkinson, the defendant's secretary, was proceeding with the case for the defence, when his Honour said the secretary of a public company should not be substituted for an advocate in a court of justice; in fact, he could hardly be, in the proper sense of the term, the representative of the company. The word "representative" was very much abused, and it was perhaps necessary, in a case of that kind, to state that there should be some limit as to how far a secretary could, in a court of this kind, represent a public company.—Mr. Farns said that he had to thank his Honour, on the part of the Profession, for his intervention in what was a somewhat difficult question, especially as another class of advocates who appeared in court, to whom his Honour's remarks might be extended, was rapidly on the increase.—His Honour said that so long as he occupied the position of judge, he would endeavour to prevent any abuses of the kind referred to.—Mr. Wilkinson then said that the consumers supplied were not according to a sample shown by the plaintiff's traveller, and that they did not prevent smoke. He and another witness stated that no time was lost in examining the consumers, and in returning them.—His Honour gave a verdict for the defendants.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

BILL OF SALE BY NON-TRADER—REGISTRATION—FIRST BILL OF SALE NOT REGISTERED—SECOND BILL OF SALE OF SAME PROPERTY REGISTERED.—A non-trader debtor executed a bill of sale of chattels, which was not registered, and afterwards executed a bill of sale of the same chattels to another person, and the second bill of sale was registered. The debtor subsequently filed a petition for liquidation of his affairs by arrangement: Held (affirming the decision of the Chief Judge in bankruptcy) that the holder of the second bill of sale was entitled to such of the chattels as had not been seized before the liquidation by the holder of the first bill of sale: (Ex parte Leman: Ex Barread, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 422. Court of App.)

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

Monday, Nov. 27.

Before Mr. Registrar HALLITT.)

Re ROGERS.

Composition—Non-payment—Action—Injunction. This was a motion to restrain Julius Lowenthal from continuing an action to recover a debt of £295, alleged to be due from the debtor. The debtor filed his petition for liquidation in July, and a composition of 3s. 4d. in the pound was accepted. Lowenthal was inserted in the debtor's statement of affairs as a creditor for £173. The proof of Lowenthal was tendered for £293, and the chairman of the meeting marked it "exhibited subject to verification." On the 4th Aug. the resolutions were registered. The first instalment of 2s. was payable one month after registration. On the day of registration the chairman withdrew the objection to Lowenthal's proof.

The debtor informed Lowenthal that he disputed his debt, and did not admit owing more than £173. Previous to the first instalment becoming due he was told that the composition was ready for him on £173, but he refused to take it. He did not give any satisfactory proof of his debt, but commenced an action to recover the £295, which it was now sought to restrain.

F. O. Crump with him W. Wood supported the application, and cited Ex parte Hemmings, re Howard: Ex parte Hoyle, re Hutton: Edwards v. Coombes; Ex parte Pearson, re Duffield; Ex parte Harper, re King.

Montague Scott, solicitor, opposed, and relied on the fact that the objection to the proof had been withdrawn by the chairman.

His Honour granted the application, observing that under the circumstances the creditor's only remedy was by proceeding in the Court of Bankruptcy.

Solicitors for the debtor, Houlders, Barbican.

COUNTY COURTS.

BIRMINGHAM COUNTY COURT.

Tuesday, Nov. 14.

(Before JAMES MOTTERHAM, Esq., Q.C., Judge.)

CHAPMAN v. CUTLER.

Cessant of a bailiff.

THE plaintiff in this action was Arscott Chapman, tobacconist, 24, Congreve-street, and the defendant, J. Cutler, 10, San-street. The action was brought to recover £1 for money lent and work done by the plaintiff for the defendant. The plaintiff claimed 10s. for watching the house of a man named Thompson, against whom Cutler had obtained an execution, and he also claimed a further sum of 10s., having, he alleged, at the request of Cutler, paid that sum to two County Court bailiffs who had levied the execution against Thompson's goods. The case had been partly heard previously and adjourned to enable Chapman to identify the bailiffs to whom he said he had paid the money.

In reply to his Honour the plaintiff now said he could not identify one of the men to whom he had paid 2s. 6d., but he identified the other to whom he had paid 7s. 6d. as Joseph Tomkinson, one of the bailiffs in the employ of the high bailiff of the court.

Tomkinson, on being called, admitted having received the 7s. 6d., but said he had forgotten to report it to the high bailiff. He levied two executions against Thompson, one for £1 6s., and the other for £12, and he was watching the premises two nights from six to nine o'clock, being unable to get in. He did not ask the claimant for any remuneration whatever, and it was after the sale had taken place and the money had been paid out of the court that he received the 7s. 6d. He should have mentioned it to the high bailiff but it "slipped his memory."

His Honour remarked that he thought it was rather a smart sum for a man in his position to receive and forget. It was grossly improper for an officer to take money under such circumstances, and he should not be allowed to retain it. Turning to the high bailiff, his Honour remarked that the man ought to be suspended till inquiries were made as to his antecedents.

Duke, who appeared for the high bailiff, said the man had hitherto been a good officer, and it was hoped this would be a lesson to him.

His Honour said if nothing more were discovered against the man he did not know that there was sufficient to warrant his final dismissal after twenty-five years' service, though he had been guilty of a very grave offence.

The case was then struck out, his Honour refusing to allow the claim under such circumstances.

OLDBURY COUNTY COURT.

Tuesday, Nov. 14.

(Before A. MARTINIAU, Esq., Judge.)

ORME v. TAYLOR.

Husband and wife—Wife's maintenance.

JOHN TAYLOR, landlord of the Crown Inn, the Square, Walsall, was sued by John Orme, butcher, High-street, West Bromwich, for the sum of £7 4s., for sixteen weeks' maintenance of his wife at 9s. per week.

Shakespeare appeared for the plaintiff, and Rhodes, of Wolverhampton, for the defendant.

Shakespeare, in opening the case, said that defendant and his wife formerly kept a beerhouse in a different part of Walsall. In June 1875, the house was taken possession of by a firm of wine and spirit merchants named Dowdewell and Spencer, who had a claim upon it, and they had to leave. The defendant went off somewhere, and his wife went to the plaintiff's house and asked to be allowed to stay there for a night or two. When she had been there a few days her husband provided no home for her, and she requested the plaintiff to allow her to remain there. The consequence of that appeal was that plaintiff supported her for a period of six weeks. At the expiration of that time defendant's wife obtained a situation as barmaid at the Red Lion Hotel, Acceck's-green. She was there for some little time, but on the 9th Oct. returned to plaintiff's house, and remained there till the 9th Jan. 1876. The plaintiff allowed her to do so simply and purely in the belief that the defendant would pay for her maintenance.

This statement was borne out in the evidence of Mrs. Orme and Elizabeth Lewis, the servant girl. The latter stated in cross-examination that occasionally, between October and January, the defendant's wife left the plaintiff's house by visits to other friends.

The defence was that the case had been brought in consequence of a quarrel that had taken place between Mrs. Orme and Mrs. Taylor. Taylor, it was alleged, had gone to the plaintiff's house by the invitation of plaintiff, and at whatever had been said during the time she was there about any payment. She had other friends whom she visited, and at whose house she was just as she was at Mrs. Orme's. Mr. J. and Mr. Orme were still very great friends a few days ago the latter had said to the defendant: "Never mind the action; that is the way to quarrel; let's go to Liverpool and have a row."

The defendant said that after his house was up he went about the country selling gas commission, and sent his wife some money, from 3s. to 8s., whenever he could do so. He thought that during the time his wife was at the plaintiff's house he sent her about £4. Defendant and his wife admitted that they had serious quarrels before their home was set up. The latter, also, in cross-examination, said she had been to consult Mr. Topham, and with a view of bringing an action against her husband in order to obtain a fixed allowance. She also admitted that two months before he sold up the house without her knowledge had quarrelled and lived apart for three weeks.

A witness named Mrs. Lee, of Walsall, called, and she said that she quite understood that Mrs. Taylor was an invited guest at plaintiff's house. She herself was sent Mrs. Taylor to stay with her, and would give her a good home.

Shakespeare put in a letter dated Feb. written by Mrs. Taylor to Mrs. Orme, expressing a hope that she should soon be able to pay for her kindness towards her, and stating that that was an acknowledgment of the obligation.

His Honour said there was a strong impression on his mind that from first to last Taylor was at the plaintiff's house as a guest, he should therefore give a verdict for the defendant.

Rhodes said that the action had been on as a legal claim, but they were quite willing to make the plaintiff every recompense.

His Honour.—Will you waive the costs? Rhodes.—Not just at present, your Honour, but we will fully recompense the plaintiff.

WESTON-SUPER-MARE COUNTY COURT.

Saturday, Nov. 15.

(Before R. A. FISHER, Esq., Judge.)

BRIMMON v. SMITH.

Agreement for hire—Trespass.

THE action was brought to recover damages for trespass. It appeared that the plaintiff purchased from Messrs. Bradbury and Radcliffe, Bristol, a sewing machine for £10, as follows, viz., £1 down; and the balance monthly instalments of 10s., and the plaintiff received a receipt in these words for "Bradbury and Company (Limited) receive Thomas Brimmon the following payments for sewing machine on hire, as described agreement herewith, at 10s. per month, from 30th Oct. 1875, Oct. 20th, by cash £1. Smith." The above appeared in a book was handed to the plaintiff by Mr. S. manager of Messrs. Bradbury, and on the side of the sheet, on which the above was written, was the following: "Copy of agreement for hire." Then followed the agreement, which contained clauses that the machine remained the property of the owners until amount of hire was paid, and there was no entry for the owners, agents, or servants to take possession. This agreement was signed by the owner or hirer.

The plaintiff got into arrears with instalments, and the defendant entered the plaintiff's house and took away the machine.

Messrs. Bradbury and Co. held their office at Bristol, the defendant, liable for the machine, had sustained by the trespass had allowed the machine to go without getting the plaintiff to sign the agreement for hire, and the defendant wrote as follows plaintiff's solicitor: "Our board of directors is responsible for the loss upon Brimmon account of my letting the machine on agreement was signed," &c.

Cotton, of Bristol, appeared for the plaintiff, and Beeson, of the same place, for the defendant. Beeson admitted that the defendant had taken the machine without the consent of the plaintiff, but submitted he had a right to do so, in terms in the above-mentioned receipt, although no agreement was signed.

His Honour, upon the authority of Tomlin (5 Ad. & E. 556), gave judgment for the defendant.

RESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

his Department of the Law Times being open to discussion on all professional topics, the Editors do not themselves responsible for any opinions or statements ad in it.

INLAND REVENUE COMMISSIONERS AND LAW LIST.—I am about to instruct my to do what is needful to procure my certificate for the ensuing year. Among things, I believe they have (as in all to fill up a form at Somerset House, hey will do under my directions. Such are used annually by the Inland Revenue sioners, for the purpose of compiling t of country solicitors in the official it, which they are required to publish an- y the Attorneys Act 1860. Can you, or nber of the Profession tell me why I am erty to refer anyone to this Law List, nts (for the purpose of publishing a non- aw list) information as to the date of my on, the name of my agents, and so forth, is, while saving myself trouble, secure ainst any infringement of the copyright he commissioners may consider they have aw List? A well-known firm in London y reference to the Law List for the urpose, on the ground that copyright is in it. A COUNTRY SOLICITOR.

MENT OF DEBT AND COSTS OF ACTION QUE WITHIN FOUR DAYS OF SERVICE.— s a writ on B. for debt and costs. With- days after service B., who lives fifty miles y letter sends a banker's draft for amount and costs endorsed on writ. This A. re- ) accept and returns. B. then enters an oee; summons to show cause is issued, and ion of costs, B.'s solicitor alleges that A. ntitled to any further costs than those i on writ, saying that the draft sent as as a sufficient payment of debt and A.'s solicitor contends the debt and costs ave been paid in cash to the plaintiff or admitting the draft a good one. Will ily give your opinion on the above? C. ase is one in which, assuming bona fides part of the defendant, a taxing master s likely to allow only the four days' costs, costs of taxation and order.—ED. SOLS.

LESS IN THE QUEEN'S BENCH.—I think it ly be credited as a fact that in such a as the Queen's Bench, with its varied t, there should be only one clerk in atten- chambers during the busy month of er to draw up the multifarious orders, issue the summonses of the whole Division, ler, in all probability, varying in form, iring careful attention and thought in the up. I am informed that two of the re absent on Circuit, but it seems that cy which occurred some time since still unfilled. Surely the Profession generally ht to complain, and to ask who is respon- this state of things and the consequent hich is unfair to them and the public, and the unfortunate gentleman who is left to e work alone, with the continuous strain nsibility attaching thereto, and the loud its of all the practitioners at the delay ecessarily ensues, and which I feel bound unnot reasonably be imputed to him, as he very wish to be civil, and to expedite so far as he can do so.

PRACTITIONER.

PROSECUTION OF MR. BULL.—Referring port in your last number of the proceed- Mr. Jones against Mr. Bull and Mr. I venture to think that the right of Mr. deal as he did with Mr. Jones's letter is so clearly decided in favour of Mr. Bull ssume in your leader. My opinion is that had no right to use Mr. Jones's letter in for the benefit of his client until he had that right in a legal way, as, for instance, very, and that he ought strictly to have it unread to Mr. Jones, and that the issible excuse for not doing so would be ead it from inadvertence. I have always od that both solicitors and barristers der an obligation to return unread to er side any papers belonging to it ad by any mistake or accident fallen ong hands. This seems to be the hich would be dictated by a sense of Mr. Bull, however, seems to have been that a fraud had been committed on his nd that the irregularity of his conduct oned by the goodness of his motive in his clients to defeat a fraud. I am sorry ve a growing tendency to adopt the rinciple that any means, however im- ay be adopted in bringing home to individuals conviction of crime—or, as it is called, bringing criminals to justice. I hope the general feeling of the Profession is in favour of the principles I have expressed, and, if not, there cannot be a doubt of the evil tendency of the opposite view, as, if it were generally acted on, our clients' secrets would be constantly liable to be betrayed, and we and they would be at the mercy of persons like Mr. Jones's clerk, of whom, I hope, there are but few examples amongst law clerks.

EDWIN HYDE CLARKE.

4, Lothbury, 28th Nov. 1876.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

None are inserted unless the name and address of the writer are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

QUERIES.

19. KNIGHT V. MARQUIS OF WATERFORD.—Can any of your readers refer me to any report or reports of this great case subsequent to the report of it in the last volume of Meeson and Welsby in 1846, when a new trial was ordered? And further, can anyone say who were the solicitors employed on either side, local as well as London solicitors? D.

20. JURATS.—Can any of your readers inform me (1) whether it matters on which side of an affidavit in the Chancery division the Jurat should be written on? (2) Supposing the jurat to have been written on the left hand side of an affidavit in the Chancery division, would it be considered in proper order and filed? J. J. W. [There is no rule, and a jurat so written, although irregular under the old procedure, could hardly now be rejected, or, rather refusal to file the affidavit be sanctioned, on that account.—ED. SOLS. DEPT.]

21. SOLICITOR TRUSTEE—COSTS.—Can any of your readers refer me to cases as to what costs a solicitor trustee is entitled to? There was a review in the Law Times a few years ago, but I cannot find it. T. B.

22. FORMALITIES OF A DEED.—(1) Can a document—for instance a bill of sale—be sealed after the party giving it has duly signed the same, believing that he has done all that is necessary, and with the understanding that the said bill of sale was not to be registered? (2) A bill of sale, sealed unknown to the party giving it; is such a valid instrument? (3) Does not the taking of an oath to the execution of such a deed sealed thus—as an instrument duly sealed and delivered—when it was not by the party giving it, so executed and delivered, constitute a fraudulent transaction? A SOLICITOR'S CLERK.

23. CONSOLIDATION OF MORTGAGES.—I should be glad if some professional brother would give me his opinion on the case which I stated in your issue of the 28th October. A. J.

24. LEASE.—In a farm lease the lessee covenants with the lessor that "he the lessee will on or before the month of November before quitting, if required by the lessor or incoming tenant, plough and work in a husbandlike manner, any part of the arable land, being paid for the same, a sum to be fixed under the arbitration clause, but if no such requirement be made, or the lessee omit to perform it, the lessor or his incoming tenant shall be at liberty to enter upon any arable land from which the crop of the year has been taken, to plough and work the same," &c. The lessee has been requested by the lessor to plough a portion of the arable land, but he refuses to do so. Can the lessor compel him to do so, and how? Can he recover damages? S. S. C.

25. SUCCESSION DUTY.—A, an owner in fee simple of an estate, by an agreement in writing, contracts to sell the same to B. The following is one of the clauses of such agreement. "The annuities payable out of the messuage and tenement by the will of the late A. B., shall henceforth be payable by the present purchaser out of the lands now sold to him, as aforesaid, and he shall indemnify the vendor against the same." There are three annuities payable out of the estate under the will. Should not the vendor commute and pay the succession duties before completion of the purchase under the 5th and 6th sections of the Succession Duty Act, in respect of the lessor of the several annuities, in the absence of any special agreement that the purchaser shall pay the duty? A SUBSCRIBER.

26. ACKNOWLEDGMENTS. — INROLMENT.—(1) What period must an applicant have been in practice, and what is the necessary procedure to obtain the appointment of perpetual commissioner? (2) What form of words should be used in taking acknowledgments of deeds requiring inrolment? J. E. J. [(1) Application to be made to Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas. Forms for the purpose of Evison and Bridge, Chancery-lane, or Waterlow and Sons. (2) See Ford's Handbook on oaths (2nd edition), page 40.—ED. STUD'S DEPT.]

27. INCOME TAX.—Upon what authority has the practice arisen for a mortgagee to allow the deduction of income tax on payment of interest, and is he bound to consent to it? Can the tax also be properly deducted from interest payable on purchase money after the time fixed for completion? An explicit answer will oblige. S. C.

28. SOLICITOR AND TRUSTEE—COSTS.—Some years ago the LAW TIMES published a view on the right of a solicitor who is also a trustee, to charge the estate with costs of a suit. Can any of your readers refer me to this review, or set forth the cases? B.

29. ESTATES TAIL—CROWN DEBTS.—Will any of your readers be kind enough to inform me whether estates tail, in the hands of the heir, are subject to any kind of crown debts, and if any, what? STUDENT.

30. LEASE—MORTGAGE.—A. grants a lease of certain premises to B., who mortgages them to C. for the whole term less the last day, C. sells under power of sale without the concurrence of B. (mortgagor) to D. On D. selling to E. is D. entitled to the covenant to indemnify him against the payment of rent, &c.? Please state reasons. A. W. W.

31. CUSTODY OF TITLE DEEDS.—Testator by his will devised his real estate to A. and B.; one third of such estate to A. absolutely, and the remaining two-thirds to B. for life, and at B.'s decease to his heirs. Who is the proper party to hold the deeds which relate to the whole of the property? Deeds are now in the possession of A. J. P. L.

ANSWERS.

(Q. 217). AFFILIATION ORDERS—COMPOSITION.—An order having been made, the putative father is bound to pay the weekly sum named therein. He may pay in advance, but must take care to have a proper receipt for the amount so paid, which will exonerate him from liability until a further payment becomes due. An agreement not to proceed on the order in consideration of a certain sum, is no bar to proceedings afterwards taken to enforce such order, as the payments are intended for the support of the child, and not for the benefit of the mother. Therefore the parish authorities would have a perfect right to proceed on the order, and the remedy of it would be against the mother. N.

—The Guardians of the union may recover the payments under the order, if the child becomes chargeable, (35 & 36 Vict., cap. 65, s. 7). The previous payment by the father of a gross sum would be no bar. See Folitt v. Kostov, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 123. C. S.

(Q. 9) WILL.—Your correspondents (respectively signed "J. C.") seemed to have ignored the fact that the reversionary interest of C. and D. was bequeathed to them for their separate use respectively, and that therefore, such interests cannot belong to their husbands. The 20 & 21 Vict. c. 57 (Males' Act) applies to reversionary interests of married women in personality not held to their separate use. If such be held for separate use, the same may be disposed of by them by unacknowledged deeds. The husband has, however, an absolute power of disposition over his wife's reversionary interest in leaseholds (chattels real) unless the same be held for her separate use. In this case there is no doubt that C. and D. can respectively by an unacknowledged deed or deeds dispose of the equitable estate in the leaseholds; but who is to dispose of the legal estate? Is the legal estate vested in C. and D., or in their husbands? If in the former, the deed must be acknowledged (Williams on Real Property, 10 ed., p. 218); if in the latter they must join in the deed to assign such legal estate, and then comes the question, will such concurrence render an acknowledgment necessary? I know of no case bearing on the point. In Taylor v. Meads it was held that where real estate (which would, I think, include chattels real) is vested in trustees, upon trust for the separate use of a married woman (without restraint or alienation) she has, as incident to her separate estate, and without any express power being conferred on her, a complete right of alienation, either by instrument inter vivos, not acknowledged, or by will, and that there is no distinction in this respect between an equitable fee and any other property (Hayne's Equity 3rd ed., p. 240). Will not Equity hold that the husbands of C. and D. are trustees upon trust for the separate use of their respective wives, and will not therefore the case come within the ruling in Taylor v. Meads? If so, the deed need not be acknowledged. The question, however, is so vexed that I should not like to give a positive opinion. I should be very glad to read the opinions of some of your correspondents, as the subject is well worth looking into. H. M.

(Q. 15) THE LICENSING ACTS.—The justices have power to grant certificates for beer and wine licences at the general annual licensing meeting or an adjournment only, and cannot grant them at special sessions. C. S.

Q. 15) THE LICENSING ACTS.—Justices have no power to grant a beer or wine licence, under the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, except at the General Annual Licensing Meeting or an adjournment thereof, see 32 & 33 Vict., c. 37, s. 1; a retail licence to sell beer for consumption off the premises may, however, be granted at any special sessions for licensing purposes to the holder of a strong beer dealer's wholesale excise licence, s. 37 & 38 Vict., c. 49, s. 31. A. H.

Rejoinder.

(Q. 6.) LANDLORD AND TENANT.—"J. C." does not quite catch my point. The question is, "Has 'A.' lost his right of action against 'B.' by omitting to levy the whole sum of £40 when distraining upon 'C.' for the £20?" H. S.

LAW SOCIETIES.

THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of the Parliamentary Committee and of the council of this society was held at the chambers of Mr. W. T. Charley, M.P., D.C.L., 5, Crown Office-row, Temple, E.C., the president and hon. treasurer of the society, last Saturday.

Mr. William Griffith, M.A., barrister-at-law, was voted to the chair.

The Hon. Secretary (Mr. Charles Ford) read the minutes of the last meeting, which were confirmed.

The Hon. Secretary then submitted the annual report of the Parliamentary Committee, of which the following is a copy:

REPORT OF THE PARLIAMENTARY COMMITTEE OF THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS' SOCIETY.

"In looking back for some fruits of the legislation which the society has promoted, your committee rejoice to observe that sect. 12 of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 68), which—at the instigation of numerous country law societies, and indeed of a large portion of the entire Profession—formed part of the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1874, and was passed through the efforts of this society, has been enforced with much advantage to the public and the Profession in various parts of England during the past year.

As an illustration of the success of this enactment a recent case is appended. Your committee have held frequent sittings immediately before and during the last session of Parliament. Your committee determined to sanction the introduction into Parliament this year of a Legal Practitioners' Bill. The measure was carefully drafted by them at a series of sittings, clause by clause, and entrusted to Mr. W. T. Charley, D.C.L., M.P., Barrister-at-Law, the President and Hon. Treasurer of the society, and to Mr. William Gordon, M.P., Solicitor of the Supreme Court, one of the Vice-Presidents of the society. A copy of the Bill as issued by the Queen's printers, is annexed to this report, and, for the purpose of comparison, a copy of the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1875 is also annexed. Clause 2 of the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1876, is identical in substance with Clause 2 of the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1875, but having found that the opponents of the Bill fastened upon the exceptions contained in Clause 2 of the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1875, and contended that they were not sufficiently extensive, your committee feared that the insertion of further exceptions might lead to the unfortunate result of "the exceptions eating up the rule," and consequently adopted a short form drafted by your hon. secretary, Mr. Charles Ford, in which the definition of instrument contained in sect. 60 of the Stamps Act 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 97) was incorporated by reference. Your committee are aware that the incorporation of portions of existing statutes, by reference merely, into new measures is generally speaking inexpedient, and that the better system is to repeal and re-enact. But your committee were desirous of not interfering in any way with sect. 60 of the Stamps Act 1870, except by providing side by side with it a simple method of enforcing a mitigated penalty for the breach of the law contained in it. That law being part of the existing law of the realm (though unhappily, owing to the severity of the penalty and the cumbrous method of proceeding for enforcing it, almost a dead letter), it seemed desirable, in the face of strong opposition to it, not to raise a fresh contest over its principles when attempting to secure their enforcement. There are many members of the House of Commons who, if they had any hope of success, would endeavour to expunge sect. 60 of the Stamps Act 1870, imposing penalties on unqualified conveyancers from the Statute Book altogether, and leave the public, the Profession, and the national exchequer entirely unprotected against this increasing class of quacks.

The mischief now done by the illegal and illiterate drafting of unqualified conveyancers, to the public and the Profession, is far-reaching and indeed incalculable. Clause 3 of the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1875, became law last year (38 & 39 Vict. c. 79), and your committee are happy to be able to report that it has this year been extended to Ireland by the Legal Practitioners' (Ireland) Act 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 44). The legal practitioners of Ireland owe this extension to them of last year's enactment of the society to Mr. Gibson, Q.C., M.P., the eminent member for the University of Dublin, and Mr. Downing, solicitor, member for the county of Cork. Clauses 3, 4, 5, and 6 of the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1876 are new. Clauses 3 and 4 were intended to facilitate the transition from the Bar to the Profession of solicitor of the Supreme Court, and from the Profession of solicitor of the Supreme Court to the Bar. At present it is necessary for a barrister to serve for three years as an articled clerk before he can be enrolled as a solicitor of the Supreme Court, and for a solicitor of the Supreme Court to be struck off the roll, and then a student of one of the Inns of Court for three years before he can be called to the Bar. Prior to 1828 an attorney or solicitor could have been called to the Bar after being a student of one of the Inns of Court for two years.

In 1762 a conference took place between eight benchers, two selected from each Inn of Court, when the following resolution was come to: "That no attorney or solicitor be called to the Bar till they (sic) have actually discontinued the practice of their former profession two years." (Appendix to the 6th Report of the Common Law Commissioners 1834, page 57). In 1828 the four Inns of Court resolved that every person admitted into Commons to keep his terms shall sign a memorandum to the effect that he is not attorneys.

Thus a whole year of enforced idleness was added to the restriction imposed in 1762." (a)

The rules relative to the call of solicitors to the Bar have thus for their basis a resolution of the benchers of the Inns of Court only forty-eight years old. The rules relative to the enrolment as solicitors of members of the Bar have for their basis, sect. 3 of the Statute, 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127 (Attorneys and Solicitors Act 1860), which is only sixteen years old. Your committee were of opinion that the time had arrived when some practical effort should be made to allay the growing discontent with the existing exclusive regulations by shortening the transition period of enforced idleness in passing from one branch of the legal Profession to the other, and they therefore framed two clauses (clauses 3 & 4 of the Legal Practitioners Bill 1876) reverting to the interval fixed by the resolution of the conference of benchers in 1762, but restricting the privilege of passing in two years from the one branch of the Profession to the other to barristers and solicitors of five years' standing, so as to guard against a hasty alteration of a professional position deliberately chosen. During the long vacation which has just passed a conference of solicitors was held at Oxford, when this subject was fully discussed. Shortly afterwards (the 6th Oct.) a leading article appeared in the columns of the Times, dealing, inter alia, with the same point, and on the 18th of Oct. the same journal published a letter from your hon. sec. (Mr. Charles Ford), in which he set out all that has been done during recent years with a view to a reform of the existing state of things.

Clause 5 was intended to provide a remedy against a growing practice of unqualified persons appearing for the prosecution or defence of persons charged with offences before magistrates and justices of the peace. Some magistrates and justices of the peace refuse to hear these unqualified persons, who are wholly irresponsible and exempt from discipline; but the practice is by no means uniform. Of course an exception must necessarily be made in favour of those officers of Inland Revenue and other public officials who are charged by Act of Parliament with the conduct of prosecution before magistrates and justices of the peace.

Clause 6 of the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1876 provided as follows: "It shall be lawful for any certificated solicitor of the Supreme Court to appear as a proctor in the provincial courts of Canterbury and York." The object of this clause (first suggested by your hon. secretary in consequence of an application by the solicitor to the London School Board to Lord Penzance, to be permitted to act as a proctor, which was refused), was to provide a remedy for a practical grievance which had been brought under the notice of your committee, that suitors experienced difficulty in getting a sufficient number of proctors to represent them in the courts over which Lord Penzance presides, pursuant to sect. 7 of the Public Worship Regulation Act 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 85.) (In a case in the provincial court of York the solicitor of one of the parties found the only proctor in York was engaged on the other side, and was obliged to instruct a proctor in Chester to represent his client at York.) Cases under the Public Worship Regulation Act 1874 before Lord Penzance are likely in the future to be frequent, and it is in the interest alike of those taking proceedings under that important Act, and of those who are proceeded against, that they should have every facility afforded them for obtaining speedy and cheap justice in the provincial courts. Clause 6 enables the parties to appear by their own solicitor in these courts, the operation of which is that solicitors can now select their own counsel to conduct the cases of their clients.

Clause 7 of the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1876, which aimed at protecting impecunious persons against money lenders, and at putting a stop to the wholesale system of fraud in connection with their documents, by requiring bills of sale to be executed like powers of attorney, was contained in the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1874, and also in a Bills of Sale Bill which was framed by the Lord Chancellor, and was sent down in 1874 by the House of Lords to the House of Commons. It was thought only fair that any qualified practitioner (a certificated conveyancer or a barrister as well as a solicitor) should be qualified to attest the execution of a bill of sale, and this is accordingly provided for by clauses 7 and 8 of the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1876, read together. Your committee regret that the opposition to the clause protecting the public and the Profession against unqualified conveyancers was again renewed in the last session of Parliament. So strong was this opposition that the hon. members in charge of the Bill found that it would be impossible for them as private and unofficial members to persevere with the Bill, if this clause were insisted upon, they accordingly, but only at the last moment for the purpose of saving the Bill, assented to omission of the clause. Your committee think it will be wiser in any future Bill to amend the clause. They have now for three successive years used every effort to carry it, but the mass section of the people's representative assembly clause as a "trades' union" enactment, solely for the benefit of the Legal Profession, not for the benefit of the public. Your committee have already stated their firm belief that calculable mischief is done by quack conveyancers to the public quite as much as to the Profession, but the aversion to increasing stringency, or even facilitating the enforcement of the existing law, on the part of the members of the House of Commons, is such that private members cannot hope to carry it against it. Perhaps the Government may some future day simplify the method of procedure for the enforcement of the existing law against unqualified conveyancers: for the protection of the public or the Profession, at least for the protection of the law, while the repeated efforts of this society for further legislation have, no doubt, shown who encroach on the Profession that the law will be enforced against them whenever action requires.

(a) Cited from "The Legal Profession," p. 136. London: Ridgway, 169, Piccadilly.

The Legal Practitioners' Bill 1876, was introduced by Mr. Charley and Mr. Gordon in the House of Commons, and read the first time at an earlier practicable moment, viz., the 9th Feb. The number of private members' Bills was ever so great, and the order book was such that it was impossible for the hon. member in charge of the Bill to get a clear day's second reading. In due course the Bill came on for discussion in the month of July, but two other Bills stood before it on the book, and it was not reached till the week taking opposed business had elapsed. When the second reading was at length moved, on the 10th of July, the opponents of the Bill got rid of counting out the House, and it would have been impossible to have brought the Bill on as the hon. members in charge of it had no armed further opposition, by assenting to omission of those clauses to which objection taken by any hon. member. Mr. Anderson, for Glasgow, objected to clauses 2, 5, and 6, and had given notice of his intention to move rejection of the Bill, in order to get rid of it.

Mr. Onslow and Sir Charles Legard had given notice of their intention to move rejection of the Bill, in order to get rid of it. The Attorney-General objected to clause 2, and at the last moment would only assent to further progress of the Bill, on condition clauses 3 and 4 also, and indeed all clauses of the Bill except clauses 1 and 6, were omitted. It was thought highly desirable by your committee that the 6th clause should be carried, remedied a practical grievance, and was based upon the principles of equal justice, and having been enabled to be admitted as a bill and solicitors under sect. 43 of the Public Worship Regulation Act 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 85), while solicitors were excluded from practising in several of the judicial Courts. The expediency, in the view of suitors and the justice in the interest of solicitors, of admitting the latter to appear on behalf of the former before Lord Penzance, so apparent that although the Bill was on a second time, on the 5th Aug. it received Royal Assent on the 15th of the same month. Under an erroneous impression as to the effect of the arrangements which had been made between the hon. members in charge of the Bill and Her Majesty's Government, Mr. I. M.P., solicitor (of the firm of Messrs. I. Wilkinson, and Leeman, in the city of London), and Mr. Monk, M.P., barrister-at-law, moved the motion for going into committee on the Bill, but they were defeated, on a division of twenty-four. (a) The Earl of Devonmore kindly took charge of the Bill in the House of Lords, and succeeded in obtaining the assent of the Lord Chancellor to its provisions. It has been suggested that your committee should extend the provisions of the 6th clause of the Bill to the Consistory Court of London. Dr. Tristram is chancellor, but it will be remembered that the object which your committee had in view was to assist suitors in the tribunals presided over by Lord Penzance, under the Public Worship Regulation Act 1874.

It may be added that an amendment was on the notice paper by Mr. Dodds, of Stockton (solicitor, a newly-elected member of the Council of the Incorporated Law Society), to the words "in the Provincial Courts of Canterbury and York," so that the Bill might apply to a "certificated solicitor" to "appear as a proctor" simply. Mr. Dodds was not present.

(a) See the division lists, and the comment in the LAW TIMES of the 19th Aug. 1876, p. 25.

to move his amendment when the Bill was committed on the 7th Aug., and no other hon. member rose to move it. If the hon. members in charge of the Bill had attempted to amend the clause the only one (except the 1st) left in the Bill would certainly have been lost. It was understood that the Incorporated Law Society propose legislating on topics interesting to the Profession in the next session of Parliament, and a clause, it is suggested, may then be introduced establishing complete reciprocity between proctors and solicitors. Our committee are meanwhile glad to have prepared the way for such a final enactment by allowing solicitors to practise before Lord Penzance.

A copy of the Legal Practitioners' Act 1876, annexed to this report.

A vote of thanks to the learned chairman terminated the proceedings.

A meeting of the council of the same society was held at Mr. Charley's chambers on the same day, at 4.30 o'clock p.m. Mr. Griffith, M.A., was led to the chair.

The hon. secretary (Mr. C. Ford) read the minutes of the last meeting, which were confirmed. The secretary said he had received several letters from members of the council expressing their inability to attend.

Monday, the 18th Dec., at 7 o'clock p.m., at Clement's Inn Hall, was appointed for the general meeting.

The following were appointed a sub-committee to settle with Mr. Charles Ford the annual general report to be submitted to the general meeting: Mr. Griffith, M.A., Mr. W. T. Charley, M.P., and Mr. W. H. Wheatcroft, the sub-committee also to make arrangements for the general meeting, to which all members of the Profession should be admitted, such sub-committee to meet at Mr. Ford's chambers on Friday, at five o'clock a.m.

On the motion of Mr. Griffith, seconded by Mr. Wheatcroft, it was resolved that Mr. J. Carroll be employed as a collector, to get in overdue subscriptions.

Mr. Charley took occasion to mention the indebtedness of the society to the Earl of Donoughmore for taking charge of the society's Bills in the Upper House.

Mr. Charles Ford announced that the donations of the LAW TIMES now amounted to 50 guineas, and a vote of thanks to the donors was accordingly adopted.

After the discussion of minor matters a vote of thanks to the chairman terminated the meeting. Pressure on our space has necessitated our bridging the reports as received.

LEEDS INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY. Their annual ordinary general meeting for the year 1876, was held on Friday, the 27th Oct. last, at the offices of the honorary secretary, 7, Albion-lane, Leeds.

After the transaction of formal business, the chairman, Mr. F. H. Barr, proposed, and Mr. H. J. Carr seconded, the following resolution, of which notice had been duly given, and it was accordingly

Resolved—"That it is undesirable for members of the society to sign any memorial for dispensing with the preliminary examination in general knowledge, under the 8th section of the Attorneys' Act, 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, or any part of such examination, unless such memorial be first submitted to and approved of by the committee."

Mr. H. Appleton called the attention of the society to a condition lately inserted into conditions of sale of real estate by auction in the Borough, and which was in the following terms:

"Upon payment of the remainder of the purchase money of any lot at the time above mentioned, a conveyance of the said lot shall be executed by the vendors, and all other proper and necessary parties (if any). If the vendors require a duplicate of the said conveyance, such duplicate will be prepared by their solicitor, and the purchaser shall execute the same free of expense to be vendors, and shall lend their solicitor the original deed, duly executed, for the purpose of setting the duplicate denoted. A form of conveyance, embodying provisions intended to meet the special conditions as to streets and drains, has been prepared, copies thereof will be produced in the sale room, and a copy will be furnished gratis to each purchaser on application, and the conveyance of each lot shall, except where the vendors shall consent to any variation in the frame thereof, be taken in such form, or as near thereto as circumstances will admit, save, as aforesaid, all costs, charges, and expenses of and attending the investigation and proof of title, production of deeds, the preparation, approval, and execution of the conveyance and the completion of the purchase, shall be borne and paid by the purchaser."

Mr. Appleton stated that under this condition the vendor's solicitor claimed, and was paid by the purchaser, all the costs of the vendor's solicitor, from and including the letter with abstract of title, up to and including the attendance on completion.

It was then moved by Mr. Appleton, seconded by Mr. Simpson, and

"Resolved—That the condition in question is unjustifiable and unprofessional."

It was also, on the motion of Mr. G. A. Nelson, seconded by Mr. Snowdon,

Resolved—"That a copy of the last resolution be sent to the solicitor whose name appears upon the conditions of sale, and to the secretary of the Incorporated Law Society."

Mr. Marshall, M.A., the Hon. Sec., who is one of the most active country members of the Incorporated Law Society in London, then moved, and Mr. J. North seconded, the following resolution, which was adopted:—

"That in the opinion of this society it is not advisable to impose any restrictions upon the practice of parliamentary agents dividing their charges with the country solicitors who instruct them, and that such prohibition would not lessen the present costs of Parliamentary procedure."

"That in the opinion of this society it is advisable to confine the appointment of Parliamentary agents to solicitors of the Supreme Court."

A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the business of the meeting.

ANNUAL REPORT.

Members.—The society and the Profession have to regret the death of Mr. G. A. Emsley, the coroner for the borough of Leeds, which took place on the 8th Sept. 1876. Five members, namely, Messrs. C. Bulmer, C. C. Bulmer, J. Midgley, R. L. Rooke, and C. E. Arundel, have withdrawn from the society during the present year. The number of members is at present 58.

Accounts.—The treasurer's accounts for the year have been audited by the committee. A copy of the balance sheet accompanies this report.

Law Library.—At the last annual ordinary general meeting it was resolved, "That the sum standing to the credit of the Library Fund, together with the special library subscriptions for the year 1875, be applied in such manner as the committee shall think desirable for library purposes." The committee were not in a position to ascertain the balance which would be handed over to them from the Leeds Law Library for the above purposes until the 31st May last.

In March last it became necessary, owing to Mr. Dawson's removal from the offices in which the library had up to that time been placed, to provide new premises, and it was decided, as a temporary arrangement, to remove the books to some vacant rooms in Albion-place, over the secretary's offices, and to engage a person to take charge of them. The rooms in question being held under Her Majesty's Office of Works, it became necessary to obtain the sanction of the board to the proposed tenancy, and an offer was accordingly made to the First Commissioner of Works to rent the rooms in question for the sum of £10 10s. a year, exclusive of gas and coal. This offer was declined by the board, and for a time it was uncertain what arrangements could be made. To relieve the committee from this difficulty a suggestion was made by the town clerk to place the library in the corporation law library at the town hall, and to form a combined library for the use of the Profession and the public. Your committee carefully considered this scheme; but after interviews with the town clerk and the chairman of the corporation library committee, it was abandoned, for the reason (among others) that the transfer of the property in the books of the law library to the corporation was required as part of the arrangement. Under these circumstances your committee thought it desirable to renew the application which had been already made to the Office of Works, and they accordingly communicated with the secretary of that office, in order to obtain a reconsideration of the matter. The board having reconsidered the question, informed your committee on the 5th July last that they were prepared to let to the society the rooms in question, to be used as a law library, upon condition that the library should be open during such time only as the premises were open for the transaction of County Court business, at the rent of £10 10s. per annum, payable on the 1st Jan. and the 1st July, the society defraying the expense of cleaning, lighting, and warming the rooms, and the arrangement being terminable by either party giving three months' notice from any date. These conditions were accepted by your committee, and the matter now rests upon that footing. The committee are, however, of opinion that the objects for which the library was acquired can only be properly carried out by the acquisition of premises more accessible and more convenient than those in which it is at present situated; and they also think it would be for the interests of the Profession if, as part of the same scheme, an estate sale room and offices for the society could be provided.

The committee regret the inconvenience which members have experienced during the past half-year, owing to the changes and difficulties above referred to. It did not, however, seem to them expedient to incur any serious expenditure in buying new books, or in binding, until the question of the site of the library had been finally determined, and the rooms had been papered and cleaned by the office of works, and this has only very recently been done. Directions have now been given for binding and repairing all the Reports and Text books, and putting the library, consisting of about 1200 volumes, in good condition, at an estimated cost of about £90. Several new Text-books have been added, and others will shortly be ordered. In many cases new editions, rendered necessary by the Judicature Act, have still to be waited for.

The library account will show the sum actually spent on books, periodicals, and Reports during the current year. The committee cannot close this part of their report without observing that in their opinion the sums payable by new members for subscriptions and entrance fee amounting to £27 7s., prevent many young solicitors from joining the society, and they are of opinion that it is desirable by dividing this sum over two years to lessen the charge for the first year of membership.

Preliminary Examination.—Applications are not infrequently made to members of the Profession to sign memorials for the exemption of solicitors' clerks, and others from the preliminary examination, under the 8th section of the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127. Such memorials are sometimes signed by members of the society against their better judgment from motives of kindness, or because the application is concurred in by others. Your committee consider that the possession of general knowledge is so important in a liberal profession that the examination in question should not, except in very special cases, be dispensed with, and that it would relieve members of the society from the responsibility of acceding to or refusing such applications, if it were a rule with members not to sign any such memorial unless it had been first submitted to and approved by the general committee of the society. A resolution to this effect will be submitted to the meeting.

Conditions on Fire Policies as to Contributions.—At the general meeting of the Associated Provincial Law Societies, held on the 31st of March last, the following resolution was passed: "That, in the opinion of this meeting, the condition lately inserted in policies of fire insurance, that in case the property, the subject of the insurance, is insured by the insurer or any other person whomsoever, the office shall only be liable to pay a proportionate part of the loss, is unreasonable and unfair, and that the attention of the council of the Incorporated Law Society, and of the country law societies, be called to this subject."

The condition in question, which is found in all policies issued by offices belonging to the association of fire insurance offices, has only been inserted during the last four or five years, and is as follows: "If at the time of any loss or damage by fire happening to any property hereby insured there be any other subsisting insurance or insurances, whether effected by the insured or by any other person covering the same property, the society shall not be liable to pay or contribute more than its rateable proportion of such loss or damage."

This condition prejudicially affects mortgagees and others insuring property for their security. Property may be insured by mortgagees for the amount of their advance and premiums paid by them to the office of their selection, in the belief that they will recover the amount insured in case of a total loss. But on the loss happening it may turn out that the property has been insured by second mortgagees or others, without their knowledge, in another office, and that they are therefore entitled to obtain from their own insurers a part only of the sum insured, for the whole of which they have paid premiums. And in the case of the second office being unable or unwilling to pay, great hardship is inflicted, for no notice of the subsequent insurance is required to be given to the first insurers. There are difficulties in the way of dealing satisfactorily with the case of double insurances, and at present your committee must content themselves with bringing the matter under the notice of the society, as requested by the resolution above set forth.

The Associated Provincial Law Societies have this year been instrumental in bringing about an important alteration in the rules and orders of the Supreme Court of Judicature. At the general meeting of the members of that association, held in London, on the 30th March last, attention was called to the restrictions placed upon the working of the district registries, by the construction put by some judges of the Chancery Division upon Order XXXV., rule 1. The result of the decisions was that, while the district registrar was enabled to make an order for an account under Order III., rule 8, and the plaintiff is entitled to an order by reason of defendant's default of appearance under Order XV., rule 1, yet if the defendant should appear and consent to the order, the district registrar had no jurisdiction. An amendment of Order XXXV., rule 1, with the object of curing this defect, was suggested to the Lord Chancellor and the judges, on behalf of the association, in April last, to which effect was given by the 12th rule of the Supreme Court, June 1878. A suggestion made at the same time to extend the jurisdiction of district registrars to all proceedings in the Chancery Division, or which can be taken on an originating summons before the chief clerk up to and including final judgment, or an order on further directions, did not meet with success. Your committee, however, consider that the subject should not be allowed to drop. The power of carrying through Chancery proceedings in chambers before local tribunals is one of the principal objects which the law societies have always had in view, and there appears to be now no reason why the power should not be conferred.

Parliamentary Agents.—On the publication of the report of the joint select committee of the two Houses of Parliament on this subject, on the 21st July last, your committee carefully examined the proposals which it contained. They were found to amount to this:—That, for the future (with only a partial saving of existing rights), the profession of parliamentary agent was to be open to any one who passed an examination in general knowledge by the Civil Service Commissioners, and an examination on parliamentary practice before an unnamed body of examiners. Barristers, solicitors, and graduates of any university of the United Kingdom were exempt from the examination in general knowledge, but might present themselves as candidates for the special examination. The candidate who had passed the special examination had further to apply to the chairman of committees and the speaker to have his name entered on the roll; and if those functionaries were satisfied that the candidate was in all respects a fit and proper person to be appointed a parliamentary agent, his name would be entered on the roll.

Any agent may be struck off the Roll by the chairman of committees and the Speaker for neglect of rules or professional misconduct of any kind.

One of the rules, the infraction of which is to be visited by this severe penalty, is that no division of the charges of a Parliamentary agent is to be made. And inasmuch as the taxing officer of either House is expressly instructed to report to the chairman of committees and the speaker, the bill of costs of any agent which he may deem to contain improper or exorbitant charges, it appears probable that the insertion of charges which a taxing master deemed improper would also be a breach of rule which would render an agent liable to be struck off the Roll.

This mode of dealing with the subject seemed to your committee in the highest degree impolitic and unfair. No security whatever was taken for the possession by the agent of legal fitness, and subject to taxes, there seems no reason why the entrance to this particular branch of the Profession should be untaxed and unsecured against legal incompetence. If an agent in any other court of law may without objection share a portion of his profits with those who bring him the business, it is difficult to see why division of profits in the High Court of Parliament should be an offence meriting immediate and ignominious dismissal from practice. Your committee accordingly on the 19th of July passed the following resolution:—

"That in the opinion of this society it is not advisable to impose any restrictions upon the practice of Parliamentary agents dividing their charges with the country solicitors who instruct them, and that such prohibition would not lessen the present costs of Parliamentary procedure.

"That in the opinion of this society it is advisable to confine the appointment of Parliamentary agents to solicitors of the Supreme Court."

A deputation from the Liverpool, Leeds, Bolton, and Wakefield Law Societies, accompanied by some members of Parliament and other persons of influence, attended Mr. Raikes, the Chairman of Committee of the House of Commons, on the 27th July, in support of these resolutions, which had been concurred in by the leading law societies. In the result the report of the joint select committee was adopted by the House of Lords, but no resolution upon it was come to by the House of Commons. The subject will be brought before Parliament early next session, and your committee advise a formal expression of the opinion of the society upon it, and a request to the local members to support such opinion. A resolution of the resolution passed by your committee will be accordingly moved at the annual meeting.

Stamping Executed Deeds.—Application has lately been made to the Board of Inland Revenue to allow executed deeds to be transmitted from the Leeds Inland Revenue Office to London to be stamped, as is done in the case of agreements. No reply has yet been received to this application.

THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS.

RULES OF THE SUPREME COURT.

DECEMBER, 1878.

I, the Right Honourable Hugh MacCalmont Baron Cairns, Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain, do hereby, in pursuance of the seventeenth section of the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876, appoint Sir William Balguy, Mr. Justice Lush, Mr. Baron Pollock, and Mr. Justice Manisty to be the four judges of the Supreme Court of Judicature, by whom, together with the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice of England, the Master of the Rolls, the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, and the Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer, Rules of Court for carrying into effect the enactments contained in the said section of the said Act shall be made as therein mentioned. And this appointment is to continue in force until the 1st of Jan. 1879.

Nov. 7, 1878.

RULES.

1. These rules may be cited as "The Rules of the Supreme Court, December, 1878," or each separate rule may be cited as if it had been one of the rules of the Supreme Court, and had been numbered by the number of the Order and rule mentioned in the margin.

2. These rules shall come into operation on the 1st Dec. 1878.

ORDER XXXVI.

Trial.

3. Order XXXVI., rule 22a.—Order XXXVI., rule 22, is hereby repealed, and instead thereof the following rule shall take effect:—

Upon the trial of an action the judge may, at or after the trial, direct that judgment be entered for any or either party, or adjourn the case for further consideration, or leave any party to move for judgment. No judgment shall be entered after a trial without the order of a court or judge.

4. Order XXXVI., rule 29a.—Where in any action in the Chancery Division the action or any question at issue in the action is ordered to be tried before any commissioner or commissioners of Assize, or at the London or Middlesex sittings of any division other than the Chancery Division, the order directing such trial shall state on its face the reason for which it is expedient that the action, question, or issue should be so tried and should not be tried in the Chancery Division.

ORDER XXXIX.

New Trial.

5. Order XXXIX., rule 1.—Order XXXIX., rule 1, is hereby repealed, and instead thereof the following provision shall take effect:—

Rule 1. Where, in an action in the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer Division, there has been a trial by a jury, any application for a new trial shall be to a divisional court. And where the trial has been by a judge without a jury, the application for a new trial shall be to the Court of Appeal.

6. Order XXXIX., rule 1a.—Applications for new trials shall be by motion calling on the opposite party to show cause at the expiration of eight days from the date of the order, or so soon after as the case can be heard, why a new trial should not be directed. Such motion shall be made within the times following, unless the court or a judge shall enlarge the time:—

An application to a Divisional Court for a new trial, if the trial has taken place in London or Westminster, shall be made within four days after the trial, or on the first subsequent day on which a Divisional Court to which the application may be made shall have actually sat to hear motions. If the trial has taken place elsewhere than in London or Middlesex, the motion shall be made within the first four days of the next following sittings.

ORDER XL.

Motion for Judgment.

7. Order XL., rules 4, 5, and 6.—Order XL., rules 4 and 6 are repealed, and rule 5 is repealed so far as it affects trials before a judge; and the following rule shall be substituted for rule 4:—

Order XL., rule 4.—4. Where, at or after the trial of an action by a jury, the judge has directed that any judgment be entered, any party may, without any leave reserved, apply to set aside such judgment and enter any other judgment, on the ground that the judgment directed to be entered is wrong by reason of the judge's having caused the finding to be wrongly entered with reference to the finding of the jury upon the facts or questions submitted to them.

Where, at or after the trial of an action by a judge, the judge has directed that any judgment be entered, any party may, without any leave reserved, apply to set aside such judgment and enter any other judgment, upon the ground upon the finding as entered, the judge directed is wrong.

An application under this rule shall be made to the Court of Appeal.

ORDER LVIIA.

Divisional and other Courts.

8. Order LVIIA., rule 1.—The following proceedings and matters shall continue to be heard and determined before the divisional courts: nothing herein contained shall be construed to take away or limit the power of a single judge to hear and determine any such proceedings or matters in any case in which he has had power to do so, or so as to require any interlocutory proceeding therein heretofore before a single judge to be taken before a divisional court:—

Proceedings on the Crown side of the Queen's Bench Division.

Appeals from revising barristers, and from judgments relating to election petitions, parishes, and municipal.

Appeals under sect. 6 of the County Courts Act 1875.

Proceedings on the revenue side of the Queen's Bench Division.

Proceedings directed by any Act of Parliament to be taken before the court, and in which the decision of the court is final.

Cases stated by the Railway Commission under the 36 & 37 Vict. c. 48.

Cases of habeas corpus, in which a judge has made a rule nisi for the writ, or the writ returnable before a divisional court.

Special cases where all parties agree that the same be heard before a divisional court.

Appeals from chambers in the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, and Exchequer Divisions, applications for new trials in the said divisions where the action has been tried with a jury.

9. Order LVIIA., rule 2.—Where, by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876, these rules, any application ought to be made to a judge of the High Court, or any jurisdiction exercised by the judge in whom an action has been tried, if such judge dies or ceases to be a judge of the High Court, if such judge shall be a judge of the Court of Appeal, or if for any other reason it shall be possible or inconvenient that such judge should act in the matter, the president of the division in which the action belongs may either by order in any action or matter, or by a separate order applicable to any class of actions or matters, nominate some other judge to whom such jurisdiction may be made, and by whom such jurisdiction may be exercised.

10. Order LVIIA., rule 3.—Every judge shall have the same power and authority heretofore.

ORDER LVIII.

Appeals from Inferior Courts.

11. Order LVIII., rule 19.—Rule 16 of the Rules of the Supreme Court, December 1878, is hereby repealed, and instead thereof the following provision shall take effect:—

Every judge of the High Court of Justice at the time being shall be a judge to hear and determine appeals from inferior courts, and 45 of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1875. All such appeals (except Admiralty appeals from inferior courts, which until further order shall be assigned as heretofore to the present jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court) shall be entered in by the officers of the Crown Office of the Queen's Bench Division; and shall be heard in the Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer Division, as the President of those Divisions shall from time to time direct.

Nothing in this Order shall affect the operation of any rule or regulation heretofore issued with reference to such appeals by the Divisional Court formed under the said section.

CAIRNS, C.

A. E. COCKBURN.

G. JESSEL.

COLERIDGE.

FITZROY KELLY.

WM. BALGUY.

ROBT. LUSH.

C. E. POLLOCK.

H. MANISTY.

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE. MICHAELMAS SITTINGS, 1878.

Court of Appeal.

At Lincoln's-inn and Westminster.

Friday	Dec. 1	Appeals
Saturday	2	Ditto
Monday	4	Ditto
Tuesday	5	Ditto

- ..... 6 Appeal motions ex parte, appeals from orders made on interlocutory motions, and other appeals
- ..... 7 Bankruptcy appeals, and other appeals
- ..... 8 Appeals
- ..... 9 Ditto
- ..... 11 Ditto
- ..... 12 Ditto
- ..... 13 Appeal motions ex parte, appeals from orders made on interlocutory motions, and other appeals
- ..... 14 Bankruptcy appeals and other appeals
- ..... 15 Appeals
- ..... 16 Ditto
- ..... 18 Ditto
- ..... 19 Ditto
- ..... 20 Appeal motions ex parte, appeals from orders made on interlocutory motions, and other appeals
- ..... 21 Bankruptcy appeals and other appeals

Justices will take Petitions in Lunacy during the sittings.

High Court of Justice.

(Before the MASTER OF THE ROLLS.)

- At the Rolls House.
- ..... Dec. 1 Motions and general paper
- ..... 2 Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
- ..... 4 Adjourned summonses and general paper
- ..... 5 General paper
- ..... 6 Ditto
- ..... 7 Ditto
- ..... 8 Motions and general paper
- ..... 9 Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
- ..... 11 Adjourned summonses, and general paper
- ..... 12 General paper
- ..... 13 Ditto
- ..... 14 Ditto
- ..... 15 Motions and general paper
- ..... 16 Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
- ..... 18 Adjourned summonses, and general paper
- ..... 19 General paper
- ..... 20 Ditto
- ..... 21 Motions and general paper
- (any) on which the Master of the Rolls is in a Court of Appeal are excepted. Actions in which witnesses are to be sworn the Court will be taken on Tuesdays, and Thursdays, and causes and actions cases will be taken on Mondays; but when cases and actions without witnesses is cases and actions with witnesses will be taken also.

petitions must be presented and copies secretary, on or before the Thursday preceding on which it is intended they should

(Before V.C. MALINS.)

- At Lincoln's-inn.
- ..... Dec. 1 Short causes, petitions, and general paper
- ..... 2 Adjourned summonses and general paper
- ..... 4 General paper
- ..... 5 Ditto
- ..... 6 Ditto
- ..... 7 Motions and general paper
- ..... 8 Short causes, petitions, and general paper
- ..... 9 Adjourned summonses and general paper
- ..... 11 General paper
- ..... 12 Ditto
- ..... 13 Ditto
- ..... 14 Motions and general paper
- ..... 15 Short causes, petitions, and general paper
- ..... 16 Adjourned summonses and general paper
- ..... 18 General paper
- ..... 19 Ditto
- ..... 20 Ditto
- ..... 21 Motions and general paper

(Before V.C. BACON.)

- At Lincoln's-inn.
- ..... Dec. 1 General paper
- ..... 2 Petitions, short causes, and general paper
- ..... 4 In Bankruptcy
- ..... 5 General paper
- ..... 6 Ditto
- ..... 7 Motions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
- ..... 8 General paper
- ..... 9 Petitions, short causes, and general paper
- ..... 11 In Bankruptcy
- ..... 12 General paper
- ..... 13 Ditto
- ..... 14 Motions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
- ..... 15 General paper
- ..... 16 Petitions, short causes, and general paper
- ..... 18 In Bankruptcy
- ..... 19 General paper
- ..... 20 Ditto
- ..... 21 Motions, adjourned summonses, and general paper

(Before V.C. HALL.)

- At Lincoln's-inn.
- Friday ..... Dec. 1 Petitions and general paper
- Saturday ..... 2 Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
- Monday ..... 4 General paper
- Tuesday ..... 5 Ditto
- Wednesday ..... 6 Ditto
- Thursday ..... 7 Motions and general paper
- Friday ..... 8 Petitions and general paper
- Saturday ..... 9 Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
- Monday ..... 11 General paper
- Tuesday ..... 12 Ditto
- Wednesday ..... 13 Ditto
- Thursday ..... 14 Motions and general paper
- Friday ..... 15 Petitions and general paper
- Saturday ..... 16 Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
- Monday ..... 18 General paper
- Tuesday ..... 19 Ditto
- Wednesday ..... 20 Ditto
- Thursday ..... 21 Motions and general paper
- Any cause intended to be heard as a short cause before the Master of the Rolls, or either of the Vice-Chancellors must be so marked in the cause book at least one clear day before the same can be put in the paper to be so heard, and the necessary papers must be left in court with the Judge's officer the day before the cause is to be put into the paper.

Further considerations will be taken by the Master of the Rolls, V.C. Bacon, and V.C. Hall, as part of the general paper in priority to original causes which have not already appeared in the paper.

COURT OF APPEAL, AND HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE (CHANCERY DIVISION).

MICHAELMAS SITTINGS, 1876.

Rota of Registrars in Attendance.		Master of the Court of	Rolls.
Saturday . Dec. 2	.....	Appeal.	King
Monday ..... 4	.....	Farrer	Teesdale
Tuesday ..... 5	.....	King	Ward
Wednesday ..... 6	.....	Holdship	Teesdale
Thursday ..... 7	.....	King	Ward
Friday ..... 8	.....	Farrer	Ward
Saturday ..... 9	.....	Holdship	Teesdale
		V.C. Malins.	V.C. Bacon.
Saturday . Dec. 2	.....	Teesdale	Leach
Monday ..... 4	.....	Pemberton	Merivale
Tuesday ..... 5	.....	Leach	Merivale
Wednesday ..... 6	.....	Clowes	Milne
Thursday ..... 7	.....	Pemberton	Merivale
Friday ..... 8	.....	Clowes	Milne
Saturday ..... 9	.....	Pemberton	Merivale
		V.C. Hall.	Certificates of
Saturday . Dec. 2	.....	Pemberton	Sale and Transfer.
Monday ..... 4	.....	Leach	Latham
Tuesday ..... 5	.....	Latham	Ward
Wednesday ..... 6	.....	Leach	Pemberton
Thursday ..... 7	.....	Latham	Clowes
Friday ..... 8	.....	Leach	Holdship
Saturday ..... 9	.....	Latham	King

The Christmas Vacation will commence on Dec. 24, and terminate on Jan. 6, both days inclusive.

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

NOTA BENE.—Information intended for publication under the above heading should reach us not later than Thursday morning in each week, as publication is otherwise delayed.

MR. ARTHUR SHIRLEY has been appointed Deputy Coroner for the Borough of Doncaster.

MR. JAMES CROSSLE, solicitor, has been appointed Crown Solicitor for the County of Tyrone, vacant by the promotion of Mr. Cecil Moore to the Clerkship of the Rules in the Court of Common Pleas.

MR. E. T. RATCLIFF, solicitor and notary public, of 14, Bennet's-hill, Birmingham, has been appointed by Lord Chief Justice Coleridge a Perpetual Commissioner for taking the acknowledgments of Married Women for Birmingham and the district.

MR. C. ROBBINS, of New-square, Lincoln's-inn, solicitor, has been appointed a Commissioner under the Fines and Recoveries Act, for London and Middlesex.

MR. CHARLES EDMONDSON, of Marham, has been elected Clerk to the Ripon Board of Guardians.

MR. H. CORBETT, S.S.C. (Eng.), has been appointed Under Sheriff of Worcester.

MR. E. T. BRYDGES has been elected Town Clerk of Cheltenham.

The Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas has appointed Mr. JOSEPH FARMER MILNE, of the firm of Hinde, Milne, and Sudlow, solicitors, Manchester, to be a Perpetual Commissioner to take the acknowledgment of deeds by married women for the county of Lancaster.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

- BLIZARD, GEORGE, Upper Westbourne-st., Harrow-rd. Pet. Nov. 20. Reg. Brougham. Sol. Croucher, Fenchurch-st. Sur. Dec. 5.
- DE BOINVILLE, ERNEST, newspaper proprietor, Bedford-st., Bedford-rd. Pet. Nov. 23. Reg. Pepys. Sol. Jones, Lancaster-pl. Strand. Sur. Dec. 13.
- EDWARDS, JOHN EDWARD, merchant, Mining-la. Pet. Nov. 22. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sol. Haghton, St. Helen's-pl. Sur. Dec. 5.

SILLA, WILLIAM, solicitor, Beaumont-gardens, Brompton-rd., and Old Broad-st. Pet. Nov. 21. Reg. Haslitt. Sol. Quicket, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Sur. Dec. 13.

To surrender in the County.

- BODY, WILLIAM, commission agent, Exeter. Pet. Nov. 18. Reg. Dew. Sur. Dec. 6.
- BULLOCK, GEORGE, butcher, Chepping Wycombe. Pet. Nov. 23. Reg. Watson. Sur. Dec. 7.
- HOLE, CHARLES, farmer, Bristol. Pet. Nov. 21. Reg. Harley. Sur. Dec. 11.
- MURPHY, MICHAEL, scrap dealer, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 22. Reg. Parry. Sur. Dec. 13.
- FRANSON, WILLIAM, tailor, Newcastle-under-Lyme. Pet. Nov. 21. Reg. Tennant. Sur. Dec. 5.
- WATKINS, JAMES, builder, Swansea. Pet. Nov. 21. Reg. Jones. Sur. Dec. 5.
- WESTON, WILLIAM JAMES, corn merchant, Gloucester. Pet. Nov. 14. Reg. Wilton. Sur. Dec. 11.

Gazette, Nov. 28.

- DAVIES, DANIEL, beerhouse keeper, Brynamlin, near Swansea. Pet. Nov. 24. Reg. Jones. Sur. Dec. 9.
- DAY, JOHN, the younger, veterinary surgeon, Basingstoke. Pet. Dec. 8. Reg. Godwin. Sur. Dec. 9.
- HIRST, WALTER, woollen manufacturer, Morley. Pet. Nov. 23. Reg. Nelson. Sur. Dec. 14.
- HUGHES, JOSEPH FERDINAND, iron tube manufacturer, Wednesbury. Pet. Nov. 21. Reg. Clarke. Sur. Dec. 12.
- KINGSTON, JOHN THOMAS, watchmaker, Ramsgate. Pet. Nov. 23. Reg. Furley. Sur. Dec. 13.
- MORLEY, JOHN, boot maker, Consett. Pet. Nov. 24. Reg. Mortimer. Sur. Dec. 9.
- TENNYSON, JAMES, tobacconist, Manchester. Pet. Nov. 23. Reg. Lister. Sur. Dec. 14.
- WILLIAMS, JOHN, tailor, White Hall, par. Llantarnam Trefeglwys. Pet. Nov. 24. Reg. Jenkins. Sur. Dec. 13.
- WILLIS, HENRY, silk mercer, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 23. Reg. Marshall. Sur. Dec. 30.

Bankruptcies Annulled.

Gazette, Nov. 24.

- DAVISON, JAMES, builder, Bulman-village, Aug. 23, 1874.
- HUDSON, WILLIAM, omnibus proprietor, Irongate-wharf, Paddington, July 8, 1874.
- THOMAS, WILLIAM LYNALL, engineer, Hove. Sept. 23, 1883.
- TURNER, WILLIAM GEORGE, commercial clerk, Manchester. April 5, 1885.

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Nov. 24.

- ABRAHAM, BARNETT, commercial traveller, Nottingham. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 8, at four, at office of Sol. Cockayne, Nottingham.
- ABRAHAM, LEWIS, tailor, High-st., Whitechapel, and Turner-st., Commercial-rd. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 12, at two, at office of Sol. Lee, Old Jewry-chmbs.
- ALLEN, JOSEPH, dairyman, Leicester. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 9, at one, at office of Sol. Shires, Leicester.
- ANDERSON, ROBERT, jun., butcher, The Felling, co. Durham. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 11, at one, at office of Sol. Harrie, Newcastle.
- ARMSTRONG, CHARLES, grocer, Carlisle. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 6, at three, at office of Sol. Wannop, Carlisle.
- ASPIN, JOHN STEWART, tent dealer, Ramsbottom, near Bury. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 12, at three, at office of Sol. Creeks, Sandy, Saxby, and Ledgard, Manchester.
- ATKINSON, THOMAS, saddler, Bishop Auckland. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 7, at two, at office of Sol. Slater, Bishop Auckland.
- BARRATT, WILLIAM EDWIN, gunmaker, Newcastle-under-Lyme. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 5, at twelve, at office of Sol. Griffin and Griffin, Birmingham.
- BRAD, BENJAMIN, market gardener, Pershore. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 7, at three, at office of Sol. Pitt, Worcester.
- BEAUMONT, JAMES, engine tender, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 12, at three, at office of Sol. Rennolds, Bradford.
- BENTLEY, WILLIAM, draper, Stockton. Pet. Nov. 18. Dec. 4, at two, at office of Sol. Finspe, Slidgwick, and Biddle, Gresham-st., London.
- BERNSTEIN, NAPOLEON, jeweller, Upper Bangor. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 7, at eleven, at the London and North Western hotel, Birmingham.
- BIRCH, JOHN, solicitor, Bangor.
- BREWICK, JOSHUA, grocer, Hebburn, and Gateshead. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 4, at three, at office of Sol. Stanford, Newcastle.
- BIRD, HENRY BUSBY, cheesemonger, Haggerstone-rd. Pet. Nov. 4. Dec. 4, at three, at office of H. T. Thwaites, accountant, 44, Bachelors-lane, Sol. Fulcher, Basinghall-st.
- BOWMER, HERMAN BERNARD, insurance agent, Ball's Pond-rd. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 8, at two, at Mullen's hotel, Ironmonger-la. Sol. Turner, Copthall-st., Throgmorton-st.
- BOTTING, EDWIN TOWNE, grocer, Queen's-rd., Peckham. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 11, at two, at office of Broad, Fritchard, and Whitshire, 7, Queen-st., Cheap-side. Sol. Denny.
- BRAIN, ROBERT, milliner, Uiverston. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 7, at eleven, at the Temperance hall, Uiverston. Sol. Poole, Uiverston.
- BROOKSBANK, JOHN, ironmonger, Withington. Pet. Nov. 17. Dec. 6, at three, at office of Sol. Jones, Manchester.
- BROUGH, CHARLES, farmer, Butterwick. Pet. Nov. 16. Dec. 7, at twelve, at office of Sol. Wise and Harwood, Boston.
- BROWN, SANCEL, saddler, Great Quebec-st., Marylebone. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 13, at two, at office of Sol. Lewis and Lewis, Ely, Holborn.
- BROWSE, GEORGE LATHOM, barrister-at-law, Powis-st., Bays water, and King's Bench-walk, Temple. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 19, at twelve, at the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-la. Sol. Uppell.
- BUSHBY, ROBERT, tailor, Egremont. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 12, at one, at office of Sol. Alter, Whitehaven.
- CARTER, EDWARD, wholesale boot manufacturer, Pearson-st., King'sland-rd. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 9, at one, at the Cooper's Arms, Kenting-lane, Sol. King'sland-rd.
- CHAMBERS, ROBERT, farmer, Normanton-on-Trent. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 6, at twelve, at office of Sol. Stapleton, Stamford.
- CLARKE, WILLIAM, MILLARD, ABSOLOM, CLARKE, BENJAMIN and JOHN, LLOYD, JOHN, and CLARKE, JONAH, coal masters, Coppice Hill-st., Bolton. Pet. Nov. 21. Nov. 11, at eleven, at office of Sol. Corbett, Darlaston.
- CORRALL, WILLIAM ROBERT, baker, Leicester. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 7, at eleven, at office of Sol. Shires, Leicester.
- DARBY, EDWARD, butcher, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 7, at three, at office of Sol. Malcolm, Leeds.
- DAVIDS, RICHARD JAMES, coach builder, Carnarvon. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 9, at eleven, at the Royal and Sportsman hotel, Carnarvon. Sol. Pkitt, Jones, and Roberts, Carnarvon.
- DAVIDSON, GEORGE, corn merchant, Newcastle. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 7, at one, at office of Sol. Walmsley, Newcastle.
- DONALDSON, PETER ELIAS, saddler, Heywood. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 8, at the Clarence hotel, Manchester. Sol. Messrs. Lord, Ashton-under-Lyne.
- DRAKE, JOHN, leather dealer, Liverpool. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 7, at three, at office of P. Vico, accountant, Imperial-chambs, 62, Dale-st., Liverpool. Sol. Bartlett, Liverpool.
- EDGAR, WILLIAM, grocer, Crook. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 6, at two, at office of Sol. Thornton, Bishop Auckland.
- ELLIOTT, THOMAS, strengthener, Aberavon. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 8, at three, at office of Sol. Tennant and Jones, Aberavon.
- EMBLETON, JOHN GAWEN, painter, Newcastle. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 8, at eleven, at office of Sol. Von Dommer, Newcastle.
- FALLER, BENEDICT, watchmaker, Leeds. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 7, at three, at office of Sol. Granger, Leeds.
- FIELD, THOMAS, coal merchant, Neston. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 8, at two, at office of Sol. Lyon and Reynolds, Liverpool.
- FISHER, ALFRED, artificial florist, Packington-st., Clerkenwell. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 11, at one, at the London Joint Stock Bank-chmbs, West Smithfield. Sol. Hubbard.
- FOSTER, CHARLES, cab proprietor, Rotherfield. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 7, at twelve, at office of Sol. Messrs. Clegg, Sheffield.
- FRANKLING, SAMUEL CRISP, baker, Wighton. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 8, at half-past eleven, at office of Sol. Doynes, Wells.
- GLENWRIGHT, THOMAS, wine merchant, Row Law, Durham. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 11, at three, at office of Sol. Chapman, Durham.
- GOODALL, JOHN, rag merchant, Batley. Pet. Nov. 22. Dec. 11, at three, at office of Sol. Ibberson, Dewsbury.
- GOODYEAR, CHARLES, granite merchant, Westminster-chmbs, Victoria-st., also St. James, New-croft, and St. Edward, Bishopsgate, and Wed-chmbs. Pet. Nov. 21. Dec. 11, at two, at the Guildhall coffee-house, Gresham-st. Sol. Walters and Gush, Finsbury-circus.

To Readers and Correspondents.

ask whether it is customary for counsel to demand 'prepayment of it certainly is not, but there is no reason why counsel should not remuneration in the case of country clients whom they have never ore, and may never hear of again. Our correspondent evidently counsel's fees never go unpaid, which we are sorry to say is not erience.

communications are invariably rejected.

tions must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer ly for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

tions intended for the Editor (SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT) should ed.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

URIN—of Parliament—Existing rated by general words—churchwardens—New ecclesiastical purposes... 495

CASES RESERVED.

-Broker embezzling properties—Marine policies—curities for payment of uable security... 530

COURT OF JUDICA-TURE.

PEAL, WESTMINSTER.

ANOTHER v. WARD AND editor—Bankruptcy Act
Vict. c. 134—Partnership assignment by partners—separate estate... 502

PEAL, LINCOLN'S-INN.

MAPLEBACK—consideration—Compound—
Past debt—Present advantage for the forger to take up... 503

HOUSE OF JUSTICE—QUEEN'S

CHANCERY DIVISION.

SMALL ARMS COMPANY

hereby granted—Latent intention of parties—liability... 505

PLEAS DIVISION.

THREE v. BURROWS AND tip—Omission to register mortgage as against assignment... 508

CARTER (resp.)

franchise—Receipt of allocation—2 Will. 4, c.
511

COURT FOR APPEALS FROM

INFERIOR COURTS.

THE COMPANY (LIMITED)

IN GUARDIAN (resp.)— lead mine—Smelting
slues out of union... 514

ORCE, AND ADMIRALTY

DIVISION.

obate Business.

EYEWELL AND OTHERS—

Service of writ—Order and 3—Substituted service by advertisement 517

ANNA MARIA BOTTON

Normal documents—Documents inconsistent with each may be read as one will it to probate... 518

Fidelity Business.

Visible accident—Inheritance—Costs... 519

LEADING ARTICLES, &amp;c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS

LEADING ARTICLES—

Topics of the Week

Trial by Jury in the Chancery Division

Contracts by Agents "for the Vendor" or

"for" a Non-Identified Principal

Privileges of Counsel

Agency—Liability of Agent to Principal—

Omission to perform Gratuitous Undertaking

LAW LIBRARY

SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT

(Edited by a Solicitor).

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL—

Topics of the Week

Specimen Digest of the Law relating to

Solicitors of the Supreme Court

Notes of New Decisions

High Court of Justice—Exchequer Division

Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the ## Bank of England

Appointments under the Joint-Stock

Winding-up Acts

Creditors under Estates in Chancery

Creditors under 23 &amp; 25 Vict. c. 35

Reports of Sales

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL—

Topics of the Week

The Council of Legal Education

Middle Temple Scholarships

Bristol Law Students' Debating Society

Dublin Law Students' Debating Society

Hull Law Students' Society

Law Students' Debating Society

Leicester Law Students' Society

Plymouth, Stonehouse, and Devonport

Law Students' Society

United Law Students' Society

Worcester and Worcester Law

Students' Society

Queries

MAGISTRATES' LAW—

Lawford's Gate (Gloucestershire) Petty

Sessions

Licensing Acts—Brewster Sessions

COUNTY COURTS—

Croydon County Court

Ulverston and Barrow-in-Furness County

Court

Wolverhampton County Court

BANKRUPTCY LAW—

Court of Bankruptcy

Notes of New Decisions

LEGAL NEWS

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION

NOTES AND QUERIES

LAW SOCIETIES—

Bolton Law Society

Incorporated Law Society of Liverpool

Law Association

The Irish Incorporated Law Society

LEGAL OBITUARY

THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS—

Registrars for the ensuing Week

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS

THE GAZETTES

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS

not been reported. The opinion seems to prevail that under such circumstances the agent cannot recover. We believe and hope that this is the law, and, if generally enforced, it will strike at the root of a most mischievous custom prevalent amongst publichouse agents.

A POINT upon which two registrars in bankruptcy have arrived at precisely opposite conclusions, came before the Court of Appeal on Thursday, viz., whether the title of a trustee relates back to a secret act of bankruptcy, so as to defeat the title of a bill of sale holder who subsequent to such act of bankruptcy (his bill of sale being unregistered) takes actual possession before the filing of a petition for liquidation. The case raising the question stands adjourned for a fortnight.

THE extensive powers of a surveyor of highways are, we hope, not often abused, for the recent important judgment of the Divisional Court for Appeals from inferior courts in Denny v. Thwaites shows how little the Judges of the present day are disposed to curtail them. The facts were these. The appellant was surveyor of highways, and had put down a pipe under the access from a highway to the dwelling house of the respondent. This pipe the respondent had taken up, and in lieu of it had constructed a culvert of larger dimensions, thereby raising the access to his house, and raising the highway to such an extent as in the opinion of the appellant to cause a nuisance. The appellant then gave notice to the respondent to abate the nuisance, and upon the notice being disregarded, caused the ground to be broken up to the damage of the respondent's culvert. Thereupon the respondent complained before justices, under the Malicious Injury to Property Act, s. 52, and the justices convicted the appellant, and fined him 1s. A case was stated under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, and the convicting justices found (inter alia) that the appellant had not acted under a reasonable supposition of right. It was forcibly contended for the respondent that this finding was enough to justify the court in giving judgment in his favour. But in a written judgment the court pronounced for the appellant upon this and all other points raised. "There might," they say, "be special circumstances under which a private owner might have an exclusive right to a particular drain, but such circumstances do not exist in this particular case. The surveyor has in general the sole control over the drains, &c., by the side of the highway, and if the drain be constructed so as to affect the use of the highway, he would be authorised to alter it." The points of law involved were of considerable difficulty, and we will not at present question the correctness of the decision. But it is a matter of regret that the Appellate Jurisdiction Act of 1876 has now entirely done away with the appeal to the Court of Appeal which was given by the 45th section of the Judicature Act of 1873, by special leave of the divisional court.

THE case of Hervey Bathurst v. Stanley; Craven v. Stanley, in which judgment was delivered by the Court of Appeal on the 2nd inst., affords a fresh and remarkable instance of the difficulty which the courts have so frequently to contend with of reconciling the evident intention of a testator with the language in which he has expressed it. By the will in question, which was made in 1814, the testator devised his real estates to Richard Fermor for life, with remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, with remainder to Rowland Stanley, second son of Sir Thomas Stanley, of Horton, for life, and his sons, then to John Stanley, the third son of Sir Thomas, and his sons, and then to Charles Stanley, the fourth son, and his sons, with remainder to the use of the testator's right heirs. There was a provision that the devisee should take the testator's name and arms; and it was further provided that "in case Rowland, John, or Charles Stanley should become the eldest son" of Sir Thomas Stanley, then, and as often as the same should happen, the bequest to him of the estates in question should be void as though he were dead, and they were to go to the devisee next in remainder. Richard Fermor died during the lifetime of the testator without issue. Sir Thomas Stanley died in 1841, and his eldest son, William, succeeded to the title and family estates. On the death of William, his brother Rowland succeeded to the title but not to the estates. On the death of Rowland, in 1875, John, the present defendant, succeeded him. The fourth brother, Charles, had died previously. The plaintiffs claimed that the ultimate limitation in remainder must now take effect. The MASTER of the ROLLS decided in their favour, and, in the Court of Appeal, BRAMWELL, J.A., was of the same opinion. Lord Justice JAMES, however, gave judgment in favour of the defendant, and in this judgment BAGGALLAY, J.A., concurred. They held that sole surviving and eldest were not synonymous terms, and that a man could not literally become eldest unless he had juniors; that the context showed the meaning to be the eldest of the sons of a living man; and that in matters of estate and dignity the words "eldest son" had a technical meaning, and did not mean first born or eldest of the sons, but a boy or man who has a living father and no senior in age or line. BRAMWELL, J.A., dissentiente, said that the natural meaning of the words was attended by con-

THE LAWYERS' ALMANAC FOR 1877.

It will be sent to Subscribers to the LAW TIMES on the 1st of January.

Law and the Lawyers.

Last an announcement appeared in the legal notices papers that a divisional court would sit at Westlake motions from all the divisions. Several counsel t only to find that the statement was incorrect. The nsible for these notices ought to be more careful, sittings of the courts are frequently so spasmodic y, that subordinate officials must not be expected to accurate. The time of counsel and solicitors, how-their own, and cannot be frittered away without olic business.

of very great importance to commission agents was ivisional Court on Monday, namely, is an agent who ly commission from a vendor disentitled to recover from the vendee. It appears that a judgment has given on the point, but, for some reason or other, has sequences which the testator did not intend; but that the question was not what the testator meant, but what he had said. On the whole, we incline to the view of the majority in the Court of Appeal. In Price v. Strange (6 Madd. 159), Sir JOHN LEACH says, "It is a sound rule of construction to understand words in the ordinary sense, unless controlled by a different intention appearing upon the whole instrument." Now, if the words here are to be understood in their ordinary sense, we should be of opinion that the judgment of the MASTER of the Rolls and of BRAMWELL, J.A., was right. But we think that they are "controlled by a different intention appearing upon the whole instrument." The intention is evident here that the testator meant to exclude not the person who should become the eldest son of Sir Thomas Stanley simpliciter, but the person who, in so doing, should alter his position so as to assume that occupied by the then eldest son of Sir Thomas Stanley. The intention of a testator, however apparent, cannot override the plain meaning of his words, if there is only one meaning attachable to them; but where there is a secondary meaning, which, though less obvious than the ordinary, is more in accordance with the rest of the instrument, that is the interpretation which should be adopted.
L.—No. 1758.

THE decision of Vice-Chancellor HALL in the recent case of Orr v. Diaper (35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 468) affords an important illustration of the law of discovery. The plaintiffs were manufacturers of thread, who sent their goods to foreign markets through the defendants, who were shippers and carriers. The thread and sewing cotton manufactured by the plaintiffs were wrought up into small balls, and these again having been covered with blue paper, were inclosed in drab coloured paper packets. In addition to these wrappers the plaintiffs used different coloured tickets with particular devices and inscriptions to mark the cotton and thread as of their make, a fact commonly known to persons interested in their trade and manufacture. Having discovered that the defendants were in the habit of shipping thread made up in similar coloured papers, and marked with similar tickets to those of the plaintiff's manufacture, though it was not made by them, the plaintiffs being unable to obtain information from the defendants, brought an action for discovery. The defendants demurred on the ground that they were not sufficiently interested in the contemplated proceedings, and were liable to be examined in such proceedings as witnesses. The object of discovery, with a few exceptions, among which the present case cannot be reckoned, is, it was urged, to make use of it against the person of whom it is asked. Lord HARDWICKE, amongst other judges, has affirmed the general principle that you cannot make one a defendant to a bill who is merely a witness, in order to have a discovery of what he can say to the matter, though he is properly examinable as a witness: (see Plummer v. May, 1 Ves. 426). But in the same case his Lordship recognised a limitation of the general rule by admitting that the mere fact that the defendant is examinable as a witness will not of itself prevent discovery. In a later case (Dixon v. Enoch, 26 L. T. Rep. N. S. 127) an action was brought to discover who the proprietors of a newspaper were, Vice-Chancellor WICKENS observed in the course of his judgment that "the supposition that if the plaintiff knows the name of one proprietor he can make him tell the names of all the others; but that not knowing one name, he cannot get the information from the printer and publisher, who is the agent of the proprietor, and is put forth to stand between them and the public, is one that does not commend itself to one's common sense, and is not to be accepted without absolute necessity." This view was adopted by Vice-Chancellor HALL, and the demurrer was overruled. "The plaintiffs," said his Lordship, "can do nothing without discovery; they are at a dead lock; they can take no effectual proceedings against anyone unless they obtain the discovery that they ask. The other authorities referred to, viz. Queen of Portugal v. Glyn (7 Cl. & Fin. 466); Mayor and Corporation of London v. Levy (8 Vesey, 404), do not prevent this bill from being maintained." To the objection that the plaintiff could not ask for discovery alone against the defendants without at the same time taking other proceedings against them, the VICE-CHANCELLOR replied that the "plaintiffs want to take complete measures against the real delinquents. They want to make the shippers liable. . . . The plaintiffs do show a title to sue the defendants in some other court under the old practice, but now, by reason of the union of all the courts, in this court." It may be very fairly contended, no doubt, that Dixon v. Enoch (ubi sup.) being a decision upon 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 76, was not in point, and it appears to us that such a contention has much weight. Vice-Chancellor HALL was apparently of a different opinion, for he remarked that the reasons given in that case applied to Orr v. Diaper. This remark obviously requires limitation. Whatever was said in Dixon v. Enoch bearing upon the present case can only be considered in the light of obiter dicta when applied to a case that does not fall under the same statute. This seems to be the weak point in the judgment of Vice-Chancellor HALL; and it is the more noteworthy, inasmuch as the decision is made apparently to turn upon the dictum from Dixon v. Enoch, which we have already quoted. The decision is nevertheless supported by the opinions of Lord BADELÉ, quoted during argument.

THE caution exercised by the Judges in ordering a statement of claim to be wholly struck out is sufficiently apparent, even in the case of Cashin v. Craddock (35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 452), where an order was upheld by the Court of Appeal. The first rule of Order XXVII., it will be recollected, gives power to the court, a Judge at any step of the proceedings to order to be struck out or amended any matter in a statement of claim, defence, or reply which may be scandalous, or which may tend to prejudice, embarrass, or delay the fair trial of the action. In the above case the statement of claim had been drawn by the plaintiff himself, and sued for damages for breach of contract, arising out of an agreement to sell certain collieries to a Coal Supply Company. The statement of claim, consisting of sixty-four paragraphs, occupied eighteen printed pages, was objected to, on the ground that it was scandalous, and tended to prejudice and delay the fair trial of the action. The main ground of the objection was that the statement contained all kinds of charges of fraud against several of the defendants, and that it was drawn in such a confused way that it was impossible to ascertain what was the real ground of complaint. Vice-Chancellor BACON made an order striking out the statement, reserving to the plaintiff his full right of making another. The plaintiff appealed; the order was affirmed. "It is conceivable," said Lord Justice JAMES, "that there might be a ground of a claim if expressed by a proper statement, but it is impossible for half a dozen defendants to be called upon, and VICE-CHANCELLOR said, to answer statements of this kind, containing all kinds of charges of falsehood and perjury and quite irrelevant to the case, and I do not think it possible to separate them, or that the statement can be amended by striking out what is wrong. It is not for the court to make the plaintiff's claim for him, or to say how much may be supported." Lord Justice MELLISH agreed with this view, but Sir R. BAGGELLWELL, entertaining some doubts, seems to have regretted that it was not heard on behalf of the appellant. Sir RICHARD C. O. WILKES, having regard to Order XVI. with reference to multifariousness, as well as to the terms of Order XXVII., the plaintiff had not a right to introduce the various matters in respect of which he claimed relief all together in the same statement. This seems to us rather beside the question, which was not whether the plaintiff might claim multifarious relief, but whether he might upon the records of the court a variety of accusations quite irrelevant to the relief he actually sought. The question was not multifariousness. We think we may go further and say that Order XVI. must be controlled by the operation of rule 1 of Order XVII., in other words, that no right to join parties severally, or in the alternative, or to claim alternative relief entitles the plaintiff to garnish his statement with charges of falsehood and perjury and matters quite irrelevant to the relief asked. As to the sympathy shown to the plaintiff from the fact that he conducted his own case, we rather agree with Vice-Chancellor BACON, who said "It is not for me to point to the plaintiff how he might frame his statement if he has any cause of complaint against the defendants. If he does not take advice he must then run the risk of acting on his own advice. That I cannot help." This is clearly the principle, otherwise a person might be made to suffer from the very fact that he employed counsel, whereas the other relies on his own unaided powers and the sympathy of the court.

TRIAL BY JURY IN THE CHANCERY DIVISION. FURTHER REMARKS.

ON Nov. 30th the new Rules of December 1876, were By Order XXXVI., rule 29a, of those Rules, it is enacted "Where in any action in the Chancery Division the action question at issue in the action, is ordered to be tried by a commissioner of assize or at the London or Middlesex sitting any division other than the Chancery Division, the ordering such trial shall state on its face the reasons for which it is expedient that the action, question, or issue, should be so tried and should not be tried in the Chancery Division."

That rule seems to strengthen the view taken by us in our leading article of last week entitled "Trial by Jury in the Chancery Division." In future, it seems, that the Chancery Judge has an absolute discretion as to whether the action shall be tried by a jury or not. That being so, the plaintiff's cause has been transferred to the Chancery Division, will be utterly deprived of his right to have the question of fraud tried by a jury even in the circumlocutory way of having it sent down under that order, unless the Judge to whom the case is transferred deems that course expedient.

However, it appears that the view taken by the learned Judge in the case of Holmes v. Harvey is not shared by all the Judges. In the case of Hilton v. Fletcher, which came before the Lord Justice of England and Baron Pollock on Monday last (the the case, and in making observations on the parties concerned, and their instruments or agents in bringing the cause into court." And the counsel who argued that case put it on the same ground. "In truth," they said, "the freedom of speech at the Bar is the privilege of the clients, and not of the counsel." And this was pointed out still more clearly by the Lord Chief Baron when he said: "I think it essential that you (the jury) and the public should clearly understand that the privilege claimed by the defendant, Mr. Higgins, as applicable to this case, is not that of counsel, but the privilege of the people of England as represented by counsel. It is essential to the well-being of the whole community that a counsel, when once engaged, should discharge his duty fearlessly, without the shadow or shade of apprehension as to the consequences."

There can be no doubt that this is the true ground of the privilege, which also arises from the reason of the thing itself. This is pointed out so clearly in the argument of the counsel in the case of Hodgson v. Scarlett that we reproduce their remarks here: "If the counsel are not protected by law, it will be a very great misfortune to the clients of persons placed in similar situations. Every man's efforts will be shackled unless he is to be allowed to make such observations as, in the fair and honest discharge of his duty, he may think necessary for his clients. In truth the freedom of speech at the Bar is the privilege of the clients, and not of the counsel. It would be impossible for matters properly to be discussed at Nisi Prius, unless considerable latitude were allowed, and if any evil follows from this, it must be endured for the sake of the greater good which attends it."

The first case in which this question of privilege arose in a court of law was the case of Brook v. Sir Henry Montague (Cro. Jac. 90), decided in the reign of King James the First, where it was held that "a counsellor in law retained hath a privilege to enforce anything which is informed him by his client, and to give it in evidence, it being pertinent to the matter in question, and not to examine whether it be true or false." And so in Wood v. Gunton (Styles, 462), decided in 1655, "If a counsel speaks scandalous words against one, in defending his client's cause, an action lies not against him for so doing, for it is his duty to speak for his client, and it shall be intended to be spoken according to his client's instructions." In Hodgson v. Scarlett (1 B. & Ald. 240), decided in 1818, the question was fully considered, and the same doctrine was laid down. Lord Ellenborough, as before pointed out, putting it on the ground of public convenience. Justice Holroyd, put it on a similar ground, viz., that the privilege of counsel was the same as the privilege afforded to the party in the judicial proceeding. "It would seem," he said, "that such an action cannot be supported for words false and malicious spoken by a party conducting his own case before a court of competent jurisdiction; and if a counsel be in the same situation as the party, then such an action cannot be supported against counsel. If they be fair comments upon the evidence, and be relevant to the matter in issue, then, unless express malice be shown, the occasion justifies them. If, however, it be proved that they were not spoken bona fide or express malice be shown, then they may be actionable; at least our judgment in the present case does not decide that they would not be so." It will be seen that Mr. Justice Holroyd seemed to be inclined to qualify this privilege, and to hold that it was by no means absolute; but we apprehend that in the present state of the law that qualification does not exist, and that the privilege is absolute when the comment is relevant to the matter in issue. When, in the case of Lewis v. Higgins, Mr. Serjt. Parry proposed to put his client, Mr. Lewis, into the box, the Lord Chief Baron intimated in the most decided manner that he should allow no questions to be put to Mr. Lewis except such as went to show that the words were in fact spoken. Addressing Serjt. Parry he observed, "If you think fit to put Mr. Lewis in the box, I cannot prevent your doing so, but I must tell the jury that assuming it is proved that the words were spoken by the defendant, yet if they were spoken by him in his character of counsel in a suit, the action cannot be maintained. I cannot enter into any other question, nor can I receive any evidence as to what were Mr. Higgins' instructions. I can receive evidence only to show first that the words were spoken, and, secondly, the occasion on which they were spoken. I must tell the jury that the law of England forbids me to enter into any other questions in the case, and does not authorise them to enter into and to determine upon the merits of a case affecting the character of a member of the Bar of England, which depends entirely upon what has been stated by him in a cause legitimately before the judge in a court of justice." The privilege accorded to counsel, when properly understood, is a wholesome privilege, and one that is absolutely necessary for the due administration of justice, and to further the true interests of the public. In the words of the Attorney-General, Sir John Holker, "an advocate is worthless if he be not fearless," and we by no means look forward to the day when the tongues of counsel shall be tied, and when advocates shall shrink from doing their duty to their clients for fear of the consequences resulting to themselves. The greatest safeguard against the abuse of this privilege lies in the general good sense and honourable feeling of the Bench, and together with the judicious controlling influence of the Bench. Possibly it may occasionally be abused, but we think that the occasions are very rare indeed; and, at all events, the evil does follow from the exercise of the privilege, which is far from admitting, "it must be endured for the sake of the greater good which attends it."

AGENCY—LIABILITY OF AGENT TO PRINCIPAL FOR OMISSION TO PERFORM GRATUITOUS UNDERTAKING.(a)

In order to maintain an action against an alleged agent for omitting to perform something undertaken, the principal must shew that the agent was bound either by contract or custom by some duty imposed on him by law to do the particular thing. When there has been no consideration for his promise it can be said that the agent is bound by contract. This was held clearly in the old law books. Thus it was said, if a person promises me to build a house for me within a given time, an action lies for non-performance, unless a consideration be shewn for it: (1 Rol. Abr. 9, E. 41.) To the same effect are the dicta of Lord Holt in the case of Coggs v. Bernard (Lord 909), where he says: "It is objected that there is no consideration to ground the promise upon, and, therefore, the undertaking is but nudum pactum. But to this I answer that the entrusting him with the goods is a sufficient consideration to bind him to a careful management. Indeed, if the agreement had been executory to carry these brandies from the one place to another such a day, the defendant had not been bound to carry them. But this is a different case, for assumpsit does not only lie for a future agreement, but in such a case as this it signifies an actual entry upon the thing and taking the trust upon him. And if a man will do that, and miscarries in the performance of his trust, an action will lie against him for that, though he could have compelled him to do the thing. The 19 Hen. 6, 4, and the other cases cited by my brothers, shew that this is the law. But in the 11 Hen. 4, 33 the difference is clearly pointed out, that is the only case concerning this matter which has not been cited by my brothers. There the action was brought against a carpenter, for that he had undertaken to build the plaintiff's house within such a time, and had not done it, and it was adjudged that an action would not lie. But there the question was put to the jury: What if he had built the house unskillfully? and it is agreed that in that case an action would lie" (see, too, Lea v. Welch, 2 Ld. Raym. 1516: Such a custom exists in the case of a ferryman, a porter, or innkeeper (see Eless v. Gatward, 5 T. R. 143), but in the case of an attorney (Fish v. Kelly, 17 C. B., N. S., 1884).

There are but few reported cases in which any question of liability of an unremunerated agent for non-feasance has been raised. The most recent appears to be that of Baile v. Balfour (infra). The law was settled at an early period, and remained.

In Eless v. Gatward (5 T. R. 143), 1793, it was all the declaration that the plaintiffs being about to build a wall and to rebuild certain parts of a dwelling house, were desirous of having the necessary work completely finished by a certain time. It was further alleged that the plaintiffs had given special instance and request of the defendant, a builder, to do and perform all the bricklayers' and carpenters' work should be requisite, and within the time mentioned. The breach was that the defendant neither did nor would finish the work as agreed. In consequence of the defendant's neglect the walls of the premises in question were greatly sapped and rotted, and the ceilings damaged and falling. The defendant demurred, and the demurrer was allowed. A count which stated that the plaintiff being possessed of the materials, retained the defendant to perform the carpenter's work on certain buildings of the plaintiff, and to use the materials, but that the defendant, instead of using those, used new ones, and thereby increased the expense was held to be good. The judgments in this case contain full exposition of the law on the subject.

Lord Kenyon said: "If this had been an action of assumpsit it could not have been supported for want of a consideration. It would have been nudum pactum. . . . I do not think that the count in the declaration is good in law. It states that the defendant, who is a carpenter, was retained by the plaintiffs to build and repair certain houses; but it is not stated that he received any consideration, or that he entered upon his work. The consideration results from his situation as a carpenter; the undertaking is he bound to perform all the work tendered to him; and therefore the amount of this is the consideration. The defendant has merely told a falsehood, and has not performed his promise; but for his nonperformance of it no action can be supported. . . . Upon the authority of Coggs v. Bernard, cases there noticed, not contradicted by any other decision, that the first count for non-feasance is bad, but that the second count may be supported. . . . This comes within the c superior Judge is unable to deal with it? If Chief Judge Bacon is qualified to review decisions of the County Courts in bankruptcy, surely any one of the Judges at Westminster is qualified to dispose of the far less important questions which come up by way of appeal from the common law jurisdiction of County Courts. Yet a rule renders it necessary that they should be heard before a plurality of Judges. Herein will be found a lamentable waste of judicial power.

(a) By WILLIAM EVANS, Esq., of the South Wales Circuit.

Now a word or two upon the course of procedure on interlocutory matters, such as joinder of parties and notice to third parties. Mr. Finlason gives a perfectly accurate sketch of the powers given to suitors by the Judicature Act, but he does not appear to have been furnished with the materials necessary to show him that by narrow and technical construction the Judges are largely discouraging the use of the power thus given. It is only necessary to read such cases as Treleaven v. Bray, The Swansea Steamship Company v. Duncan, and to know something of the extraordinary views taken by Masters and Judges at chambers, to be convinced that the spirit of sect. 24 of the Act of 1873 is not thoroughly appreciated.

It might be supposed from the foregoing observations that Mr. Finlason's work is mainly critical. It is critical to a considerable extent; but its chief merit consists in its historical retrospect. A long familiarity with common law procedure, and evidently ready means of access to chronicles of all kinds, places our author in an exceptionally advantageous position, and he has written under an evident sense of responsibility. Whilst his book will not rank with works of a practical character on the Judicature Act, it cannot fail to be of very considerable value to everyone interested in the progressive reform of our judicature. We hope it will be read by the Judges, and we trust that it will find its way into the hands of those who at any future time may aspire to amend our judicial system.

NEW EDITIONS.

A THIRD EDITION of Mr. Charley's Real Property Acts 1874, 1875 and 1876, with Explanatory Notes, has been issued. (London:

H. Sweet.) It contains, beyond the matter in the two previous issues, notes of recent decisions under the Real Property Act 1874; also the rules and orders under the Land Transfer Act 1875, arranged under the sections of the Act to which they are ancillary, and, further, the Real Property Acts of last session, namely, the Partition Act and the Settled Estates Act. Great care has evidently been bestowed in compiling the index, which is especially useful as a ready reference to the various provisions in the various Acts of Parliament.

We have received the fifth edition of Morgan's Chancery Acts and Orders, edited by Mr. Morgan and Mr. Challoner Chute (Stevens and Sons). The scheme of this work is so very well known that we may confine ourselves entirely to noticing what has been rendered necessary by recent legislation. The present condition of the machinery is eminently unsatisfactory. No better evidence of this could be afforded than that contained in the preface of the book. The Judicature Acts and Rules, we are told, have in the preserved by the side of the new practice a mass of Orders and Regulations which cannot, without great care and labour, be disentangled from those which have been expressly or implicitly swept away. This care and labour has been bestowed most conscientiously. The statutes passed since the last edition of Chancery Acts as those previously treated are now given, such as the Settled Estates Act Amendment Acts 1874 and 1876, the Partition Act of 1876, the Judicature Acts, and the Appellate Jurisdiction Act of this year. A most valuable feature is the annotation of the Rules of Court, which give all the recent cases, and is useful as a new edition of any of the works on Judicature law only. This edition of Mr. Morgan's treatise must, we believe, be the most popular with the Profession.

We have received copies of Diaries for 1877 from Messrs. Partridge and Cooper. As usual, they are cheap and full of useful and reliable information.

Messrs. Blackwood's Scribbling Diary, besides the usual information, gives postal district maps of London, Edinburgh, Liverpool, and Manchester.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

AN action by a solicitor against a barrister, for alleged slander spoken by the latter in open court, as an advocate discharging the functions of his office, is—we are happy to say—not often met with in the records of litigation in our courts of justice. Such, however, is the case of Lewis v. Higgins, which was disposed of by the Lord Chief Baron and a special jury, at Guildhall, on the 4th inst. The case is not new to the Profession, for we referred to it at some length in our issue of the 17th of June last, in connection with the efforts made by the plaintiff to deliver certain highly important interrogatories to the defendant, but which the latter successfully resisted. Without pretending to know what would have been the answer of the defendant to the interrogatories, the nature of which were made public, we may say that the plaintiff (Mr. George Lewis, of the firm of Messrs. Lewis and Lewis, the well-known firm of solicitors in Ely-place, London), having failed on appeal even in his effort to interrogate the defendant (Mr. Higgins, Q.C., of the Chancery Bar), lost the only chance he had of presenting his case to the jury in the shape in which he was justified in expecting that he would be permitted to do so. The issues of this action, however, even as raised before the Lord Chief Baron, are of the gravest import to every solicitor, and the numerous communications we have received upon the subject of this action sufficiently mark the interest which solicitors have taken, and continue to take, in the case. The action may be regarded from three distinct and separate points of view. That of the public, the Bar, and, thirdly, the solicitors. We will confine ourselves to a consideration of the third point of view also. The language used by Mr. Higgins, and which constituted the alleged slander, was very strong, amounting, as Mr. Serjt. Parry said, to a charge against the plaintiff of a character which, if true, called for his appearance "at the bar of a criminal court to be sentenced to penal servitude." We will not here reproduce the words used by Mr. Higgins, the defendant, but who, having considered them, will deny that they must have given inexpressible pain to a man who for nearly half a century has laboured so as to elevate himself to a high position in a Profession which, to use Mr. Serjeant Parry's words, is "equally as important as their own," speaking of the Bar. The course taken by Mr. Lewis, then, in bringing his action, was inevitable. The Lord Chief Baron reminded the jury that the extraordinary protection given to counsel placed as "Mr. Higgins was," was essential to the liberties of the people. No doubt; and all that can be hoped is that counsel will not abuse the privilege. When they do so, no plea of acting upon instructions can be of avail to save them from universal censure. Mr. Lewis's high reputation is well known, and it remains unsullied with the stain of evil. Mr. Higgins, Q.C., is equally well known for the faithful and honest discharge of the onerous duties of an extensive practice at the Bar, but who in this case, we hope he considers, used language of a character which will never "pass his lips again," in any case, where the facts are as narrated by Mr. Serjeant Parry in the case before us. It would serve no useful purpose—it is not our duty or our privilege—to assail or defend the professional reputation of either the plaintiff or the defendant in this case, nor have we pretended to do so. These may safely be left to public observation: indeed, we are convinced that there is no ground for saying anything which can compromise the reputation of either gentleman. Mr. Lewis has done all he can to vindicate his character in a court of justice, and, at the worst, Mr. Higgins has not offended further than as alleged against him by Mr. Serjeant Parry. If the latter has done no more than in the interests of the Bar he was called upon to do, we are indeed sure that Mr. Lewis has earned the thanks of the whole body of solicitors by the steps he has taken to vindicate the common rights of a Profession as honourable as any in the country.

In another column we publish the annual report of the Bolton Law Society. We deal with this report, for the most part, in our last issue. We will, however, here call attention to a commendable step taken by the committee of this society, in regard to the growth of the Profession in Bolton, and in regard to the necessity for securing the exclusion from the Profession of unsuitable persons. In the report we read, the committee "call especial attention to that part of rule 16 of the rules of the society, which provides that the minimum premium to be taken with an articled clerk be £200, and express their confidence that this regulation will be honourably adhered to by the members." If such a plan were adopted throughout the Profession, it would do as much to keep out unsuitable persons from our ranks as the severest preliminary examination would accomplish: but, unfortunately, in many parts of England, especially in the south, and in London, Manchester, Birmingham, and Liverpool, the very reverse of any such professional understanding exists. Articles of clerkship as we might say, almost given away, and thus enter the Profession whose want of education, whose local connections operate to drag down the Profession in some districts below its legitimate level. No rule such as that which exists at Bolton can be enforced. It is purely a matter of honor, which, unless faithfully acted up to, will create a remedy worse than the disease, for while on the one hand, first-rate men enter the Profession, on the other, most unsuitable men will gain admission, and so we should have two distinct sets of professional men in a town, who never would be able to pull together. Solicitors who are ready to give articles to uneducated clerks, and assist such clerks to pass the examinations, merely for the purpose of earning their own selfish ends, will never conform to such a code of honour as that embodied in the rules of the Bolton Law Society. Such men should, of course, be admitted to membership of local law societies. We hope the rule and the etiquette of the Bolton Law Society will be adopted by other law societies. Subscriptions to country law societies should be fixed at as low a figure as possible, not only because country solicitors, in a large number of cases, belong to London law societies, but, further, because the subscription should not afford any local solicitor an excuse for not joining a local law society. We could mention cases of country societies in which the subscription is only a nominal one (five shillings), which is, of course, sufficient to meet the expense of circulars and postage. The great thing is to get cohesion among solicitors throughout the country.

AN accountant who was until recently a solicitor's clerk, has addressed the following letter to the client of a solicitor at Swansea:—"I am instructed by the Sheriff of Glamorgan to apply to you for the immediate payment of the sum of £200, being the amount due from you to him, and of which you have had full particulars. Unless, therefore, the above amount be paid to me before twelve o'clock on the inst. next (sic), legal proceedings will be instituted for recovery thereof. Your immediate attention will oblige." It is needless to say that our correspondent's client regarded the application as from an officer of the Supreme Court. Of course, if the words "a solicitor will be instructed," &c., or words to such

EXCHEQUER DIVISION.

Monday, Dec. 4.

(Before the LORD CHIEF BARON and a Special Jury.)

LEWIS v HIGGINS.

Privilege of Counsel.

THE statement of claim charged that the defendant falsely and maliciously spoke and published of the plaintiff, in his capacity as attorney in relation to certain matters in which he had been engaged as such attorney, and his conduct and management thereof certain words of a defamatory character. The defendant in his statement of defence alleged that he had uttered the words in question as counsel in certain proceedings before Vice-Chancellor Malins; that they were pertinent to matters then before the Court, and were uttered by him without malice, and solely as counsel in pursuance of his instructions; and that they were founded upon matters alleged in his instructions, and the affidavits made and in the evidence given in the said proceedings.

Parry, Serjt., Benjamin, Q.C., E. Smith, and Beresford appeared for the plaintiff; the Attorney-General (Sir J. Holker, Q.C.), T. Exiger, Q.C., and Lanyon for the defendant.

Parry, Serjt., in opening the case, said he appeared on behalf of Mr. George Henry Lewis, of the firm of Lewis and Lewis, the solicitors, of Ely-place, who brought this action against Mr. Napier Higgins, Q.C., a learned counsel practising in the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice. He might premise that this action was not brought by Mr. Lewis with the object of obtaining large damages, but with the view of clearing himself from the very serious charges which had been brought against him by the speech of Mr. Higgins, which had caused him much mental distress and anguish. The words complained of were spoken by Mr. Higgins in a case of Ex parte O'Hagan, which was heard before Vice-Chancellor Malins on the 1st April last, and which arose out of the following circumstances:—A gentleman named Wright entered into certain transactions with a Mr. O'Hagan in reference to the purchase of a colliery. Mr. O'Hagan subsequently informed Mr. Wright that he had bought the property for him for £90,000, which sum Mr. Wright paid him in cheques and bills. Mr. Wright, however, soon afterwards had reason to doubt the validity of the transaction, and he consulted the plaintiff, Mr. Lewis, on the matter, under whose advice a criminal prosecution was instituted against O'Hagan, who was committed for trial at the Old Bailey for obtaining money under false pretences, a true bill being afterwards found against him by the grand jury. A suit in Chancery was also instituted by Mr. Wright, with a view of restraining the circulation of the bills he had given to O'Hagan, and preventing them from getting into the hands of "innocent holders." On the 30th April 1874 a consultation (at which Mr. Hardwick, O'Hagan's solicitor, was present) was held between Mr. Higgins, Q.C., Mr. Locock Webb, Mr. Henry Matthews, and Mr. Douglas Straight, the learned counsel who had been retained on behalf of O'Hagan in the Chancery suits and in the Criminal Court, with regard to the best course to be adopted on behalf of their client, and the result was that ultimately, with Mr. Hardwick's sanction, the Chancery suit was compromised and the criminal prosecution was dropped. Mr. Wright getting back some £25,000 of his money, besides obtaining possession of the colliery. Mr. Lewis would state positively that he had no hand whatever in the compromise in the criminal proceedings, and that it had been entered into against his desire. On the 23rd of the following Nov. O'Hagan made a claim against the West Cumberland Union Company, in which Mr. Wright was interested, for the sum of £315, for expenses in forming that company, and £26 13s. 4d. for fees payable to him as a director. The claim was disallowed by the chief clerk in Chancery, and was taken on appeal before Vice-Chancellor Malins on the 1st April last, when the defendant spoke the words now complained of, which were set forth in the plaintiff's statement of claim, as follows:—

The criminal proceedings were so got up and managed as to conduce to a mere money result. Mr. Hardwick would have you believe that when he went there he had no connection with Mr. George Lewis, and that he and Mr. George Lewis were on perfectly independent terms; that he went there as the solicitor of Mr. O'Hagan, and appeared in Mr. O'Hagan's instructions. If my theory of the case be correct, Mr. Lewis pulled the strings of the platform on which Mr. Hardwick danced, and the case in the Old Bailey proceedings were used and set up for the purpose of extracting a sum of money. The reasonable conclusion is that the criminal courts of this country were put in motion for the purpose of extracting a money result. These gentlemen go to the grand jury: they lay hold of this young man; they arrange what are called terms of compromise: they have his sworn testimony in their pockets, the very same testimony in respect of which they said before the Recorder there was no evidence whatever to justify the prosecution. Then they go to the jury and get a true bill issued by them. Is not that putting a pistol to a man's head? Is not that worse than and highway robbery, and worse than any crime of the ordinary sort for which men are transported and convicted every day before magistrates and judges?

This was language which Mr. Higgins had thought fit to use in support of a claim set up by O'Hagan for some £300 and odd against the West Cumberland Union Coal Company. He was not at all sure that Mr. Higgins could justify from his instructions the pertinency of these remarks; but, at any rate, it would be for him to do so. He should be able to show that the compromise of the criminal proceedings was Mr. Wright's and not Mr. Lewis's act. The learned counsel then went on to say that it was probable that the jury had often heard of what was called the privilege of counsel—that meant the privilege which counsel might exercise on behalf of their clients, who were the public; but it was an erroneous view that that privilege applied personally to counsel for their own protection merely. It was recognised and acknowledged in our law and in that of all civilised communities, that the advocate is to be protected in the performance of his duties, so that he may speak freely, independently, and fearlessly, without regard to any consequences to himself. He had no doubt that the jury would look upon that as a wholesome and a sound privilege, but certainly it must have some limits, and advocates must be bound by some law with reference to individuals, whom they must not recklessly and wantonly attack. It was with great reluctance that he had to state a case against a member of his own profession, with whom, although not intimate, he had always been on terms of professional friendship and courtesy, and by whom he had always been treated in the kindest way; but he felt himself bound here by a higher law, and in stating this case he trusted he had not himself overstepped the limits of propriety. Mr. Higgins must have been fully acquainted with all the facts of the case, and must have been aware that the compromise was entirely against the wish of Mr. Lewis, and that if Mr. Higgins's instructions justified him in using the language he did they came from a tainted source. God forbid that he should be a member of a profession which required him to be the slave of his instructions: A counsel ought to examine his instructions carefully in all their bearings, in order to see whether they bore the probability of truth, and then having done that let him act fearlessly. But what had Mr. Higgins done in this case? Being suddenly called upon in the absence of his leader to address the Vice-Chancellor on behalf of O'Hagan's claim, he had indulged in the most extravagant language which should never have passed the lips of a counsel, and declared that Mr. Lewis's conduct was such that he deserved to have been tried at the bar of a Criminal Court and sentenced to penal servitude. If that assertion were made rashly and recklessly, he asked whether the counsel who uttered it ought not to be held responsible for it. He did not believe Mr. Higgins would ever in the course of his professional life allow such language to pass his lips again, and if that alone were to be the result of this trial, Mr. Lewis would deserve the thanks of the legal profession for bringing this matter forward. Mr. Lewis belonged to an important, a learned, and an honourable branch of that profession in which he had practised for upwards of a quarter of a century. In these circumstances, had Mr. Higgins exercised ordinary prudence and caution he would never have brought the charges he had done against Mr. Lewis, especially considering the foul source from which they had emanated. He would not read the two letters Mr. Lewis had written to Mr. Higgins asking for a retraction of those charges, but would merely observe that Mr. Higgins had replied that he was surprised that Mr. Lewis should make such an application, without expressing the slightest regret that he had uttered those charges against Mr. Lewis. Mr. Higgins had, on the contrary, taken up what, perhaps, some people would term a high ground, and had said, "I am a Queen's Counsel: I am a member of a most important profession, and I will vindicate the privileges of that profession," and defended himself on the ground that he had spoken the words complained of by Mr. Lewis in his capacity as counsel. He, however, did not believe that the jury would by their verdict sanction that assumption on the part of Mr. Higgins, while Mr. Lewis, by getting into the witness-box and denying the truth of these charges upon his oath, and subjecting himself to the powerful cross-examination of the Attorney-General, would accomplish the object he had in view, which was merely that of clearing his character without seeking damages at their hands.

At the conclusion of the learned counsel's speech.

KELLY, C.B., addressing Mr. Serjeant Parry, said:—You have enjoyed the great advantage and have availed yourself of the opportunity of addressing a jury of English gentlemen in a public court of justice, and what you have said is truth and in fact is a complete vindication of character of your client, Mr. Lewis. I feel bound to inform you, however, that although I should think fit to place him in it I cannot do the appearance of Mr. Lewis in the witness-box and his proving that the words complained of were uttered by Mr. Higgins, it will be well nevertheless to tell the jury that, assuming it is proved that the words set forth in the statement of claim were uttered by the defendant, if those words were spoken by Mr. Higgins, character of counsel in a suit or legal proceeding before one of the judges of the land, in a court of justice, this action cannot be maintained. I can enter into no questions, neither can I receive any evidence as to what were the relations between Mr. Higgins and his client, or as to his instructions were on which he addressed Vice-Chancellor. Neither can I receive any evidence as to what occurred in any previous suit in any criminal charge which may have been brought against one party or the other, or only receive evidence on the points—first, did the words were spoken; and, secondly, at what occasion they were used.

Parry, Serjt., observed that the statement of defence admitted that the words were spoken by the defendant.

KELLY, C.B.—I must tell the jury that the law of England forbids me to enter into any questions in the case, and does not authorise me to enter into and to determine upon the merits of a case affecting the character of a member of the Bar of England, which depends entirely upon what has been stated by him in a case, and is not to be determined by the judge in a court of law. That has been held to be the law over and over again. You may, therefore, take what comes to your mind. If you like to call Mr. Lewis to the witness-box to prove that these words were spoken by Mr. Higgins, you are at liberty to do so.

Parry, Serjt.—It would be quite idle to call my Lord, because that would not carry any weight, as my Lord has in view—that does not depend upon oath the truth of the charges which have been brought against him.

KELLY, C.B.—Then I must direct the jury to find their verdict for the defendant.

The Attorney-General.—With your leave, permission, I should wish to say a few words on behalf of Mr. Napier Higgins. I myself have no objection whatever to Mr. Lewis getting into the box and making any statement he may think fit upon oath, and I am sure that I should be glad to have any imputation whatever upon him. I wish, however, to convey to you the position what is Mr. Napier Higgins's position in the matter. He was counsel for Mr. O'Hagan, and made an application to reverse the decision of Vice-Chancellor's Chief Clerk with reference to a claim against the West Cumberland Colliery Company, which was then being wound up. O'Hagan alleged that a sum of over £300 was due to him from the company for taking the necessary proceedings to establish the company, for less than him as director, and for travelling expenses. He was resisted by Mr. Wright, for whom Mr. Lewis acted as solicitor, on this ground. He said, "I am practically the West Cumberland Colliery Company; there are only a few other holders, and I have a great stake in the company. I say O'Hagan is not entitled to claim this, but the company is got up for the purpose of winding up the Durham Colliery, which I was asked to buy for £20,000, owing to the fraudulent mismanagement of O'Hagan." Whether or not the company was well founded in law, and whether the sum could be recovered from a company winding up, I do not pause to inquire. In the position, Wright, as represented by the plaintiff, made this contention when he came before him, and it was alleged on Wright's part that a compromise of the O'Hagan suit had been entered into between O'Hagan and others, and that this compromise was a confession of O'Hagan's guilt. This contention was put forward by Wright himself. It was most important that the nature of the compromise and the mode it was should be precisely stated, and the character of Mr. Higgins were made in the course of the nature of the compromise according to instructions. I am not going into a long commentary on the transactions, but I think of Mr. Higgins that there is not a word in his honour.

Serjeant Parry.—Certainly not.

The Attorney-General.—He had his instructions and his brief with the history of the proceedings between O'Hagan and Wright, and how the Durham Colliery came to be sold. They sold the colliery was sold originally by Messrs. Armstrong for £60,000. I entered into arrangements with the Financial Company, and they arranged a company which should take over the colliery and work it.

ther, that O'Hagan, the then secretary for the Financial Company, had communicated with Wright, and Wright ultimately bought the col- for £80,000, the originally agreed sum, plus £100,000, to be paid to satisfy the interest that strong, the Financial Company, and others acquired in the concern. That was carried And it was afterwards alleged by Wright he had been in fact defrauded. He said O'Hagan had consented to act as his agent, and he had mis-stated as to the £30,000; that it not to be paid to satisfy the persons in- ted, but for money advanced on the business. O'Hagan strenuously denied. Hence the sention. In addition to the brief, Mr. Higgins on the hearing the affidavits of O'Hagan and others, Mr. Roberts, &c., who corro- rated O'Hagan's testimony, and these detailed whole transaction. I say he was entitled to on the contents; and if the statements of the action and the affidavits were true—bear in I do not say they were—there is no But Mr. Higgins was justified in concluding the plaintiff and Mr. Hardwick were guilty grave misconduct. The compromise relied on guilty had been obtained by oppression and midation of the grossest character, and Mrs. Lewis and Hardwick were guilty of King conspired so to obtain it. Mind, I do not they were; God forbid that I should say any- g of the sort! But if the instructions were and the affidavits correct, Mr. Higgins was fied in so concluding. In advocating the me of his client a painful duty was cast upon - It was no pleasant thing which involved imputing to two members of an honourable sion—one of whom was slightly known to - and the other had been highly respected by for many years—dishonourable conduct. he, as counsel for the plaintiff, to shrink he his duty because it was a painful one? They know Mr. Higgins who suppose he would d discharging his duty and sacrifice his case use as an advocate he might give pain. He capable of so acting. An advocate is worth- unless he is fearless. No one knows this or than my learned friend Serjeant Parry. have the best example of it in his own con- Being fearless, the defendant stated boldly is observations that if his instructions were ort he was obliged to say they had acted un- fully, and he did not shrink from saying it. le sometimes are carried away. It is said if imputations were true, these gentlemen were etter than those consigned to penal servitude. is a high-flown expression? Perhaps so; but e instructions were correct they had con- d to commit acts of intimidation and op- sion, which had resulted in the ruin of agan. I believe it was not so brought about. Higgins made those statements as an ad- e, discharging a painful and disagreeable . He would have been unworthy of the e of the profession if he had shrunk from g so. What would become of an advocate if e held liable for uttering what he thinks? at were so, the sooner any advocates who do want to be sycophants abandon the profession better. My learned friend has himself attacked agan. He is instructed to say that a more ident, unfounded, and fraudulent charge never made. Suppose the verdict in the action for lions prosecution is wrong and obtained by evidence, thus O'Hagan is not guilty of any conduct. Can he turn round and bring an on against my learned friend, and lay his dam- at many thousands of pounds? It is not province to take up your time with a complete y of these transactions. Now, as to Mr. vis. No doubt he was attacked, and things re said against him which it was hard to bear. b, it was all done openly, founded on affidavits ore the Court, and he filed them himself. He d an opportunity of contradicting the statement, d he did so by his testimony, and he was sup- ported by a number of others, who affirmed his ount of the transaction. I do not say any- ing as to the truth of the matter. I must say, conclusion, he had the advantage of the avi- use in support of a reputation gained to my owledge by long years of honourable conduct in profession. The Vice-Chancellor decided ust the claim, and there was an end of the eeding. It is said the defendant has taken high ground here; but the privilege of counsel attacked in this action. As to expressions of ret, Mr. Higgins cannot say he regrets the use he pursued when the words were uttered, use to say so would not be the truth; because e were to act again he could not act differently; he does say that he much regrets that the dis- arge of his duty made it his lot to make obser- ions which occasioned annoyance and inflicted n—I fear very considerable pain—on Mr. vis.

KELLY, C.B.—Gentlemen, it is my duty to set you to find a verdict for the defendant. or the addresses you have heard, I only make single observation, because I think it essential that you and the public should clearly understand that the privilege claimed by the defendant as applicable to this case is not that of counsel, but the privilege of the people of England as represented by counsel. It is essential to the well-being of the whole community that a counsel, when once engaged, should discharge his duty fearlessly, without the shadow of a shade of apprehension as to the consequences. What would become of a case, say, between the Crown and a helpless individual in some proceeding, civil or criminal, unless counsel were at liberty fearlessly to defend his client without fear of the consequences? It was on that account that I interfered and told counsel not to proceed. The statements of Sergeant Parry and the Attorney-General were made ably and delicately. I hope I may presume to advise you to dismiss any im- pression either against Mr. Lewis or against Mr. Higgins. Mr. Lewis is here. He is a solicitor—a member of an honourable profession. As we all know, he has maintained for many years an unexceptionable character. It would be wrong to indulge even a surmise as to his character. But Mr. Higgins is also a gentleman, as we all know, of high and unexceptionable position. He is an eminent member of the Bar and a Queen's counsel. We are bound to hold, there- fore, that he is incapable of departing from the strict truth and honour of an English gen- tleman. Do not think of Mr. O'Hagan, or the propriety or impropriety of any proceed- ings which have passed. Dismiss from your minds the suit in Chancery, the criminal proceed- ings, and the action for malicious prosecution. Consider only the attempt which Mr. Lewis was perfectly justified in making to submit to you a question which the law, for the sake of the liberty of the subject, does not enable him to appeal to a jury to determine. I must direct you to find a verdict for the defendant.

Parry, Serjt.—I should prefer that the plain- tiff be nonsuited.

KELLY, C.B.—Certainly, if you wish it. The plaintiff was then accordingly nonsuited.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless some other claimants sooner appear.]

CROZIER (Rear Admiral Richard), R.N., West-hill, Fresh- water, Isle of Wight. One dividend on the sum of £2300 Three Per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Admiral Richard Crozier.

DOWDESWELL (William), of Pull Court, Tewkesbury, Esq., and DOWDESWELL (John Mundy), Lieut. H.M.'s 12th Lancers. £2307 11s. 4d. Reduced Three Per Cent. Annuities. Claimants, said William Dowdeswell and J. M. Dowdeswell.

ELLIER (Harriet), of Hemel Hempstead, Herts, spinster. £50 New Three Per Cent Annuities. Claimant, said H. Elliott.

ETTWEILL (William), of Ludden Park Farm, Great Bedwin, Wilts, yeoman. £75 5s. 3d. Three Per Cent Annuities. Claimant, said William Ettweill.

FORSYTH (Geo.), of Leadenhall street, London, Esq., and Pollard (Wm.), of Charlbury, Oxfordshire, Esq., one di- vidend on the sum of £2038 11s. Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Wm. Pollard.

TOLLEMACHE (Jno.), of Helmingham-hall, Suffolk, Esq.; Chat (Jno. Francis), Lieut.-Col. Grenadier Guards; Longe (Rev. Jno.), of Ipswich; and Cobbold (Henry Chevallier), of New Bridge-street, Cobham, Esq., £217 11s. 11d. Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimants, said Jno. Tolle-mache, Lieut.-Col. J. F. Chat, Rev. J. Longe, and H. C. Cobbold.

WYMAN (Wm.), of Fletton Lodge, near Peterborough, gen- tleman, one dividend on the sum of £1452 10s. 11d. Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Wm. Wyman.

APPOINTMENTS UNDER THE JOINT-STOCK WINDING-UP ACTS.

COMMERCIAL BANK (LIMITED). Petition for winding-up to be heard Dec. 15 before V.C.H. CROWN FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY. Creditors to send in by Dec. 30 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any) to Chas. Wallington, 51, Moorgate-street, London, the official liquidator of the said creditor, Jan. 12, at the chambers of V.C.H., and at twelve o'clock is the time appointed for adjudicating upon such claims.

SHARROW ROLLING MILL COMPANY (LIMITED). Creditors to send in by Dec. 30 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any) to Edwd. S. Foster, Sheffield, the official liquidator of the said company, Jan. 13, at the chambers of the M.R., at eleven o'clock, is the time for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

TASMANIAN MAIN LINE RAILWAY COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up to be heard Dec. 9, before the M.R.

MID-WALES HOTEL COMPANY (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Dec. 29 their names and addresses and the parti- culars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to Robt. E. James, solicitor, 2, Moorgate-street—buildings, Moorgate—street, London. Jan. 13, at the chambers of the M.R., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY. LAST DAY OF PROOF.

BODHAM (Wm. Tudor), 15, Queen-gardens, Notting Hill, Middlesex, a lieutenant-colonel in the army. Jan. 1; Robt. Griffin, solicitor, 2, Great George-street, West- minster. Jan. 15; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

COLLIER (Chas.), 14, Temple-street, Strood, Kent. Jan. 15; Jno. Thos. Prall, solicitor, Rochester, Kent. Jan. 30; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

CALOUR (Jno. A.), 53, Moscow-road, Bayswater, Middlesex, tailor. Jan. 15; Walter Jarvis, and Tristcott, solicitors, 22, Chancery-lane, London. Jan. 29; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

CLARK (Thos.), Carshalton, Surrey, gentleman, Jan. 15; Chas. W. Young, solicitor, 12, Essex-street, Strand, Lon- don. Jan. 31; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

POOLE (Emma), 7, York-terrace, Leamington, milliner and dressmaker. Jan. 10; Jos. Reeves, solicitor, Birmingham. READ (Enoch), Birmingham, potato merchant. Dec. 29; Jos. Ansell, solicitor, 42, Temple-street, Birmingham. Jan. 12; M.R., at eleven o'clock.

SMITH (Jno.), Dudley, gentleman. Dec. 30; Robert J. Watts, solicitor, Dudley. Jan. 15; M.R., at eleven o'clock.

TAYLOR (Wm. Samuel), Kingston-upon-Hull, Timber mer- chant's clerk. Jan. 1; Jos. L. Jacobs, solicitor, County- buildings, Kingston-upon-Hull. Jan. 12; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

THOMAS (John Jenkins), Caerdydy, near Cowbridge, Gla- mougan. Jan. 10; Richard W. Williams, solicitor, Cardiff, Glamorgan. Jan. 10; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

VARY (Wm.), Bagthorpe, York, farmer and horse dealer. Jan. 5; Robt. Danbey, solicitor, Stamford Bridge, near York. Jan. 10; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

WINSTANLEY (Wm.), Liverpool, miller. Dec. 29; Jno. At- kinson, solicitor, Liverpool. Jan. 12; M.R., at eleven o'clock.

WESKIN (Jos.), Bearton House, Hitchin, Herts, manager of Corroli Works. Jan. 1; Dillon, Webb, and Kelly, solicitors, 22, Chancery-lane, London. Jan. 10; V.C.H., at twelve o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

ADAMS (Francis), Leicester, baker. Jan. 1; G. Stephenson, solicitor, 11, New-street, Leicester.

ALLAN (Jno.), East Listed, Southampton, yeoman. Feb. 1; Blackmore and Son, solicitors, Alresford.

ALEXANDER (John M.), 7, Rosbury-crescent, Edinburgh; of 21, Denbigh-street, Piccadilly, Middlesex; of 69, Denbigh- street, Piccadilly; and of the Junior Athenaeum Club, Piccadilly, Middlesex. Jan. 8; Kinsey and Ade, soli- citors, 9, Bloomsbury-place, London, W.C.

BUCKLEY (Jno.), late of Windsor, Berks, one of the Military Knight of Windsor, and formerly of Chatham, Kent, and a retired major in H.M.'s army. Jan. 15; Miss Sarah F. Buckley, 39, Upper Baker-street, London, N.W.

BEAUREL (Pierre F. J.), West Standfield House, Stoke-next- Guildford, Surrey, gentleman. Jan. 10; Putvoye and Co., solicitors, 23, John-street, Bedford-row, London.

BANNISTER (Jno.), Poole-road, Wimbome, Dorset. Dec. 15; Geo. Bannister, 34, Lorraine-road, Holloway, Middlesex.

CANT (David), Manchester, and of Didbury, Lancashire, joiner and builder. Jan. 27; Farrar and Hall, solicitors, 47, Princess-street, Manchester.

CLARKE (Seymour), Walthamstow, Essex, Esq. July 3; Johnston, Farquhar, and Leech, solicitors, 2, Moorgate- street, London.

CHAMBER (Lieut.-Gen. Wm.), 45, Mountjoy-square South, Dublin, and the Army and Navy Club. Jan. 1; Hardman and Son, solicitors, 2, Foster-place, Dublin.

DRAKFORD (David), formerly of Brookside, Sussex, late of Elm-grove, Sydenham, Kent, Esq. Dec. 30; Norris and Co., solicitors, 20, Bedford-row, London.

DIXON (Jos.), 5, Devonshire-street, Bloomsbury, Middlesex, gentleman. Jan. 10; R. B. Barrett, solicitor, 2, John- street, Bedford-row, London.

FREESTONE (Anthony Geo), St. Margaret's, Southelham, Suffolk, gentleman. Jan. 12; Horace A. Freestone, St. Peter's, Southelham.

GILL (Anthony), West Hartlepool, gentleman. Jan. 1; W. Todd, solicitor, 28, Town Wall, Hartlepool.

GOODMAN (John), Eastcott, Ruialip, Middlesex, farmer. Jan. 1; H. H. Mason and Son, solicitors, 14, Bedford- row, London.

GREENHOW (Dorothy), Kendal, spinster. Dec. 30; Jos. Swainson, jun., Kendal.

GRABY (Eleanor M.), Enville Hall, Stafford, spinster. Dec. 31; Henry Hall, Esq., Boothdale, Ashton-under-Lyne, Lancashire.

HANCOCK (Jane), Calverley House, Surbiton, Surrey, widow. Jan. 5; T. W. Denbey, Solicitor, 5, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry, London.

HAXELL (ADD N.), 24, Alma-street, St. John's Wood, Mid- dlesex, spinster. Jan. 1; Hicks and Arnold, solicitors, 1, Salisbury street, Strand, Middlesex.

LAW (Alexander), 5, Colville-gardens, Notting-hill, Middle- sex, a retired colonel of H.M.'s Madras Engineers. Jan. 1; Bridges and Co., solicitors, 25, Red Lion-square, London.

LEVETT (Wm.), Liverpool, Miller, but at the time of his death out of business. Dec. 29; Jevons, Ryley, and Style, solicitors, Liverpool.

MADGWELL (Redmond C.), 24, Fortess-terrace, Kentish Town, Middlesex, gentleman. Dec. 30; A. D. Bayley, solicitor, 25, Bucklersbury, London.

MASTERS (Jno), Braunston, Northampton, cornfactor. Dec. 15; John Bromwich, builder, Thornfield, Rugby.

McGEACHY (Sarah G.), 2, Windsor-terrace, Clifton, Bristol, widow. Dec. 30; J. Cooke and Son, solicitors, Shannon- court, Bristol.

MARRIS (Marianne), Thornton-beath, Surrey, widow. Jan. 3; R. S. Taylor and Son, solicitors, 4, Field-court, Gray's- inn, London.

COCKE (Wm.), Seaton, Devon, chemist. Dec. 25; W. For- ward, solicitor, Axminster.

PEARSON (Richard), 72, Francis-road, Edgbaston, Warwick, gentleman. Jan. 15; Griffiths, Bloxham, and Son, soli- citors, 6, Bennett's-hill, Birmingham.

PENNY (Louis M.), late of Marine Parade, or Terrace, Herne Bay, Kent, and formerly of 22, Weighton-road, South Penge Park, Anerley, Surrey, widow. Jan. 26; Merriman and Co., solicitors, 25, Austinians, London.

PARK (James), The Nook, Ulverston, Lancashire, gentleman. Dec. 25; Jas. Park, solicitor, Ulverston.

READ (Ellen), Partington, Chester, widow. Jan. 1; Gruney and Kershaw, solicitors, 31, Booth-street, Man- chester.

ROBERTSON (Jno.), 19, Princess-street, Hanover-square, and of 34, London-street, Fitzroy-square, London, tailor. Dec. 31; G. B. Wheeler, solicitor, 21, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C.

SIMON (Jno. S.), Penny Bridge, Ulverston, Lancashire, gentleman. Jan. 10; C. G. Thomson and Wilson, soli- citors, Finkle-street, Kendal.

TUCK (Arthur), Blackheath, Kent, gentleman. Jan. 15; Reephane and Co., solicitors, 9, Bush lane, Cannon-street, London.

VAUGHAN (Hon. Edwd. C.), late a captain in the Rifle Brigade, and of 66, St. James's-square, Middlesex, and heretofore of Crosswood, near Aberystwith. Feb. 6; Tatham and Co., solicitors, 33, Lincoln's Inn-fields, London.

WILLIAMS (Jno.), formerly of Chester, but late of Treffos, Anglesea, Esq. Dec. 31; Potts and Roberts, solicitors, Chester.

WILSON (Henry), jun., Peaseod-street, New Windsor, Berks, victualler. Jan. 1; Bartley, Saxton, and Morgan, solicitors, 30, Somerset-street, Portman-square, London.

YOUNG (Dane Francis S.), late of 55, Ennismore-gardens, Prince's-gate, formerly of Prince's-terrace, Middlesex, widow. Jan. 11; M. and H. Turner, solicitors, 22, Sack- ville-street, Piccadilly, London.

REPORTS OF SALES.

Wednesday, Nov. 22.

By Messrs. E. W. RICHARDSON, at the Mart. Walthamstow.—Freehold ground rent of £40 per annum— sold for £770.

Barking.—Heath-street, freehold house with shop—sold for £320.

Walthamstow.—Nos. 9, 10, and 11, Marion-grove, term 27 years—sold for £201.
 Gray's-inn-road.—No. 3, Southampton-street, term 25 years—sold for £294.
 Holloway.—Nos. 11 to 13, and 14 to 16, Gloucester-road, term 75 years—sold for £290.

Thursday, Nov. 29.

By Mr. F. IMMAN SHARP, at the Mart.
 Tottenham.—One-tenth of a rental of £50 per annum secured on a copyhold estate—sold for £110.
 By Messrs. NEWBOLD and HARDING, at the Mart.
 Islington.—No. 12, Frederick-place, term 71 years—sold for £229.
 No. 2, Stonefield-terrace, term 29 years—sold for £280.
 No. 33, Barnsbury-road, term 25 years—sold for £190.
 No. 3, Barnsbury-road—sold for £153.
 King's-cross.—Nos. 10 and 14, Harrison-street, term 25 years—sold for £285.
 No. 1, Hastings-street, term 20 years—sold for £120.
 Nos. 1 to 4, Southampton-terrace, term 10 years—sold for £201.
 Kentish Town.—Nos. 37, 39, 41, and 43, Carlton-street, term 7 years—sold for £1130.

Friday, Dec. 1.

By Mr. JAMES BEAL, at the Mart.
 Holloway.—Nos. 30, 31, 32, 33, and 34, Liverpool-road, freehold—sold for £254.
 Freehold ground rents of £15 per annum—sold for £771.

By Mr. H. STANLEY, at Ely.

Cambs., Soham.—The residence called Soham-place, and 10a, 3r, 5p.—sold for £15,000.
 The Soham steam and water mill, with house and stabling, &c.—sold for £250.
 Bracks farm, containing 92a. 2p.—sold for £750.
 Broad Hill farm, containing 8a. 3r. 2p.—sold for £250.
 Barnham farm, containing 172a. 17p.—sold for £10,000.
 Fodder Penn farm, containing 120a. 17. 2p.—sold for £250.
 The graving grounds known as the Weatheralls, containing 6a. 6p.—sold for £715.
 Numerous cottages and premises with enclosures of accommodation and building land containing 6a. 1r. 5p.—sold for £2070.

By Mr. T. C. KIRBY, at the Mart.

Greenwich.—Nos. 14 to 17, Trinity-grove, term 65 years—sold for £230.
 Plumstead.—Nos. 1 to 4, Park-cottages, freehold—sold for £230.
 Forest-hill.—Nos. 1 to 4, Grove-cottages, term 20 years—sold for £290.
 Nos. 1 and 2, Water-cottages, term 55 years—sold for £330.
 New-croft.—No. 23, Amersham-road, term 56 years—sold for £425.
 Nos. 1 and 2, Brindley-street, term 40 years—sold for £240.
 Deptford.—Nos. 2 and 4, Idonia-cottages, term 70 years—sold for £200.
 New-croft.—Nos. 18, 19, and 20, Alexandra-street, term 70 years—sold for £200.
 Deptford.—Nos. 28, and 29, James-street, term 70 years—sold for £200.
 New-croft-road.—The residence called Alpha-house, term 67 years—sold for £400.
 By Messrs. DEXHAM, TOWN, and FARMER, at the Mart.
 Whitechapel.—Nos. 114a and 114b, Back Church-lane, freehold—sold for £2300.
 Barnet, High-street.—Freehold house, with shop—sold for £200.
 By Mr. G. HAWKINS, at the Mart.
 Limon-grove.—Nos. 10 and 101, Devonshire-street, term 30 years—sold for £250.
 Dorset-square.—No. 27, Boston-street, with stabling, term 25 years—sold for £200.

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

Inquiries, as to the several Examinations and as to Admission on the Roll of the Supreme Court, as to being called to the Bar, and as to taking out and renewal of annual certificates, should be addressed to the Editor (Students' Department).

THE following lectures and classes are appointed to be delivered and held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, during the ensuing week: Monday, Equity Class, 4.30 to 6 o'clock p.m.; Tuesday, ditto; Wednesday, ditto; Thursday, lecture on Conveyancing, 6 to 7 o'clock p.m. Subscribers are not admitted to the Hall after lectures have commenced.

WHERE articles expire between the 10th Jan. and 15th April 1877, candidates may be examined in Jan. 1877, or, of course, at any subsequent examination.

In case of the death of a principal during articles, fresh articles should always be entered into without loss of time. The time which elapses between the day of the death of the principal and the day of the date of fresh articles being entered into, does not count, so that the further articles must be for a time sufficient to make up for this loss of service, as well as for the unexpired term of the original articles of clerkship.

ARTICLES of clerkship, or assignments of articles of clerkship, dated on any day during December must be enrolled and registered at the Petty Bag Office on or before the same days in the month of June next, and when articles or assignments are required to be, and are, enrolled and registered on any day during the month of December, they must be produced and entered at the Law Institution or before the same day of the month of March next. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 8 and 9, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 7. Failure to comply with these statutory requirements often entails a loss of time upon articulated students.

WE have before pointed out that the preliminary examination in Ireland subjects aspirants for the profession of solicitor to a much severer test than does the same examination in England and Wales.

In Ireland separate papers are given in Grecian History, Roman History, English History, geography, logic, and arithmetic. Nor can the questions on these several subjects be said to be commonplace by any means. Surely the time has come when our preliminary examination should be made a more thorough test of a liberal education on the part of those who seek admission on the roll of the Supreme Court.

THE next preliminary examination will be held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, and in various provincial towns on the 21st and 22nd of Feb. in the ensuing year.

WE reported in our last issue the formation of another Law Students' Society—that at Brighton. Such organisations are becoming the order of the day throughout England and Wales, and we are anxious to encourage their formation in every way, in the absence of any better system of instruction in advocacy. It is, however, desirable, as far as possible, that questions should be discussed of a professional or jurisprudential character.

AN examination certificate is only available for admission on the roll of the Supreme Court within six months from its date, and must otherwise be specially enlarged by an order of the Master of the Rolls, which should be applied for at the Petty Bag Office.

COUNCIL OF LEGAL EDUCATION.

MICHAELMAS EDUCATIONAL TERM 1876.

Regulations for the Examination of Students on the Subjects of the Professors' Lectures.

ON Dec. 18 and 19 there will be four examinations—one in the subject of the lectures given by each professor, open (subject as hereinafter mentioned) to all students who have during the year 1876 attended the lectures of any of the professors, but no student will be admitted to the examination in the subjects of the lectures of any professor unless he shall have attended at least two-thirds of the lectures given during the year by such professor. No student will be admitted to more than two examinations, and no student who shall have obtained a studentship under Clause 50 of the Consolidated Regulations 1875, will be admitted to any such examination.

After the examination the following prizes will, on the recommendation of the committee, be given (that is to say):—

To the students who shall have passed the best examination in the subjects of the lectures of each professor, first prize, £50; second prize, £25; third prize, £15; fourth prize £10; and a first and second prize of £70 and £30 respectively, to the students who obtain the greatest aggregate number of marks in the examination in the subjects of the lectures given by any two of the professors.

No student shall be entitled to more than one prize, but a student will receive the prize of the highest value to which he shall appear to be entitled.

The committee shall not be obliged to recommend any of the above prizes to be awarded if the result of the examination be such as, in their opinion, not to justify such recommendation.

The examinations will take place at Lincoln's Inn Hall, and will commence on Monday, 18th Dec. 1876.

Students who propose offering themselves for examination must enter their names personally on or before Monday, the 4th Dec. next, at the office of the Council of Legal Education, Lincoln's Inn Hall.

The examinations will be partly oral and partly in writing, by means of printed papers of questions.

The following days and hours have been appointed for the examinations: Monday morning, 18th Dec., 10 to 1, On Jurisprudence, Roman Civil Law, and Constitutional Law and Legal History; Monday afternoon, 18th Dec., 2 to 5, On Equity; Tuesday morning, 19th Dec., 10 to 1, On the Common Law; Tuesday afternoon, 19th Dec., 2 to 5, On the Law of Real and Personal Property.

Council Chamber, Lincoln's Inn Hall,
 23rd Nov. 1876.

MIDDLE TEMPLE SCHOLARSHIPS.

AT a special Parliament held on the 22nd Nov. 1876, it was—after consideration of the report of the committee appointed on the 10th Nov., with respect to the eight scholarships then established—ordered that the following rules and regulations be adopted respecting the same—viz.:

1. The eight scholarships shall be severally awarded each year in respect of the following subjects, and shall be tenable for one year each—viz.:

(1.) One of the Hundred Guineas Scholarships, and one of the Fifty Guineas Scholarship, respect of International Law and Constitutional Law.

(2.) One other of each amount in respect of Law of Real and Personal Property.

(3.) One other of each amount in respect of Common Law, including Criminal Law.

(4.) And the remaining two in respect of Middle Temple.

3. No student shall be qualified to compete for a Fifty Guineas Scholarship who shall be less than twenty-three years of age on the day appointed for examination for such scholarship, and no student shall be qualified to compete for a Hundred Guineas Scholarship who shall be less than twenty-four years of age on the 1st Jan. preceding the first day appointed for examination for such scholarship.

4. No student shall hold more than one scholarship in the same year.

5. A student who has obtained a Fifty Guineas Scholarship shall not be allowed to compete for any other scholarship.

6. A student who has obtained a Fifty Guineas Scholarship shall not compete for the Hundred Guineas Scholarship in the same subject, nor compete for another Fifty Guineas Scholarship in the same or any other subject; but he may, after expiration of twelve months next after the day of the examination upon which he obtained such scholarship—if he shall be within the prescribed age—compete for a Hundred Guineas Scholarship in any subject other than that in which he has obtained the Fifty Guineas Scholarship.

7. There shall be two examinations for all ships in each year—one after Hilary Term for four scholarships of fifty guineas each, and after Trinity Term for the four scholarships of one hundred guineas each.

8. The first examinations shall take place next Hilary and Trinity Terms respectively.

9. The examination shall be partly oral and partly in writing.

10. An examiner in each subject shall be appointed for one year by the Masters of the Bench in Parliament, and shall report to them the result of his examination, and the scholarships awarded by the Masters of the Bench in pursuance of such report; but no scholarship shall not be awarded unless it appears in the report of the examiner that one of the masters for it is in his judgment deserving of it.

11. Each examiner shall be paid 20 guineas each examination.

12. A committee, to be called the Scholar Committee, shall be appointed by the Masters of the Bench in Parliament to carry these regulations into effect, and such committee shall have power from time to time to rescind or add to these rules and regulations, and to do others, as they may deem desirable, subject to the approval of the Masters of the Bench in Parliament.

Regulations framed by the Scholarships Committee for the Examinations in 1877.

1. The examination for the Fifty Guineas Scholarship will commence on Thursday, 1st Dec. 1877, and that for the Hundred Guineas Scholarship on Tuesday, 19th June, 1877.

2. A student intending to compete for a scholarship must give notice in writing to the under-treasurer fourteen days before he is appointed for the commencement of the examination, and supply a certificate or other satisfactory evidence of his age.

Middle Temple, 1st Dec. 1876.

BRISTOL LAW STUDENTS' DEBATE SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held in the Library on Tuesday evening, the 28th Nov. A. R. Poole, Esq., barrister-at-law, in the chair. The following was the subject for discussion: "A stores water on his property, and the agency of B. (a stranger) it escapes, and damage to the property of C.; is A. liable for damage?" (Rylands v. Fletcher, L. Rep. 330, and 37 L. J. Rep. N. S., 166 Ex.; See Mansland, 23 W. R. pp. 693, and 44 L. J. Ex. 134.)

The following members were present: Blake, Caparn, Carpenter, Daniell, Dymond, Gaches, Hughes, Kilby, Strachan, and Taylor. Mr. Dymond opened the debate, and was followed by Mr. Kilby in the affirmative. The discussion was continued by Blake, Carpenter, Sturge, Fenwick, Gaches, Strachan, and Daniell. The chairman, summed up, put the question, and the affirmative had a majority of seven.

DUBLIN LAW STUDENTS' DEBATE SOCIETY.

OWING to the death of the late Lord Chief, the general meeting of the society, appointed to be held at the King's Inns last Monday, was postponed.

FULL LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

A weekly meeting of this society, held at the library, on Tuesday evening, the 5th Dec. at which Mr. T. Pearce, solicitor, was the man, the following was the subject appointed for discussion, viz., "Was the execution of an I. justifiable?" Mr. Marshall took the affirmative and Mr. Hobson the negative. Eight gentlemen joined in the debate, which was animated. After the chairman had read up, the question was decided in the affirmative by a majority of three, eleven votes recorded in favour of that view, against the affirmative. The meeting was attended by many members. Two gentlemen were elected honorary members.

NEW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

A meeting of this society held at the Law Library on Tuesday last, Mr. Fell brought forward a motion that the annual meeting of the society should henceforth be held in June instead of as heretofore; but after some discussion the question was decided in its present form to be order, and Mr. Fell gave notice of a motion to the same effect, but in an amended form, for the next meeting of the society in January next. The question discussed was as follows: "Can we accept an acceptance to satisfy the 17th section of the Statute of Frauds so long as the vendor has his right to stop in transit?" (Bushel v. Wier, 15 Q. B. 443; Acetal v. Levy, 10 Bing. Chitty on Contracts, 10th edit. 371.) Mr. Chitty opened the subject on the affirmative side, Mr. Saxelby on the negative; and, after a discussion, it was decided in the latter way by a large majority.

CHESTER LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

The 7th meeting of this society for the session 1876, was held in the Law Library, Friar-lane, Wednesday, the 29th Nov., J. S. Dickinson, Esq., in the chair. The question for discussion was "Is the Permissive Bill worthy of support?" Mr. Dickinson opened the debate in the negative. Commencement of his speech he read the Bill and remarked upon the ill-digested manner in which it is drawn, saying that it was palpable in its present form it would never have a chance in the statute book. He also called attention to the fact that no compensation is allowed to those whose vested interests would be affected if it were adopted. The affirmative was supported by Mr. Green and Mr. Brown. Mr. Rands spoke for the negative. After Mr. Rands summed up by the chairman, the question was put to the meeting and decided in the negative by a majority of one. All present agreed that something should be attempted to suppress the vice of drunkenness.

SOUTH, STONEHOUSE, AND DEVONPORT LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

The usual fortnightly meeting of this society was held at the Athenaeum, Plymouth, on Friday, 1st Dec. B. O. Holberton, Esq., in the chair. The reading of the minutes and the passing of a resolution that a special meeting be held on Friday, the 8th inst., for the consideration of the proposed new rules, were the order for the evening. "That this house, being the decay of the art of public speaking, desires its more thorough cultivation through the instrumentality of debating societies," was carried forward by Mr. Benson, who was seconded by Mr. Harrison, Mr. E. H. Fox, and another opposing. The last two gentlemen declared that they had only consented to oppose the motion in order the subject might be brought before the house. A discussion of the motion was put to the meeting and carried unanimously.

UNITED LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

A meeting of this society was held at Clement's Hall on Wednesday, Dec. 6, 1876. Mr. Dowson in the chair. Mr. Rubinstein proposed the adjourned debate, viz., "That the legal profession should be open to women." A very animated discussion the affirmative was carried. Twenty-six gentlemen were present. The following is the question for the next meeting to be argued on Wednesday next. "That the conduct of Lord Beaconsfield in relation to the question of the census deserves the censure of all men." To support, Messrs. Owen and Jones; to oppose, Messrs. Stevens and Elliott.

CHESTER AND WORCESTERSHIRE LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

A general meeting of this society was held in the Law Library, Pierpoint-street, on Tuesday evening (Mr. Davis in the chair), Messrs. May, Cooper, Gabb, George, Griffiths, Halsey, Spofforth, Stallard, Thursfield, and J. L.

Messrs. W. T. Curtler and L. M. Curtler were duly elected members of the society, and Mr. Taylor was proposed as a member, and will be balloted for at the next meeting.

On the motion of Mr. Southall a new rule was made providing that in case of illness or absence from Worcester the usual fines on non-attendance should be remitted.

The preliminary business being concluded, Mr. Halford read a useful paper on chapter 3 of Smith's Manual of Equity, relating to legal and equitable mortgages, and after some discussion and questions from the chairman the meeting separated.

Queries.

LONDON LL.B.—I am articulated to a country solicitor, and am anxious, if practicable, to take this degree whilst articulated. (1) Can I do so without keeping terms in London? (2) about what sum would it cost me in fees; and (3) where can I obtain all needful information?

SEBRACH.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION.—Will you please send me questions and answers, if published, of the last two examinations, as I am anxious to see what sort of questions are put to the candidates. What are the best books to read in history and geography to prepare for examination? for it appears this is the most difficult for those boys who have received a purely classical education.

N. E.

[These questions and answers are not published at the Law Times Office, but can be procured of Evison and Bridge, Law Stationers, Chancery-lane.]

Would you tell me whether there is a limited time for being articulated after having passed the Preliminary Examination; and could you refer me to a gentleman who holds classes for same in the evening?

R. T. B.

[There is no time limited; see advertisements in Law Times as to your second query.]

FINAL EXAMINATION.—I was articulated on the 2nd Oct., 1872. Can I first sit for my Final Examination in June 1877? I am informed that according to the new rules I must wait until November, 1877.

W. D. O.

[If articulated for five years, you can present yourself in June, 1877.]

(1) Is it necessary to be of age at the time you present yourself for examination? (2) May not the attainment of twenty-one take place after the examination, but before admittance?

FARD, S.

[(1) Yes; except in the case of a judge's order for the purpose. (2) No.]

ANNUAL CERTIFICATE.—I was admitted in Trinity Term 1875, and took out my certificate for the year ending 1875. Since my admission I have been engaged as clerk to a firm of solicitors. I renewed my certificate for last year, but, not thinking it necessary, I have not taken one out for the year 1876-77. Will any reader kindly inform me whether it will be necessary for me to do so, and whether, supposing I do not take it out for this year, I can take it out at any future time without having to pay the arrears, and without any difficulty, or not?

T.

[It is certainly not incumbent for you to take out your certificate for 1876-77; you will not have to pay the arrears if you take it out again later on, but if you allow twelve months to elapse from the expiration of your last annual certificate, you must give six weeks' notice to the Clerk of the Petty Bag of your intention to apply to the Master of the Rolls for an order, and you must also at the time of giving such notice file your affidavit in support of the application, and leave notice of it at the Law Institution.]

INTERMEDIATE.—Half of my term of service expired on 28th Nov. last, will it matter if I do not present myself for examination till June?

L. C.

[You must present yourself within six months from the expiration of half your term of service. You must therefore go up in January or April next.]

COSTS.—What book on costs do you consider the best?

M. E.

[Scott's Costs, latest edition.]

SERVICE UNDER ARTICLES.—I was articulated on the 1st Aug. last for five years, on the 27th Sept. next I shall have completed my ten years' service in a solicitor's office. Can the term of my articles be shortened to three years from 27th Sept. 1877, and, if so, what steps ought I to take to get this done? Also would it make any difference in the date at which I could go up for the intermediate? I presume it is not necessary to have been a managing clerk during the ten years.

W. W. A.

[You are under an entire misimpression; your term of service cannot be shortened.]

TEN YEARS' CLERKS—ARTICLES.—A. B. lately obtained a judge's order dispensing with the Preliminary Examination and to reduce the term of service under articles to three years. Must A. B. at some future time prove that he has been a clerk for ten years, or is the judge's order a sufficient proof of his having served as clerk for the required period?

D. L.

[The ten years' clerkship is not dealt with in the judge's order. The Incorporated Law Society satisfies itself as to such clerkship by questions to be answered both by the clerk and his principals at the Intermediate or Final Examinations.]

J. HOUNSELL, Esq., Surgeon, Bridport, Dorsetshire writes:—"I consider BUSTER'S NERVE as a specific for toothache. Very severe cases under my care have found instantaneous and permanent relief. I therefore recommend its use to the Profession and the Public as invaluable to all who suffer from toothache."—[Advrt.]

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

LAWFORD'S GATE (GLOUCESTERSHIRE) PETTY SESSIONS.

REG. V. NORMAN.

Thursday, Nov. 30.

Sale of beer during prohibited hours—Hours of closing—Infringement of Acts.

ROBERT NORMAN, landlord of the Shepherd's Rest, Moorfields, St. George's, was charged with opening his house for the sale of intoxicating liquors before 12.30 on Sunday, the 19th. It was proved that about 10 o'clock that morning a man named Smith, who works at the neighbouring chemical works, went to the house with a half gallon jar, and knocked at the window, and shortly afterwards the landlord opened the door and gave Smith another jar, which Smith put in his pocket, and which was found to contain Burton. The defence was that Smith had called at the house on the Saturday evening, and had a glass of beer, and then told the landlord to send a half gallon of Burton, for which he then paid, to his house that evening, as he was going to work all night, and should want it when he came home in the morning, which Norman promised to do, and accordingly filled a jar with Burton for Smith, but forgot to send it to his house as directed. When Smith came home on Sunday morning, he asked for the Burton, and finding that it had not been sent, he took an empty jar belonging to the landlord to the house, and then the facts as above stated occurred.

Clifton, for the landlord, contended that the house was not opened for the sale of beer on the occasion in question; that as soon as the beer was drawn and poured into the jar on the Saturday evening the property in it passed to Smith, and the sale was complete; and therefore there was no opening for sale of liquor on the Sunday morning.

Mr. Brooke Smith (one of the Bench), however, held that the delivery of the beer at Smith's house on the Saturday evening was the very essence of the contract then made, and as it was not performed, the property remained in Norman, and Smith might have refused to accept it afterwards, and have demanded repayment of the money; that what took place on the Sunday morning amounted, both in law and fact, to a new contract on terms differing from those of the evening before, and that the delivery to and acceptance by Smith at Norman's house was a necessary part either of the old contract or of the new one; and in either case the house was opened for the purpose of completing such contract, and, therefore, for the sale of liquor. But as it was a peculiar and novel case, he did not care to have his opinion made the ground of a special case for the court above; and as the Bench believed that the facts were as stated, and that the defendant had erred through ignorance, the information might be withdrawn on payment of costs. But it must be clearly understood that on any future occasion of a similar description, the defence that the beer had been ordered and paid for on the Saturday night would not be allowed, as it would be clearly in contravention of the provisions of the Acts as to closing, and induce parties to attempt an evasion of those provisions by fraud and perjury.

The defendant accordingly paid the costs, and the summons was withdrawn.

LICENSING ACTS—BREWSTER SESSIONS.

MR. BROOKE SMITH, J.P., wishes to correct an error in his contribution on the above subject in our last issue, p. 83, beginning "The effect of Reg. v. Rowell," &c., as follows: "A beerhouse certificate, notwithstanding sect. 19 of the Act of 1869," should have been: "An alehouse licence under sect. 14 of the Act of 1828."

COUNTY COURTS.

CROYDON COUNTY COURT.

(Before H. J. STONOR, Esq., Judge.)

Re ELLIOTT.

Motion for removal of proceedings on ground of petitioning creditor being client of registrar, B. A. 1869, s. 80.

In reference to the remarks in our issue of the 18th ultimo, page 42, upon the subject of this case (Re Elliott), before the learned judge of this court, reported in our issue of the 11th ultimo, we have received the following copy of the memorial, to which we referred in our comments upon this case:

"To His Honour the Judge of the County Court of Surrey, holden at Croydon:

"The undersigned solicitors, practising before your Honour in this court, desire to enter a respectful but earnest protest against a proceeding in bankruptcy, which they understand is to be taken on Monday next, in the matter of a petition against Jane Elliott, of Norwood.

"Messrs. Heathfield and Son, of London, have given notice of a motion for the transfer of these proceedings to London, alleging as grounds for it—

"First, that the petitioning creditor is a private client of the registrar :

"Second, that the solicitor to the petitioner was formerly in partnership with the registrar.

"We submit to your Honour that, apart from the question of the locus standi of the applicants, which (having reference to sub-s. 5 of sect. 80 of the Act) is matter for your Honour's judgment, the motion should be refused. The Act makes it imperative as to the place where a petition shall be filed, and where all subsequent proceedings thereon shall be had, subject to the exception in the section before referred to, and it would be matter of immense inconvenience to tradesmen, creditors, and to solicitors to have their rights interfered with, except upon strong and sufficient grounds.

"We venture to suggest, however, to your Honour that a far more serious issue is raised by the other part of this motion, which indirectly reflects upon the gentleman holding the highest official position amongst the officers of this court, and against whom it is covertly alleged that he would allow the duties of his office to become subservient to the private interests of his clients.

"We need hardly say that we have always carefully watched the conduct of the registrar of this court, and we fearlessly assert that no instance can be recorded in which he has acted otherwise than in a strictly legal, straightforward, and, at the same time, courteous manner in all cases and to all parties coming before him.

"We regret the necessity for thus intruding upon the court, but we feel that whilst our own conduct is very properly subject to the control of the judge of the court before whom it is our good fortune from time to time to practise, it is a duty which we owe to the officers of that court to see that theirs is not without just cause assailed by a motion such as that to which we have referred.

"W. S. MASTERMAN, W. ARNOLD,
JOHN DRUMMOND, GEO. H.
HOGAN, THOS. YOUNG, GOD-
DEN S. HARE, HY. PARRY. G.
W. DENNIS."

The learned registrar of the court (Mr. W. H. Rowland) in forwarding us the above, takes exception to the justice of our remarks upon the case in our issue of the 18th ultimo, so far as he is concerned, and says, "I subjoin the memorial to which you refer, and I am sure you will wish that you had read it before making the observations you did." We admit that we should have been pleased to publish the memorial, but we had not received it, and could not, therefore, read or publish it. So far as our observations went to the particular case of Re Elliott, we aimed at endorsing the views of the memorialists, and we cannot admit that our comments bear the construction which Mr. Rowland puts upon them, we are yet of course happy to offer this explanation. We repeat our belief that the reflection (if any) upon the registrar, involved in the application to the judge, was certainly without foundation, and, looking at the high reputation of the registrar, we consider that the memorial was ill-advised and out of place.

ULVERSTON AND BARROW-IN-FURNESS COUNTY COURT.

Monday, Nov. 27.

(Before T. H. INGHAM, Esq., Judge.)

MCMILLAN v. WHINERAY.

Damages for illegal distraint—A jury empanelled.

G. B. Nalder appeared for plaintiff.

R. H. Jackson appeared for defendant.

This was a case in which the plaintiff, formerly a domestic servant, sued Mark Whineray, landlord of a house, No. 4, Albert-street, Barrow, for wrongful seizure of goods. She claimed £30.

Nalder stated that his client came to Barrow some time ago, with the intention of keeping a boarding-house, and brought some furniture with her. Not meeting with suitable premises she left the furniture in charge of her sister, a Mrs. Fraser, residing at No. 4, Albert-street. After they had been there some time, her sister left, and went to reside with her brother, who lived on the Strand in that town. She owed, on leaving, about three weeks' rent. The day after she left she sent the key of the premises to the landlord, and told him that he could have the rent at any time by calling for it (not a resident in Barrow, but being very often there). Instead of calling for it he sent in the bailiffs, and not only sold her sister's, Mrs. Fraser's, goods but actually his client's goods, who had nothing whatever to do with the house, but just asked her sister to look after them for safety.

Evidence in support of Mr. Whineray's statement having been called,

Jackson stated that his client owned the house and let it to Mrs. Fraser at a weekly rental of 13s. 6d. When she left the house she was in arrears with the rent above £3, and sent the key to the landlord, stating that he might "jump up for his money." As soon as he received this note he went to the house and found that all the furniture had been removed. After considerable difficulty he found that Mrs. Fraser had removed her goods one evening to No. 34, Strand. When the bailiffs went in Mrs. Fraser at first said "the furniture belonged to herself, then her brother, then to her sister." He concluded, therefore, that his client did not do wrong in taking the furniture away, especially after hearing such contradictory statements like these.

His Honour summed up very strongly in favour of the plaintiff, characterising it as one of the clearest cases he had ever had before him.

The jury, after an absence of nearly thirty minutes returned, bringing in a verdict for the plaintiff damages £15.

WOLVERHAMPTON COUNTY COURT.

Tuesday, Nov. 28.

(Before A. MARTINEAU, Esq., Judge.)

DAVIS v. BAYLIS.

Attachment of rent—Distress—Replevin.

Clayton appeared for the plaintiff.

Brevitt for defendant.

This was an action of replevin for an illegal distress made by the defendant of a rick of hay and a cart belonging to the plaintiff. It appeared that on the 29th Sept. last a half year's rent was due to the defendant, and that on the morning of that day the plaintiff was served with a garnishee summons, granted by the County Court at the suit of a judgment creditor of the defendant's attaching the rent. In the afternoon of that day defendant called and demanded his rent, when the plaintiff produced and read the garnishee summons to him. Notwithstanding this, the defendant distrained on the following day, and was proceeding to a sale, when the plaintiff paid the rent into court and replevied.

On the hearing of the garnishee summons, his Honour dismissed it on the ground that the affidavit on which it was granted did not show that a debt was due at the time it was sworn.

Clayton contended that the distress after the service of the garnishee summons was illegal, and gave evidence of special damage.

His Honour, in giving judgment for the plaintiff, said, that although the garnishee summons fell to the ground, yet after service it tied up the rent in the plaintiff's hands, and thereby suspended the defendant's remedy by distress, which was therefore illegal ab initio. He allowed as special damages £5 17s. 4d., costs paid by the plaintiff to Mr. Clayton for the replevy.

Clayton applied for costs in the action on the higher scale, under County Court Rules 1875, Order XXXVI., rule 10, which His Honour allowed.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

(Before Mr. Registrar HAZLITT.)

Friday, Nov. 24.

Re LAZARUS.

Costs in bankruptcy—Sect. 47.

HIS HONOUR.—This is an application under sect. 47 of the statute, by the trustee, for an order closing the bankruptcy. It was made to me on Monday week, but the only person who then attended was a clerk of the trustee, and I therefore adjourned the matter in order that the trustee himself might attend, and satisfy the court, in the terms of the section, and if so required, that the whole of the property of the bankrupt has been realised for the benefit of his creditors, or so much thereof as can be realised without needlessly protecting the bankruptcy. There is, indeed, on the proceedings a minute of what is ludicrously called a meeting of creditors, at the trustee's office, which meeting consisted of A. T. Shaw, as proxy for Shaw and Sons and a Mr. Haughton, and of a proxy for the Reliance Association, and this meeting of two was, I am informed, quite satisfied with the trustee's explanation of the reason why there was no dividend, which was that no reversion had been recovered from the leasehold properties of the bankrupt, and that the amount recovered from the stock and book debts was required to pay the preferential claims, and the costs of the bankruptcy, which were occasioned by opposing a preferential claim for over £2000 put forward, and which was successfully opposed. The claim in question I take to be that of the Jewish Provident Society, for £2700, which figures in one of the solicitor's bills in the shape of a vast number of 6s. 8d.'s, a considerable proportion of which I am happy to see have been disallowed by the master. One of these bills—

£67 14s. 1d.—is, I may observe, taxed at less an amount than £26 16s. 9d., the master evidently not being in so satisfied state of mind as the two gentlemen then representing the creditors at the master creditors at the trustee's office. Now, in way the trustee may have explained entire satisfaction of the meeting of two, non-realisation of dividend from the lease property, I, the court, am not at present satisfied, and before I close the bankruptcy or release the trustee, I require from him affidavit representing to me his explanation and I adjourn the further hearing of this petition until such affidavit has been filed. The whole case, as it appears on the proceedings, is a striking illustration of the manner in which present estates are not realised for the benefit of creditors. The bankruptcy petition was against Lazarus so long ago as 24th Nov. the act of bankruptcy being the failure of his petition. Lazarus's statement of his fourth total debts £8117 5s. 3d., and total £1204 18s. 2d., and the accounts show a total of receipts £899 1s., out of which dividend might be fairly presumed, and, indeed, Lazarus died on the 18th of the following Dec. we have quite a touching affidavit of the trustee—the trustee had been receiver until liquidation, and had been continued receiver of the bankruptcy, in due course—as to the necessity of continuing the proceedings in interests of creditors, so that they might earlier obtain a settlement of their claims. At the first meeting Mr. Maclean was appointed trustee, also in due course, and practically himself, he holding, as I reckon them, ten out of the fifteen creditors, was "present or represented at the meeting," and resolution provided that as such trustee he to have such remuneration as the committee of inspection should from time to time determine. This committee forthwith appointed one of two persons, one Mr. Shaw, of Huddersfield, the petitioning creditor, and whose name was held and exercised on the occasion by the trustee himself, and a Mr. Isaac, of London, who acted for himself as proxy for Mr. Harris, a creditor. Then, to complete the usual arrangement, the trustee gets the two inspectors to appoint a receiver, whose very practical result appears in shape of a bill of costs for £201 3s. 6d. This apparatus for realising the bankruptcy of Lazarus goes on from December 1876, November 1876, and this is the result:

Total receipts	£899 1s.
Total expenditure, rents, rates, taxes	£261 14s. 2d.
Law charges	£201 3s. 6d.
Court fees	£2 5s. 0d.
Receiver's costs	£119 0s. 0d.
Trustee's remuneration	£112 15s. 0d.
Incidental outlay	£68 18s. 8d.
Balance	£33 11s. 5d.

which symmetrically represents the total and provides not one farthing for the creditors. The receiver's costs, which the inspectors upon a correct account, are for trustee and receiver 474 hours at 5s. an hour between 10th Oct. and 19th Nov. 1873; so that, as I calculate, or other of these persons was employed in this matter eight hours a day for six or fifty-seven days, a proportion of I take leave very much to doubt. The remuneration as trustee is signed at the sum I have stated, by Mr. Shaw, the inspector present at the meeting of the committee, the other inspector, Mr. Isaac, having departed from the scene. What the "incidental costs" may have been I do not know, and in which may be satisfied that the whole of the costs have been realised for the benefit of creditors, I require some statement of this outlay to be included in the affidavit which I have directed to be filed. One item in the accounts I take to be a category—an item, namely, of £16 0s. 1d. for fifteen days' attendance in London of Mr. Shaw's, the inspector in the court, assistance in the matter. I will only add a conclusion that I find the trustee to have summoned before this court by the Court for non-performance of his duties as trustee in relation to the estate books.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

SUSPENSION OF BANKRUPTCY.—An UNCERTIFICATED DEBTOR'S SUMMONS BY UNCERTIFICATED DEBTOR.—An uncertificated bankrupt, who had passed a resolution under the Bankruptcy Act 1861, s. 110, suspending proceedings in bankruptcy, brought an action in his own name against a debtor and recovered judgment for £100. The assignee then gave notice to the debtor not to pay the amount to the bankrupt but subsequently withdrew the notice, and the bankrupt took out a debtor's summons against the judgment debtor in respect of the debt.

the debtor's summons could not be sustained, was not the bankrupt, but his assignee who entitled to the money: (Ex parte Carter; Re Dr., 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 388. Ct. of App.)

RIT OF FI. FA.—SEIZURE UNDER LIQUIDATION—PETITION—INJUNCTION—SALE WITH CONTEMPT OF COURT.—It is a contempt of court for a sheriff's officer to proceed to a sale after the fact of an injunction having been granted to restrain him from so doing has come to his knowledge, although the order may have been actually served upon him. Semble, it is equally a contempt of court if he have received notice of an act of bankruptcy: (Re Dr., 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 489. Bank.)

LEGAL NEWS.

BAR AND THE MOUSTACHE.—Although the students may fairly claim to be more free and easy than those of London or Berlin, it is clear that the Paris Bar is under as strict discipline as that of any city in the world. An advocate has gone forth to the effect that moustaches are once and irrevocably to disappear from the lips of all advocates in the Palais de Justice. Of late years the dread authorities of the École de Droit had connived at the wearing of unprofessional ornaments, and grave process had even been carried into the lecture-room the Éden embellishments. But the Minister of Justice has interfered to correct the scandal, and warned counsel will no longer be permitted to appear with their razors. The incident has occasioned not only to a great deal of talking on the part of those gentlemen, but to considerable amount of discussion in the press as to the history of moustaches.—N.

DEBT COLLECTING AGENCIES AND THE COUNTY COURT.—At the Malton County Court Bedwell, the judge, requested the press particularly to notice a case in which a debt-collecting agency was concerned. Robert Scarth claimed Geo. Swann, of Middleton, near Pickering, 3s. 5d. for meat. Mr. E. H. Bartlett appeared as plaintiff, who proved his claim from some complicated accounts. Defendant, in the course of the case, produced some remarkable notions which he had received, he said, at the post, one of them in a letter from Mr. Jiff. These documents, which were from a North of Scotland Trade Protection, Debt very, and Mercantile Offices, 3, Low Ouse-York, his Honour said were the most disgusting things he had met with. He had such notions put into his hands once before last but not in such a way that he could take any of them. He was satisfied, however, that some in some way from plaintiff, and more so, audacious, and foolish documents were issued. It was a most monstrous and inhuman attempt to frighten debtors into performing their duty. The documents professed to give a list of names that unless the debt and costs were paid no measures would be resorted to, and that would be taken either to sell up defendant's property or to obtain a warrant of imprisonment against him. To mark his sense of this proceeding his Honour, in giving plaintiff a verdict, ordered payment at the rate of £1 per h. Both Mr. Bartlett and plaintiff denied all knowledge of the objectionable documents.

NEW LAW REFORM.—The following petition was being circulated for signature by the City of Arts. It is identical in terms with one already been presented to the Lord Chancellor by the Council of the Society:—"To the Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain.—The humble petition of the signed sheweth,—That under the provisions of the Patent Law Amendment Act, 1852, the Chancellor, the Master of the Rolls, and the law officers of the Crown therein named, together with such other persons as Her Majesty Queen should appoint, are made Commissioners of Patents, with full powers as therein set forth, to conduct the business of granting patents for inventions, and to make regulations for the administration of the Patent Office. Up to the present time the provisions of the said Act, authorising the appointment of one or more persons as Commissioners of Patents, in addition to the ex officio commissioners have not been upon, no additional commissioners, as contemplated by the Act, have been appointed, and thus the sole business of the Patent Office falls upon the ex officio commissioners, who are already overburdened with other important and heavy duties. Memorialists, while admitting that great benefit has been effected by the energy and ability of those who have been employed in the discharge of their duties, respectfully urge upon your lordship the importance of acting upon the provisions of the Act of 1852, and carrying it out in its full spirit, by appointing such additional commissioners as are contemplated by the Act. Your memorialists venture to think that if such additional commissioners were appointed, duly paid, and made responsible for the effective working of the patent law as it at present exists, a large amount of beneficial reform would be obtained, and many of the objections now made, if not all, would be got rid of without any further legislation, at all events for the present. Your memorialists, therefore, humbly pray your Lordship to cause the provisions of the Act of 1852 to be put into force, by the appointment of one or more additional commissioners of patents, to whom might be entrusted the fully carrying out of the duties of the office, and who should be responsible for the same, and that no further legislation be attempted until after such commissioners shall have been appointed, and the system contemplated by the Act administered in its integrity."

STATUTE LAW REVISION.—Mr. Samuel Pepys has the following entry in his diary, under date 25th April 1666:—"I to the office where Mr. Prim came to meet about the chest business, and till company come did discourse with me a good while alone in the garden about the laws of England, telling me the many faults in them, and, among others, their obscurity through multitude of long statutes which he is about to abstract out of all of a sort; and as he lives and Parliaments come, get them put into laws, and the other statutes repealed, and then it will be a short work to know the law, which appears a very noble, good thing." Honest Mr. Pepys could hardly have anticipated to what a patriarchal age his friend must have lived, and how many Parliaments would have come and gone without its becoming a short work to know the law.

A NEW TREATY WITH AMERICA.—Charles Inniswood Brent, who, six months back, was charged with forgery on the Tobacco Bank, Louisville, Kentucky, U.S., was again charged with the same offence, this time before Sir James Ingham. The case came on on Monday last, but not in public, and Sir James Ingham now informed the reporters that this was in accordance with the request of the Government. He therefore could not let them see the depositions. It is understood that Mr. Mullins, solicitor to the London Bankers' Protection Association, prosecuted, as on the last occasion, and that the arrest is due to the fact that America has accepted by telegraph the new Extradition Treaty drawn up by England. The prisoner is now a private in the 16th Lancers, in which regiment he enlisted after his former release.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editors do not hold themselves responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.

PROCEEDINGS OF CORPORATIONS.—I believe it is the practice amongst town clerks generally, as it is with myself, to keep a separate and distinct record of such of the proceedings of their corporations as relate to matters in respect of which their jurisdiction arises as sanitary authority under the Public Health Act. Now, it appears to me that this course is quite unnecessary, and that it would be a saving of labour and complexity to record all the proceedings of a corporation in one minute book, and, as I contemplate doing so in future, I shall be obliged to any persons holding the like office as myself to afford me the benefit of their opinions on the subject, and to point out any objections there may be to adopting the course I suggest. Perhaps some of your readers who are town clerks always have kept the minutes of the acts of their councils together and unseparated, and, if so, I shall be obliged to them also for an expression of their opinion as to the practicability and convenience of doing so. For myself I fail to see any good objection to that mode, and it certainly recommends itself for comprehensiveness combined with concentration. A municipal corporation, when acting as a sanitary authority, is not a different body to that when acting in the exercise of its original functions. Acts of Parliament from time to time cast upon it additional duties, but they do not intend to change its original character or constitute it into separate bodies. In summoning meetings, and in keeping the records of the proceedings at them, I think a considerable advantage would be gained by treating the various powers of the council as united under one head (as, in fact, they really are), and avoiding the fallacy of recording their actions as if they belonged to separate and distinct bodies.

TOWN CLERK.

MAGISTRATES' LAW AT UPTON-ON-SEVERN.—I cannot resist calling your notice to the two following cases which came before Colonel Webb (chairman), C. Andrew, H. Willan, C. Berington, and J. W. Empeon, Esqrs., and Rev. W. S.

Symonds, at the last petty sessions holden at Upton-on-Severn, Worcestershire:—

WIFE DESERTION.—Wm. Alfred Griffin, of Upton-on-Severn, was charged by the Upton-on-Severn Board of Guardians with deserting his wife and leaving her chargeable to the parish of Upton-on-Severn. Mr. Powell, clerk to the Board of Guardians, appeared for the board; and Pitt, of Worcester, for the defendant. Mr. Rolle, master of the Upton-on-Severn Union, said that Mary Ann Griffin and her child became chargeable to the Upton-on-Severn Union on 26th Aug. last, and were still chargeable.—Mary Ann Griffin said she was the wife of William Alfred Griffin. About two months since defendant turned her out of the house. Mr. Pitt said his answer to the charge was the wife's adultery. The Chairman replied that, if adultery could be proved ever so clearly, it would make no difference, as the Bench would only look at the man's means.

UNLAWFUL POSSESSION.—John Morris, of Castle-morton, was charged by P.C. Wimblett with having unlawful possession of nineteen rabbits on 15th Oct. P.C. Wimblett said he met defendant on the morning in question with a horse and cart. He thought there was something wrong, and he stopped the cart and searched it. A woman in the cart said it was a load of fruit; but upon searching it witnesses found a hamper containing nineteen rabbits. They were directed to Mr. Everton, fruiterer, Worcester. Witness asked how he accounted for them? and he said, "Some one brought them to my house and put them down at my door before I was up, and told me to take them, and that Everton would pay the carriage."

The witness then narrated a long conversation he afterwards had with Mr. Everton, and although Mr. Clutterbuck, of Worcester (defendant's solicitor), protested, yet the justices received it as evidence.

Witness then seized the rabbits.

Clutterbuck contended that the statement made to the constable was correct, and that the hamper was brought to the house of the defendant, who is a carrier, with instructions to take them to Mr. Everton, of Worcester, and he knew nothing more about it.

Jane Hart, daughter-in-law to defendant, said she was with defendant when Police constable Wimblett stopped the cart. She was in bed at six the same morning, and she heard someone call and ask if they were going to Worcester that day. Witness said "Yes." They then said they had brought a hamper to go to Mr. Everton, of Worcester, and left it in the yard. Witness's father-in-law was an ordinary carrier, and went to and from Worcester with his horse and cart twice a week.

Notwithstanding that, Mr. Clutterbuck pointed out that the foregoing circumstances could not justify a conviction, and read the judgment of the Queen's Bench in the case of Jones v. Dicker (22 L. T. Rep. N. S. 95), a case very much stronger against the carrier than the present, yet the Upton magistrates fined poor Morris 40s., or, in default, a month, with hard labour.

REPORTER.

N.B.—I understand the Bench at Upton act on their own knowledge of law, and never consult their clerk.

AFFIDAVITS FOR USE IN THE IRISH COURTS.

Questions on this point are frequently raised in letters to the LAW TIMES, and in many cases there is great difficulty, delay, and expense in procuring affidavits for the most trivial purposes. For example, I am now suing a trader here for a manufacturer at Newark-on-Trent. The amount of the debt is disputed, and the debtor lodged a part of the demand in court. The plaintiff, in order to draw the money has to send over an authority verified by affidavit, and to have this affidavit sworn must send fifty miles to an Irish Commissioner. The same trouble exists on an affidavit to verify a debt. In our Court of Chancery there is no difficulty, nor is there in Bankruptcy. Any Commissioner in England for oaths in English Chancery can take the affidavit, but the same law does not apply to our law courts or our Probate Court, nor to the Registry of Deeds. In our Deeds Registry Office witnesses to the execution of deeds have often to come to Ireland to make the necessary affidavit for registry, and witnesses at equal expense go from this to England to attest the deeds. With regard to the Probate Court in England, by the Act 21 & 22 Vict. c. 95, sect. 32, affidavits to be used in "England" can be sworn and taken in Ireland before any court, judge, notary, or "person lawfully authorised to administer oaths in Ireland. There is no corresponding provision with regard to our Probate Court. The Act 22 & 23 Vict. c. 31, providing such a power only in places out of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland. And respecting the registration of deeds here there is equal difficulty. By the Act 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, affidavits to enrol deeds in England can be sworn in Ireland "before any person authorised to administer oaths." By the Act 16 & 17 Vict. c. 78, this provision was extended to registration of deeds, and it was enacted that for the purpose of registration of deeds in "Great Britain or Ireland affidavits could be sworn in Scotland or Ireland, or in places abroad before any person authorised to administer oaths." This, however, excludes oaths sworn in England, and the registrar of our deeds registry will only register deeds executed in England on affidavit of a witness made before commissioner having special power from our Court of Chancery. This is absurd when every commissioner of English Chancery can take affidavits for our Court of Chancery as can every magistrate in England. With regard to our Law Courts, the Master of our Common Pleas has, when travelling in England taken an affidavit for his court, such trouble was there in procuring any person having authority, and this difficulty is frequently the cause of great loss to English creditors of Irish debtors. HENRY OLDHAM.

12, Fleet-street, Dublin.
Nov. 30, 1876.

A SHORT PROBLEM IN CONVEYANCING.—I hope you will kindly insert the following case in actual practice, which occurred the other day in chambers of the gentleman with whom I am reading. The solicitor's instructions were as follows: "A, by his will, wishes to leave certain funds to trustees. In trust to pay the income to B. for life, and after his death to C. for life: but if C. and D. die in B's lifetime the trustees are to hold the funds in trust for B. absolutely. If B. dies in the lifetime of C., the trustees are to hold the funds in trust for C. absolutely if D. is dead; when B. and C. are both dead, if D. survives, the trustees are to hold the funds in trust for D. absolutely." The following clause seems to carry out the instructions in the shortest manner: "My trustees shall stand possessed of my trust funds in trust to pay the income thereof to B. for life, and after his decease to C. for life, and in trust for the survivor of B., C., and D. absolutely." This short clause provides for no less than six contingencies, as might in this particular case be mathematically demonstrated. For B. may go (die) before or after C. and D.; similarly C. may go (die) before or after B. and D.; and D. may go (die) before or after B. and C. We are, therefore, finding the number of permutations of three things taken altogether, which is six. But this would not hold good for more than three persons. The general rule is that the number of contingencies is twice the number of persons. Of these six contingencies, three, namely, B. dying in lifetime of C. and D.; C. dying in lifetime of B. and D.; and D. dying in lifetime of B. and C. are provided for by the trusts of the will, and the remaining three, namely, B. surviving C. and D.; C. surviving B. and D.; and D. surviving B. and C., are provided for by the trust of the capital.

LAW SOCIETY.

ST. JOHN'S SOCIETY.—I observe in the LAW TIMES REPORT of the 12th Inst. from the report of a case of St. John v. St. John, which appears to me to be in the time of the present controversy. The case was heard before Mr. Justice W. at Longsight on the 1st May last. The respondent alleged that the plaintiff was entitled to stand in possession of a conveyance by trustees to grant a term of years under the provisions of the Statute of 1852, and did not deny that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852. The defendant was asked to show that the plaintiff was not entitled to stand in possession of the conveyance, and to show that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852. The defendant failed to do so, and the plaintiff was entitled to stand in possession of the conveyance, and to show that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852.

JOHN ST. JOHN.

Solicitor for the Defendant.

Exchequer Chambers, 12th Dec. 1877.

ST. JOHN'S SOCIETY.—I observe in the LAW TIMES REPORT of the 12th Inst. from the report of a case of St. John v. St. John, which appears to me to be in the time of the present controversy. The case was heard before Mr. Justice W. at Longsight on the 1st May last. The respondent alleged that the plaintiff was entitled to stand in possession of a conveyance by trustees to grant a term of years under the provisions of the Statute of 1852, and did not deny that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852. The defendant was asked to show that the plaintiff was not entitled to stand in possession of the conveyance, and to show that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852. The defendant failed to do so, and the plaintiff was entitled to stand in possession of the conveyance, and to show that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852.

served no more in proportion to value than a mere ground rent, is it just that the lessor should be able suddenly to turn upon his tenant and eject him upon the pretence of perhaps some trifling non-repair, seize his property, impose the cost of an action, make good the omission to repair by an extravagant and unnecessary outlay, and sue the tenant for the amount? This is what the law allows to be done, and the doors of equity are inexorably closed against the lessee's application for relief. There are hundreds of low speculators who are trading upon this state of things at the present day. The court will relieve against forfeiture for non-payment of rent or for non-insurance. Why should its power stop here? Why should it not interpose not only in cases of non-repair but in other instances of breach of covenant involving hardship to the tenant?

GEO. H. WILLIAMSON.

45, Essex-street, Strand.

MARRIED WOMAN—BARE TRUSTEE.—A female lends money on security of a mortgage in fee to her: she afterwards marries, and subsequently to her marriage she, about a month ago, received of the mortgagor the amount of principal and interest due on the mortgage. The mortgagor now calls for a reconveyance. Is she a "bare trustee" within the meaning of sect. 6 Vendor and Purchaser Act 1874, so as to be empowered to reconvey without the concurrence of her husband and acknowledgment? A SUBSCRIBER.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

Notes are inserted under the name and address of the person or persons to whom they are addressed, but no guarantee is given for them.

Queries.

21. NORTHERNERS FOR AN INFANT.—Are there any later cases on this subject than W. v. W. and W. v. W., which were both tried in 1876?

W. S. S.

22. STANLEY'S BUILDING SOCIETY'S MORTGAGES.—Will any of our readers kindly answer the following queries? A building society mortgage for £100, before the New Building Societies Act, was followed by a further charge for £100. It is necessary the last should have been stamped. A building society mortgage for £100, before the said Act, is followed by a further charge for £100. Is the latter required a stamp? In case of mortgages to existing societies established before the Act and not reconstituted under the Act, is such mortgage for sums less than £100 require stamping, that is, does the Act affect the old societies as regards the stamp in mortgages?

W. W.

23. ANTI-SLAVERY CHURCH.—Under this heading in your issue of the 12th Nov. I saw a striking and touching notice of a meeting that was held in London. I am sure that the notice was well written, and that the meeting was well attended. I am sure that the notice was well written, and that the meeting was well attended. I am sure that the notice was well written, and that the meeting was well attended.

24. ST. JOHN'S SOCIETY.—I observe in the LAW TIMES REPORT of the 12th Inst. from the report of a case of St. John v. St. John, which appears to me to be in the time of the present controversy. The case was heard before Mr. Justice W. at Longsight on the 1st May last. The respondent alleged that the plaintiff was entitled to stand in possession of a conveyance by trustees to grant a term of years under the provisions of the Statute of 1852, and did not deny that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852. The defendant was asked to show that the plaintiff was not entitled to stand in possession of the conveyance, and to show that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852. The defendant failed to do so, and the plaintiff was entitled to stand in possession of the conveyance, and to show that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852.

25. ST. JOHN'S SOCIETY.—I observe in the LAW TIMES REPORT of the 12th Inst. from the report of a case of St. John v. St. John, which appears to me to be in the time of the present controversy. The case was heard before Mr. Justice W. at Longsight on the 1st May last. The respondent alleged that the plaintiff was entitled to stand in possession of a conveyance by trustees to grant a term of years under the provisions of the Statute of 1852, and did not deny that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852. The defendant was asked to show that the plaintiff was not entitled to stand in possession of the conveyance, and to show that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852. The defendant failed to do so, and the plaintiff was entitled to stand in possession of the conveyance, and to show that the plaintiff's interest was subject to the provisions of the Statute of 1852.

Answers.

21. NORTHERNERS FOR AN INFANT.—Are there any later cases on this subject than W. v. W. and W. v. W., which were both tried in 1876? W. v. W. and W. v. W. are the only cases on this subject that I have been able to find.

my answer to question 189, has made use of the "binding." I did not use such a word, because: cannot enter into a binding contract for the purchase of an estate, and he cannot sustain the specific performance of such a contract during infancy (Flight v. Bolland, 4 Russ. 296). Such an is voidable by the infant, and on his attaining majority he may either avoid or affirm it as he proper, and if he dies under age, his representatives have the like privilege (Clayton v. Ashdown, 3 Ta. 383, d. 1.).

R. CURZ.

(Q. 23.) CONSOLIDATION OF MORTGAGES.—Thus the mortgagee to consolidate is not lost by him the freehold estate under the power—Suby. v. B. (4 L. T. Rep. N. S., 545); 1 Johns. & H. 341; therefore claim the £170 and interest, and is to may foreclose.

(Q. 24.) LEASE.—I think the lessee is liable in damages, and that the power reserved to the lessor is additional security, and does not imply an option to the lessor to do or refrain from the ploughing, &c.

(Q. 25.) SUCCESSION DUTY.—It cannot be said that the vendor is under any obligation to convey even to covenant to pay the duty on the sum of annuities. The case of Chaper v. Twyford (12 Ta. 1) is opposed to the right of a purchaser in the instances stated.

(Q. 30.) LEASE—MORTGAGE.—If the mortgage was properly drawn, it would contain a provision on a sale under the power, the mortgagor should possess of the reversion for the purchaser, or should appoint. The mortgagor would, as a consequence, be entitled to be indemnified by the purchaser against the rent and covenants in the lease. It is monstrous that a mortgagor should be liable his equity of redemption of the sub-lease, and still liable for the covenants in the lease. I think entitled to a covenant for indemnity on his sale.

(Q. 31.) CUSTODY OF TITLE DEEDS.—A, a tenant common, having obtained possession of the deeds, failed to keep them.

—They should be handed over to the party property is of the greater value, and such party enter into a deed of covenant for production to other party.

(Q. 32.) WILL.—The assignment by the testator of the reversionary leaseholds given to their separate will be good in equity without the concurrence of respective husbands, but to pass the legal interest assignments of the husbands will be required. See Chapman v. Chapman, 10 L. T. Rep. N. S., 545.

(Q. 33.) LANDLORD AND TENANT.—"H. S." is a tenant in possession of the premises, 11th Dec. 1877, when it appears that a landlord's distress for rent and arrears is held without selling, he cannot sue for the rent, though the distress is sufficient to satisfy.

LAW SOCIETIES.

BELTON LAW SOCIETY.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE.

THE BELTON LAW SOCIETY presents the following report for the year ending 1st Nov. 1876—

The society numbers at this date forty-four members, as against forty-six on the 1st Nov. 1875, the new member only having been added during the year.

Several lectures have been added to the course during the past year. A list of the added lectures and the names of the lecturers will be sent to each member. The new books as purchased are added to the library. From the year 1875 the list has been made of the library as a whole, and the committee believe that it is very nearly complete. The two rooms in which the library is deposited are visited by the society, and they are open daily during office hours to the use of every member for the purpose of consulting the library and the books.

The committee are and propose from the last year to the present year, affecting the library and the books, and the committee are and propose from the last year to the present year, affecting the library and the books.

The committee are and propose from the last year to the present year, affecting the library and the books, and the committee are and propose from the last year to the present year, affecting the library and the books.

The committee are and propose from the last year to the present year, affecting the library and the books, and the committee are and propose from the last year to the present year, affecting the library and the books.

The committee are and propose from the last year to the present year, affecting the library and the books, and the committee are and propose from the last year to the present year, affecting the library and the books.

of members of the society:—Condi- provided that the vendor should re- stody such of the title deeds as con- ot sold as well as other lots, and eliver them to the purchaser of the lots in amount or value, who should production in the usual way. Lot eight houses, and contained 1036 and was subject to a ground rent lot 7 comprised twelve houses, and square yards, and was subject to a of £4 0s. 6d. The purchase-money 7 were equal in amount. The com- asked to give their opinion as to purchasers were entitled to the ey passed the following resolution: tee are of opinion that under the e neither of the purchasers is en- eaded, which should be retained by but would suggest that the pur- lot containing the largest area, and largest ground rent should, as be- and the purchaser of the other lot, s." In accordance with rule 13 this mitted to the annual meeting for if thought proper.

tee regret to report that during a case of professional malpractice a solicitor in Bolton (who was not this society) was brought before on investigation in the presence of mplicated, they deemed of sufficient represent to the Incorporated Law e Inland Revenue Office, and passed o that effect on the 24th July, 1876. g on this resolution, however, they opinion of the Profession ought to e matter, and accordingly the facts ted at a largely attended meeting of Bolton, on the 4th Aug., at which, the solicitor in question, the follow- was passed:—"That whilst this strongly censures the proceedings in reference to the business brought mmittee as unprofessional and im- is not so satisfied of his intention to as to induce the meeting to urge e to carry out their resolutions of 1876."

tee accordingly did not proceed any is matter, and they hope that no for their interference may arise.

ow twenty-eight articulated clerks in inst thirty on 1st Nov. 1875. Three ased their final examination, and have been articulated since 1st Nov. committee have noticed with regret frequency with which the prelim- tion, so important in preserving in e character and status of the pro- cessed dispensed with by the Judges, ggest that signatures to the memo- cess and capacity of the clerk should unless the applicant had been pre- ved by the local Law Society. They al attention to that part of Rule 16 as that the minimum premium to be articulated clerk be £250, and express ce that this regulation will be hon- ed to by the members.

tee, before leaving office, would the following suggestions to their approved by the annual meeting:— s society be incorporated under the ts 1862 and 1867.

desirable to the committee that one of conditions for use at sales by l be prepared and assented to by the he profession in Bolton, or, at any bers of the society.

is effect are in use by members of leading societies in England, includ- Liverpool, Birmingham, &c. The ch are there read at an auction refer nected with the title and incorpo- nce only, the usual form of condi- in the neighbourhood, which has as aforesaid. It will be manifest urse in Bolton and the neighbour- ld produce uniformity of practice, the time at sales. And it is sug- ch a form should be prepared for ict.

ility of the society, if incorporated, recting a building in which public ion might be held, instead of at (and which might also contain the oms of the society), is also worthy on. Although at first little or no e expected on the outlay, your com- that in the course of a few years e gained would be considerable, and vidend realised.

tion of the proposed scale of charges ng has somewhat languished during but a scale prepared by your com- n printed, and although its use is mmittee believe that it has been ted on, at the same time it is desirable to have an official scale, and your committee would suggest that an expression of opinion be passed by the annual meeting.

INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY OF LIVERPOOL.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE.

THE committee beg to present the annual report of their proceedings for the past year (1876), being the 49th year of the society's existence.

The committee have to record with deep regret the loss by death during the past year of six members:—Mr. William Waring, Mr. Henry Hime, Mr. Henry Bremner, Mr. James Galloway (Prescot), Mr. C. S. Goodman, and Mr. E. S. Williams, the first of whom filled the office of president of the society in the year 1852-3.

Mr. John Atkinson, a past president of the society, and the donor of the Atkinson medal for conveyancing, and Messrs. W. L. Banks and W. Hunter, jun., have also ceased, by resignation, to be members of this society. Two others have ceased to be members by non-payment of their subscriptions.

By the foregoing changes the number of mem- bers has been reduced to 176. The barristers and others, not being members, who subscribe to the library number 19.

There have been during the year 28 meetings of the general committee and 56 meetings of the several sub-committees, appointed for the follow- ing special purposes:—Library and Finance, Judicature and Local Courts, Conveyancing, Clerk of the Peace, Parliamentary Agency, Court of Passage.

Among the matters to which the committee have devoted considerable time and attention are the following:—

The committee have frequently had under their consideration the propriety of removing the library from its present position and the necessity of adding largely to its books. No suitable rooms, however, can be obtained in a central position, on a ground or first floor, and at a rent which the means of the society will afford, and it is a question for the consideration of the members at large whether they will be satisfied with a library less easy of access, say on a second floor, or will charge themselves with an increased sub- scription, in order to obtain more suitable premises. The additional rent that would have to be paid for rooms such as the society want would be from £100 to £150 a year, according to the position.

The cost of removal and fitting up the new library would be considerable, and a large sum of money should be expended in purchasing the numerous books which are required to make the library efficient. This cost should, the committee think, be defrayed by the formation of a fund for the purpose, and they trust that the society will aid them in collecting a substantial amount, either by donations or annual instalments, extending over a limited time, say five years.

The circulation of books during the past year has been very large. The usefulness of the library might be increased and the committee assisted in their work if members would avail themselves more of the recommendation book which lies on the library table, and suggest the purchase of such works as they find wanting.

In the last report of this society reference is made to a Bill which was introduced into Parlia- ment at the end of the session of 1875, having for its object to vest the appointment of the deputy clerks in the clerk of the peace instead of in the Chancellor of the Duchy, and thus neutralise the Act of 1871 promoted by the society, and make the Manchester and Liverpool offices mere branches of the Preston office; and which Bill was opposed by this society, and the order for the second read- ing discharged.

The supporters of the measure were determined not again to fall into the error of introducing the Bill too late, and accordingly early in the past session the Bill was again brought in and an attempt made to run it through Parliament with the utmost haste. Petitions against the Bill, in terms of the petition of last year, were presented to the House of Commons by this society, and also by the Manchester Law Association, and Mr. Wm. Rathbone, M.P., exerted himself greatly in opposing the measure. The promoters—the county magistrates—had the support of the Government, and the Bill passed the second reading, and was committed. Your committee prepared amendments to the following effect, of which Mr. Rathbone took charge: That the deputy clerks should be solicitors of ten years' standing, should have offices within their dis- tricts, and that the clerk of the peace should have no interest in the emoluments of the deputy clerks. One amendment only was partially ac- cepted—namely, that the deputy clerks should be solicitors of seven years' standing, and in that form the Bill passed the Commons.

Your committee continued their opposition in the House of Lords and petitioned there against the Bill, and also, in conjunction with the Man- chester Law Association, prepared a statement of reasons against the Bill (a copy of which will be found in Appendix A. to this report), which was circulated among members of the House of Lords who were connected with Lancashire, and among the magistrates for the Hundreds of Salford and West Derby. The same interest which obtained the Government support in the House of Com- mons operated in a similar manner in the House of Lords, and the Bill became law. The com- mittee finding that by a Treasury Minute the patronage of the office of clerk of the peace had been practically ceded to the Lord Lieutenant of the county, thereupon, in conjunction with the Manchester Law Association, addressed a letter to the Earl of Sefton, the Lord Lieutenant, re- questing him not to exercise his patronage under the Act without due provision being made for the interests of the Hundreds of Salford and West Derby. This was followed by an interview with his Lordship at Croxteth, on the 26th April last, and after discussing the matter fully his Lordship promised that when a vacancy occurred in the office of clerk of the peace he would not fill it with- out hearing both sides further. So the matter rests for the present.

In April last a vacancy having occurred in the office of registrar of the County Court at Liver- pool, by the death of the late worthy and lamented registrar, Mr. Henry Hime, a deputation from this society waited upon the judges of the court to state their views as to the transaction of business in the registrar's office, and on other matters con- nected with the court.

The deputation represented the desirableness of filling up the vacancy created by the death of Mr. Hime, and of dividing the duties of registrars of the County Court, so that whilst one registrar should have the care of the common law business, the other should have the care of the bankruptcy, admiralty, and equity business; and also that the present accommodation at Lime-street being in- sufficient, it would be very convenient, until the new courts are erected, that an office should be taken near the centre of business (in the municipal offices, if possible) where the bankruptcy registrar and staff should be located, and if a suitable room could be obtained, where the judges should hear bank- ruptcy, admiralty and equity business on special days.

The deputation also called the attention of the judges to the present inadequate scale of remunera- tion in bankruptcy.

The judges stated in reply that they desired to have the vacancy created by the death of Mr. Hime filled up by the appointment of the most suitable person that could be obtained for the post; and as to the other matters mentioned by the deputa- tion, that although they did not then see their way to accede to the desires of the society, yet they would give them their best consideration.

The committee have much pleasure in congrat- ulating the society upon the appointment of Mr. Thomas Bellringer, one of its members, to the vacant office of registrar.

The committee have been in communication with the first commissioner of works respecting the new law courts and offices, and in the month of May last they received tracings of the plans. These, on examination, showed that accommoda- tion was to be provided for the County Court, the stamp office, and the district registry of the Pro- bate Court (non-contentious business), but not for the district registries of the other divisions of the High Court of Justice. The committee have re- presented to the first commissioner the very great importance of adequate provision being made for these registries, and are still urging the matter on his attention, but to the present time no satis- factory reply has been received.

The public sale conditions of the society, pre- pared in the year 1864, have been revised with a view to their amendment, and to render them more in accord with recent legislation. The draft of the revised conditions is now before counsel, and the committee hope to be able very soon to submit them to the society.

In June last a joint committee of both Houses of Parliament was appointed to consider the ex- pediency of making further regulations concerning the admission and practice of Parliamentary agents. From the speech of Mr. Raikes in moving for the committee in the House of Commons it appeared that the practice which had been adopted by some Parliamentary agents of dividing their charges on the usual agency principles was intended to be attached. Your committee, con- sidering that they were entitled to be heard on the subject, tendered the evidence of the town clerk of Liverpool and some other of their members, but the joint committee considered that they had sufficient evidence before them to enable them to frame the report, and declined to receive it. The proceedings were carried on with great haste, as the following dates will show. On the 23rd and 28th June the committee was appointed. It met on the 30th. On the 3rd and 6th July eviwas taken. On the 17th the report was agreed to. It was not in print for several days afterwards, and then it was discovered that it proposed several other objectionable alterations, besides that referred to. On the 24th July Lord Redesdale moved its adoption in the House of Lords, which was strongly opposed by the Lord Chancellor. The debate was then adjourned; but the report was on the 28th July adopted by the Lords.

Your committee issued circulars to the other provincial law societies asking for their assistance and co-operation, and prepared a statement of reasons for opposing the adoption of the report, and on the 27th July deputations from this society, and from the Manchester, Leeds, and Wakefield Law Societies, accompanied by several Parliamentary agents, waited upon Mr. Raikes, when Mr. Marshall, of Leeds, very ably put forward the views of the societies, but judging by his subsequent speech, in moving the adoption of the report in the House of Commons, no great impression was made upon Mr. Raikes. The Incorporated Law Society of the United Kingdom presented a petition to Parliament against the adoption of the report, and every exertion was made by the societies to obtain at least a postponement of the matter. Your committee are glad to say that eventually the motion to agree to the report in the House of Commons was withdrawn. Your committee subsequently prepared a paper which has been circulated among the provincial law societies and otherwise, fully explaining the position of the matter and the objections to the report, and urging all concerned to use their best exertions during the recess to impress these views upon members of both Houses of Parliament. Copies of this paper and of the statement of reasons against the adoption of the report will be found in the appendices B and C.

At the recent annual provincial meeting at Oxford of the Incorporated Law Society of the United Kingdom the subject was very fully and ably discussed, and a series of resolutions having for their object the strengthening the hands of the Incorporated Law Society of the United Kingdom were moved by Mr. Marshall and passed.

The Judicature Acts, with their accompanying Rules and Orders, have had a year's trial. In carrying out so extensive a change many shortcomings and defects must be expected, and although much disappointment has been felt at the disposition which has been shown in some quarters still to travel on the old lines of practice and to place too narrow a construction on the new Acts and Rules, still the committee are of opinion that the measure has proved to be highly beneficial to the country.

Your committee have devoted much time and attention to the amendment of the Rules and Orders, and to bringing their suggestions before the proper authorities.

The Lord Chancellor did not think fit to adopt the recommendations of the society as to the division of business in the Liverpool District Registries, and as to prohibiting the district registrars from engaging in private practice (see p. 14 of last year's report). Since the 1st Sept. last the Exchequer Division has been assigned to Mr. Lowndes, in addition to the divisions previously assigned to him.

The appointment of official referees under sect. 83 of the Judicature Act 1873, early attracted the attention of the committee, and perceiving how advantageous it would be to the mercantile community to have an official referee skilled in shipping and mercantile law resident in or near Liverpool, they, in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce, presented a memorial to the Lord Chancellor and the Presidents of Divisions of the High Court of Justice, stating their views.

The Lord Chancellor replied that it had been resolved that only four official referees were, in the first instance, at least, to be appointed, and that it was not contemplated that any of this limited number should have their head-quarters out of London, though they might from time to time be called upon to perform duties out of London, and that when fuller experience of the working of the official refereeship had been acquired it might be desirable to give further consideration to the points suggested in the Memorial.

Four official referees were shortly afterwards appointed, but, so far as this committee is aware, their services have not been asked for in Liverpool.

By the additional Rules of Court of December 1875, No. 3, the power to issue warrants of arrest and to release ships in Admiralty actions in rem was taken away from the district registries. This important right had been exercised at Liverpool for nearly five years under the Liverpool Admiralty District Registrar's Act 1870, with great advantage. In conjunction with the Liverpool Underwriters' Association and the Chamber of Commerce, this society presented a memorial to the Lord Chancellor asking for a restoration of the right. Other mercantile societies in the town and the members of Parliament brought supported the request, and the rule in question was annulled by the new rules of Feb. 1876.

Hearing that, with a view to the more speedy dispatch of business at the assizes, it was proposed that three judges should take the Northern Circuit instead of two, and feeling sure that the proposed remedy would increase rather than diminish the evils of which suitors so much complain when under the present system two courts only are sitting at the same time for the trial of cases, the Chamber of Commerce and this society, on 28th Jan. last, addressed a letter on the subject to the Lord Chancellor and judges, and enclosed copies of their joint memorial to the Lord Chancellor as to the necessity for increased provisions for the dispatch of civil business at the Liverpool Assizes, which is set out in Appendix D to last year's report.

The letter elicited a reply from Mr. Baron Bramwell, and in a correspondence which ensued between his lordship and the president, his lordship stated: "I hope the new arrangement as to circuits will be satisfactory to Liverpool; under them, if necessary, the Northern Circuit must begin in June or even May, or earlier. This is very nearly what the memorial proposes. If necessary, I personally see no objection to a judge residing in Lancashire, and being replaced every three or six months."

The committee continue, on every available opportunity, to urge continuous sittings for Lancashire. A provision contained in the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876, and which is noticed later on in this report, may have a material bearing on the question.

At the last Liverpool Assizes two commissioners were sitting in addition to the two judges, and thus it occasionally happened that three courts were engaged at the same time trying civil causes. The injustice done to the suitors through the absence in other courts of counsel whom they had retained and briefed was a crying evil, and proved that the committee were fully justified in objecting to the proposal to send three judges on the circuit.

The following is a summary of the disposal of the cases at the last Liverpool Assizes: Undeclared, 2; verdict by consent, 4; juror withdrawn, 1; referred at trial, 2; cases tried in addition to the above, 61; withdrawn, 38; struck out, 6; remanded by order to obtain evidence, 1; total, 115.

Of the cases withdrawn it has been ascertained that six were referred.

Bramwell, B., tried 40 cases; Lindley, J., 11 cases; the commissioners, 19 cases.

The assizes lasted 14 working days. Commissioners sat for the trial of civil causes on 11 days, but frequently for part of the day only. On 5 days or parts of days Lindley, J., sat for the trial of civil causes.

A meeting of the Associated Provincial Law Societies was held on 31st March to suggest to the judges alterations in and amendments to the rules and orders, and your committee prepared a paper of suggestions, of which a copy is given in Appendix D, and submitted the same to the meeting of the associated societies.

Two of these suggestions, namely, No. 3 (first part) and No. 8, were adopted in the rules of June 1876, subsequently issued. And No. 4 has since been practically carried out by the Treasury.

A Bill was introduced into Parliament last session to take away the power to serve in Scotland or Ireland writs issued out of the High Court of Justice under Order XI. of the Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1875. A deputation from this society waited upon the Lord Chancellor in opposition to the Bill, when it was stated by his Lordship that instances had arisen where injustice had resulted from the application of the order to cases, principally small claims, to which it had not been contemplated it should apply, and that an amendment to meet the case was under consideration. The Bill was withdrawn, and a new rule applicable to this subject was issued in June last.

By this rule, on an application for leave to serve a writ or notice on a defendant out of the jurisdiction, the judge, in exercising his discretion, is to have regard to the amount or value of the property in dispute or sought to be recovered, and to the existence in the place of residence of the defendant, if resident in Scotland or Ireland, of a local court of limited jurisdiction having jurisdiction in the matter in question, and to the comparative cost and convenience of proceedings in England or in the place of the defendant's residence, and no leave is to be granted without an affidavit stating the particulars necessary for enabling the judge to exercise his discretion.

The committee caused inquiries to be made in Scotland and Ireland as to the local courts of limited jurisdiction there, and Appendix E to this report contains replies from Mr. T. Stout, the secretary of the Faculty of Procurators, Glasgow, and from Mr. Galloway, a member of the council of the Society of Attorneys and Solicitors of Ireland, which will afford useful information to practitioners.

The Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876, by the House of Lords as the ultimate Court of Appeal, and provides for the increase of judicial strength by empowering the appointment of two Lords of Appeal in ordinary who are salaried judges with the rank of barristers life and seats in the House of Lords as they continue in office. The qualification for office is having been the holder for a period less than two years of some one or more high judicial offices mentioned in the Act, having been for not less than fifteen years practising barrister in England or Ireland, or practising advocate in Scotland. Lords of Appeal in ordinary, being privy councillors, are empowered to sit and act as members of the Committee of the Privy Council. Provision is also made by the Act for the hearing and determination of appeals during the prorogation or dissolution of Parliament, and for regular practice and procedure in appeals by the House of Lords. By sect. 14, when one of the paid judges of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, have died or resigned, a Lord of Appeal in ordinary may be appointed, and on the death or resignation of one of the two paid judges of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, a fourth Lord of Appeal in ordinary may be appointed. By sect. 15, three additional ordinary judges of the Court of Appeal—that is the intermediate court—may be appointed, and the first appointments are to be made by the Court of Appeal of three of the judges of the common law divisions of the High Court of Justice, and the vacancies so created are to be filled up until the death or resignation of a paid judge of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. When two of such judges have resigned, one additional judge of the Court of Justice may be appointed upon recommendation from both Houses of Parliament, so that the state of business in the High Court of Justice is such as to require the appointment of an additional judge; and on the death or resignation of the other two paid judges another vacancy may be filled up. The additional judges of appeal are to go circuit.

The net immediate result of the changes made by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act is the addition of two Lords of Appeal in ordinary to the strength of the House of Lords, the addition of three judges to the Court of Appeal, and a decrease of three in the number of judges of the common law divisions of the High Court of Justice. When the changes are all carried out, and assuming that the two vacancies which are filled up, there will be four lords of appeal in ordinary to take part in the judicial business of the House of Lords, and to do the work of the four paid judges of the judicial committee of the Privy Council, while the Court of Appeal will have three additional judges, and the common law divisions of the High Court of Justice will be less than at present, and two more judges will be available for circuit business.

With a view to further utilise the increased judicial strength in the common law divisions of the High Court of Justice, and to facilitate business, it is provided by sect. 17 that on and after the 1st Dec. 1876, every action and proceeding, so far as practicable and convenient, is to be determined, and disposed of by a single judge, all proceedings in an action subsequent to hearing or trial shall, so far as practicable and convenient, be had and taken before the judge who tried the cause. Divisional courts, held for the transaction of any business may for the time being be ordered by the Court to be heard by a divisional court, a divisional court is to consist of two judges unless the president, with the concurrence of other judges of the division, is of opinion that the divisional court should be constituted of a greater number of judges than two. This was added to the Bill by way of amendment by Sir John Holker, the Attorney-General, to obviate a pressing demand for the country for more judges; the practice of vice-chancellors each in his own court, hearing, determining, and disposing of matter and cause before him afforded ample. A useful provision is also contained in the Act, sect. 22, empowering a district judge to appoint a deputy.

Until the rules and orders for carrying into effect the enactments of sect. 17 are issued, it is impossible to tell the precise changes which will bring about. The inevitable, however, will be to break up the old divisions of the court as separate divisions to make each judge like each vice-chancellor distinct court. If this be so the case will be forward to having continuous sittings at no very distant date.

The committee have felt the anomaly of having three different places of sitting, one in the High Court of Justice in the Chancery of Lancashire, and the communications are invariably rejected. Communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. Communications intended for the Editor (SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT) should send.

To Readers and Correspondents.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

CASES RESERVED.

It—Proceeds of cheque—Account of master—Indictment—536
N—refresh memory—Document by witness—Limited company—537
OF BANKRUPTCY.
HALIFAX JOINT-STOCK FUND; Re ARMITAGE AND OSTENTABLE partner—Re-roof—Delay—534

COURT OF JUDICATURE.

PPEAL, LINCOLN'S-INN.

Compromise between claimant—Examination—539

Re FATE.

Fraudulent transfer of Past debt—Pressure in preference—Payee in—531

Re JONES.

Trader—Keeper of hotel house keeper—Professional—532

Re BALBINE.

Judgment creditor—Writ to sheriff before filing—533

PPEAL, WESTMINSTER.

seclusion of Hargrave and L. AND OTHERS—Minal cases—Proceedings of Queen's Bench Division on a criminal—534

THE EASTERN RAILWAY.

railway companies—Station platform—Evil—535

SON AND OTHERS.

Notice of dis- o effects—Remedy over parties—537

Re F. BIRNIE.

deal—Jurisdiction—Right criminal cases—538

Renoe before award after Act—Practice as to ment on—Motions for—539

OF JUSTICE—CHANCERY DIVISION.

SHATTERTON—national copyright—First ion—Publication—Injunction—541

METROPOLITAN BUILDING ACT.

Metropolitan Building Act—Appointment of third sur- veyor—543

KEB.

Bonds passing by deli- berative evidence—Lease—Imperfect gift—Insuffi- cation of trust—545

Refute clause—Writ of n—Special case—Practice oceedings—548

n trading separately from—Married Woman's Pro- 3 & 34 Vict. c. 93, s. 1—of married woman—551

BENCH DIVISION.

seclusion of Baxter and AT NORTHERN RAILWAY to tenant for longer term whose term has less than—552

a year to run—Whether justices have jurisdiction to determine—551
E.g. (on the prosecution of the Assem- ment Committee of the Poplar Union) v. INGALL AND ANOTHER—Hating in metropolis—Making valua- tion list, statutory time for—Whether statute imperative or directory—552

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS

LEADING ARTICLES—Topics of the Week—109
The Winter Assizes Act 1876—110
Misappropriation of the Proceeds of Securities—111
Agency—Liability of Agent to Principal—Omission to perform Gratuitous Under- taking—112
The Use of Extrinsic Evidence to Sup- plement or Control Documents of Title—113

SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT

(Edited by a Solicitor).

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL—Topics of the Week—113
Specimen Digest of the Law relating to Solicitors of the Supreme Court—114
High Court of Justice—Divisional Court—114
Notes of New Decisions—114
Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England—115
Appointments under the Joint-Stock Wind-up Act—115
Creditors under Estates in Chancery—115
Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35—115
Reports of Sales—115

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

Topics of the Week—116
Preliminary Examination before En- tering into Articles of Clerkship to Solicitors—116
Birmingham Law Students' Society—116
Hull Law Students' Society—116
Manchester Law Students' Debating Society—116
Plymouth, Stonehouse, and Devonport Law Students' Society—116
United Law Students' Society—116
Worcester Legal Debating Club—117

COMPANY LAW.

Notes of New Decisions—115

MERCANTILE LAW.

Notes of New Decisions—117

MARITIME LAW.

The Wreck Commission—117

COUNTY COURTS.

Ipswich County Court—118
Leeds County Court—118
Newbury County Court—119
Swansea County Court—119

LEGAL NEWS.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

Notes of New Decisions—120
Ulverston and Barrow-in-Furness County Court—120

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTES AND QUERIES—121

LAW SOCIETIES.

Law Amendment Society—121
Legal Practitioners' Society—122
Solicitors' Benevolent Association—123

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

LEGAL EXTRACTS—124

LEGAL OBITUARY.

THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS—125

Registers for the ensuing Week—125

THE GAZETTES.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS—126

and said that this was imperative in every case. They added that, whether a Judge takes a note or not, he must, if requested, even after the hearing, furnish some note of the evidence. This will rather surprise the Judge who refused to give a note because he had taken none. We confess we thought he was right, as the Act of 1875 says that he must do so if requested by either party at the hearing. This decision may have the good effect of compelling County Court Judges to make some sort of note in every case.

THE recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, in the case of Dresser v. The Missouri and Iowa Railway Construction Company, presents some features of interest to English lawyers. An action was brought against the company upon three promissory notes made by the company for the aggregate amount of 10,000dols. The plaintiff was an indorsee for valuable consideration. At the trial it appeared that the notes had been obtained from the company by fraudulent misrepresentation, and had been purchased by the plaintiff without notice of the fraud. He had paid 500dols. of the purchase-money before he received notice of the fraud. The learned judge directed the jury that they must first find that there was fraud in the inception of the notes as alleged, and that if the defendants failed to satisfy the jury of that fact, the whole defence failed; and, secondly, that if the fact of fraud was established, and the jury found from the evidence that the plaintiff had paid 500 dols. upon the notes without notice of the fraud, and that after receiving notice of the fraud the plaintiff paid the balance due upon the notes, he was protected only pro tanto, namely, to the amount paid before he received notice. The plaintiff appealed from this ruling, contending that he was entitled to recover the whole amount of the notes, with interest. The main contention on his behalf was that negotiable paper may be sold for such sum as the parties may agree upon, and that upon sale, whether the amount paid be large or small, the title to the whole sum on the face of the paper passes to the bona fide purchaser. Mr. Justice HUNT, who delivered the judgment of the court, addressing himself to this argument, replied that this was true, and "if the plaintiff had bought the notes in suit for 500 dols. before maturity and without notice of any defence, and paid that sum or given his negotiable note therefor, the authorities cited show that the whole interest in the notes would have passed to him, and he could have recovered the full amount due upon them." The court, however, distinguished the present case on the ground that the notes in question were purchased upon an unexecuted contract, upon which 500 dols. had been paid when notice of the fraud and a prohibition to pay was received by the purchaser. "The residue of this contract," continues the learned judge, "on the part of the purchaser is unperformed, and honesty and fair dealing require that he should not perform it; certainly that he should not be permitted, by performing it, to obtain from the defendants money which they ought not to pay." The position of the plaintiff was said to be identical with that of the bona fide purchaser of the first of a series of notes, of which, after notice of a fraud, he purchases the rest of the series. In that case he will be protected so far as his good faith covers the purchase, and no further; but as soon as he receives notice of the fraud he should refuse further payment. The judgment concluded with the remark that the case before us is governed by the rule that the portion of an unperformed contract which is completed after notice of a fraud, is not within the principle which protects a bona fide purchaser. Space will not permit a reference to English authorities in which the same or like circumstances have been discussed, nor is it our intention to do more than point out the salient features of this the latest American case in which the rights of a bona fide holder of a negotiable instrument obtained by fraud have been defined.

MANY nice questions with reference to the interpretation of statutes have arisen from time to time, but there are few which call for greater care and judgment in their consideration than the important group in which the point at issue is whether the words of an Act of Parliament have taken away a right that was in existence when the Act came into operation. Upon this question the judgment of the House of Lords in the case of Green v. The Queen (35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 495) will in future be a standing authority. The right whose existence was disputed, was one to appoint churchwardens under rather peculiar circumstances. The parish of Doddington consisted of four townships, named Doddington (in which was the parish church) Wimblington, Benwick, and March. The churchwardens for the first three townships were appointed at Doddington township, whilst March, where a chapel existed, appointed its own, and this arrangement was recognised as valid until some questions were raised under a private Act of Parliament passed in 1847: (10 Vict. c. iii). The churchwardens in the former township were elected in the usual manner, one by the rector, the other by the parishioners at a vestry meeting; and the latter both were elected by the parishioners. The Act of 1847, consolidating Doddington and Wimblington, and dividing the old parish into ac will be sent to Subscribers to the LAW TIMES on the 1st of January.

THE LAWYERS' ALMANAC FOR 1877.

Law and the Lawyers.

urised to observe that the Incorporated Council of Law continue to advertise the so-called Digest, and invite s. We have already denounced this work as a positive disgrace to legal literature, a cumbersome incubus, ed to entice any person attempting to use it into an e of time. We challenge the Council to rebut these and if they decline to do so they surely are bound to e work from circulation.

aken to be settled practice that in all matters by way of County Courts a copy of the Judge's notes must be the Divisional Court. A few days ago a motion to nonsuit was made to Lord COLERIDGE and Baron their Lordships required a copy of the Judge's notes, I.—No. 1759.

use of the party so violating his trust." This, it will be observed, is on all fours with the decision in Reg. v. Cooper (sup.), so far as this particular section is concerned. This was really the point at issue. Can a person who made use of an instrument for the purpose of obtaining money according to the terms of his authority be guilty of embezzling that money? Assuming that he could, the Lord Chief Justice made a fourth objection to a conviction in the present case, the prisoner could not be said to have dealt with the money without authority, an essential element in cases under the above section. This, too, is consistent with Cooper's case (sup.). The same learned judge then proceeded to formulate a rule upon this point in the following terms: "It is to my mind perfectly clear that unless there was at the time the money was received the fraudulent intention of keeping the money, in which case the statute may possibly apply, it cannot apply to a case in which by the understanding of the parties, the person receiving the money is not to hand it over at once to the plaintiff." This, of course, raises the question what would be sufficient evidence of such a fraudulent intention. Each case would be submitted to a jury as it arose, and it would be for them to say whether the facts indicated such an intention. In estimating the effect of Tallock's and Cooper's cases we must be careful not to confound the decisions with ordinary cases of embezzlement in which no question is raised with reference to securities. The effect of those cases is simply this, that where a person, intrusted with a security or chattel for the purpose of raising money by its means, obtains the money in accordance with the terms of his authority, he cannot be prosecuted under the above section for misappropriating the proceeds, unless probably it is shown that his intention was fraudulent when he received the money. Barons Bramwell and Amphlett, while agreeing with the rest of the court that the conviction could not be sustained, thought that the case fell under the first branch of sect. 75, which requires a written direction, of which there was no allegation here. This view has much to commend it, and gets rid of many difficulties.

AGENCY—LIABILITY OF AGENT TO PRINCIPAL— OMISSION TO PERFORM GRATUITOUS UNDER- TAKING.(a)

(Continued from page 95.)

In Balfe v. West (13 C. B. 466, 1853), the defendant, who had, without remuneration, accepted the office of steward of a horse race, was held not to be responsible for a loss suffered by the defendant, who entered a horse for the race and alleged that the loss was due to the steward's nonfeasance in omitting to appoint a judge to determine the winner, there being no allegation that the steward had entered upon the duties of his office.

It may be taken as a universal proposition that an agent, whether remunerated or unremunerated, is liable to his principal for the loss suffered by the latter owing to the negligence of the agent in performing the duties undertaken. The distinction between paid and unpaid agents vanishes in considering their liability for misfeasance. No universal rule, however, can be laid down to determine what amount of negligence will render each and every agent liable. Actionable negligence is not a constant but a variable quantity. Actionable negligence varies with the amount of skill any particular agent or class of agents is presumed to bring to bear upon the performance of the duties he has undertaken.

If the expression "gross negligence" is intended as a definition, it wholly fails of its object. But as there is a practical difference between the degrees of negligence for which different classes of bailees are responsible, the term it has been said may be of use if retained as a short and convenient mode of describing the degree of responsibility which attaches upon a gratuitous bailee: (See per Lord Chelmsford in Giblin v. McMullen, L. Rep. 2 P. C. 336.) Baron Rolfe's remark with reference to the expression "gross negligence," has been accepted expressly by several judges. Mr. Justice Willes (in Grill v. General Iron Screw Colliery Company, L. Rep. 1 C. P. 612) said, "Confusion has arisen from regarding negligence as a positive instead of a negative word. It is really the absence of such care as it was the duty of the defendant to use." The remark of Baron Rolfe (Wilson v. Brett, 11 M. & W. 113), to the effect that negligence and gross negligence are the same thing, the latter merely having a vituperative epithet added, would not correct it. The meaning of "gross negligence" was limited in the above manner. The expression, however, has no fixed and certain meaning, and it would be well if it were abolished.

The confusion which has been introduced into English law by questions with reference to gross negligence is not hard to account for. Lawyers who recognised and adopted the phrase, observing that actionable negligence was of various degrees, were content to accept the expression as being sufficiently descriptive of one form of actionable negligence. Upon this ground it was that Lord Chelmsford wished to retain the expression: (See Giblin v. McMullen, L. Rep. 2 P. C. 336.) The use of the expression has, however, tended to introduce confusion, and the necessity. The gratuitous bailee, like any other agent, is liable for breaches of duty; but his duties differ from those of other bailees, hence there are varying degrees of actionable negligence. The duties of any agent or class of agents are either known or easily discovered; but it is hard to say what meaning the word "gross" has as applied to negligence. The confusion would entirely be got rid of if we said that every agent is liable for breach of duty, and considered the liability of the agent with reference to his duties and the amount of care, diligence, and skill required of him by law. The same result would also be obtained if the main division of negligence adopted was that which distinguished negligence into actionable negligence and non-actionable negligence. If this plan was adopted, the simple question would be considered in any question as to the liability of a defendant would be not whether the negligence was gross or otherwise, but what it was actionable or not. Practically, of course, that is the question raised in every action for negligence, but the inquiry is in any way assisted by the introduction of such terms, notwithstanding the sanction of Lord Chelmsford's name.

THE USE OF EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE TO SUPPLEMENT OR CONTROL DOCUMENTS OF TITLE.

VIII.—EQUITABLE PRESUMPTIONS.

7.—Vendor's Lien.

(Continued from p. 4.)

LORD-CHANCELLOR ELDON, in a judgment whose crabbed style not detracted from its authority, thus described the lien: "absence of special circumstances, where the vendor conveyed out more (though the consideration is, upon the face of the deed, expressed to be paid, and by a receipt indorsed on the back), if it is the simple case of a conveyance, the money, of it, not being paid as between the vendor and vendee, persons claiming as volunteers—upon the doctrine of the law, which, when it is settled, has the effect of contract, perhaps no contract has taken place—a lien shall prevail in one case for the whole consideration; in the other for the part of the money which has not been paid." His Lordship then stated the doctrine "derived from the civil law as to goods, which is further than our law; by which, though the right of stoppage in transitu is founded upon natural justice and equity, yet, if the lien is either actual or constructive was taken by the vendor, the lien is gone. That is not so by the civil law. The Digest says: 'Quod vendidi non aliter fit accipientis, quam si aut per nos solutum sit aut satis eo nomine factum vel etiam habuerimus emptori sine ulla satisfactione'" (Mackreth v. Symonds, 15 Ves. 329). The origin or derivation of the doctrine which has the effect of contract is interesting. But it is more practical to note that while Lord Eldon confirms the doctrine, he also notes the law that the lien may be rebutted by special circumstances debaring the conveyance. Lord Bathurst had thought a promissory note would put an end to it. Other judges of high authority dissented from that, as appears by the cases Gibbons v. Baddall (2 Eq. Ca. Abr. 682), and Hughes v. Kearney (1 Sch. & Lef. 132).

In Hughes v. Kearney (1 Sch. & L. 132), Lord Chelmsford particularly asked, Is not a thing unconscionable obtained when the consideration is not paid? Having stated the principle, he thus applied it: Suppose that nothing was paid for a receipt was signed by the vendor, a purchaser or vendee without notice could hold; but if the person claiming as purchaser admitted that the consideration was not paid, it would be taken prima facie as a fraud, and it would lie upon him to show that it was not a fraud. So it lies upon the purchaser to show that the vendor agreed to rest on the collateral security, prima facie the purchase money is a lien on the lands. The money which was passed by vendee to a trustee for part of the money out of the amount of which incumbrances then retained were to be satisfied, and the balance only paid to the vendor, is not such a security as will discharge the lien on the lands.

In Winter v. Lord Anson (3 Russ. 488), Lord Lyndhurst's judgment upon the appeal, said that as there was nothing in the transaction itself, as evidenced by the instruments, less clear and manifest inference that such was the intention of the parties, he thought it should be declared that the plain lien upon the estate in question for the residue of the purchase money. Reasoning upon this passage in Parrott v. Lord Commissioner Shadwell thought it manifest that Lord Lyndhurst's opinion the proper way of dealing with such a case was to look at the instrument executed by the parties at the time, and upon them to declare what the meaning of the parties must have been.

In Garson v. Green (1 John. Ch. 308), Chancellor held that the taking a promissory note for the purchase money did not affect the lien, and if part be paid, the lien is good for the residue, and the vendee is a trustee for what is unpaid. In these cases the presumptio juris arising from the convey-the lien, and the burden of producing evidence to rest upon the purchaser.

(a) By WILLIAM EVANS, Esq., South Wales Circuit.

Ellis v. Ellis (16 Beav. 350) the consideration, as stated in the pleadings, was £150 paid and an acceptance of £300. Sir John Romilly held that it was unnecessary to go into the authorities as of opinion that in accordance with all the cases the burden was on the parties to show what the real nature of the transaction was. And he held that the plaintiff neither entered into nor executed the deed with the view or intention, whether good or bad, and whether paid or unpaid, to substitute the money for the property, and therefore that the lien remained.

Ellis v. Frost (3 M. & K. 670), Lord Chancellor Cotton held that the Statute of Frauds was not a valid objection to the assignment of a vendor's lien any more than it is to a mere possession of title deeds. The latter was as valid as the principles of the statute, and yet effect was given to it in equity.

Albert Life Assurance Company, ex parte Western Life Society (23 L. T. Rep. N. S. 726, L. Rep. 10 Eq. Ca.) Lord Chancellor James and Vice-Chancellor Bacon held that, as a rule of law upon which the doctrine of an unpaid vendor's lien depends must be frequently influenced by the particular circumstances of each case in which it is said to arise, there is no principle which guides and governs its application in every case. It may be expressed or can be safely and properly inferred from the nature of the contract, the intention of the parties that the sale or transfer, absolute in its terms, was subject to the condition that the money should be paid, or that the thing contracted for by the vendee should be performed, the lien will prevail. On the other hand, no such inference can be properly drawn from the performance of the thing contracted to be done by the vendor, as was not the condition upon which the transfer was made. The engagement to do the thing was the consideration for the transfer, the vendor having accepted that engagement as the very thing he bargained for, and cannot say that the consideration was not passed to him; in such cases the lien cannot prevail.

Thus in Dixon v. Gayfer (1 De G. & J. 655), A. agreed to purchase an estate from B., and upon the estate being conveyed to grant a life annuity to B., to be secured by bond, Sir John Romilly held that B. had no lien upon the estate for payment of the annuity. Lord Chancellor Cranworth affirmed his decision, and agreed with him that no general rule can be laid down, but that the circumstance of each particular case must be the guide. This was tantamount to saying that in each particular case extrinsic evidence must be the guide to the decision, whether the presumption is to be or not to be rebutted.

A vendor's lien extends to lands purchased by railway companies.

The London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company were working the Crystal Palace line under a resolution of the directors. The Earl of St. Germans, as unpaid vendor of lands to the Crystal Palace Company, who had taken possession, and constructed part of their line thereon, brought a suit against both companies. At the hearing it was declared that upon default of payment within one month by the Crystal Palace Company the vendor should have a lien upon the lands of both companies. Default was made. The arbitrator under the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company Arbitration Act 1869, stayed proceedings against them. Nevertheless, on petition by the plaintiffs praying that the amount due under the declaratory order for principal, interest, and costs, might be raised by a sale of the lands, and in the meantime for an injunction and receiver, and other relief. Vice-Chancellor Bacon held that the Arbitration Act did not interfere with the rights of the petitioners, and made the order as prayed: (The Earl of St. Germans v. Crystal Palace Railway Company, 24 L. T. Rep. N. S. 288; L. Rep. 11 Eq. 568.)

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

And that the way in which common-law business is conducted in the Common Law Judge's Chambers has reached such a pitch that a proposal is shortly to be made to the Lord Chancellor, with a view to the appointment of additional clerks in these Chambers, to be remunerated by public subscription. The present system is simply intolerable. At the order of the day for clerks at chambers to wait for at least an hour, they can file an affidavit, obtain a writ for time, or get a simple order for a writ, without requiring the insertion of a date. The fact is, that before the Lord Chancellor as many as fourteen clerks may be employed at the Common Law Judge's Chambers, whereas the business which is now done by five. In the Queen's Bench, the Lord Chancellor, there is only one clerk, the result of which throughout the entire day a long line of clerks, one behind the other, waiting their turn to accomplish what they could get done without delay. It is not important to consider this wretched state of things, for it is a state of things which must be at once rectified, but it is caused by the absence of the Lord Chancellor's clerks on circuit. This is even affecting the sale of lands, for in some cases summonses are not issued and drawn up which should be. Solicitors may grumble at a long time which their clerks tell them is detained at these chambers. It is true, however, that this loss of value to the Lord Chancellor's clerks, but it is of the judges, who are now responsible for the despatch of the business of the Lord Chancellor. The time has arrived when it ought not to be impeded by the absence of a judge's clerk being absent on circuit. Chamber clerks are necessary in Law divisions as in Chancery, clerks might very well be solicitors, and being relieved from attending chambers, thus leaving them more free for the taxation of costs and the disbursements, and the judge's clerks should be detached from attending at judge's chambers, a new staff and a new system is required in the Common Law Chambers.

In a recent issue a flood of applications to the Court of Appeal at large, for postponement of cases over, for the convenience of counsel. Applications were acceded to where counsel on both sides agreed, and Brett, J.A. is reported to have said that it could only then be by counsel "making themselves responsible as such for their clients' interests and wishes—let that be understood," and Mellish, L.J. added, "If clients assent to it." Now, we have in these conditions one difficult position. Counsel cannot be in two places at once. They want to go circuit, they like to keep their circuit practice together for obvious reasons; then come the conditions about responsibility and so forth, which are of an unsubstantial character. It seems that solicitors are not to be consulted to the extent they should be, in regard to the postponement of cases.

The usual printed report of the proceedings at the annual general meeting of the Incorporated Law Society, held last July, together with the like report of the annual provincial meeting held at Oxford in October last, has just been issued to the members of the society. We venture to express the opinion that the reports of the society's meetings should be in the possession of the members much sooner after the meetings than is at present the case.

The great majority of solicitors having, on or before Friday last, paid their annual certificate duty, the present is a fitting opportunity for reminding those who have failed to do so that they remain uncertificated from and inclusive of the 16th Nov. last until the duty is paid, and the Stamp Act and the Solicitors' Acts otherwise complied with. The general rules and regulations as to the several examinations prior to admission on the roll of solicitors, and as to taking out and renewal of annual certificates, issued on the 2nd Nov. 1875, provide in effect that "if any solicitor of the Supreme Court, after having at any time taken out a stamped certificate, shall, for the space of a whole year from and after the expiration thereof, have neglected to renew the same for the following year, or has failed to obtain such a certificate within twelve months from the date of his admission on the Roll, the registrar shall not afterwards grant a certificate to such solicitor, except under an order of the Master of the Rolls, and for the purpose of obtaining such an order the applicant shall, six weeks before the application is intended to be made, give notice thereof as in the case of an original admission, and the affidavits in support of such application shall be filed at the Petty Bag Office, and a copy thereof shall at the same time be left with the clerk of the Petty Bag, to be delivered by him to the Registrar of Solicitors, and the order for such taking out or renewal shall (if made) be drawn up on reading such affidavits, and an affidavit of such copies having been left and notices given. Upon an application to dispense with the required notice of intention to take out or renew a certificate, a summons must be served on the Registrar of Solicitors calling on him to show cause within ten days why such taking out or renewal of certificate should not be allowed; and if no cause be shown to the satisfaction of the Master of the Rolls, he may make an order for allowing such certificate to be issued."

In another column we publish a letter from a correspondent under the signature of "Conference," who seems disposed to urge that magistrates' clerk ought not to retire with the justices for the purpose of deciding how a case (in which they cannot agree in court) shall be disposed of. We really cannot concur in the views advanced by our correspondent, which, if adopted, would be found to work most inconveniently in many ways, which must at once suggest themselves. Again, such a course as that advocated would occasion a great waste of valuable time in many cases. We believe the present universal practice—to which exception is now taken—is founded on expediency and convenience.

DURING the past year or two County Court judges have shown an especial determination to arrest the growth and the proceedings of a class of persons who infest the precincts of County Courts, and who are known by such familiar names as "accountant," "law agent," "County Court agent," "debt collector," &c. These learned judges have been led to this, no doubt, by the fact that they have seen that the inevitable result of letting this class of interlopers multiply would be to inflict a serious injury upon suitors and the public. Moreover, recent cases confirm the correctness of our assertion. At the Leeds County Court Mr. Serjt. Tindal Atkinson (in a case in which the secretary of the Harrogate Gas Company appeared to represent the company, which was a defendant in an action) is reported to have said that the secretary of a public company should not be substituted for an advocate in a court of justice; in fact, he could hardly be, in the proper sense of the term, the representative of the company. The word "representative" was very much abused, and it was perhaps necessary, in a case of that kind, to state that there should be some limit as to how far a secretary could, in a court of this kind, represent a public company. An advocate present in court said that he had to thank his Honour, on the part of the Profession, for his intervention in what was a somewhat difficult question, especially as another class of advocates who appeared in court, to whom his Honour's remarks might be extended, was rapidly on the increase, and his Honour said that so long as he occupied the position of judge, he would endeavour to prevent any abuses of the kind referred to. We may say that during the past twelve months many similar cases have come under our notice, in which the managers, secretaries, accountants, clerks, or superintendents of railway and other companies have essayed to appear and conduct the cases of those whose servants they are; so that if such a state of things were to continue, given a superabundance of joint stock enterprise, and the duties of the Profession would be considerably curtailed. The other case occurred at the Malton County Court, when Mr. Bedwell, the learned judge, gave publicity to a scandalous printed circular or notice issued by a debt collecting agency for the purpose of frightening debtors into payment of claims. This circular the learned judge characterised as a "most monstrous and indecent attempt to frighten debtors." There are many "County Court agents" who issue these would-be legal notices.

A SOLICITOR in practice in the City of London writes to us, "One of my principal clients has received the enclosed circular letter." We reproduce it, only observing that it involves a proceeding not regular or usual in our Profession: "I have much pleasure in informing you that I have entered upon a profession for which I was originally educated: and having been duly admitted upon the roll of solicitors I have commenced practice at the above address. With a view of becoming more thoroughly acquainted with the theory of law, I matriculated at King's College, and having successfully passed the requisite examinations I have been enrolled an associate of that institution. During my course of study, I had the pleasure of taking the first prize in Professor Leone Levi's class for Commercial Law, and also Professor Cutler's Prize for General Law and Jurisprudence. While serving my articles and managing an extensive City practice I found my commercial knowledge and experience of most essential value. My late principal, in wishing me success, has in the kindest manner testified to 'The tact and skill which I have shown in conducting many varied and important matters in his office.' I enclose my card and remain."

SPECIMEN DIGEST OF THE LAW AS TO SOLICITORS OF THE SUPREME COURT.

(Continued from page 97.)

ARTICLE 13.

THE ARTICLES MUST BE STAMPED.

The articles of clerkship must be stamped, but they are not to be stamped at any time after the expiration of six months from the date thereof, except upon payment of penalties as follows:

- (1) If brought to be stamped within one year after date, £10.
- (2) If brought after one year, and within five years after date, for every complete year, and also for any additional part of a year elapsed since the date, £10.
- (3) In every other case, £50.

33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, s. 45.

The stamp duty payable upon articles of clerkship, whereby any person first becomes bound to serve as a clerk, in order to his admission as a solicitor, is £80.

But upon articles of clerkship whereby any person, having been before bound by duly stamped articles to serve as a clerk in order to his admission as a solicitor, and not having completed his service so as to be entitled to such admission, becomes bound afresh for the same purpose, the duty payable is 10s.

See 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, schedule.

ARTICLE 14.

OF THE ENROLMENT AND REGISTRATION OF THE ARTICLES.

ARTICLES of clerkship should be enrolled by the solicitor(s) and registered, and an affidavit filed of the actual execution of the contract, the due admission of the solicitor, the clerk's place of abode, and the day on which the contract was actually executed within six months from the execution of the contract:

(a) Dufaw v. Sigel, 22 L. J. 678, Ch. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 8.

The articles must be stamped before they are enrolled.

If articles have not been enrolled within six months from the execution of the contract (although the duty and penalty under 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, s. 43, have been paid), they will not be allowed to be enrolled nunc pro tunc, and the service thereunder to be computed from the date of their execution, except in cases where the omission to stamp them at the proper time has been the result of some accident or unforeseen circumstance, or where there has been negligence on the part of the clerk: (Ex parte Darville, L. Rep. 2 C. P. 244; 15 L. T. Rep. N. S. 537; Ex parte Norton, 26 L. J. 24, Q.B.; and Ex parte Wilson, 4 B. & S. 889; 33 L. J. 29, Q.B.)

Illustrations.

(a) Cases in which the circumstances were held to justify a permission to allow enrolment nunc pro tunc:

1. Where the delay in enrolling was caused by the closing of the office on a holiday: (Re Appleton, 11 W. R. 35.)
2. Where the clerk was articled to his father, an affidavit of the latter to the effect that having before the articles been subject to much pecuniary loss and pressing expenses, and a diminution of professional income, he was at the time of the articles without the means to pay the stamp duty, and that he had not articulated his son speculatively, but with the intention of ultimately stamping and enrolling the articles: Ex parte Herbert, 1 B. & S. 685; 31 L. J. 33 Q.B., as to the absence of means to pay the duty. See, too, Ex parte Bishop, 3 L. T. Rep. N. S. 533; 9 C. B., N. S. 150.)
3. D., the managing clerk to B., an attorney, became bound to his master by articles of clerkship duly executed on the 27th Oct. 1856. During the first six months from their execution he expected to have been able to have paid the stamp duty thereon out of a sum of money he was to receive from his mother-in-law had she succeeded in a suit in equity. That suit failed, and D. being consequently unable to pay the duty, arranged with B. shortly after the six months had expired for the payment of the duty out of D.'s salary. B. retained the money, but did not pay the duty, of which fact D. was aware. Subsequently B. absconded, and D. was unable to pay the duty and penalty until Jan. 1867: (Ex parte Darville, sup.)
4. Where the omission of the clerk to get the articles duly stamped and enrolled within the six months was due to such a mistake in law as might easily be made by a person in his position: (Ex parte Hayward, 29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 428.)
5. Where the failure to pay the duty arose from the non-payment of a debt due to the clerk, which he had a reasonable expectation to obtain in time: (Re Sayer, L. Rep. 10 C. P. 569; 33 L. T. Rep. N. S. 728.)

(b) Cases in which the circumstances were held not to justify a permission to allow an enrolment nunc pro tunc:

1. Where the clerk depended for payment upon the mere promise of a brother to pay the stamp duty out of a legacy, and the brother failed to do so: (Ex parte Brynne, 33 L. T. Rep. N. S. 724.)
2. Where the omission was due to the clerk's failure to obtain payment of a debt due to him at the time of entering the articles: (Ex parte Brynne, L. Rep. 10 C. P. 638; 32 L. T. Rep. N. S. 729; 44 L. J. 305, C. P.) Here there was no such disappointment of a reasonable expectation as would induce the court to grant the application: (See Ex parte Jones, 14 C. B., N. S. 301.)
3. Where the stamping has been intentionally delayed: (Ex parte Welsh, 27 L. J. 213, Q.B.)

ARTICLE 15.

THE FILING OF THE AFFIDAVIT OF THE ARTICLES.

An affidavit of the articles of clerkship should be made and filed within six calendar months after execution, and the articles should be enrolled.

If the affidavit is not filed within that time, it may be filed after the expiration thereof, but the service then reckons only from the time of filing the affidavit, unless the court or a judge otherwise orders.

Upon an execution of fresh articles on cancellation or assignment of original articles, an affidavit and the articles must be similarly filed and enrolled.

6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 8, 9, and 13.

Articles of clerkship and any assignment must, within three months after enrolment and registration, pursuant to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 8, 9, and 13, be produced to the registrar for entry in a book kept for the purpose, and accessible to public inspection, and if not so produced to and not entered by the registrar within the three months, the service dates only from the date of production and entry, unless the court or a judge otherwise orders.

23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 7.

Illustrations.

Cases in which the circumstances were held to justify a permission to allow articles to take effect from their date, and not from the time at which they were enrolled:

1. Where the omission was due to a clerk or agent of the applicant, to whom personally no neglect or default was imputable: (Re Harris, 11 W. R. 36.)
2. Where upon the assignment of a clerk to his father, an attorney, the father's memory became impaired, and he died within six months of the assignment without having made an affidavit: (Ex parte Lea, 27 W. R. Q. B. 541.)
3. Where a graduate was articled, he sent the articles to London to be stamped and registered, and went abroad. On return, after six months, found letter from the agent, stating that in order to duly register the articles, a certificate of matriculation was required: (Re Follett, 30 Beav. 629.)

In the following case the circumstances were held not to justify such permission:

1. Where the omission was entirely due to the inadvertence of the articulated clerk: (Re Jones, 1 Beav. 485.)

DIVISIONAL COURT.

Monday, Dec. 11.

(Before Lord COLERIDGE, C.J. and POLLOCK, J.)
Business of the court.

LORD COLERIDGE, while acceding under the circumstances of the case, to an application made in the course of the day by F. O. Crump, that cases in which he was engaged, and which had been struck out in his absence a few minutes before four o'clock on Thursday last, should be set aside, as I am sure you will believe, is to me in all reason the convenience of counsel; but two days on which this court sits cannot but be inconvenient when the courts are sitting at full hall. I do not, however, see how the business could be done without these Divisional sittings twice a week, and if they are to be kept alive, as they are intended to be, we must sit counsel to the lists. What I said on Thursday last, and what I say now, is that I wished that all the business of the day put down in the unopposed motions being taken first and opposed motions afterwards, so that everybody should know what was to be done on that day; and, being so, protesting against this application being taken as a precedent, we shall expect counsel to be ready and to be heard according to their merits.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

SETTLED ESTATES—LEASE—TENANT'S LIFE—REMAINDER AND TRUSTEES—CONCURRENCE—LEASES AND SALES OF SETTLED ESTATES ACTS (19 & 20 VICT. C. 120, ss. 2, 16; 33 & 34 VICT. C. 33, s. 3).—A testator devised and bequeathed certain real and leasehold estates upon trust to receive the rents and, after defraying thereout all ground taxes, charges, and expenses of insurance, repairs, collections, and other necessary outgoings, pay the net rents to his wife during her life; after her death he gave the ultimate residue of estate, after payment of certain legacies, to the trustees absolutely. A petition was presented by the widow under the Leases and Settled Estates Act, praying that leases of real and leasehold estates comprised in the will might be granted, and was opposed by the trustees in remainder: Held (affirming the decision of Jessel, M.R.), that the application of the widow was not to be granted without the concurrence of the remaindermen. Quære, whether the widow was "person entitled to the possession or receipt of the rents and profits" within the meaning of the 16th section of the Leases and Settled Estates Act (19 & 20 Vict. c. 120) (Taylor v. Taylor, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 458, Q. App.).

PROBATE SUIT—SERVICE OF WRIT—ON IX., RULES 2 AND 3.—Where a writ cannot personally served upon one of several debtors by reason of his address being unknown and ascertainable, the court will not dispense with the writ, but will direct under the writ to be effected by advertisement, following the old practice of the Court of Probate in service of citations: (Whitley v. Honeywell & others, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 517, Prob.).

PROBATE OF INFORMAL DOCUMENTS—WILLS NOT INCONSISTENT WITH EACH OTHER ALL MAY BE READ AS ONE WILL AND ADMITTED TO PROBATE.—Where several testamentary papers are found after a decease, each coming in all important respects with the others, they will be taken to form one will, and will be admitted to probate as such, even where one or more are irregular in form and imperfect in attestation: (the goods of Anna Maria Rotton, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 518, Prob.).

DEED—POWERS HEREBY GRANTED—LAW AMBIGUITY—INTENTION OF PARTIES—EQUITABLE RELIEF.—The plaintiff, in 1868, granted deed licence and authority to use an invention which the patent was vested in him, for his loading rifles, to the defendants, "yielding, paying unto the licensor the royalty of one shilling for every gun, rifle, or breech action so factured, produced, or sold under the power hereby granted." The exemption of the 0 from royalties for the use of patents, held in Feather v. The Queen (6 B. & S. 257) was at that time generally believed to extend to Government contractors; but by Dixon v. London & Arms Company (Limited) (L. Rep. 10 Q.B. afterwards affirmed in the House of Lords), exemption was limited to the use of the arms servants of the Crown; upon which the plaintiff brought this action to recover royalties due for the rifles manufactured by the defendants for the Government. The jury found that defendants intended the deed should not be Government contracts, and that the plaintiff

This was the defendants' intention, and purposely obtained from mentioning the subject in order that they might be bound contrary to their intention. Held, that the words of the reddendum suggested a latent ambiguity which admitted extensive evidence to show the intentions of the parties, and that the plaintiff under the circumstances could not recover. Held also (per Cockburn, C.J., and Lush, J.) that the defendants were entitled to equitable relief from the plaintiff's claim: (Roden v. London Small Arms Company Limited), 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 505.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless some other claimants sooner appear.

HANFORD (Richd. Hick), of Guernsey, Esq. £53 6s. 4d. Three per Cent Annuity. Claimant Henrietta Perchard & Kibbenstein, widow, administratrix to Richd. H. Champion, deceased.

LAMBERT (Jno.), of Exeter, Esq.; GRUYLE (Chas.), of Bristol, Esq.; and DELPRAIT (Joh), of Lime-street, Esq. One Dividend on the sum of £3000. Three per Cent Annuity. Claimant said Joseph Delprat.

KNOX (Henry Geo. Augustus), of Sonning-grove, Reading, Esq. One Dividend on the sum of £2000. Three per Cent Annuity. Claimant said Henry Geo. A. Knox.

TOWERS (Ephemia), of Edgware, Middlesex, widow, and TOWERS (Wm. Arthur), of Edgware, Middlesex, gentleman, £2500. Three per Cent Annuity. Claimant said Wm. A. Tootell, the survivor.

APPOINTMENTS UNDER THE JOINT-STOCK WINDING-UP ACTS.

ARNETT'S PATENT ASPHALTE PAVING COMPANY LIMITED.—Creditors to send in by Jan. 19 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to J. Priestley, 118, Cheapside, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Jan. 23, at the chambers of V.C. B., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

BATH AND COLONIAL TRUST CORPORATION (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Jan. 8 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to F. B. Smart, Esq., Cheapside, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Jan. 22, at the chambers of the M. R., at eleven o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

THE INDIA AND LONDON SHIPPING COMPANY (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Jan. 1 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to R. P. Harding, 8, Old Jewry, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Jan. 15, at the chambers of V.C. M., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

FINANCIAL AND INVESTMENT PROTECTION ASSOCIATION (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Jan. 2 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to J. Graham, 7, Poultry, London, one of the liquidators of the said company. Jan. 16, at the chambers of V.C. B., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

SEWERAGE AND MANURE COMPANY.—Creditors to send in by Jan. 22 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to Jas. Cooper, 3, Coleman-street-buildings, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Jan. 26, at the chambers of the M. R., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

WYDON AND PROVINCIAL CONSOLIDATED COAL COMPANY.—Creditors to send in by Jan. 12 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to Bellamy and Bonner, 5, Bloomfield-street, London, the liquidators of the said company.

EMPIRE MINING AND LEAD MINING COMPANY.—Creditors to send in by Jan. 10 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to F. Warwick, 25, Bucklersbury, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Jan. 20, at the chambers of V.C. M., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

ALL-WOOD COLLIERIES COMPANY (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Jan. 5 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any), to Geo. E. Southbank, Esq., Lawrence Pountney-lane, London, the official liquidator of the said company. Jan. 15, at the chambers of the M. R., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF

ALLEY (Jno.), formerly of 1, Gorton-villas, Lancaster-road, Nottingham, Middlesex, but late of Sumia, Painsdon, Devon, gentleman. Jan. 22; H. Woodward, solicitor, 15, John-street, Bedford-row, London. Jan. 31; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

ALCOCK (Gerrard Ann), The Ridge, Wootton-under-Edge, Gloucester, spinster. Jan. 15; Chas. Taddy, solicitor, Bristol. Feb. 1; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

ALTS (Jno.), of Marine-terrace, Horse Bay, Kent. Jan. 15; Wm. Vane, solicitor, 27, Leadenhall-street, London. Jan. 26; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

ARMOUR (Wm. Bass), Greenhill, Kent, dyer. Jan. 2; R. B. Lumley, solicitor, 22, Conduit-street, Bond-street, Middlesex. Jan. 9; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

ATKIN (Wm.), Great Ashmore, Middlesex, veterinary surgeon. Jan. 12; R. B. Pugh, solicitor, 5, Gray's-inn-place, Gray's-inn, London. Jan. 26; M.R. at eleven o'clock.

ATKIN (John), Pride Hill, Shrewsbury, watchmaker and jeweller. Jan. 15; Edward G. Corser, solicitor, Swann Hill, Shrewsbury. Jan. 23; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

ATKIN (Edward), 44, Harcourt-terrace, Redcliffe-square, Middlesex. Jan. 15; Wm. Chubb, solicitor, 11, South-square, Gray's Inn, London. Jan. 30; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

ATKIN (Henry C.), Dudley House, Nightingale-lane, Clapham, Surrey, gentleman. Dec. 30; A. Hanbury, solicitor, 1, New Broad-street, London. Jan. 10; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

ATKIN (Thos.), Burford, Oxford, plumber and glazier. Jan. 5; Kilby, Son, and Mace, solicitors, Chipping Norton, Oxford. Feb. 12; M.R. at twelve o'clock.

ATKIN (Jas.), Norwood, Middlesex, gentleman. Jan. 12; J. S. Humber, solicitor, 6 and 7, Barbican, London. Jan. 5; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

ATKIN (Anthony), Kirkby Lonsdale, Westmoreland, gentleman. Dec. 30; E. Warriner, solicitor, 21, Great Winchester-street, London. Jan. 11; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

ATKIN (Jno.), Kirkby Lonsdale, Westmoreland, attorney. Dec. 30; E. Warriner, solicitor, 21, Great Winchester-street, London. Jan. 11; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

ATKIN (Jno.), late of 2, Chisenham-road, Old Ford, Middlesex, builder, formerly of 11, Peel-terrace, Old Ford-road, Bethnal-green, Jan. 5; Grosfield, solicitor, 33, Hackney-road, Middlesex. Jan. 22; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

ATKIN (Emma), 7, York-terrace, Leamington, milliner and dressmaker. Jan. 10; Wm. J. Reeves, solicitor, Birmingham. Jan. 17; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

ATKIN (Wm.), Confort, Malton, of Newcastle-street, Strand, London, and of 91, Kings-street, Manchester, china manufacturer and china dealer, and earthenware dealer, carrying on the business under the style of Jno. Rose and Co. Jan. 4; M. A. Fitter, solicitor, 2, Bennet's-hill, Birmingham. Jan. 19; M. R. at eleven o'clock.

ATKIN (Wm.), Nottingham, stock and share broker. Jan. 15; W. Geare, solicitor, 37, Line-in-the-fields, London. Jan. 23; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

ATKIN (Jno.), 11, North Driffield, York, farmer. Jan. 6; Thos. M. Wakell, solicitor, Babby, York. Jan. 20; M.R. at eleven o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

ARMISTEAD (Sir Elkanah), Knt., Hope Hall, near Manchester. Feb. 17; Sale and Co., solicitors, 29, Beetham-street, Manchester.

BAKER (Francis), Nottingham, lace dyer and dresser. Jan. 20; Hunt and Williams, solicitors, Weekday-cross, Nottingham.

BECK (Elizabeth), Pannal, York, spinster. Jan. 8; R. Gill and Son, solicitors, Knaresborough.

BLAKELEY (Eleanor), formerly of Eagle Cottage, Fort-street, Finchley, afterwards of 40, Ingoldsby-road, Holway, and late of 8, Spring-street, Sussex-gardens, Paddington, Middlesex, widow. Jan. 19; J. Pendergast, 33, Common-lane, Middlesex, Esq.

BLOOMER (Thos.), 15, School-lane, Wigan, shopkeeper and brewer. Jan. 18; R. Ashton, solicitor, 4, King-street, Wigan.

BOLD (Wm.), heretofore of Winwick, near Warrington, Lancashire, and late of Pike Low, Waterfall, Stafford, gentleman. Feb. 8; Jno. Bamford, solicitor, Ashborne, Derby.

BOYD (Ferguson), 1, Clyde-dale-terrace, Birkbeck-road, Upper Holloway, Middlesex, builder. March 25; J. E. Turner, solicitor, 27, King-street, Chesham, London.

BRAID (Pierre F. J.), West Sandfield House, Stoke next Guildford, Surrey, gentleman. Jan. 16; Futvey and Co., solicitors, 25, John-street, Bedford-row, London.

CHURCH (Ella), 17, Russell-street, Bath, spinster. Jan. 12; Prior, Biggs, and Co., solicitors, 61, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

CLAY (Wm. D.), Bart., 9, Lowndes-square, Middlesex, and of Castle-hill, Dorset. Feb. 1; Hargrove and Co., solicitors, 3, Victoria-street, Westminster.

CLOWES (Samuel), Meycroft, Ipstones, Stafford, yeoman. Feb. 1; Hacker and Allen, solicitors, 52, St. Edward-street, Leek.

CLUTTON (Jno.), Giff's-lane, Cheshunt, Hertfordshire, Leamington, Jan. 11; Parker and Son, solicitors, Corn, Elizabeth, Camplen Lodge, Upper Addiscombe-road, Croydon, Surrey, spinster. Jan. 31; Deacon and Co., solicitors, 1, Paul's Bachelors-court, Doctors' Commons, London.

CRANFORD (Louisa A.), formerly of Sherborne, Dorset, and late of 2, Avenue-villas, Old Dover-road, Blackheath, London. Jan. 11; Vandercrom, Law, and Hardy, solicitors, 23, Bush-lane, London.

DENNIS (Jno.), Belvoir-terrace, Cambridge, gentleman. Jan. 1; E. Wayman, solicitor, 2, Silver-street, Cambridge.

DENNINGHAM (Jno.), Woodham Mortimer, near Maldon, Essex, farmer. Jan. 20; Smythies, Goady and Son, solicitors, Colchester.

EVANS (Lewis), Derby, gentleman. Dec. 30; F. H. Whitton, St. Michael's Churchyard, Derby.

FARRER (Oliver Wm.), Bunsen Hall, Wareham, Dorset, Esq. Jan. 17; Farrer, Overy, and Co., solicitors, 60, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

FORREST (Henry), South Mouse, Oxford, Surrey, Esq. Jan. 31; Fearless and Sons, solicitors, East Grinstead, Sussex.

GILLES (Henry), St. Aldate-street, Oxford, Butler of Christ Church, Oxford. Jan. 6; John M. Davenport, County Hall, Oxford.

HASLAM (George), Boctwell-street, Chesterfield, Derby, joiner. Jan. 25; F. Black, solicitor, 13, Church-lane, Chesterfield.

HAWKINS (Martha), Untham-road, Heigham, Norwich, spinster. Jan. 15; Thomas Brightwell, solicitor, 11, Upper Street, Norwich.

HOWER (Matilda S.), Sovereign Tavern, Park-road, Regent's-park, Middlesex, widow. Dec. 21; Tatham, O'Brien, and Nash, solicitors, 11, Queen Victoria-street, London, E.C.

HOPKINS (Clara W.), formerly of 1, New-terrace, Colbrook-road, Linton, Middlesex, but late of 1, Ventnor-villas, Hamstead-road, Birmingham, spinster. Jan. 11; Ingle, Cooper, and Holmes, solicitors, 20, Threadneedle-street, London.

HOWELL (Wm.), of Low Marsh, Lambeth, Surrey, gentleman. March 1; H. F. and E. Chester, solicitors, 30, New-burton-burys, Surrey, E.C.

HUNT (Wm. A.), Teignmouth, Devon, Esq. Jan. 2; Cookson and Co., solicitors, 6, New-square, Lincoln's-inn, London.

ISGUR (Jno.), Llandiloes, Montgomery, wheelwright. Jan. 15; W. Osborn, Talbot, and Hutchinson, solicitors, Llandiloes.

IRLAND (Jno.), Madeline-street, Tipton Park, Liverpool, carriage-agent. Feb. 1; W. Pierce, solicitor, 24, Castle-street, Liverpool.

IRVINE (Patrick), Waratah New Town, Tasmania. Feb. 1; A. F. and R. W. Tweedie, solicitors, 5, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

JONES (Jno. P.), King's Heath, King's Norton, Worcester, gentleman. Jan. 15; G. F. James, solicitor, 37, Temple-street, Birmingham.

JAMES (Jno.), formerly of James-street, St. Luke's, Chelsea, Middlesex, victualler, but late of Hudderton, near Tiverton, Devon. Jan. 12; G. B. Lohry, solicitor, 5, Robert-street, Adelphi, London. Jan. 22; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

LAWSON (Geo.), Maxey, Northampton, farmer. Jan. 15; Perival and Son, solicitors, Peterborough. Jan. 30; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

LINCOLN (Robt. Wm.), Newcastle-under-Lyme, Stafford, solicitor. Jan. 10; Wm. Turner, solicitor, Newcastle-under-Lyme. Jan. 19; V.C. M. at twelve o'clock.

M. COOPER (Wm.), 27, Corn-street, Bath, furrier and rag dealer. Jan. 20; A. E. Webb, solicitor, 3, Fountain-buildings, Bath.

MORRIS (David), Park Cottage, near Newtown, Montgomery, gentleman. Jan. 15; Williams, Gittins, and Taylor, solicitors, Newtown.

NATHAN (Moses), 134, Grove-road, Mile-end, Middlesex. Jan. 1; F. W. and H. Hilbery, solicitors, 32, Crutched-triars, London.

NORRIS (Samuel), Chelford, Chelster, farmer. Jan. 22; Henry Hand, solicitor, Church-side, Macclesfield.

NORRIS (Thos.), Chelford, farmer. Jan. 22; Henry Hand, Church-side, Macclesfield.

PAGE (Nicholas M.), Bourton, Berry Pomeroy, Devon, yeoman. Jan. 15; Thos. H. Edmunds, solicitor, Totnes, Devon.

PERRY (Wm.), formerly of Nelson Dock, Rotherhithe, Surrey, shipbuilder, but late of 11, Leadenhall-street, London, shipowner, and of 9, Warwick-road, Upper Clapton, Middlesex, and of 4, Old-road, Windsor, Berks, Esq. Feb. 1; Walter and Gresh, solicitors, 4, Finsbury-circus, London.

PETER (Dr. Jas.), M.D., 13, Upper Parliament-street, Liverpool. Jan. 25; H. W. Collins and Co., solicitors, 3, Union-court, Castle-street, Liverpool.

PHILIPS (Wm.), 1, Montague-place, Russell-square, Middlesex. Dec. 30; Hardisty and Rhodes, solicitors, 43, Great Marlborough-street, Middlesex.

PIKE (Rev. Jas. C.), Leicester, dissenting minister. Jan. 22; G. Stevenson, solicitor, 11, New-street, Leicester.

POTTER (Thos.), Hatfield, Broad Oak, Essex, grocer and draper. Feb. 1; Chas. Wayre, Hatfield Broad Oak, Essex, farmer. Thos. Lempiere, Hatfield, Surrey, gentleman. Feb. 1; Reep and Co., solicitors, 9, Bush-lane, London.

RIBOUT (Wm.), Oxford Fitzpaine, Dorset, hay dealer. Feb. 1; Hy. Chas. Dushwood, solicitor, Sturminster Newton.

SAGE (Jno.), Whitehall Farm, Old Heath, Colchester, Essex. Dec. 31; A. M. White, solicitor, 4, North-hill, Colchester.

SALTER (Jno.), 31, Moorgate-street, London, and of 2, Shelley-terrace, Stoke Newington, Middlesex, tailor and cutter. Jan. 10; E. Warriner, solicitor, 21, Great Winchester-street, London.

SHILLITO (Rev. Richd.), Cambridge. Jan. 21; Rev. Jno. H. R. Shillito, Shaw-hill, Cranke-slaw, Rochdale.

SILVERSTEIN (Jas.), Orchard-street, West Bromwich, Stafford, Whitesmith. Dec. 31; W. Bache, solicitor, Churchill House, West Bromwich.

STAROX (Michael), Chelmsford, Bakewell, Derby, farmer. March 1; Richd. Buxton, farmer, Chelmsford.

STANES (Jno.), formerly of Grango Farm, Bower, South-ampton, but late of Fareham, Esq. Jan. 20; Donithorne and Neale, solicitors, Osborn-road, Fareham, Hants.

TALBOT (Admiral Sir Chas.), K.C.B., formerly of Southsea, but late of Ival Bury, Highgate, Bedford. Jan. 1; Charles W. T. Ponsbury, Esq., Goldington, Bury, Bedford.

TAYLOR (Samuel), 27, Alfred-street, Bow, Middlesex, gentleman. Jan. 20; Watson and Co., solicitors, 12, Bouvier-street, Fleet-street, London.

THORP (Jno.), Tottenham, Bristol, and of Bridlington, Somerset, millwright and engineer. Feb. 10; F. V. Jacques, solicitor, 2, Baldwin-street, Bristol.

TRICK (Arthur), Blackheath, Kent, gentleman. Jan. 18; Reep, Lane, and Co., solicitors, 9, Bush-lane, Cannon-street, London.

WAKE (Ralph), Newcastle-upon-Tyne, Esq. Jan. 31; Ingle-dew and Daggett, solicitors, 3, Dean-street, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

WILLIAMS (Chas.), Morton-cottage, Henfield, Sussex, gentleman. Jan. 10; Woods and Dempster, solicitors, Ship-street, Brighton.

WILLIAMS (Rev. Jno.), Abingdon, Monmouth. March 1; Randall and Mayo, solicitors, Wilton, Salisbury.

WILLIAMS (Thos.), Wilton House Farm, Wilton, near Salisbury, farmer. March; Randall and Mayo, solicitors, Wilton, Salisbury.

WRANGHAM (Geo. Robt.), Great Driffield, York, gentleman. Feb. 1; Jas. M. Jennings, solicitor, Great Driffield.

REPORTS OF SALES.

Wednesday, Dec. 6.

By Messrs. HARRIS, VAUGHAN, and JENKINSON, at Matlock Bridge and Castleton. Derbyshire.—In Chancery, "Natalie Jackson," near Matlock, &c. Several farms and numerous enclosures of land and residences, containing about 277 acres—sold for £20,000.

Thursday, Dec. 12.

By Messrs. PRICE and SON, at the Mart. Bryanston-square.—An improved rent of £12 per annum, term 31 years—sold for £710.

Fitzroy-square.—No. 16, Fitzroy-street, term 12 years—sold for £200.

By Messrs. TUNLEY and BOYLE, at the Mart. Southwark. A ground rent of £1 10s. per annum, with short reversion—sold for £20.

Old Kent-road.—Nos. 1 to 21, Cranbrook-grove, and Nos. 27 to 31 odd numbers, Justin-street, term 22 years—sold for £200.

Holborn.—Nos. 131, 133, 135, and 137, Tufnell-park road, term 22 years—sold for £2150.

Islington.—Nos. 46 and 48, Clement's-street, term 22 years—sold for £275.

Merton.—Freehold ground rent of £12 per annum—sold for £10.

By Messrs. WINSTANLEY and HOWWOOD, at the Mart. Cripplegate.—No. 18, Ham-sill-street, and 22, Well-street, term 51 years—sold for £350.

No. 62, St. Martin's-le-Grand, term 16 years—sold for £150.

By Messrs. HOBBS, EVERFIELD, and Co., at the Mart. Kentish-town.—Nos. 2, 4, 6, and 20, Peckwater-street, term 22 years—sold for £150.

Nos. 15, 17, and 19, Hammond-street, same term—sold for £705.

By Messrs. HARRIS, VAUGHAN, and JENKINSON, at the Mart. Southwark.—No. 164, High-street, freehold—sold for £3250.

COMPANY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

LIABILITY OF RAILWAY — NEGLIGENCE — THROUGH TRAFFIC — DEFECT IN FOREIGN TRUCK.—A railway company is not bound to make a minute investigation into the soundness of every truck that comes on to its lines from other companies; an ordinary examination is sufficient. Nor, when one defect has been discovered in a truck and has been properly remedied, will it, under those circumstances, be necessary for the company to make a further minute examination of the truck before forwarding it to its destination.

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

Inquiries, as to the several Examinations and as to Admission on the Roll of the Supreme Court, as to being called to the Bar, and as to taking out and renewal of annual certificates, should be addressed to the Editor (Students' Department).

THE following lectures and classes are appointed to be delivered and held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, during the ensuing week: Monday, Conveyancing Class, 4.30 to 6 o'clock p.m.; Tuesday, ditto; Wednesday, ditto. On Thursday the Christmas vacation commences, and terminates on the 3rd Jan.

WHERE articles expire between the 9th April and 22nd May 1877, candidates may be examined on the 24th and 25th April 1877; and if between the 21st May and 2nd Nov. 1877, may be examined on the 19th and 20th June 1877. Or, of course, at any subsequent examination.

In case of the death of a principal during articles, fresh articles should always be entered into without loss of time. The time which elapses between the day of the death of the principal and the day of the date of fresh articles being entered into, does not count, so that the further articles must be for a time sufficient to make up for this loss of service, as well as for the unexpired term of the original articles of clerkship.

ARTICLES of clerkship, or assignments of articles of clerkship, dated on any day during December must be enrolled and registered at the Petty Bag Office on or before the same days in the month of June next, and when articles or assignments are required to be, and are, enrolled and registered on any day during the month of December, they must be produced and entered at the Law Institution or before the same day of the month of March next. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 8 and 9, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 7. Failure to comply with these statutory requirements often entails a loss of time upon article students.

THE next preliminary examination will be held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, and in various provincial towns on the 21st and 22nd of Feb. in the ensuing year. The next Intermediate Examination will be held on the 18th Jan. 1877.

AN examination certificate is only available for admission on the roll of the Supreme Court within six months from its date, and must otherwise be specially enlarged by an order of the Master of the Rolls, which should be applied for at the Petty Bag Office.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATIONS

BEFORE ENTERING INTO ARTICLES OF CLERKSHIP TO SOLICITORS.

Pursuant to the Judges' Orders, the Preliminary Examination in General Knowledge will take place on Wednesday the 16th, and Thursday the 17th February, 1877, and will comprise—

1. Reading aloud a passage from some English Author.
2. Writing from dictation.
3. Writing a short English composition.
4. Arithmetic.—The first four rules, simple and compound; the rule of three; and decimal and vulgar fractions.
5. History of England, and geography of Europe and of the British Isles.
6. Latin.—Elementary.
7. 1. Latin. 2. Greek, Ancient. 3. French. 4. German. 5. Spanish. 6. Italian.

The Special Examiners have selected the following books, in which candidates will be examined in the subjects numbered 7 at the Examination on the 16th and 17th May, 1877:—

- In Latin—Cicero, De Amicitia; or, Virgil, Æneid, Book IX.
- In Greek—Xenophon, Memorabilia, Books I. and II.
- In French—Lesage, Gil Blas de Santillane, liv. I., II., and III.; or, Molière, Le Misanthrope.
- In German—Schiller, Abfall der versinigten Niederlande, Books I. and II.; or, Goethe, Hermann and Dorothea.
- In Spanish—Cervantes, Don Quixote, cap. xv. to xxx. both inclusive; or, Moratin, El Si de las Niñas.
- In Italian—Manzoni's I Promessi Sposi, cap. i. to viii. both inclusive; or Tasso's Gerusalemme, 4, 5, and 6 cantos; and Volpe's Eton Italian Grammar.

With reference to the subjects numbered 7, each candidate will be ~~examined~~ in two languages, according to his ~~own~~ <sup>own</sup> tastes will have the choice of either of the above-mentioned works.

The Examinations will be held at the Incorporated Law Society's Hall, Chancery Lane, London, and at some of the following Towns:—Birmingham, Brighton, Bristol, Cambridge, Cardiff, Carlisle, Carmarthen, Chester, Durham, Exeter, Lancaster, Leeds, Lincoln, Liverpool, Maidstone, Manchester, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Oxford, Plymouth, Salisbury, Shrewsbury, Swansea, Worcester, York.

Candidates are required by the Judges' Orders to give one calendar month's notice to the Incorporated Law Society, before the day appointed for the Examination, of the languages in which they propose to be examined, the place at which they wish to be examined, and their age and places of education. All notices should be addressed to the Secretary of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, W.C.

Examination days for 1877—Wednesday 21st and Thursday 22nd February; Wednesday 16th and Thursday 17th May; Wednesday 11th and Thursday 12th July; Wednesday 24th and Thursday 25th October.

FORM OF NOTICE.

Preliminary Examination.

Notice is hereby given, that I, <sup>aged</sup> ~~aged~~ <sup>who</sup> ~~who~~ <sup>was</sup> ~~was~~ <sup>educated at</sup> ~~educated at~~ <sup>intends on the 16th and 17th days of May next, to present himself for Examination at</sup> ~~at~~ <sup>previous to entering into Articles of Clerkship, and that he proposes to be examined in the</sup> ~~and~~ <sup>languages.</sup>

Dated the ~~day of~~ <sup>day of</sup> 187 ~~7~~.

[Signature of Candidate.]

Present address:

Christian and surname, and the address at which letters will reach the applicant must be inserted in the notice.

BIRMINGHAM LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

ON Tuesday evening last a very instructive lecture was delivered to the members of the above society by J. Loxdale Warren, Esq., barrister-at-law, on the "Elements of Criminal Law," comprising chiefly larceny, embezzlement, and obtaining goods or money under false pretences. The lecturer was listened to with marked attention, and a hearty vote of thanks concluded the evening.

HULL LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

THE usual weekly meeting of this society was held on Tuesday last. Mr. H. V. Scott, solicitor, took the chair. The subject discussed was the following: "A devise is made to the use of A., a bachelor, for life, and after his decease to the use of his eldest son for life, and after the decease of both of them, to the use of the eldest son of that son, if born in the lifetime of A., in fee. Is this last limitation valid and effectual to vest the fee in the grandson, born in the lifetime of the grandfather, subject to the life estates of the father and son?" The affirmative was argued by Mr. Booth, and the negative by Messrs. Lambert and Bell. The chairman having summed up, the meeting decided the point in the negative by a majority of three.

MANCHESTER LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

THE third ordinary meeting of the above society was held on Tuesday evening last, at the Law Library, Cross-street Chambers, Harrison Falkner Blair, Esq., B.A., barrister-at-law, occupied the chair. The subject for discussion was as follows: "If a person is bound over by a judge to prosecute another person for a misdemeanour, can the latter maintain an action for malicious prosecution if at the trial he is acquitted?" Fitzjohn v. McKinder, Ex. 30 L. J. 257, C. P.; Dubois v. Keats, 11 Ad. & E. 329; 9 L. J. N. S. 66, Q. B.; Revis v. Smith, 18 Com. B. Rep. 126; Moravia v. Sloper, Willes 34.

The minutes of the previous meeting having been read and confirmed, Mr. Lawson, in the absence of Mr. Cavins opened the discussion. He based his arguments on the broad legal maxim, "There is no wrong without a remedy," and generalising from that, and on the authority of Fitzjohn v. McKinder, he contended that an action for malicious prosecution was maintainable, notwithstanding that the judge had bound the defendant over to prosecute. The secretary (Mr. Philip Casper) in the absence of Mr. Turnbull, B.A., continued the discussion in the negative, relying upon the fact that the judge would not have ordered the prosecution if there had not been, in his opinion, reasonable and probable cause for instituting such proceedings, the absence of which was requisite to be proved in order to support the action in question. Mr. Watte, in the absence of Mr. Samuels supported the affirmative, relying on Dubois v. Keats, as directly in support of his contention.

Mr. Millar followed in the negative, contending that a prosecutor was in the position of, if not in fact, an officer of the court, and he could only withdraw from the case at his peril, and at the cost of estreating his recognisance, which would compel him to do.

Mr. Napier followed in the affirmative, relying on the decision in Fitzjohn v. McKinder and Dubois v. Keats.

Mr. Hardman, in the place of Mr. Simpson, quoted Brown v. Stradling (5 L. J. C.P.) in favour of a negative view of the case.

Mr. Hislop, in the affirmative, and Messrs. Ellis, Nadin, and Lawson, in the negative, successively addressed the meeting, and Mr. Lawson having replied, the chairman proceeded to sum up the arguments which had been laid before the meeting. He explained that by reason of the ambiguity of the question, it was capable of implying three sets of cases, the last of which, in that represented by the decision in Fitzjohn v. McKinder, would be the one upon which, he was of opinion the votes of the meeting ought to be taken. In consequence thereof, and on the suggestion of the learned chairman, the question modified in the following manner: "If a person bound over by a judge to prosecute does so, malice and without reasonable and probable cause so prosecute another person for a misdemeanor can the latter maintain an action for malicious prosecution, if at the trial he is acquitted?" In this form the question was carried in the affirmative, nemine dissentiente.

A vote of thanks to the chairman concluded the proceedings.

The following gentlemen were present: Messrs. Williams, Hampson, Etheridge, Simpson, Ellis, Millar, Hardman, Sykes, Napier, Wilde, Watts, Lawson, Nadin, Atkins, Shaw, Flower, Hill, W. Slater, A. Walsby friend, and the secretary.

PLYMOUTH, STONEHOUSE, AND DEWPORT LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

A SPECIAL meeting of this society was held at Athenaeum, Plymouth, on Friday week, for further consideration of the proposed new rules and also to receive the report of the revising committee as to the subscriptions of members. At the reading and final settlement of each rule was resolved that a draft of the new rules should lie on the table of the Plymouth Law Library one month before being printed.

UNITED LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held on Wednesday, 13th Dec., 1876, at Clements' Hall, Strand, Mr. J. S. Rubinstein in the chair. The debate, viz., "That the Conduct of Lord Russell in relation to the Eastern Question and the Censure of all Englishmen," was vigorously opened by Mr. W. C. Owen. The great popularity of this question gave rise to considerable discussion of opinion, and ultimately the majority of members were in favour of the negative.

The next meeting is the annual meeting of the society, at which the respective officers will send their several reports, and the officers of the ensuing year will be elected.

WORCESTER LEGAL DEBATING CLUB.

THE above is the name of a club that has recently been established at Worcester for the purpose of discussing solely moot points of law. The club is confined to barristers and solicitors and persons entitled to be admitted as such. The meetings are held on alternate Wednesday evenings, during the winter season. At a meeting held on the 7th ult., in the Law Library, the following solicitors were appointed officers of the club: Committee—Mr. E. A. Davis, Mr. G. Taylor, Mr. F. Ronald Jeffery, and Mr. S. Spofforth; hon. sec., Mr. Spofforth. The debate took place on Wednesday evening 22nd ult., at the Law Library. E. A. Davis, solicitor, in the chair. The subject discussed was as follows: "A, since the Wills Act, devises B., 'all my cottage and garden, in the occupation of C.,' and afterwards erects another cottage part of the garden and dies without issue, leaving C. in occupation of the old cottage and such part of the garden as remains upon. Has B. a valid claim to the new cottage?" Mr. S. G. N. Spofforth opened the debate in the affirmative, and Mr. G. S. Blakeway argued the negative, and after an interesting debate the chairman summed up at considerable length the negative was carried by a large majority.

Another meeting of the club was held at the Law Library on the 6th inst., G. E. M. Esq., solicitor, in the chair. The question discussed was as follows: "A testator appoints trustees; can either of the trustees be appointed a manager, at a remuneration, of a business on by the trustees for the benefit of a cestui que trust? The will is silent as to any such appointment. Mr. Henry Corbett opened the debate in the affirmative, and referred to a great number of cases, and was followed by Mr. Jeffery, son, Mr. Blakeway, Mr. Spofforth, and Auchamp; Mr. E. A. Davis supported the case, and relied on the case of Forster v. (4 De G. J. & S. 452), and numerous other support, and was followed by Mr. H. St. John and Mr. H. E. Macdonald, and after a debate the chairman reviewed the cases read during the debate, and impartially summed up the arguments. The affirmative was by a majority of 3.

QUESTIONS.

OFFICES.—Can you inform me where I can find a account of the different businesses which are on in the public legal offices in Chancery-lane, the transactions before taxing masters?

STUDENT.

YEARS' ARTICLES IN THE COUNTRY.—SERVICE ON DON AGENTS AND BARRISTERS.—Is it understood, if so, upon what authority, that a clerk for five years in the country may serve one in the London agent and also one year with a barrister (if the opportunities be fully taken) only three years' service with the solicitor to be required? And in case of service with London agent one year, may such year be taken at any time, all at once, but in separate months or any portion to exceed one year? If so inclined? If any act of service both with London agent and barrister any authority on the subject, be within the gift of any subscriber, I shall be greatly obliged to you on the subject.

W. will find your enquiries fully answered by a letter to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 6, which allows one service with a practising barrister, and in thereto one year with the London agent.]

EXAMINATION.—I was articled on Nov. 1, 1872, years. When can I first present myself for the examination? Will you also inform me in which of the year the examinations are held?

E. H.

On 19th and 20th of June next. (3) In January, 1876, and November. (4) As articulated on the 23rd June, 1873, for five years; me the earliest time at which I can present or the Final Examination? I conclude I can go principal's London agents any time after 23rd 77. JOHN. CHAWWALL. June 1876. (3) You can go at any time, for one

MERCANTILE LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

IGN LOAN—SCRIP—NEGOTIABILITY—FIDE HOLDER FOR VALUE.—A foreign agent, being about to raise a loan in England, through their agents, scrip, for as appeared on the face of the document, was to receive a bond upon the payment of the whole of the instalments. By the of merchants such scrip was treated as a bill, and transferable by mere delivery. (firming the judgment of the court below), scrip could not be distinguished from the and was a negotiable instrument, transferable by delivery to a bona fide holder for value: in v. Roberts and others, 35 L. T. Rep. 9. H. of L.)

OWNER AND MASTER—REASONABLE OF DISMISSAL.—The master of a ship, in consequence of express stipulation in the contract of hiring, is entitled to reasonable notice of dismissal from the shipowner: (Green v. Wright, Rep. N.S. 339. C. P. Div.)

SHIP'S LIEN—CHEQUE—CONSIDERATION—DRAFT—STAMP ACT.—A banker's in all securities deposited with him by a merchant, and received by him bona fide, is not bound by any equities which may exist between the merchant and a third party. The appellant drew from L. drafts on Cadix. The day the purchase-money was payable L. drew with the respondents, his bankers, a cheque which was largely indebted, a document dated the day, requesting the appellant to pay the purchase-money to the respondents. The appellant paid the amount by cheque, the same day L. stopped payment, and the day he refused to pay the cheque. The drafts were subsequently dishonoured. In an action on the cheque, Held (1) that there was a good consideration between L. and the appellant at the time the cheque was given, which could not be defeated by subsequent events; (2) that the sum due with them amounted in law to a good consideration for the cheque; (3) that the document was not a draft payable at a future time but the meaning of the Stamp Act, and that the respondents were entitled to judgment of the court below affirmed: Currie and others, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 10. L.)

WELL, Esq., Surgeon, Bridport, Dorsetshire.—"I consider BURNER'S NERVINE a specific for a. Very severe cases under my care have instantaneous and permanent relief. I therefore recommend its use to the Profession and the Public as a relief to all who suffer from toothache."—[Anon.]

MARITIME LAW.

THE WRECK COMMISSIONER.

THE following is the official report of the observations of the Wreck Commissioner as to procedure, in his judgment in the matter of the collision between the Dinorah and Dorunda given at Westminster on Oct. 30:—

The COMMISSIONER.—As this is the first case which has come before me, it may be well that I should state the principles upon which, as it appears to me, these inquiries should be conducted. As I had anticipated, many questions had been raised, and objections taken, upon which the Court has, in the course of the proceedings, expressed its opinion; but it may be advisable for the guidance of practitioners in future cases that I should state the views which, after a careful consideration of the Acts and the rules, and after hearing the arguments of counsel thereon, I entertain upon the more important of the questions which have been raised.

An impression seems to prevail that these inquiries must be regarded as in the nature of a criminal proceeding, and that they must consequently be governed by the rules which prevail in such cases. I cannot, however, concur in that opinion. The Legislature has, in the exercise of its discretion, thought proper to enact that no person shall be allowed to navigate certain descriptions of vessels without having obtained a certificate which would show that he is qualified to perform the duties which he undertakes. It has declared, and in my opinion with very good reason, that it will not allow British ships and the lives and property on board, to be risked without obtaining some security that the person who has charge of the ship is competent to navigate her.

With this view it has provided means by which officers may be examined as to their fitness to take charge of certain classes of ships; and in the event of their being found competent, the Board of Trade is authorised to give them certificates enabling them to serve as master or as mate on board these vessels. But the Legislature has not stopped here; it has gone on to say that, when a shipping casualty has occurred the Board of Trade may, if it thinks fit, order a formal investigation to inquire into the circumstances of the case, and if it appears to the court before which the investigation is held that the conduct of any officer possessing a certificate of competency is likely to be called in question, it may require him to surrender it, and the court is to hold the certificate until the termination of the inquiry, and it may then either return it to him, or may, if it thinks fit, suspend or even cancel it.

What it appears to me the Legislature has done, is this: in the interests of the public, and for the greater security of life and property at sea, it has required that every ship of a certain character or description shall be navigated by an officer who has shown that he is qualified to undertake the duty, and as evidence of his qualification that he has obtained a certificate of competency. If whilst that officer is in command of a ship, the ship and the lives of those on board are placed in peril, it has said that his conduct shall be inquired into, and as a preliminary step to that inquiry, that he shall surrender his certificate subject to its being returned to him or not, according as he may be able to give a good account or otherwise of his conduct. The mere fact that the vessel of which he was in charge and the lives of those on board were exposed to peril is sufficient, in my opinion, to require him to show how the accident happened, and whether he ought or ought not to be allowed to retain his certificate, whether in fact he ought or ought not to be continued in the possession of a power which will enable him to expose other ships and other lives to a like peril.

This being the view which the Court takes of these inquiries, I conceive that the position of the Board of Trade is not that of a public prosecutor; at all events in the inception of the proceedings, but rather that of an inquirer in the public interest into the circumstances attending the casualty. It therefore appeared to me that the most convenient course to adopt would be that the Board of Trade should first, in accordance with sect. 14 of the General Rules, produce all the witnesses who were on board at the happening of the casualty, and who could give material evidence in regard thereto, and put such questions to them as might lead to elicit the fullest information as to the circumstances. Counsel for the officers or others whose conduct was being inquired into might then put any questions which he thought necessary to explain the conduct of his clients. The witnesses would then, where there were, as in the present case, conflicting interests, be subjected to cross-examination by the opposing counsel; and, lastly, the Board of Trade would be entitled to re-examine.

The course then would be this: the Board of Trade would first examine generally to elicit the facts. Then there would be an examination of the witnesses by the counsel representing them on the inquiry, and which may be regarded rather as an examination-in-chief. Then a cross-examination by the opposing counsel. And lastly, a re-examination by the Board of Trade. This appeared to me at the time to be the clear and obvious intention of the rules, and I have no reason to think, on more mature consideration, that that view was not well founded.

Objection was indeed taken to the mode in which the examination of the witnesses was conducted by the Board of Trade. It was said that the officers were on their trial, and that the Board of Trade must be regarded as the prosecutors, and that consequently they had no right to put questions to witnesses whom they had themselves produced, which could not be allowed to be put by counsel in an examination-in-chief. But from the view which I have taken of the nature of these proceedings, and of the position of the Board of Trade therein, I think that it would not be right or proper so to limit the action of the Board of Trade. It is true that in the present case there are opposing interests and an opposing counsel, so that the witnesses would of necessity be exposed to cross-examination, but in the great majority of cases which will come before the court the only parties will be the Board of Trade and the incriminated parties, and if the Board of Trade were not allowed to put any questions but such as would be allowed in examination-in-chief, the witnesses would go away without being cross-examined at all, and the whole end and object of the inquiry would be defeated. I am, therefore, of opinion that the Board of Trade is at liberty to put all such questions as are calculated to elicit the truth, even to the extent of cross-examining the witnesses, with a view to ascertain whether their statements were or were not true.

Complaints were made in the course of the proceedings of the mode in which the Board of Trade had conducted the inquiry. It was said that the Board of Trade had pressed the case with unnecessary harshness against an officer of one of the vessels, and had shown an undue anxiety to obtain a conviction, as it was called. I am bound, however, in justice to the Board of Trade, and to the eminent counsel who has represented them on the present occasion, to say that not one question, so far as I am aware, was put to any of the witnesses which was not fully justified by the circumstances, and that neither in the examination of the witnesses nor in the conduct of the case were the proper limits ever exceeded.

One other point requires to be noticed. By sub-sect. 6 of sect. 23 of the Merchant Shipping Act of 1862 it is provided that "No certificate shall be cancelled or suspended under this section unless a copy of the report or a statement of the case upon which the investigation is ordered has been furnished to the owner of the certificate before the commencement of the investigation."

The object of the Legislature seems to have been to provide that before an inquiry was held which might result in the suspension or cancellation of an officer's certificate, the officer should have notice that an inquiry was to be held, as well as some intimation of the circumstances out of which the inquiry had arisen. Let us see, then, whether the statement which it seems has been served upon the defendant in this case is such a report or statement as the Act seems to contemplate. First, then, we have an order purporting to be signed by an assistant secretary to the Board of Trade and addressed to the solicitor, which is in these words, "Will you be good enough to institute an inquiry in this case upon the statement contained in the annexed report." I must take it then that this inquiry has been ordered upon the statement which is annexed to this order. That statement is in these words: "I have to report that the above named vessel, the Dinorah, left the Tyne for Brindisi on the 3rd July 1876, with a crew of thirteen hands all told, and about 618 tons of coals. Her draught of water at the time of leaving the port being (blank). On Thursday, the 27th of July, at 1 a.m. the weather being fine, the wind blowing moderately from the north-east with the sea (blank), the course being east-south-east, the vessel being under plain sail and making about four knots, she was run into and sunk by a screw steamer, the Dorunda, of Glasgow, ten men of the Dinorah being drowned."

Now I am at a loss to conceive why this is not to be considered as a sufficient statement of the case upon which the inquiry was ordered. The statement says that ten persons have lost their lives as the result of the collision, and surely that alone is a sufficient reason for the inquiry. If I thought that any injustice was likely to be done to the defendant, or to any of the persons implicated, by the withholding of any documents to which they ought to have been furnished I could understand the objection, but no such ground is even alleged. If, indeed, the meaning of the objection is that the parties desire to see all the documents which the Board of Trade may happen to have in their possession, and which may prosibly have influenced their minds in coming to the conclusion to which they have, I can only say that such a contention appears to me to be quite untenable. I must hold that the document which it is proved was served upon the defendant in this case before the commencement of the inquiry, is a copy of the report or statement of the case referred to in the Act, and on which the investigation in this case has been ordered.

COUNTY COURTS.

IPSWICH COUNTY COURT.

Oct. 21 and Nov. 18.

(Before JOHN WORLEDGE, Esq., Judge.)

Ex parte ARCHER; Re HARRIS.

Bankruptcy—Bill of sale—Present and future advances—Registration of contemporaneous agreement—Waiver of demand—Interrupted possession.

THIS was a claim by Archer, trustee under the Bankruptcy Act, to the proceeds of sale of debtor's property.

The claimant, as against the trustee, was F. M. Smith, as trustee for Messrs. Huddleston, Greene and Co., bankers of Bury St. Edmunds, who claimed under a bill of sale.

Nunn, a bailiff, was put in possession under the bill of sale early on the morning of the 8th June.

The same day at 1 p.m., the liquidation petition was filed.

Pollard appeared for Mr. Archer.

Blofeld, as counsel for Smith.

Jackman for other parties interested.

The facts of the case and points of law raised will appear from the judgment, which, after stating the facts, proceeded as follows:

To the claim of F. M. Smith, Mr. Pollard, on behalf of the trustee, raised several objections which I shall now proceed to consider. Mr. Pollard's main objection was, that the execution by Harris of the bill of sale was per se an act of bankruptcy, and he cited Graham v. Chapman (2 J. B. 85), and Lacon v. Liffen (32 L. J., N. S., 5, Ch.; 7 L. T. Rep. N. S. 411, 774). The bill of sale, in the present case, undoubtedly comprised the whole of the debtor's property, at the date of it, but the consideration for it was an antecedent debt of £100, a contemporaneous advance of £150 and future advances, and Harris actually had, in pursuance of its provisions, a further advance of £50, and goods to the amount of £31 1s. 3d., making in all a sum of £231 1s. 3d., and the whole of the effects sold for only £457 11s., and of that only £9 or £10 worth was acquired after the date of the bill of sale. With the £150 and £50 Harris paid off some of his more pressing creditors, and it did not appear that he bought goods of anyone else after the date of the bill of sale, except of Huddleston, Greene, and Co. Now, as to Lacon v. Liffen (ubi sup.), it does not appear that any future advances were made in that case, and so there really was not in that case any consideration for the bill of sale beyond the past debt. In the present case there was a present advance of £150, and a further advance of £50; and the authority of Graham v. Chapman has been very much shaken, and the case itself, I may say, virtually overruled by a long series of more modern cases, commencing with Pennel v. Reynolds (11 C. B., N. S. 716), followed by Mercer v. Peterson (L. Rep. 3 Ex. 104; 18 L. T. Rep. N. S. 30), and Lomas v. Buxton (L. Rep. 6 C. P. 107; 24 L. T. Rep. N. S. 137), and ending with Ex parte King; Re King (L. Rep. 2 Ch. D. 256), and Ex parte Ellis; Re Ellis (L. Rep. 2 Ch. D. 797; 34 L. T. Rep. N. S. 705). In Ex parte King, Mellish, L. J., says, at the commencement of his judgment: "I should be sorry to do anything to make the law on this subject doubtful; but the numerous cases on the subject have settled the law, the only difficulty is in the application of it. An assignment of all a debtor's property for a past debt is an act of bankruptcy, a merely nominal exception will not prevent this, but the exception of a substantial part will prevent it. Whether an exception is substantial must depend on the circumstances of the case. If the assignment includes all the property, and is made in consideration of a past debt, and of a further advance made at the time, the further advance if substantial has the same effect as a substantial exception out of the property;" and in Ex parte Ellis the same eminent judge says: "The result of the authorities is that when a debtor assigns his whole property as a security for a past debt only, it is an act of bankruptcy whatever the motives of the parties may have been. If there is also a further advance it is not a question whether the further advance is great or small, but whether there was a bona fide intention of carrying on the business." Now, in the present case, I find ~~no~~ fact upon the evidence that the £150 and £50 were substantial advances, and were for the purpose of enabling Harris, the debtor, to continue carrying on his business as an innkeeper. I therefore decide upon the authority of the more recent cases that the execution of the bill of sale was not an act of bankruptcy. The next point made by Mr. Pollard was that the agreement of even date with the bill of sale ought to have been registered as well as the bill of sale itself, and he quoted Ex parte Collins, Re Lees (31 L. T. Rep. N. S. 622); and I really have to complain that that case should have been cited, for Bacon's, C. J., decision in that case was reversed on appeal by the Lords Justices, as will be seen on reference to 32 L. T. Rep. N. S. 106 (L. Rep. 10 Ch. App. 267); and the decision in that case is really a strong authority against Mr. Pollard's contention. The question I have to decide is whether the agreement in question is either a defeasance condition, or declaration of trust within the meaning of the Bills of Sale Act 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 36); and in deciding this question I adopt the language of James, L. J., in Ex parte Collins (ubi sup.): "The agreement at even date with the bill of sale is certainly not a defeasance, nor is it a declaration of trust. Is it then a condition either in the ordinary or technical meaning of the word? Conditions may be either precedent, subsequent, or inherent. A condition is precedent when, unless it is complied with, the estate does not arise. It is subsequent where, if it is broken, the estate is defeated; it is inherent where the estate is qualified, restrained, or charged by it. In every case it denotes something which prejudicially affects the interest of the donee." Now, this agreement to take all wine and spirits of Huddleston and Co., so long as anything was due under the bill of sale, contains nothing that would either prevent the vesting of or defeat the interest given by the bill of sale, or that in any way restricts, qualifies, or charges such interest, but it rather gives an additional benefit to Smith and his partners, viz., Harris's whole custom for wine and spirits, for a certain time. I am of opinion, therefore, that the agreement of even date did not require registration. Next Mr. Pollard contended that, according to the bill of sale to be valid and duly registered, the property comprised in it passed to the trustee as being at the commencement of the liquidation in the possession order or disposition of the debtor with the consent of the true owner. Now I take it that the filing of the petition must be considered as the commencement of the liquidation, and that was filed at 1 p.m. on the 8th June last, but Nunn was actually in possession before 11 a.m. on the same day, and continued in possession till the petition was filed. But Mr. Pollard's argument was that Nunn's possession was illegal, and that Mr. Smith could not rely upon such possession as taking the property out of the possession, order, and disposition, of the debtor, and he relied upon these cases: (Toms v. Wilson, 7 L. T. Rep. N. S. 421; 8 L. T. Rep. N. S. 799; 32 L. J., N. S., 33, Q. B.; Brightley v. Norton, 7 L. T. Rep. N. S. 422; 32 L. J., N. S., 38, Q. B.; Ex parte Trevor; re Burghardt, L. Rep. 1 Ch. Div. 297; 33 L. T. Rep. N. S. 756). Before, however, considering these cases, I will state what I find to be the facts of the case as to the taking possession by Nunn. The evidence upon the point was no doubt conflicting, but I find, as facts, that Payne, acting on behalf of Smith, about 9 a.m. on the 8th June, showed Harris the written demand for the money signed by Smith, and either then, or before Nunn took possession, produced to Harris his authority to receive the money; that Payne gave Harris an hour to find the money, and that Harris said when he returned about 10.30 a.m., that it was all useless his trying to find a friend, or words to that effect, and Harris himself admitted that he might have said on his return at 10.30 a.m., "It is no use waiting any longer, I cannot raise the money," and that after, and not before that, Nunn, by Payne's direction, took possession under the bill of sale. Now, the cases Toms v. Wilson and Brightley v. Norton (ubi sup.), decide that under a bill of sale containing a clause authorising the mortgagee to enter and seize the property upon default of payment on demand, the mortgagee must be allowed a reasonable time after the demand to raise the money, and that he cannot legally seize at once, or after the lapse of so short a time as half an hour; and in Ex parte Trevor, re Burghardt (ubi sup.), Bacon, C. J., intimated his opinion to be, though he decided the case on quite a different ground, that in such a case the mortgagee cannot legally seize on the same day as he makes the demand. But the bill of sale in the present case differs in one very material particular from the bill of sale that were in question in the three cases cited. The bill of sale before the court contains no express provision that till default made the mortgagee should remain in possession, therefore it may be questionable whether Harris had any right to remain in possession at all; but I pass that over, and decide the question upon the point which was raised during the argument in banco of Toms v. Wilson (ubi sup.), but not in the original trial, viz., that in that case there been a waiver by the plaintiff of any right further time, and Wightman, J., who tried the case at the assizes, said (p. 37), "I may say that if it had been suggested at the trial that there had been a waiver by the plaintiff of his right to time, I should have left that question to the jury," and in the present case I find that Harris, upon his return about 10.30 a.m., on the 8th June, waived any right to further time, and that consequently this taking possession after such waiver was perfectly legal, and not taking possession being at eleven a.m., the time was certainly not at one p.m. on the 8th June in the possession, order, or disposition of the debtor, with the consent of the owner, and his objection fails. The next point raised was by Nunn's absence from the premises for ten minutes, when he went to the post, Mr. Smith possession was abandoned, and his right of property gone, and Ex parte McDonald, re Beveridge (24 L. T. Rep. N. S. 475) was cited. In that case McDonald, the holder of a duly registered bill of sale from Beveridge, took possession of his goods, and Beveridge shortly afterwards his petition under sect. 125 of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, and McDonald was appointed receiver. A few days afterwards McDonald withdrew from man who held possession under the bill of sale, considering that his own possession as receiver would sufficiently protect his rights under the bill of sale. A trustee was subsequently appointed and entered and took possession of the goods comprised in the bill of sale, upon, upon the trustee's refusal to pay an amount realised by the sale to McDonald, latter commenced an action against him, thereupon, upon the application of the trustee the judge of the Newcastle County Court granted an injunction restraining McDonald from carrying out that action. McDonald appealed, Bacon, C. J., affirmed the County Court's decision, and, therefore, the case as it proves that McDonald was wrong in bringing an action. It is true that in the course of his judgment the Chief Judge mentioned that he withdrew from possession, but nothing to prevent these goods from being part of the debtor's general estate. I suppose the Chief Judge considered that by purposely doing possession McDonald had given up his right altogether; but the real ground of the decision appears, I think, from the words of the judgment, when the Chief Judge said that McDonald should have commenced proceedings in the Bankruptcy Court at Newcastle under sect. 72 of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, as the intention of the Legislature that there should be only one tribunal exercising sole and exclusive jurisdiction in bankruptcy; and further in the present case, Nunn was not within Mr. Smith, and I have no doubt whatever Nunn did not go out with the intention of doing possession, but that he meant to do so, and that Archer, the trustee, knew that he had only gone to the post, and would return when he did return, I think he was in possession; and further, the goods having been upon the seizure, by the express terms of the bill of sale, Mr. Smith's property absolutely, I see how by Nunn's ten minutes' absence the property in the goods was transferred to the trustee, and the case Ex parte Allen, re Middleton (L. 11 Eq. 209), shows that taking possession is necessary to perfect a mortgagee's title under a bill of sale, except for the purpose of enforcing the order and disposition clause of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, and as the above clause never applied in the present case, on these grounds, therefore, my judgment is in favour of Smith as against the trustee.

LEEDS COUNTY COURT.

(Before Mr. Serjt. TINDAL ATKINSON, J.)
Monday, Dec. 4.

WHEELER AND WILSON v. HINCHEL
Trover—Order and disposition clause—Lien—Notoriety of custom.

HIS HONOUR, in delivering judgment in this case said:—The plaintiffs in this case are machine manufacturers, and they sue the defendant, an auctioneer, for the conversion of their machines. It was proved at the trial that they are in the practice of letting out sewing machines, with an option to the hirer the instalments are duly paid to become the property of the chattel. In the month of December a written agreement was entered into between plaintiffs and one George Thompson, a car-gilder, which recited that he had hired from a machine of the value of £3, upon the terms £1 was to be paid at once as a premium and a rental of 10s. 6d. a month, Thompson became, by the payment of the nominal sum, the owner of the machine. Thompson v by the plaintiffs to pay the monthly hire regularly, and at the time of his bankruptcy—il of the present year he was considerably rear for the hire. The trustee of the bankrupt's estate, finding the machine among the bankrupt's furniture, employed the defendant to remove it, and the sum it realised amounted to £1. 6d. For this sale the plaintiffs have brought the present action of trover on the ground that no property in the machine ever passed to the bankrupt, and that at the time of the bankruptcy it was not in his order or disposition with the consent or permission of the plaintiffs. It was admitted at the trial by Mr. Pullan, the bankrupt's solicitor, that there was a well-known established custom of lending these machines on hire, but he contended that the plaintiffs, by enforcing the monthly payments for the machine, and not exercising their right, under the custom, of resuming possession, had been guilty of negligence; and that, notwithstanding the notoriety of this custom, they had by that means made the machine part of the bankrupt's assets. I am of opinion that this contention cannot be supported. General knowledge of the world of the custom of letting out these machines to hire cannot be imputed to the forbearance to press for the return of the machine, and which was only known to the lender and the borrower. This is not a case in which the goods were the property of the bankrupt, but he had subsequently sold to a vendee, who allowed him, up to the time of his bankruptcy, to remain in possession. Such cases are the mischief which the order and disposition clause was enacted to prevent. In such cases there is nothing to qualify the apparent ownership of the goods to deal with as his own, and the reputed ownership of him with the false credit which enables a solvent debtor to obtain the goods of creditors the eve of his bankruptcy. The language of Chief Judge Bacon in the case of Re Emerle Hawkins (41 L. J. 20, Bank.) seems equally applicable to the present case. There the lender had hired household furniture under a hire agreement by which he was to pay a yearly rent for the use of it, and at the time of the bankruptcy the furniture remained in his possession in his apparently uncontrolled possession. In giving judgment the learned Chief Judge said: "the effect of the order and disposition clause was not to be strained. In cases where the property had once belonged to the bankrupt and had been transferred to another person, was allowed to remain in the ostensible possession of the bankrupt, the statute applied. Here was another class of cases in which the property in the apparent possession of the bankrupt was considered not to be in his order and disposition, and this was the law where there was some trade under which the goods of one were notoriously allowed to continue in the possession of another." It appears to me that this is the effect of this judgment, and that the single change of the word "sewing machine" substituted for that of "furniture," is almost identical with those of the present case, and, therefore, there being no fraud or negligence on the part of the plaintiffs, I think the machine was not at the time of the bankrupt's bankruptcy in his order and disposition of a reputed owner by the consent or permission of the plaintiffs, and that there must be a verdict for the plaintiffs for the amount realised by the sale, of £1 2s. 6d., with costs.

Mr. Barrister, for the plaintiffs.
Mr. Solicitor, for the defendant.

NEWBURY COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Nov. 16.

(Before H. J. STONOR, Esq.)

PERSON v. THE GREAT WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY.

Liability of railway companies as carriers—Special contract—"Wilful misconduct"—17 &amp; 18 Vict. c. 31, s. 7.

Verdict was to-day given in this case, which was heard before his Honour at the last sitting of court.

Mr. Lucas, solicitor, appeared for the plaintiff—furniture van proprietor, upholsterer, &amp;c., Brook-street.

B. Goodwin, solicitor, for the defendants.

His Honour delivered judgment as follows:—In this case the defendants verbally agreed with the plaintiff to carry an empty furniture van from Newbury to Huddersfield, and to carry it back to Newbury loaded with furniture at a reduced rate "at the owner's risk." The plaintiff also gave a consignment note for the conveyance of the van from Newbury to Huddersfield as follows:—

To the Great Western Railway Company, Newbury Station to Huddersfield, 11th July 1876. To receive and forward the undermentioned goods to be carried at the reduced rate, below the company's ordinary rate, in consideration whereof I undertake to receive the Great Western Railway Company, and all other companies over whose lines the goods may pass, from all liability in case of damage or delay, except upon proof that such loss, detention, or injury arose from wilful misconduct on the part of the company's servants. I also agree to the conditions and regulations on the back of this note.

Signature of sender or his representative,
JOSEPH HORSKOT,
Address—Newbury.

The goods undermentioned were "a furniture van." The plaintiff signed no note in respect of the return journey from Huddersfield to Newbury. The van went to Huddersfield safely, and was there loaded and returned to Newbury, but on its arrival at Newbury it was found that what is termed the carriage of the van had been broken and torn away from the van, in consequence of the van having been improperly fastened to the truck by cord attached to the carriage of the van and to the buffers of the trucks in a manner which would render the accident inevitable. The expense of the necessary repairs amounted to upwards of £6, for which sum the plaintiff sued. There is no dispute as to the facts of the case, and the simple question is, whether the defendants are protected from liability for injury to the van by the agreement between them and the plaintiff. That agreement appears to have been, in the first instance, verbal as regards both the journey to Huddersfield and the return journey to Newbury, and to have been subsequently reduced into writing by the consignment note as to the journey to Huddersfield, but not as to the return journey to Newbury. The provision relieving the defendants from liability as to injury arising otherwise than from wilful misconduct contained in the consignment note, and which was chiefly relied on by the defendants' counsel, does not, I think, apply to the present case, inasmuch as that note did not refer to the return journey, and the verbal contract that the goods were to be conveyed at the owner's risk on both journeys was void as to the return journey under the 7th section of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, inasmuch as there was no writing signed by the party delivering the goods in respect of that journey as required by that section; I therefore think that the agreement between the plaintiff and the defendants does not protect the latter from liability for the injury in respect of which the former now sues. Independently of these considerations, I think the case one of great doubt and difficulty. In the first place, I doubt very much whether a condition relieving the carrier from any liability for injury arising otherwise than from wilful misconduct, as in the above consignment note, is "reasonable," as required by the 7th section of the 17 & 18 Vict. c. 31, and, if it be, I doubt whether it would protect the carriers from liability for such injury as that which has arisen in the present case, and the inclination of my opinion is that it would not. In the case of Gill v. The Manchester Railway Company (L. Rep. 8 Q. B. 196), Mr. Justice Lush observed—"It is the duty of the carrier to do what he can, by reasonable skill and care, to avoid all perils, including excepted perils. If, notwithstanding such skill and care, damage does occur from these perils, he is released from liability; but if his negligence has brought on the peril, the damages are attributable to his breach of duty, and the exception does not aid him. And in the case of Martin v. The Great Indian Peninsula Railway Company (Q. B. 3, Ex. 9), it was held that a stipulation that the defendants "accepted no responsibility" did not exempt them from liability for a loss arising wholly from their own negligence—a decision which appears to me to be almost directly in point. The cases of Robinson v. The Great Western Railway Company (19 C. B. N. S., 51), and D'Arc v. London and North-Western Railway Company (L. Rep. 9 C. P. 325), also appear to me to support the view which I have taken. The case of McCawley v. The Furness Railway Company (L. Rep. 8 Q. B. 57), at first appears to be an authority to the contrary; but on examination it will, I think, be found distinguishable from the present case at all events on the ground that it was a case of injury to a passenger and not to goods. The case of Glenister v. The Great Western Railway Company (29 L. T. Rep. N. S. 422, Q. B.), is, however, a case of injury to goods under the same special agreement as that now in question, but the circumstances of the case are different, and, I think, distinguishable. Lastly, if the defendants be not liable for the injury arising in the present case from the negligence of their servants, unless such negligence come within the terms of "wilful misconduct," employed in the consignment note, I think it doubtful whether in the present case a jury would not properly find that the acts complained of fall within those terms. In the case of McCawley v. The Furness Railway Company, Blackburn and Mellor, JJ. both expressed their inability to say what "wilful negligence" meant, whilst Lord Cranworth once said that it was only "negligence with an epithet," and I cannot see that it is much easier to define what "wilful misconduct" is. In the case of Glenister v. The Great Western Railway Company, already cited, where the terms "wilful misconduct" were under consideration, Blackburn, J. gives no definition of these terms, although he observes "that there may be many cases of wilful misconduct without malice." Having recourse to the civil law, I find that there can be no "culpa" (which I apprehend is the correct translation of "misconduct") without intelligence, and therefore will, and consequently "wilful misconduct" is only "magna culpa," or "magna negligentia," for "culpa" (misconduct) may be either from commission or omission. In other words, "wilful misconduct" is that arising from a man wilfully or recklessly neglecting to use his sense in performing a duty which he has undertaken, whereby damage is sustained by another, and against this no man can contract. (See Colquhoun's Summary of Civil Law, paragraphs 1530, 1532, 1533.) It is certainly most desirable that an authoritative interpretation should be given of these terms, which are now so frequently employed in agreements of importance, and so frequently become the subject of litigation. For the present, and in the absence of any authoritative definition of the terms, "wilful misconduct," and unless I can reject the word "wilful" as senseless through its ambiguity, I am disposed to content myself with the primary meaning affixed to the word "wilful" in modern dictionaries, viz., "following the will without yielding to reason," and I cannot say that the singularly unreasonable manner in which this van was fastened to the truck was not "wilful" within the above definition, and "misconduct" on the part of the company's servants," it, undoubtedly, was. As, however, I am of opinion that there was no special contract in writing in the present case within the 17th and 18th Vict. c. 31, sect. 7, it is unnecessary for me to decide the other difficult points arising in this case. There will be a verdict for the plaintiff with costs, and liberty to the defendants to appeal within one month by case in the usual manner.

SWANSEA COUNTY COURT.

Tuesday, Dec. 5.

(Before T. FALCONER, Esq., Judge.)

DAVIES AND OTHERS v. REES AND WIFE.

Husband and wife—Survivorship.

Glasrodine appeared for the plaintiffs;

W. R. Smith for the defendants.

His HONOUR, in giving judgment, said: In this case the sum of £200 was invested in the savings bank in the joint names of the late John Davies, who died in the year 1871 intestate, and of Ruth, his late wife, now the wife of William Rees. Letters of administration have been duly granted to Ruth Rees. The question is whether Ruth Rees was entitled on the death of her husband to the fund in the bank by survivorship on the investment in the joint names of the husband and wife. The husband and wife had lived together for twenty-five years. A claim is made by the brother and sister of the deceased husband to share in the money invested in the bank, as next of kin of the deceased. The case of Marshall v. Crutwell (44 L. J. 504, Ch.), is not adverse to the claim by survivorship of the widow. "The mere circumstance," said the Master of the Rolls, "that the name of a child or a wife is inserted on the occasion of a purchase of stock, is not sufficient to rebut a resulting trust in favour of the purchaser, if the surrounding circumstances lead to a conclusion that a trust was intended, although a purchase in the name of a wife or child, if altogether unexplained, will be deemed a gift, yet you may take surrounding circumstances into consideration, so as to say it is a trust, and not a gift. So, in the case of a stranger, you may take surrounding circumstances into consideration, so as to say that a purchase in his name is a gift and not a trust." There is no fact in the present case connected with the condition or circumstances of husband and wife from which I can infer there was a trust in the investment. The only inference which I can draw is that the benefit which was mutually enjoyed during the lives of the parties it was not contemplated should be lessened to the wife when those hands were separated which in all probability had jointly contributed to the accumulation. I, therefore, hold that the entire fund belongs to the wife by survivorship through the investment in the savings bank in the joint names of the husband and wife.

LEGAL NEWS.

WAREHAM, DORSETSHIRE.—At a meeting of the capital burgesses, held on Saturday last, the Mayor presiding, Mr. George Clavell Filliter was unanimously elected and sworn into office as town clerk, under the charter, in the room of his father, lately resigned, and who has been unanimously elected to the honorary and very MISSIONERS.—I have been an Irish for taking affidavits, both in the Common Law Courts, many years, and cost of the commissions being enough my Dublin agent was generous like the same as easy as possible, and think it hard, as well as against practice, that any English solicitor should thority (the validity of which I very on several grounds), and take upon responsibility of acting as an Irish at all, without previously making a straightforward application, where I justify, for the usual commission my other colleagues, the legally ap-commissioners, have done. I do not ny solicitor who knows of my Irish in the town in which I practise, tempt to assume or exercise such G. H.

congratulate you on your letter. c. 44 distinctly empowers English missioners for Oaths to take Irish lavits.—ED. SOLS'. DEPT.]

IN MAGISTRATES' COURTS.—For ast the advocates who practice gistrates in petty sessions at the id, have made strong represen-complaints against the clerk to retiring with the magistrates on tions for decisions. They have been The objection raised against the at if the magistrates are to be ad-points of law that may have been case, such advice ought to be , so that if incorrect the decision de on the ground of misdirection. ners, under-sheriffs, and other juries openly as to the law on the sm, and, it is contended, so ought justices. If the clerk retires to acts, he clearly has no such right, ates are the sole judges thereof. It at he has to direct them as to the are empowered to inflict; but this can r return, when they have decided the of a conviction or dismissal. Your he practice, and also those of your elp to bring about a solution of the v existing amongst us, and therefore ne may be forthcoming.

CONFERENCE.

AS RECORDERS.—At page 97 of the the 9th inst. you do me the honour my appointment (as a solicitor) to ar of the Borough. But I think it ggest to yourself that this isolated any material bearing, one way or the important question whether old or should not be appointed ex-uch offices, where they involve (not to a more or less extent, the duties on judges. I am much disposed to ere quarter sessions are held, and eals or trials of prisoners take at trained barristers should be ap- thinking of such places as Exeter; ough much smaller, has a juris- sort, and Mr. Collins, an able e recorder. I should never have ocept the recordership had I been appointed in such cases as this, re been most unwise to have done iction is under an old charter, court of record to try civil cases, of holding general sessions twice a : to try treasons, felonies, &c., and s; within the memory of living man idictions have never here been e County Court for the district of debt, &c., which do not go to erior Court; and all criminal cases t summarily disposed of by the es) are sent either to quarter e county or to the assizes, and we ppeal cases, if any, at county ns. The mayor for the year, past order, are by our charter made the justices, with a non-intromittent precludes county justices from in-our very small borough; and for s it is mainly that the recorder's anted; besides delivering a formal on such subjects as occur to him, y of twenty-three inhabitants, who moned for the purpose, and after-ulate the town and make such pre-hey think necessary. The charter pital burgesses to choose for re- and discreet man, learned in the nothing about his being a barrister Barristers hitherto (except in one rays been chosen, but they wanted mpetent resident justice of the own, the population of which does ). F. FILLITER.

ec. 9.

ATTESTATION CLAUSES.—Without questioning the accuracy of your correspondent "Articled Clerk's" information as to the very brief attestation clause quoted by him, having been on some occasion deemed sufficient, I would, with all deference, recommend him to refer to a previous number of your journal, that of the 11th ult., where he will find a form equally remarkable for brevity as his, and, at the same time, less open to question. What is the full meaning of the term "attested"? The Act says, that the witnesses "shall attest and shall subscribe." His pattern clause is therefore weak; but the word "signed," read in continuation of that which goes before in "P. C.'s" clause, is all sufficient. I would not again have troubled you were it not that some authorities of the Probate Registry might not be so easily satisfied with "Articled Clerk's" model form, without requiring an affidavit, and thus some of your legal friends might be misled. He will observe also that the order of signing is shown. P. C.

SANDERS v. STUART.—In your report of this case, at pages 370, 372, of the current volume of your reports, we find it stated that the defendant negligently transmitted the telegraphic message wrongly. This is not so, for, as appears by the judgment, the message was not transmitted at all. THE PLAINTIFF'S SOLICITORS.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

None are inserted unless the name and address of the writer are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

37. EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE—LOST DOCUMENT.—When a written agreement is lost, and secondary parol evidence is adduced to prove its contents, will evidence also be received to prove a term omitted from the agreement, that was contemporaneously but verbally agreed upon between the parties? T. T.

38. LIQUIDATION.—A debtor, prior to filing his petition, promised a creditor that if he would not prove his debt or say anything about it, he should receive the amount in full, notwithstanding the liquidation. He receives his order of discharge. The creditor asks for the money and is refused. Is this a debt in respect of which forbearance has been obtained by fraud? T. T.

39. SUCCESSION DUTY.—J. B., by his will, gave certain estates to his wife C. B., for life, and then to his daughter F. B. absolutely. F. B. died some three years before C. B., having made a will giving her property to trustees for sale. Is succession duty payable by the trustees of F. B. in respect of their testatrix's succession, C. B., now being dead? NEMO.

40. CERTIFICATED CONVEYANCER.—Will you or your readers inform me what is necessary to be done for a solicitor to become a certificated conveyancer? R. C. F.

41. VENDORS AND PURCHASERS' ACT 1874.—A title commences by lease and release; the lease for a year is lost but referred to in the release. The Act, 4 & 5 Vict. c. 21, which made this reference evidence was repealed by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 96; can I accept the reference as sufficient evidence under the Vendors and Purchasers' Act, 37 & 38 Vict., c. 78, sec. 2? It seems so. If real property is vested in a married woman for her separate use, it is considered by eminent members of the Profession that her conveyance will not pass the legal estate without acknowledgment. It is admitted that the equitable estate will pass and that only a bare legal estate will be outstanding; now the point is this: If the married woman executes an ordinary conveyance unacknowledged, and thereby becomes a bare legal trustee, cannot she by a second deed, which may be endorsed on the first, convey the legal estate under the Vendors and Purchasers' Act, s. 6, and thus avoid all questions of acknowledgment? It seems so. J. L.

Answers.

(Q. 23) CONSOLIDATION OF MORTGAGE.—"A. J." has had no reply probably, because his case is so clear. If the mortgages of two properties from one mortgagor does nothing to alter his position, his rights against two purchasers of the two properties separately will be the same as against the original mortgagor, that is to say he can of course, consolidate the mortgages, and consequently decline to allow the second to be redeemed until the balance due on the first is also discharged. It does not appear that the mortgage was in any way privy to the sales of the equities of redemption or has in any degree misled the purchasers. What is the argument for the purchaser? That he has done a silly thing, and is sorry for it? I see no other. Dart's Vendors, 5th edit., p. 503, clearly states what I have stated, and also authorities. Q. Q.

(Q. 33.) STAMPS ON BUILDING SOCIETY'S MORTGAGES.—From the experience I have had in mortgages to a building society not registered under the New Building Societies Act, for which my principal is solicitor, a stamp is not necessary in either of the cases mentioned by "E. M." H.

(Q. 35) BASTARDY ACTS AND EVIDENCE.—Non-access must be proved by some one other than the husband or wife, when an order of affiliation is sought by a married woman. Their testimony is rejected on the ground of public morality (Saunders on Affiliation, 5th edit., 33). After proving that the husband could not be the father of the child, it is perfectly legal to examine the mother as to the alleged paternity.

N. I have seen this done, and not disputed by the attorney for the defendant, but, of course, she must have corroborative evidence, as in the case of single women. H.

(Q. 36.) MARRIAGE SETTLEMENT.—To exercise the power in the way you suggest would be illegal, see Lewis on Trusts, 6th edition, p. 87, the cases quoted are: Armistage v. Coates (35 Beav. 1); Re Cunningham's Settlement (11 L. Rep., Eq. 334); Re Taques's Settlement (10 L. Rep. Eq., 584). The nearest legal approach to what you want would be, if possible, to invest the portion intended to be given to the lunatic in the stocks, and appoint such stocks to the lunatic under the settlement then under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 70, s. 140; in case a sale is desired by the lunatic or a curator, the matter would have to be brought before the court of Chancery, the property would then be controlled by the court and laid out for the best advantage of the lunatic, but, of course, all the property of a lunatic is liable to be sold for payment of debts. A. J. L.

LAW SOCIETIES.

LAW AMENDMENT SOCIETY.

THE OFFICE OF CORONER.

THE first meeting of the winter session of the Law Amendment Society was held last Monday evening at its rooms, 1, Adam-street, Adelphi, when an important paper relating to a reform of the law as it affected the office of coroner, was read by Mr. A. Herbert Safford, chief clerk of the Southwark Police Court. The chair was taken by Mr. Serjt. Simon, M.P., and there was a good attendance, which included Mr. Serjeant Cox, Mr. Serjeant Pulling, Dr. Hardwicke (coroner), Mr. Cartar (coroner), Capt. Craigie, Mr. Henry Kimber (solicitor), &c.

Mr. Safford, in the course of his remarks, said that the office of coroner was of so great antiquity that its commencement was unknown, and it had recently been contended that, as now constituted, the institution was unfitted for the present time. He believed that the whole matter of the coroner's appointment, the nature of his inquiries, and the constitution of his court, needed a Parliamentary inquiry; but, in the meantime, much good might be done by attracting the thoughts of law reformers to what had previously been written or said on the subject. At the outset, he promised that he had no intention of making the Balham inquest, or any special case, the text of this paper. Complaints of the mode of conducting coroners' inquests were of no recent date only. Exactly one hundred years since he found, in a very useful pamphlet, that "the law relating to coroners and the practice of coroners in such part of their office as hath reference to the inquisitions on dead bodies were in many respects inadequate and defective, and the practice still more exceptionable. . . . In general the proceedings of the officer appeared to be conducted with a degree of negligence and irregularity incompatible with that order, dignity, and solemnity which ought to take place in the discharge of so high and important an office as that of a coroner, inconsistent with a due investigation of truth, subversive of the institution, and productive of the greatest mischief to individuals." That the coroner's court had not much improved during the succeeding ninety years might be gathered from the statement of a well-known coroner, the late Dr. Lankaster, who at the Congress of 1866 took great credit to himself that "he never tolerated in his court tobacco, beer, or anything that detracted from the dignity of the inquiry." It was, perhaps, only fair to add that the reforms originated by Dr. Lankaster were still in force in Middlesex and Surrey. There could be little doubt that, like many other ancient institutions, the coroner's court, not having been repaired and restored from time to time, was a little the worse for wear, and it might be well to first consider existing defects before proposing remedies. The first seemed to be ab initio, the very election of the coroner himself. Coroners were elected under a writ de coronatore eligendo, issued by the Court of Chancery to the sheriff under 28 Edw. 3, partially amended by 58 Geo. 3, c. 95, and the 7 & 8 Vict. c. 92—a poll being held after the candidates have addressed and canvassed the freeholders. According to the evidence of Mr. Humphreys, the coroner, taken before the select committee of the House of Commons in 1860, the election might then last fourteen days, and as a result coroners have been known to spend fortunes upon their election, which, according to the witness (a solicitor and experienced parliamentary agent) involved a greater expense than canvassing for a seat in Parliament, cases having been known to the witness where the cost was £10,000 to £12,000. The committee recommended that the ancient constituency of freeholders should be abolished, and replaced by the Parliamentary constituencies for counties. This would provide a register, and save much inquiry and trouble, which recommendation had not, however, been adopted. It had, however, been adopted by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 96, that the election should be limited to one day.

The qualification for the office of coroner was in ancient times so high that none in shires could have it under the degree of knight, and by statute 14 Edw. 3, st. 1, c. 8, no coroner should be chosen unless he had in fee sufficient in the same county whereof he might answer to all manner of people. It would be seen that in England no professional knowledge was, by law, really required, although by practice it was usual to elect a solicitor or surgeon. The claim of the medical profession to the office had been well put by Mr. Pope, a medical officer:—"The fact that life and death form now the basis, and almost the whole of the duties of a coroner, points out clearly the class of men suitable for the appointment, and the nature of the evidence offered, with the necessary talent to understand and sift scientific facts, must corroborate the view that a medical coroner is indispensable." Mr. Aspland, a medical man of considerable experience, and also a magistrate, thought that the coroner should be a legal man, and he (Mr. Safford) confessed that he was of that opinion. It must be remembered that the facts which have to be sifted were not generally scientific facts, and however useful a knowledge of the science of poisons, for example, might be, the coroner sitting as a judge could not give evidence to the jury; and, he would ask, was not the office especially a judicial one? The coroner presides as a judge: "Examines the witnesses, takes down in writing the effect of their evidence, instructs the jury, explains to them the law relating to the case in question, and distinguishes upon the particular facts and circumstances, the species of guilt incurred, according to the settled determination of law. His decisions, though not always conclusive, do, nevertheless, for the present determine the guilt or innocence of the parties. Hence appears the necessity of his possessing a sufficient fund of judicial learning, of his being endowed with talents to discuss an intricate proof, of clearness and precision toward summing up of the result, and above all of an honest upright mind to guard him in his conclusions." And Lord Chief Justice Jervis remarks that "it is peculiarly the province of the jury to investigate and determine the facts of the case; they are not to expect, nor should they be bound by any specific or direct opinion of the coroner upon the whole case, except so far as regards the verdict, which, in point of law, they ought to find as dependent and contingent upon their conclusions in point of fact. But in questions of law juries ought to show the most respectful deference to the advice and recommendation of the coroner; Ad questionem facti non respondent iudices, ad questionem legis non respondent juratores." The verdict "should be compounded of the facts as detailed to the jury by the witnesses, and of the law as stated to them by the Court." It had frequently been urged that coroners (in the words of Lord Ellenborough) had exercised their office in a "vexatious and improper manner by intruding themselves into private families, to their great annoyance and discomfort, without any pretence of the deceased having died otherwise than a natural death, which is highly illegal." While admitting all this, they must not forget that many deaths occurred which, but for a thorough inquiry as to the manner of them, would be regarded as due to natural causes, and which were by means of such investigation discovered to have been caused by the criminal intervention of some person. The grave objection that many persons had to inquests arose from the fact that they forgot the coroner's court was not a criminal court at all, but a mere court of inquiry. It was extremely difficult for a coroner to decide against holding an inquest. It was a great pity that the report of the committee of 1860 had not been acted upon, which stated that "there appears to be a conflict of opinion in many counties between the coroners and the magistrates as to the cases in which inquests should be held. The coroners contend that an inquest should be held on every case of violent, or, to use the expression of Lord Hale, of 'unnatural death'; while, on the other hand, it is contended that no inquest should be held unless some suspicion exists that the death was caused by the wilful act of the deceased, or of some other person, or by negligence. It is very desirable that the law should be settled on so important a subject, and the committee, therefore, recommend that a Bill should be introduced declaring the law. They believe it to be desirable that an inquest should be held in every case of violent or unnatural death, and also that an inquest should be held in cases of death where the cause of death is unknown, and also where, though the death is apparently natural, reasonable suspicion of criminality exists." While upon the subject of the proper inquiry by coroners he (Mr. Safford) would strongly urge the resumption of inquiry into fires, and into deaths at workhouses, reformatory schools, lunatic asylums, and all places where a man was deprived of liberty, including the asylums of habitual drunkards. The employment of parish beadle as coroners' officers was much to be deprecated.

They were not under the control of the coroner, and have a direct interest in decreasing the number of inquests, as they receive 7s. 6d. for every case of which they have given notice, in which the coroner, rightly or wrongly, holds an inquiry. That the emoluments of the office were not inconsiderable may be gathered from the fact that the two beadles of St. Pancras were paid a salary of £5 per annum only, and made their income a satisfactory one from the fees. It would be very advisable that the coroner, instead of an officer, should have a clerk, as the Act of the present year has assigned to the Dublin coroner, and as was permitted to the procurator-fiscal in Scotland, as well as the practice in the coroners' courts in America. The present system of summoning juries was unsatisfactory, and might easily be improved; but he would be sorry to see the coroner deprived of the power of summoning a jury to his assistance, or relieved of the control which, to some extent, the presence of the jury had upon the coroner. It might be a question whether the number of the jury might not be reduced with advantage; they would be giving away an ancient and useful institution if they, without consideration, removed the coroner's jury from the legal procedure. Mr. Edward Livingstone in the Criminal Code adopted by the State of Louisiana, had proposed the following system, which appeared to be an amendment upon the English procedure. The coroner having summoned a surgeon, who inspects the body in the presence of the jury, and the coroner having examined the witnesses, the jury were called upon to determine when and in what manner, and by the act of whom, it appeared to them that the deceased came by his death, and when a majority of the jury agree in a statement, it was reduced to writing and formed the inquest. If the inquest designated the offender, the coroner issued his warrant for the arrest of the offender, who would be then brought before a magistrate, whose duty it was to inquire into the guilt or innocence of the offender. By this means the scope of the coroner's court, and that of the magistrate's, was clearly defined. The coroner inquired into the cause of death, the magistrate as to the fact of the accused having caused that death. In conclusion, Mr. Safford suggested the following: 1. That as the judges are not chosen of the people neither should the coroners be; but that as the coroners are paid by the counties the magistrates should elect their coroners subject to the approval of the Home Secretary. That if it be decided to pay the coroners from the Consolidated Fund they may be appointed by the Home Secretary alone. 2. That if the coroner be elected by popular franchise, it should be upon the same basis as the parliamentary. 3. That the coroner should be remunerated by a fixed salary and allowances to be settled by the Home Secretary. 4. That it is undesirable to fix any special qualification for the office of coroner, although the nature of the duties seem to belong more properly to the legal profession. 5. That coroners should only be removed by the Court of Queen's Bench. 6. That the coroner should be authorised to employ a clerk, who with the coroner's officer should be under the sole control of the coroner. 7. That a central authority (the Home Secretary) should from time to time issue instructions to coroners. 8. That the coroner be permitted to call in the assistance of a medical man before summoning a jury, and that in every case in which the coroner refuses to hold an inquest he should report his reasons for such refusal to the central authority. As the coroner and his staff would be paid by salary, it would be unnecessary to guard against too many inquests. 9. That not only the police but the registrar of deaths should be compelled to give notice to the coroner of cases of sudden or unnatural death. It cannot be expected that the ordinary medical attendant, whatever he may suspect, will give notice to the coroner. He may be a man whose knowledge of points beyond the ordinary practice is limited, and however extraordinary the case may appear, yet he dare not suspect. 10. That informations given to the coroner should be signed by the parties tendering such information. 11. That the jurors be taken from the same class, and in the same manner as for other courts of law, the number constituting a jury being reduced, and the verdict of the majority being sufficient. 12. That when by the verdict of a jury a certain person is accused of a crime, the coroner shall issue his warrant for the apprehension of the accused, who should then not be committed to the assizes, but be brought before the magistrates, and that evidence of the offence should be given before the magistrate in the ordinary manner. This would prevent any evidence taken before the coroner as to the cause of death prejudicing the accused on his trial for a crime. 13. That inquiries into the causes of fires form part of the coroner's duty, and that he be empowered to inflict penalties where gross negligence has been proved before him. 14. That it be compulsory on the counties to provide convenient courts for the coroners, and proper means for the reception of the dead. 15. That in the absence of the coroner, two magistrates be empowered to act for him. 16. That a permanent inquiry into the office, duties, and jurisdiction of coroners is imperatively demanded; and a Bill, declaring the cases in which inquests may be held, for improving the coroners' court, defining his jurisdiction, should be introduced early as possible.

Mr. Serjeant Pulling, in opening the session which followed, was clearly of opinion that a Parliamentary inquiry should be instituted into the whole question affecting the office of coroner. They had found that when a suspicion of crime existed, the proceedings were sufficiently summary without any coroner's inquest. A coroner, for the most part, was not well chosen, an officer who summoned them was generally a questionable person. As at present only the coroner's inquiry was quite a criminal duty of investigating crimes was one that belonged to the State, and ought not to be taken from him. He argued at great length in favour of a public prosecutor to take the place of the coroner. The institution of a coroner's inquiry had done more far beyond the defective system of inquest into death and imputed crime. The inquest was often one of the most painful duties and instituted without grounds (causing private families), by thoroughly incompetent persons. He could not conceive a system of the election of a coroner, and trusted that the form in this and other directions would be brought about.

Mr. Serjeant Cox said that the first question with respect to the reform of coroners would be to determine what was their duty. He was in favour of restricting their duties, and that they should hold an inquest only more, only determining the cause of death, not inquiring into the manner in which it was about, this matter being left to the magistrates and the police. This would save a great expense and worthless labour, and very much restrict the inquiry. If there was to be a coroner, certainly ought to be smaller in number, and summoned at the mere will of the parish, besides which it should be composed of laymen, and summoned by a responsible officer. The real question was to determine in what the inquest should be held. What remedy be given against improper inquests that were and inquests that were neglected to be held was inclined to think that the decision whether or not there should be an inquest should be left to some responsible individual. In substance, the medical officer of health, who the coroner was put into requisition, to determine whether the inquiry was to be held. It should then be determined whether the coroner should have a jury, or whether he himself should conduct the inquiry. The learned Serjeant would suggest that, in the first instance, of death, whether the death was a natural or a violent one, which could be ascertained by a jury of four, or even by the coroner himself.

Mr. Carttar, county coroner, trusted that improvement would take place as to the elections for coroners, in order that a great expense might be saved. Many years ago the town of West Kent cost him some thousands of pounds, for which he had to canvass many people, which lasted six weeks. He was of the opinion that a man should be well qualified to fill the office of coroner, and that the proper person was a lawyer.

Mr. Serjeant Simon, M.P., advocated that in the manner and mode of appointment of coroners, which should not be elective, but should be either the Lord Chancellor or the Home Secretary. The office should be held by a person with a trained mind who could marshal evidence, and that was impossible to the layman. He had seen coroners' juries taken from the panel that tried cases at Westminster Hall, did not think the coroner ought to be taken in the number of inquests held, but that he should be paid by salary and not by fees. He was clearly of opinion that a coroner should be taken from the ranks of the Profession to which he belonged. In conclusion, he said that the part of the jurisdiction of the coroners which he wanted so much looking into to restore the respectability that their forefathers had had should be attached to the office of coroner.

The proceedings were brought to a close by customary votes of thanks to the learned chairman.

THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of the council of the society was held at the chambers of Mr. W. T. Channing, D.C.L., 5, Crown Office-row, Temple, E.C., Friday last, at four o'clock p.m., Mr. Griffith, M.A., in the chair.

After the confirmation of the minutes of the last meeting, the hon. sec. (Mr. Charles mitted his annual report, which, after much session, was agreed to. We publish the same. Arrangements were then made for the annual general meeting of the society, to be on Monday next, as announced in our advertisement columns.

REPORT.

Following is a copy of the annual report of hon. sec., to be submitted to the annual general meeting of the society, on Monday next, 3th of Dec. 1876:

Submitting his annual report, your honorary secretary (Mr. Charles Ford) has to record the continual prosperity of the society, which has gained substantial support at the hands of the Profession at the last annual general meeting. He feels that it is due to the services already rendered by the society to the Profession that it has been supported to the extent it has been. Your hon. secretary's last annual report two years ago, five vice-presidents, and seven new ordinary members have joined the society, and the donations of the proprietors of the LAW TIMES now amount to the sum of fifty guineas, and your hon. sec. desires to place on record the continued and generous support which has always been accorded by the LAW TIMES to the aims and efforts of the society to advance the interests of the Profession. The work which has been done upon your hon. sec. has not, during the twelve months been less than hitherto, and the ready assistance which he has always been able to command at the hands of the learned members of the society (Mr. W. T. Charley, Esq., M.P.), your hon. sec. would often hardly feel himself equal to the important and arduous duties devolving upon him. Your hon. secretary, while concurring in the recommendation of the Parliamentary Committee, that it is useless to make any further effort for the present to secure enactment for providing an easier method for securing the payment of a reduced penalty in case of unskilled and unauthorised persons making deeds and other instruments for fee or reward, is as convinced as ever that the interests of the Profession loudly call for such a protective enactment. The information which constantly comes to your hon. sec., not only by virtue of his position, but also in another capacity, warrants him in asserting that although reported cases seem to be fewer than formerly, a wholesale infringement of the protective clauses of the Solicitors' Act 1870, and of the Solicitors' Acts, by unskilled, unqualified, and unauthorised persons, still tolerated throughout England and Wales, indeed, Ireland and Scotland also, to an extent which threatens in time to seriously affect the pecuniary interests of both barristers and solicitors, as well as to operate most injuriously to the public. It is, moreover, the duty of your hon. sec. to record the fact that serious professional irregularities are taking place in both branches of the Profession. As to the Bar, by the negligence of counsel in failing to represent the interests of clients after having been briefed; the recognition of a system at certain sessions of giving instructions without the intervention of counsel; and your hon. sec. is able to report the existence of a wide spread and deeply rooted prejudice in favour of the creation of a batonnier as a responsible governing body for the Bar, the duty it should be to take cognizance of all complaints against members of the Bar in connection with the exercise of their Profession. The want of some authority or tribunal of this kind, which in part accounts for the extensive suppression of members of the House of Commons, solicitors, gave to Mr. Norwood's "Bar-at-Law" Bill. The question involved in the recent action by Mr. Geo. Lewis against Mr. Higgins, Q.C., was, as your hon. sec. desires to think, essentially one which could have been fairly dealt with by a batonnier. As to solicitors, it is the duty of your hon. sec. to report that constant complaints have been made to him that the matter-of-course way in which the preliminary examination before articles, even dispensed with in the very cases to meet a professional grievance, for which solicitors themselves are in a measure to blame by facilitating passage into the Profession of men whose education is below the proper standard, a practice which the reputation of the Profession, as a whole, is made subservient to personal interests. Not an uncommon practice for some solicitors to assist their clerks to get into the Profession without passing this examination, with the object of securing the permanent services of clerks who are then of the routine work of their offices. Your hon. sec. has been at some trouble to disseminate the names of certain solicitors who habitually ignore the provisions of the Solicitors' Acts by using so-called accountants and agents to use names to their joint advantage. The names of these have recently been made public by the several country law societies established through the agency of this society, perhaps the most active and vigilant during the past year has been the Portsmouth and Gosport Law Society, which petitioned in favour of this society's Bill for the past session. On the 4th Sept. last the same society passed the following resolution, a copy of which was forwarded to your hon. sec., and was by him duly laid before the council: "That the thanks of this society be and are hereby tendered to the council of the Incorporated Law Society, and to the parliamentary committee of the Legal Practitioner's Society, for their labours in the interests of the solicitors' Profession and of the public. A copy of this resolution to be forwarded to each society." Your hon. sec. has during the past year received a large number of letters from country solicitors, especially in the large towns, such as Manchester, Liverpool, Bristol, and Birmingham, complaining of the action of so-called accountants, agents, mercantile agencies, and debt collecting establishments, under circumstances which your hon. secretary regrets to say leave the Profession without any remedy. The recent case of the Attorney-General v. Tett, in which the defendant, an accountant, was mulcted in the sum of £50 for preparing a bill of sale contrary to the provisions of the Stamp Act, will, however, exercise a beneficial influence upon accountants, certain law stationers, and others, who prepare such documents wholesale. There can be no doubt that much of the Professional work not protected by statute, which was formerly undertaken exclusively by solicitors, is now transacted in London by accountants and law stationers, and in the country by accountants and so-called law agents. Tempting advertisements for legal business continue to be inserted, not only by persons styling themselves accountants and others outside the Profession, but your hon. secretary regrets to say even, in some few cases, within the ranks of the Profession. Such advertisements are continually being brought under the notice of your hon. secretary. Composed, as this society is, of members of both branches of the Profession, your hon. secretary is alive to the difficulty of dealing with some inter-professional questions—as, for instance, the claim by solicitors to act as advocates at quarter sessions, which subject is, therefore, for the present, left to solicitors themselves to deal with. As regards a freer interchange between the two branches of the Profession, it is a matter which has long agitated the Profession—especially the solicitors' branch. Your hon. secretary has received a large number of communications upon this important question, but it is sufficient to mention those from the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas and the Master of the Rolls. Complaints made to your hon. secretary have been especially loud from solicitors who are University men, and your hon. secretary may mention that although the Council of the Incorporated Law Society has not applied to Parliament, as has been done by the Parliamentary Committee of this society, yet it has passed a resolution on the footing of which your hon. secretary hopes the question will be adjusted, as the continued existence of the present regulations inevitably foster a growing spirit of hostility between barristers and solicitors, which is much to be lamented. Upon this subject Mr. Daniel, Q.C. in a recent speech, is reported to have said that the "Profession was now, as it were, in a transition state in this respect, that the almost offensive social distinctions which existed between the one branch and the other were dying away, and the difference in social status between the one and the other had almost, if not entirely, ceased. Even in London, the centre of prejudice and obstinate adherence to that which was old, whether it was valuable or not, these distinctions had to a great extent given way. He would recommend his young friends, without relaxing to any extent in their diligence in the discharge of their special duties at the present, to look onwards and upwards. The late meeting of the Incorporated Law Society at Oxford suggested views to the article clerks throughout the country which they ought well to consider. He had no wish to suggest the notion that there should be no distinction, but his notion was that the distinction should be simply that which arose from the difference between advocacy and agency, and that facilities should be given by the Inns of Court, who had the power of calling persons to the Bar, and by the regulations of the Incorporated Law Society, who had the privilege of granting certificates of fitness for admission to the roll of solicitors—that facilities should be given of such a character on both sides that if young men desired to become members of the Bar, and when they had attained to that position found that circumstances caused them to desire not to degrade themselves or to go lower, but to step from the one branch of the profession to the other, the means of transition should be easy. So, on the other hand, he desired to see that if a man became a solicitor, and he found that he had powers within him which would enable him to take the branch of advocacy in preference to that of agency, greater facilities than now existed should be provided for the passage from the one branch to the other. The regulations were at present such that very few men would undergo the disadvantages. He very little doubted, if the transition was rendered more easy, that a greater number of such cases would occur, because he did not hesitate to say that a solicitor's office, where the business was conducted by men of experience, men of principle, and men of honour, was the very best school in which a man could begin for the purpose of qualifying himself to attain to the very highest position at the Bar." The most distinguished men at the Bar and on the Bench have long ago conceded the claim of solicitors to substantial concession at the hands of the Inns of Court, and the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, as the chief law society, has twelve months ago expressed its readiness to meet the Bar in a similar spirit, by seeking to obtain a modification of the Solicitors' Acts which regulate the steps necessary to be taken by a barrister seeking admission on the roll of solicitors. Your hon. secretary will perhaps be pardoned for quoting an extract from the leading article on this very question in the Times of the 6th Oct. last: "In the very common case of a man who has made a mistake about his profession, and who now wishes to set himself right, we can certainly see no advantage, or at least no public advantage, in his being hindered and practically prevented [from passing from one branch to the other]. The rule that a solicitor must have withdrawn his name from the roll and have wholly abandoned practice for three years before he can be called to the Bar, is in many cases a practical prohibition of his being called at all."

A copy of a letter on this subject, addressed by your hon. secretary to the Times, and which appeared in that journal on the 18th Oct. last, is annexed to this report as showing the present position of this "burning" question, which your hon. secretary hopes will be settled in the next session of Parliament. Among the many other subjects which engage the attention of the Profession may be mentioned Mr. Norwood's Barristers' Fees Bill, the position and powers of commissioners of oaths under the Judicature Acts, and the right of audience before revising barristers' courts.

Your hon. sec. has received numerous complaints in regard to unauthorised persons appearing as advocates in Police and County Courts; in regard to a system by which vendors' solicitors insert in conditions of sale of real estate clauses inviting or requiring purchasers to take a conveyance from such vendors' solicitors, for a fee smaller than such purchaser would have to pay to his own solicitor; in regard to the practice of some solicitors who insert in leases a covenant by which they (solicitors of the lessor) should have the preparation of all assignments and underleases. And as to accountants' charges in bankruptcy business, which matter is not sufficiently within the control of the courts having bankruptcy jurisdiction. In regard to the necessity for three separate cause lists for the three common law divisions of the High Court, and in regard to the equalisation of the annual certificate duty, these and other well founded complaints your hon. sec. has always taken steps to bring before the public and the Profession in directions which have been especially open to him. The general correspondence of your hon. sec. has, as usual, been large, and indeed laborious, and your hon. sec. feels that the time is near at hand when he will have to relinquish his efforts in the interests of the Profession and of this society. Your hon. sec. has been encouraged in the past to persevere in his endeavours, as well as by the kindly consideration of the Profession, as by the consciousness that good has followed from his work in connection with this society.

Your hon. sec. cannot close this report without acknowledging the valuable services rendered to him as an officer of the society by the learned president and by the council of the society

SOLICITORS' BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION.

THE usual monthly meeting of the board of directors of this association was held at the Law Institution, Chancery-lane, London, on Wednesday last, 13th Dec., Mr. Edward Turner Payne (of Bath), the chairman for the present year, presiding. A sum of £230 was distributed in grants of assistance to four widows of members, two non-members, and five widows and daughters of non-members: eight new members were elected, and other business transacted.

MR. WILLIAM ROBERT CLARK, Solicitor, of Oldham and Middleton, has been appointed a Commissioner to Administer Oaths in the Supreme Court of Judicature in England.

MR. CHARLES BULLOCK, Solicitor, of Great Berkhamsted, Herts., has been appointed a Commissioner for Taking Acknowledgments of Married Women in and for the county of Hertford.

LEGAL EXTRACTS.

CONCERNING THE BURDEN OF PROOF.
(By FRANCIS WHARTON, in the Southern Law Review.)

IMPORTANCE AND DIFFICULTY OF QUESTIONS AS TO BURDEN OF PROOF.
(Continued from page 388.)

QUESTIONS of interest arise when suit is brought upon an instrument to whose validity certain formalities are requisite. Is the plaintiff or the defendant to prove such formalities? It is plain that when the law makes the validity of the instrument depend upon these formalities, then they must be duly proved by the plaintiff. If a statute, for instance, makes an instrument inoperative unless duly registered or stamped, then the instrument cannot be put in evidence without proof of such registry or stamp. But a prima facie case of compliance with the law in this respect is sufficient for the plaintiff's case. Where a statute, for instance, requires that a will, to be operative, must be attested by three subscribing witnesses, it is enough for the plaintiff's case to show that three witnesses actually subscribed the will. If either of such witnesses was incompetent, this must be shown by the defendant. So where the attestation of a notary is necessary to a writing, it is enough for the plaintiff to show that the notary was a person usually acting as such; if he was an imposter acting without authority, this must be shown by the defence.

The burden of proving a negative is thrown on a party whenever proof of such negative is essential to his case. It makes no difference whether the party to whom such proof is essential is plaintiff or defendant. I may illustrate this position by one of the most extraordinary cases to which American litigation has given rise. In Feb. 1872, Winfield S. Goss, of Baltimore, having previously insured his life for 25,000 dol., was found, it was alleged, dead, in a workshop belonging to him; his death having been, it was pretended, caused by a fire by which the building was partially consumed. His widow brought suit against the insurance companies, and recovered; the chief witness to prove identity being her brother, William E. Uddersook, and her husband's brother, Alexander C. Goss. The defence made by the insurers was that the remains were not those of Winfield S. Goss. In July 1873, the body of a murdered man was found in Baer's Woods, near West Chester, Pennsylvania; and there was strong evidence charging, as the agent of the homicide, William E. Uddersook. He was indicted for murder, and the trial took place at West Chester in Nov. 1873. The case which the prosecution undertook to prove contained at least two negatives, first, that the body found in Baer's Woods, West Chester, in July 1873, was not that of A. C. Wilson, if that name represented a person other than Winfield S. Goss; and secondly, that the body found in the workshop in Baltimore, in Feb. 1872, and which was claimed to be that of Winfield S. Goss, was not that of Winfield S. Goss. It was a necessary incident of the prosecution's case that the person murdered in Baer's Woods had gone for a few months before his death, both in Newark, New Jersey, and in Chester county, Pennsylvania, by the name of A. C. Wilson; and it was plain that if there was a person known continuously by the name of A. C. Wilson, this would defeat one of the essential points in the prosecution's case—that the deceased was Winfield S. Goss. It was also necessary for the prosecution to prove that the body found in Feb. 1872, was not that of Winfield S. Goss; for if it had been such body, this also would have been destructive of the prosecution's case. Nor was this all. Uddersook was tried, convicted, and executed for murder, the prosecution having satisfactorily made out these with the other necessary ingredients of the case. The insurance companies then brought suit in the United States Circuit Court in Baltimore, against Alexander C. Goss and others, for a conspiracy to defraud them, by falsely claiming the corpse found in Baltimore, in Feb. 1872, to be that of Winfield S. Goss. Now, in each of these three cases, those contesting the identity of the corpse so discovered with that of Winfield S. Goss, had a negative to prove, though in the first case this negative was undertaken by the defendant, in the second by the prosecution (occupying the processual attitude of a plaintiff), and in the last by the plaintiff. But we need not such an illustration, however pointed, to prove that with respect to the form of action, an actor (i.e., one who has on him the burden of proof), may be either plaintiff or defendant. It is enough to take this case as one among multitudes that show that wherever a negative is part of a case, whether that case be that of the plaintiff or of the defendant, then such negative must be proved.

MR. ALLAN TASSELL, Solicitor, Faversham, has been appointed Registrar of Sittingbourne County Court, vice Mr. Thomas Hills, deceased.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES, is contributed by EDWARD WALROBE, M.A., and late scholar of Balliol College, Oxford, and Fellow of the Genealogical and Historical Society of Great Britain; and, as it is desired to make it as perfect a record as possible, the families and friends of deceased members of the Profession will oblige by forwarding to the LAW TIMES Office any dates and materials required for a biographical notice.

CHIEF JUSTICE WHITESIDE, D.C.L.

THE late Right Hon. James Whiteside, D.C.L., Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench in Ireland, who died at Brighton, on the 25th Nov., in the seventieth year of his age, was a son of the late Rev. William Whiteside, and brother of the late Rev. Dr. Whiteside, vicar of Scarborough. He was born at Delgany, in the county of Wicklow, in the year 1806, and was educated at the University of Dublin, where he graduated with honours; he took his B.A. degree in 1827, proceeded M.A. in 1832, LL.B. and LL.D. in 1859. He also obtained honours in the first law class formed in the University of London. He was called to the Bar in Ireland in Easter Term, 1830; became a Queen's counsel in 1842, and was elected a bencher of King's Inns, Dublin, in 1852. In April 1851, he entered Parliament as member for Enniskillen, and retained his seat for that constituency till Feb. 1859, when he was returned for the University of Dublin. He remained in Parliament until his elevation to the Bench, in 1866. He was Solicitor-General for Ireland in the first administration of Lord Derby, in 1852, and Attorney-General in the second, namely, from March 1858 to June 1859. In 1844 Mr. Whiteside's name was conspicuously before the public in 1844, when he delivered his able speech in defence of O'Connell and his colleagues for conspiracy, and when he told the Government that "something more than an indictment for conspiracy was necessary for the pacification of Ireland." In 1848 Mr. Whiteside again made himself famous by his defence of Mr. Smith O'Brien, and in 1862 as the advocate of "Mrs. Yelverton." In 1858 he was appointed a Privy Councillor of Great Britain and Ireland, and in 1863 he was created a D.C.L. Three years later, when Lord Derby formed his third administration, Chief Justice Lefroy, who was then 90 years of age, retired from the Bench, and Mr. Whiteside was appointed his successor. The late judge was not unknown in the literary world, having been the author of works on Italy and Ancient Rome. He has the reputation of having been a lively and occasionally an eloquent speaker, and it is probable that his most conspicuous oration at the Bar was that which he delivered in the famous Yelverton case. The late judge married, in 1833, Roseetta, daughter of the late William Napier, Esq., of Belfast.

THE RIGHT HON. F. HORSMAN.

THE late Right Hon. Edward Horsman, M.P., barrister-at-law, of Ashby St. Leger's, Warwickshire, and of Alvie, Inverness-shire, who died on the 30th ult., at Biarritz, in the Baasses Pyrénées, France, where he had been staying for the benefit of his health, was the son of the late William Horsman, Esq. (who died in 1845), by his marriage with Jane, third daughter of the late Sir John Dalrymple, Bart., one of the Barons of the Court of Exchequer in Scotland; she was sister of the eighth and ninth Earls of Stair, and the deceased gentleman was therefore nephew of the late earl. Mr. Horsman was born in 1807, and was consequently sixty-nine years of age at the time of his death. He was educated at Rugby, under Dr. Wooll, and was admitted a barrister at the Scottish Bar in 1832, but did not practise, at all events, for any considerable time, resolving instead to devote himself to a political life. He entered Parliament in 1836 in the Liberal interest, on a chance vacancy arising in the representation of the borough of Cockermouth, through the retirement of Mr. Fretchville Dykes. He was again returned at the general election of the following year, and he held the post of a Junior Lord of the Treasury during the last few weeks of Lord Melbourne's administration in 1841. He was returned in 1853 for Stroud, and represented that constituency down to 1868, when he retired. In the following year he was again returned to Parliament, as member for Liskeard, on the death of Sir Arthur William Buller, his opponent on this occasion being Sir Francis Lyett. Mr. Horsman was sworn a Privy Councillor in 1855, on taking office under Lord Palmerston as Chief Secretary for Ireland, but he resigned the post two years afterwards, as he himself professed, on the ground that the salary was too great, and the duties too light. Mr. Horsman, it may be added, was somewhat unfortunate in his Parliamentary position. He was a man of first-rate abilities, and an admirable speaker; but he was an independent M.P., and an independent member is, generally speaking, an unpopular one. Yet he did not begin life as an independent member, for he pledged himself to vote in favour of an efficient Church reform, of vote by ballot, and of the removal of all on knowledge. There was a time when Horsman acquired no small fame as a Church reformer. He and the late Lord Llanover (Sir Benjamin Hall), it has been said, were of the Church by night and day, and if it was done they were sure to accept it and bring light. As a Commissioner of Church Inquiries in Scotland, Mr. Horsman saw a religious less pretentious than that of England, and less quite as effective, for on all sides it is admitted that the Scotch are quite as religious as the English. His Scotch parentage may have made him look with a suspicious eye at a prelacy; at any rate it was in battle for Church reform that he won his earliest fame; his agitation, like most others, came to an end when he accepted office. Mr. Horsman married in 1841, Charlotte Louisa, daughter of the late John Charles Ramsden, M.P. The remains of the deceased gentleman were interred at Biarritz.

C. WREN-HOSKYN, ESQ.

THE late Chandos Wren-Hoskyns, Esq., barrister-at-law, late of Wroxhall Abbey, Warwick, who died on the 28th ult., at his residence Eccleston-square, in the sixty-fifth year of his age, was the second son of the late Sir Hugh Hoskyns, Bart., of Harwood, Hereford, by his marriage with Sarah, daughter of Philip, Esq., of Bank Hall, Cheshire, and was born in the year 1812. He was educated at Shrewsbury School and at Balliol College, Oxford, where he took his Bachelor's degree in 1834. Called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of Inner Temple in Easter Term 1833, he was for a few years as a special pleader at the Old Hereford, and Gloucester Sessions. He was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for Herefordshire and Warwickshire, and served as High Sheriff of the latter county in 1855. In 1859 he entered Parliament for Hereford, as the colleague of Henry Clive, on the vacancy arising from the unseating of Messrs. G. Clive and J. W. & Co. but he retired from Parliamentary life at the general election in 1874. Mr. Wren-Hoskyns was well known as the author of several works on Agriculture in its more scientific as well as practical aspect; among which Alibon's in his Dictionary "A Short Enquiry into the History of Agriculture" (1849), and "The Chronicles of a Clay Farm,—an Agricultural Fragment," published in 1852, and which through three editions rapidly. This last is described in a contemporary paper as "written in a vein of pleasantness, permeating the prejudices of the past, and strating that scientific knowledge is, as ever, an important element in our tillage." The deceased gentleman, who was presumptive to his brother's baronetcy, was married, first in 1837, to Theodosia Anne, daughter and heiress of the late Charles Wren, Esq., of Wroxhall Abbey, whose assumed; and secondly, in 1846, to Anne, daughter of Charles Milnes Ricketts, Esq. He has left a family of three daughters and

J. MONTGOMERY, ESQ.

THE late John Montgomery, Esq., barrister-at-law, of Benvardeen, county Antrim, who died the 7th inst., in the eighty-seventh year of age, was the eldest son of the late Hugh Montgomery, Esq., of Benvardeen (who died in 1818), his marriage with Margaret, daughter of — Esq., of Kilmandle, county Antrim. He was born in the year 1790, and was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated B.A. in 1811, and proceeded M.A. in 1813; he was called to the Bar in 1815. Montgomery was a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the county of Antrim, and served as high sheriff in 1819. He married, in 1819, the third daughter of the late Sir Andrew Farquhar, Bart., and by her, who died in 1871, he had a family. His eldest son, Mr. Robert James Montgomery, who was High Sheriff of County Antrim in 1870, married, in 1864, Elizabeth, daughter of James Robert White, Esq.

SIR J. ESMONDE, BART.

THE late Sir John Esmonde, Bart., of nastragh, county Wexford, barrister-at-law, who died on the 10th inst., in the fiftieth year of age, was the eldest son of the late James Esmonde, Esq., of Pembrokestown, county Waterford, who died in 1842, and nephew of the late Right Hon. Sir Thomas Esmonde, Bart., of Ballym. His mother was Anna Maria, daughter of — Esq., of Ring Mahon Castle, Cork, and he was born in the year 1826. He was educated at Clongowes College, and at Trinity College, Dublin, where he graduated in 1848. Called to the Irish Bar in 1850, he practised for a few years in Dublin. He was a magistrate for the counties of Waterford and Wexford, and also a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant

ARNOLD, ALBERT, lodging-house keeper, Southampton. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 30, at three, at offices of sol. Shuttle, Southampton.

AKERDOY, ISAAC, and AKEROBY, HENRY LOPTHORPE, farmers Brantley, par. Leeds. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 22, at eleven, at office of Messrs. H. H. H. Taylor, Barrow. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 22, at two, at the Queen's hotel, Tordmorden. Sol. Hartley, Burnley.

BAILEY, JOSEPH, tailor, Accrington. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 28, at two, at Peet's Arms, Accrington. Sol. Whalley, Accrington.

BALFORTH, ALBERT, tailor, Barrow. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 26, at half-past eleven, at the George hotel, Axminster. Sol. Hirtzel, Exeter.

BARNES, ANNE, spinster, Lyme Regis. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 26, at half-past eleven, at the George hotel, Axminster. Sol. Hirtzel, Exeter.

BARNES, ELIZABETH RUTH, spinster, Lyme Regis. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 26, at half-past eleven, at the George hotel, Axminster. Sol. Hirtzel, Exeter.

BARNES, THOMAS, innkeeper, Gloucester. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 21, at six, at St. John's-lane, Gloucester. Sol. Haines.

BEART, ARTHUR, butcher, Litcham, Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 28, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Bircham, Fakenham.

BENNETT, GEORGE, innkeeper, Morley, near Leeds. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 22, at eleven, at offices of Messrs. H. H. H. Taylor, Leeds.

BERTHAM, WILLIAM, jun., iron merchant, Chester. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 22, at half-past twelve, at the Grosvenor hotel, Chester. Sol. Churton, Chester.

BERRY, J. J. ELIJAH, dial manufacturer, Cherteston. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Solis. Llewellyn and Ackrill, Tunstall.

CABRECK, WILLIAM NORMAN, blind stenter, Bromley. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 28, at three, at offices of Sol. Gregory, Barlicham-chimbs, Barbican.

CASSIDY, FRANCIS BERNARD, general outfitter, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 29, at two, at offices of Sol. Edwards, Manchester.

CHAMBERLAIN, JOHN, out of business, Leicester. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 28, at three, at offices of Messrs. H. H. H. Taylor, Leicester.

CHAPMAN, ALFRED, builder, Or, near Hastings. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 19, at three, at offices of Messrs. Miller and Miller, 5 and 7, Sherborne-lane, London. Sol. Savory, Hastings.

CHANDLER, THOMAS, Dec. 22, at three, at the Alexandra hotel, Harrogate. Sol. Dalton, Leeds.

CLARKE, ARTHUR, bookbinder, Shaftesbury-st. New North-road and Shepperton-rd. New North-road. Pet. Dec. 1. Dec. 31, at three, at offices of Messrs. H. H. H. Taylor, Barnet. New Broad-st.

COTTEWORTH, JOHN, commercial clerk, Carlisle. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 4, at three, at offices of Sol. Errington, Carlisle.

CRIPPS, THOMAS, publican, par. St. Thomas, Devon. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 22, at half-past four, at the Castle hotel, Exeter.

Dr. Friend, Exeter.

COTTE, HENRY, baker, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at two at office of Sol. Stephenson, Liverpool.

DAVIES, DAVID, licensed victualler, Yorkston. Dec. 23, at three, at the Crown hotel, Shrewsbury, in lieu of the place originally named.

DAVIES, DAVID, licensed victualler, Yorkston. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 23, at two, at office of Sol. Fowler, Liverpool.

DICKINSON, JOHN WADDINGTON, licensed victualler, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at two, at office of Sol. Morris, Liverpool.

DRIVER, LEWIS JOHN, draper, Sheffield. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Morris, Sheffield.

EDWARDS, JOHN, innkeeper, Aberystwyth. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 21, at eleven, at office of Sol. Morris, Aberystwyth.

ENOS, HENRY, carter, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Davis, Birmingham.

FENBY, JONATHAN, butcher, Scarborough. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at half past two, at office of Sol. Hink, Scarborough.

FINK, BENJAMIN EBERKNER, grocer, Brighton. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at three, at 2, Gresham-bldgs, London. Sol. Nye, Brighton.

FISHER, WALTER, printer, Bristol. Pet. Dec. 9. Jan. 1, at two, at office of Sol. Beckingham, Bristol.

FOULKES, JAMES, joiner, Ardwick. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Gardner, Manchester.

FRANCIS, GEORGE, surveyor, Chester. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at two, at office of Sol. Brown, Chester.

FRENCH, RICHARD JAMES, door dealer, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Messrs. Moore and Price, accountants, 28, North John-st, Liverpool. Sol. Quinn, Liverpool.

GABUTT, FRIDERIC WILLIAM, worsted manufacturer, Bradford. Pet. Nov. 30. Dec. 27, at ten, at office of Sol. Hutchinson, Bradford.

GREGSON, JOHN HENRY, draper, Bingley. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 7, at two, at office of Sol. Morris, Bingley.

GILL, WILLIAM, farmer, Burton-on-the-Wolds. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Deane and Lickorish, Loughborough, and Walbrook.

GILLESPIE, JOHN, draper, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 27, at twelve, at office of Sol. Broad, Manchester.

GOLDNER, BOLAMON, merchant, Middlesbrough. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Mr. Griffiths, Temperance hotel, Middlesbrough.

GORDON, DANIEL, draper, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Hardwick, Leeds.

GRIFFITHS, PHILIP, tailor, Aberdare, par. Aberdare. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at one, at office of Sol. Linton, Aberdare.

GRIFFIN, JOHN, provision dealer, Richmond-rd, West Brompton. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Ald, Eastcheap.

HAGMAN, WILLIAM, grocer, 14, Broad-st, London. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Watson, Guildhall-yard.

HAIN, HENRY, merchant, Lombard-st. Pet. Dec. 11. Jan. 9, at two, at office of Sol. Lickorish, London.

HALIDAY, GEORGE, boat builder, Apperley Bridge, near Bradford. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at ten, at office of Sol. Watson and Dikons, Bradford.

HAUG, WILLIAM, greengrocer, Holmfirth. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at two, at office of Sol. South, Holmfirth.

HARE, HENRY, watchmaker, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 19, at a quarter past ten, at office of Sol. East, Birmingham.

HAYES, MARY ANN, and HAYES, JOHN FOWKE, builders, Stafford. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at three, at the Vine hotel, Stafford.

HEYWOOD, JOHN, paper manufacturer, Bristol. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Miller, Bristol.

HINITT, JOHN, out of business, Kidderminster. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Corbett and Co., Kidderminster.

HOBBOCK, THOMAS, and HAIN, JOHN, manufacturers, Manchester, and Farnworth. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Sampson, Manchester.

HOBSON, MARY, widow, grocer, Handsworth Woodhouse. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Taylor, Sheffield.

RICHARDS, HENRY, innkeeper, Llandudno. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at one, at the King's Head and Royal hotel, Llandudno.

RANDALL, ALFRED GEORGE, farmer, Leamington. Pet. Dec. 8. Jan. 4, 1875, at three, at office of Sol. Rowlands and Bagnall, Birmingham.

JONES, WILLIAM, beerhouse keeper, Swansea. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Thomas, Swansea.

JONES, GEORGE, plumber, Mark-by-the-Sea. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Mr. Ellison, Mark-by-the-Sea.

KELLAWAY, WILLIAM, printer, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at eleven, to be held at the Guildhall Coffee-house, Gresham-st. Sol. French, Crutched Friars.

LAVIES, JOSEPH SAMUEL, doctor of medicine, Warwick-sq, Belgrave, and Rushmore, near Windsor. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at three, at the University of the University and New Athenaeum Club, Jerny-st, St. James's. Pet. Dec. 11. Jan. 9, at three, at the Inns of Court hotel, High Holborn. Sol. Lewis and Lewis, Ely-place, Holborn.

LITTLEWOOD, GEORGE, paper outer, Ferry Barr. Pet. Nov. 23. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Granger, Brighton.

LOWE, DANIEL, coal dealer, Dudley. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Stokes, Dudley.

LOVIBOND, HENRY, out of business, Northiam. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at eleven, at the Bridge House hotel, London Bridge, Southwark. Sol. Butler, Ely.

LYNAM, WILLIAM FRANCIS JOSEPH ALONIOUS, draper, Bury Saint Edmunds. Pet. Dec. 7. Jan. 1, at twelve, at the Guildhall, Bury Saint Edmunds.

MALLARD, EDWARD HENRY, furniture dealer, Cumberland-row, Ilkington. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Hawkins, Chancery-lane.

MAYLAN, STEPHEN, grocer, Nottingham. Pet. Dec. 9. Jan. 5, at four, at office of Sol. Cooke, Nottingham.

MCKINNEY, WILLIAM, tailor, Hanley. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Tennant, Hanley.

MAKINSON, SAMUEL HENRY, and PICKUP, JAMES, joiner, Great Bolton and Farnworth. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 27, at three, at office of Sol. Grundy, Bolton.

MOODY, ROBERT, cowkeeper, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Granger, Leeds.

MOORE, ROBERT, stationer, Brighton. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 13, at one, at office of Messrs. Fanner, Hilton, and Gifford, 2, Gresham-bldgs, London. Sol. Goodman, Brighton.

NIGHTINGALE, JAMES, carter, Ambleside. Pet. Dec. 9. Jan. 2, at eleven, at office of Sol. Fisher and Gately, Ambleside.

ORTON, GEORGE, metal polisher, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 20. Dec. 23, at a quarter past ten, at office of Sol. East, Birmingham.

PARKINSON, GEORGE, shoe dealer, Southport. Pet. Dec. 8. Jan. 6, at eleven, at office of Messrs. Gibson and Holland, 10, South John-st, Liverpool. Sol. Thomas, Southport.

PEARCOCK, JOHN, merchant, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 21, at two, at office of Sol. Fairclough, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

PEARSON, THOMAS NEWTON, salesman, Handforth-cum-Bowden. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 27, at three, at office of Sol. Baddish and Lake, Stockport.

PILSON, JAMES, wine merchant, Cambridge. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 30, at two, at the Rose Room, 7, Catlin, Guildhall-pl, Cambridge. Sol. Newton, Finsbury-circus, London.

PITCHER, DOUGLAS, wine merchant, Brighton. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at one, at office of Sol. Goodman, Brighton.

RUDGE, HENRY, of no occupation, Clapham. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 20, at eleven, at office of Sol. Parker, Newham.

SAGE, HENRY, baker, Walworth-rd. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 27, at twelve, at office of Sol. Kempster, Lower Kennington-lane, Lambeth.

SEED, ELIZABETH, oil extractor, Lindley, near Huddersfield. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 30, at ten, at the Woolpack hotel, Huddersfield. Sol. Hutchinson, Bradford.

SMART, JOHN HENRIKIAN, contractor, Northampton. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Jeffery, Northampton.

SMITH, WALTER, watchmaker, Derby. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at two, at the Commercial Sale Room, 18, Wardwick, Derby. Sol. Moody, Derby.

SMYTH, JAMES WIGFIELD, painter, Hartlepool. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 27, at twelve, at office of Sol. Todd, Hartlepool.

SOBEY, COOPER, boot manufacturer, St. Austell. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Smith and Paul, Truro.

SPENCE, JAMES, fly proprietor, Brighton. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Lamb, Brighton.

STILL, JAMES, JASPER, boot manufacturer, Princes-st, Spital-fields. Pet. Dec. 8. Jan. 4, at three, at office of Sol. Messrs. Beard, Basinghall-st, E.C.

STRACHAN, ROBERT, gas fitter, Southwark. Pet. Nov. 23. Dec. 20, at two, at 37, Bedford-row. Sol. Marshall.

STEPHENSON, EDWARD, joiner, Ilkley. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at three, at 51, Market-st, Bradford. Sol. Margarrison and Hutton, Bradford.

STEWART, JAMES, pianoforte dealer, Middlesbrough. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at half past ten, at 13, Finkle-st, Stockton-on-Tees. Sol. Garbutt and Fawcett.

STOKES, JOSEPH, commission agent, Bucknell, near Hanley. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 21, at eleven, at office of Sol. Griffith, Newcastle.

STREET, MARY CATHERINE, lost maker, Tunbridge Wells. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at two, at the Chamber of Commerce, Cheap-st. Sol. Stone, and Simpson.

SUGGITT, FRANCIS, joiner, Skipton-in-Cleveland. Pet. Dec. 9. Dec. 21, at three, at office of Sol. Tweedy, Stockton-on-Tees.

TRISTROP, THOMAS, carpenter, Southend. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 27, at one, at the London Tavern, Southend. Sol. Messrs. Wool, Rochford.

THOMAS, HENRY, and OWSEN, JESSE, timber dealers, Tipton. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 21, at two, at office of Sol. Travis, Tipton.

THOMAS, JOHN, commission agent, Llanelli. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Howell, Llanelli.

TUCKER, JOHN, farmer, Gower. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 21, at three, at office of Sol. Beer and Bill, Swansea.

VALLEY, FREDERICK, tailor, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Hawks and Weekes, Birmingham.

WATKINS, ANN, licensed victualler, Pontyberem, par. Llangan-ty. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at a quarter past ten, at office of Sol. Green and Griffiths, Carmarthen.

WAKEFIELD, EDWIN, draper, Lynnhall. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 22, at eleven, at the Crown hotel, Wootton Bassett.

WAGSTAFF, ROBERT, boiler maker, Hyde. Pet. Dec. 7. Jan. 6, at three, at 10, St. John-st, Manchester.

WAGSTAFF, TIMOTHY, farmer, Boxed. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Smith, Colchester.

WHITE, FRANCIS EDWARD, commission agent, Launceston. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Bridgman, Tavistock.

WILLIAMS, ALFRED, marvellous jeweller, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 7. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Hodgson, Birmingham.

WOOD, JOHN JAMES THORPE, farmer, Terrington Saint Clement. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Nurse, King's Lynn.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT ESTATES.

The Official Assignees, &c., are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

HENDERSON, B. C. Hunt, in army, third 3s. 3d. Paget, Basinghall-st.—Hartley, C. custom house clerk, second 2s. 7d. Paget, Basinghall-st.

Brown and Walker, machine makers, first and final joint ljd. First 3s. 6d. of Beaumont & Co. at office of J. D. Taylor and Co., accountants, Townhall-lane, Halifax.—Cassidy, W. slate merchant, first and final 2s. 6d. At Trust. C. F. Kemp, 5, Walbrook.—Hall, R. S. oil and colourman, first and final 2s. 6d. At Trust. W. Ward, 46, Eastcheap.—Hemmes, E. painter and builder, first and final 1s. 6d. At office of J. B. Smith and Son, accountants, 40, King William-st.—Hester and Nave, tailors, first 2s. 6d. At Sol. Carr, Fulton, and Carr, 7, Vigo-st, Regent-st.—Jones, W. C. butcher and farmer, first and final 2s. 2d. At Trust. J. Taylor, 43, South-st, Moor, Sheffield.—Long, R. engineer and metal broker, first and final 2s. 6d. At Trust. T. T. Rogers, 18, Lord-st, Liverpool.—Lowe, S. bootmaker, div. 2s. 6d. At Trust. T. Mottershead, 2, Victoria-st, Manchester.—Parker, E. cabinet maker, first and final 2s. 2d. At Trust. T. Chirgwin, 25, River-st, Truro.—Sutherland, S. boot and shoe maker, third 2s. 6d. At office of T. Y. Sirechall, Grange and Taylor, 18, Grange-st, Newcastle.—Twissell, J. M. dealer in sewing machines, first 2s. 3d. At Trust. T. G. Shuttleworth, 6, George-st, Sheffield.

Orders of Discharge.

Gazette, Dec. 8.

LAMB, SAMUEL BLACKMAN FRANCIS, solicitor, Gray's Inn-sq. MITCHELL, SAMUEL JOHN, grocer, Cardiff.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS

BIRTHS.

DAVIES.—On the 8th inst., at 57, Eccleston-square, the wife of Bryan Davies, Esq., barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

JONES.—On the 9th inst., at Brook Cottage, Winkfield, the wife of Richard Jephson Hardman Jones, barrister-at-law, Inner Temple, of a daughter.

KOTTE.—On the 4th inst., at Upper Norwood, Surrey, the wife of F. J. Kotte, Esq., barrister-at-law, Inner Temple, of a son.

WHITELY.—On the 13th inst., at Dulwich-common, the wife of George Criepe Whitely, barrister-at-law, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.

POPE-COLSON.—On the 7th inst., at Heavitree, Horace Kewley Pope, of Lincolns, Somerset, solicitor, to Alice Mary Foot, youngest daughter of the late J. W. Colson, Esq., of 3, Baring-crescent, Heavitree, Exeter.

DEATHS.

COOKE.—On the 8th inst., at St. Alban's, George Cooke, solicitor, aged 81 years.

DIXON.—On the 6th inst., at Pledwick, near Wakefield, aged 80 years, Benjamin Dixon, Esq., solicitor, and for fifty years Deputy Clerk of the Peace for the West Riding of Yorkshire.

EDWARDS.—On the 6th inst., at Eltham Park, Spanish Town, Jamaica, Sir Bryan Edwards, late Chief Justice of that Island.

ELLIS.—On the 4th inst., at Cranbury, Charles Ellis, of Finsbury-court, Temple. Had held appointments under the Hon. Society of the Inner Temple for over forty years.

WHITE.—On the 10th inst., at the First Rectory-grove, Clapham, aged 77 years, Henry Hopley White, Q.C., Bench of the Middle Temple.

PARTRIDGE & COOPER,

WHOLESALE & RETAIL STATIONERS,

192, FLEET-STREET, AND 1 & 2, CHANCERY-LANE, LONDON, E.

Carriage paid to the Country on Orders exceeding 20s.

Legal Stationery 25 per cent. lower than any other house.

COMMERCIAL AND LEGAL DIARIES ARE NOW READY.

THE TIMES, Nov. 25, 1874.

"The diaries of Messrs. Partridge and Cooper for 1875 are got up so as to be admirably adapted for office use, being cheap, handy, and not overloaded with useless matter, while giving good writing space."

THE NEW "VELLUM WOVE CLUB-HOUSE" NOTE, 3s. 6d. per ream. Samples post free.

INDENTURE SKINS, Printed and Machine-ruled, to hold twenty or thirty folios, 2s. 6d. per skin, 2s. 6d. per dozen, 15s. per roll.

SECONDS OR FOLLOWERS, Ruled, 2s. 1d. each, 24s. per dozen, 11s. per roll.

RECORDS OR MEMORIALS, 8d. each, 7s. 6d. per dozen.

LEDGERS, DAY-BOOKS, CASH-BOOKS, LETTER or MINUTE-BOOK. An immense stock in various bindings.

ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LIST of Inkstands, Postage Scales, Copying Presses, Writing Cases, Despatch Boxes, Oak and Walnut Stationery Cabinets, and other useful articles adapted to Library or Office, post free.

Legal Notices.

LAW EXAMINATIONS.—Mr. A. ST. P. (M.A. Oxon), Solicitor, PREPARES Gentlemen their Preliminary, Intermediate, and Final Examinations either privately, or in class. Resident Pupils may Address 11, Staple-Inn, London, W.C.

THE INTERMEDIATE.—A BARRISTER in the Temple would be happy to help a student reading for this examination. No fees.—Address "The" (No. 1750), 10, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

EXAMINATIONS OF THE INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY.

COUNTRY CANDIDATES CAREFULLY PREPARED for all the Examinations AT THEIR OWN HOMES. This medium of the post by the author of some of the best works for law students. The system (which renders almost impossible) has received the universal approval of former pupils, several of whom have obtained 1st. Nearly all the Examination questions have been anticipated in substance during the course of previous Terms moderate. Address "The" (No. 1750), 10, Wellington-street, Strand, London, W.C.

THOMAS SCOTT,
1, WARWICK COURT, HOLBORN

Printer and Publisher,

BY APPOINTMENT.

CHANCERY AND COMMON LAW CAUSE LISTS, SITTINGS PAPERS, KEY CAUSE LISTS, ROTA of REGISTRARS, and FEES of CAUSES. Delivered at 5 p.m. during 3 Subscription 2s. 2s. per annum.

LEGAL BUSINESS IN AUSTRIA

Gentlemen, who have recently passed his exam. (leave England for Melbourne (whence he will return (few weeks) on the 21st inst., and is prepared to TAKE the execution of a COMMISSION to ELI WITNESSES, or any other Legal Business in the Address "O. E. H." care of Messrs. Collyer-Bris Co., 4, Bedford-row.

TO SOLICITORS.—Office for PATENT, 5, SERLE-STREET, LINCOLN'S-INN, W.C.

Messrs. DAVIES and HUNT, Patent Solicitors, to procure BRITISH and FOREIGN PATENTS, most moderate charges, and to SOLICITORS at every Solicitors and intending Patentees should obtain "HANDBOOK FOR INVENTORS," gratis on application by letter.

LAW EXAMINATIONS.—Mr. H. N. I.

Chancellor's Legal Medallist (Cambridge, 1864) of the "Law Examination Journal," and joint author of "Moxley and Whitley's Law Dictionary," takes for all Legal Examinations. Gentlemen wishing with Mr. Moxley (unless they prefer to consult letters) are requested to call at his chambers, 2, C. Lane, between the hours of 10 and 4 p.m., any except on Saturdays and during vacations.

CITY AND COUNTY OF THE CHURCH

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Quarter Sessions of the Peace for the City and of the County of Exeter, will be held at the Guildhall said City, on Monday, the first day of January, Ten o'clock in the forenoon, before Charles Pridmore, Esq., Q.C., the Recorder, at which place all persons bound by recognizance to prosecute evidence on Bills of Indictment, or that have a business to transact at the said Sessions, are required to attend.

Appeals must be entered at the Office of the Clerk of the Peace on or before Saturday, the thirtieth day of December instant.

T. J. BREMERIDGE,
Clerk of the

Exeter, 11th Dec. 1874.

MR. FOULKS LYNCH, Solicitor

whose pupils obtained honours at the Examination, author of "The Statute Law of Examinations," and of "The Statute Law of the INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY," prepared for the EXAMINATIONS of the INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY, private, or through the post. Terms moderate. As to pupils.—39, Great James-street, Bedford-row, W.

DR. KING'S DANDELION and QUIN

LIVER PILLS (without Mercury). FOR BILE, WIND, INDIGESTION, ACIDITY, ACHE, HEARTBURN, &c.

and acknowledge by many eminent surgeons to be the most efficacious and mildest pills for every constitution. In boxes at 1s. 1d., 2s. 6d., and 4s. 6d., at all drs.

MUCH TIME AND WORRY SAVE

BY SORTING YOUR PAPERS INTO

STONE'S PATENT BOXES AND CABINETS

"Exceedingly useful."—Standard.

Sold by Stationers everywhere. Illustrated Catalogue free from Henry Stone, Manufacturer & Patentee, 15, CRANBOURNE-ST., LEICESTER-SQ., LONDON.

All Sizes can be seen at

ABERDEEN GRANITE MONUMENTS

in Blue and Red, from 2s. carriage free. Work of all kinds, beautiful and enduring. Also inscriptions. Plans and prices free.—From JOHN W. Sculptor, Aberdeen.

EARTH to EARTH.—The LONDON

NECROPOLIS COMPANY is prepared to furnish upon the principle recently advocated Times, dispensing with all procession, and without intervention of the ordinary undertaker at any expense. All that is necessary is that, in the death, notice of the event should be sent immediately to the company's office. The new Patent Necropolis Earth Coffin may be seen at the office, 2, LANCET-STRAND, W.C.

To Readers and Correspondents.

ER.—You will find what you ask for in our present issue. Communications are invariably rejected. Communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith, communications intended for the EDITOR (SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT) should be addressed.

Vol. XIII., Part 4, price 5s. 6d.

CRIMINAL LAW CASES. Edited by EDWARD W. COX, Esq., Barrister-at-Law, Recorder of Portsmouth. The Parts and Volumes may still be had in sets. It is the only complete series of Criminal Cases published in England. Appendix contains a valuable collection of Precedents of Indictments. London: "Law Times" Office, 10, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.	GRAHAM (Trustee, &amp;c.) v. WILCOCKSON AND MURKLOW.
OF BANKRUPTCY.	Bill of sale—17 & 18 Vict. c. 26—Receipt for the price of goods—Memorandum of sale—Past debt ..... 601
Esq. v. LEWIS —Large on trust fund in favour of tenant in common—Notice ..... 537	SMITH v. FIELDHOUSE.
GOVERNORS OF ODIHAM NEWMAN AND SON.	Public Health Act 1875—Action for penalty under Schedule II, sect. 70—Consent of the Attorney-General under sect. 253 ..... 602
Contract—Liquidated damages—Proof—Bankruptcy Act 1869 ..... 538	PROBATE, DIVORCE, AND ADMIRALTY DIVISION.
USE OF LORDS.	Admiralty Business.
LONDON SMALL ARMS COM.	THE CADIX AND THE BOYNE.
Contract—Infringement—Manufacturer contract with Crown—Notice; MORICE v. ANDERSON ..... 539	Salvage agreement for apportionment—Additional salvage outside agreement—Persons not actually engaged in—Costs ..... 603
COURT OF JUDICATURE.	LEADING ARTICLES, &amp;c.
APPEAL, LINCOLN'S INN.	TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS ..... 127
Attorney-General—Charitable legacy—Will distributed by executors—Section ..... 575	LEADING ARTICLES.
RANKER.	Topics of the Week ..... 127
Remainder—Particular estoppel to support—Failure of construction ..... 576	Agency—Liability of Agent for Negligence ..... 128
CENTRAL RAILWAY COMPANY v. ORIENTAL FINANCIAL CO.	Assurances of Land Limited to Married Women for their Separate Use ..... 130
Winding-up—Proof of debt—Mortgage—Judgment—1 & 2 Vict. c. 110 ..... 583	LAW LIBRARY ..... 131
APPEAL, WESTMINSTER.	SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT
Esq. v. A. —Refreshment house—ment, "what is ..... 584	(Edited by a Solicitor.)
ON.	SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.
Counter claim arising after sight—Pleading ..... 585	Topics of the Week ..... 132
AND WEBSTER v. GAVE.	Specimen Digest of the Law relating to Solicitors of the Supreme Court ..... 132
Copyright—Material part of a Will, &c. 15 ..... 587	Notes of New Decisions ..... 133
LITAN BOARD OF WORKS RIVER COMPANY.	Court of Appeal, Lincoln's Inn ..... 134
Adjudication Act 1875, Order rule 2—Question of law about pleadings—Judge's—Special case—Affidavit ..... 590	Appointments under the Joint-Stock Helms-Law and West of Kin ..... 134
OF JUSTICE—CHANCERY DIVISION.	Creditors under Estates in Chancery ..... 134
CHILDRENHOUSE.	Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 ..... 134
Interrogatories—Order rule 3—Specific performance—Alleged breach of trust ..... 59	List of Gentlemen who passed the Final Examination ..... 135
RAITHWAITE.	LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.
Settled wife—Post-nuptial settlement—Wife's property—Valuable consideration ..... 590	Topics of the Week ..... 135
HOWELL.	Specimen Digest of the Law relating to Solicitors of the Supreme Court ..... 135
Settled Act—Interest in land of waterworks under movement Act ..... 592	Bristol Law Students' Debating Society ..... 136
'S BENCH DIVISION.	Hull Law Students' Society ..... 136
Prosecution of Owen v. HERMAN, AND BURGESS ..... 594	Huddersfield Law Students' Society ..... 136
ON PLEAS DIVISION.	Leicester Law Students' Society ..... 136
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	Plymouth, Stonehouse, and Devonport Law Students' Society ..... 136
FRANCHISE—County vote ..... 599	United Law Students' Society ..... 136
REQUER DIVISION.	Examinations at the Incorporated Law Society ..... 136
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	Queries ..... 136
REQUER DIVISION.	Answers to Correspondents ..... 136
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	MAGISTRATES' LAW.
REQUER DIVISION.	Notes of New Decisions ..... 137
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	Borough Quarter Sessions ..... 137
REQUER DIVISION.	REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	Notes of New Decisions ..... 137
REQUER DIVISION.	BANKRUPTCY LAW.
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	Notes of New Decisions ..... 138
REQUER DIVISION.	Court of Bankruptcy ..... 138
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	LEGAL NEWS ..... 138
REQUER DIVISION.	CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION ..... 139
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	NOTES AND QUERIES ..... 140
REQUER DIVISION.	LAW SOCIETIES.
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	Legal Practitioners' Society ..... 140
REQUER DIVISION.	Denbighshire and Flintshire Law Association ..... 142
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	LEGAL ORBITUARY ..... 143
REQUER DIVISION.	PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS ..... 143
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS.
REQUER DIVISION.	Christmas Vacation Notice ..... 143
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599	THE GAZETTES ..... 143
REQUER DIVISION.	BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS ..... 144
Esq. v. ROBINSON (resp.) ..... 599

THE LAWYERS' ALMANAC FOR 1877.

will be sent to Subscribers to the LAW TIMES on the January.

The Law and the Lawyers.

THE HAWKINS has accepted an invitation to dine with the tern Circuit on Tuesday, the 16th of January, 1877, ion Tavern, Aldersgate-street.

can court has arrived at a curious decision concerning of railway companies, namely, that "a railroad train red always to stop completely when a child is seen on a he facts were that a little child was on a railroad track. ured to get off, and in so doing caught its foot in the rails, and was injured by a train which might have been stopped if signalled to do so when the child was first seen. It must be a comfort to American parents to know that under such circumstances a train is, according to this decision, sometimes obliged to stop.

KIL.—No 1760.

THE Brooklyn tragedy calls attention to the necessity for legislation for the protection of life in buildings used for public resort and amusement. A paternal Parliament regulates the carriage of explosives, the working of mines, the use of dangerous machinery in factories, and structures in the metropolis out of repair, and so on, but it has as yet done nothing to render a fearful death by fire in theatres as remote a prospect for the public as possible. To secure in every theatre ready means of egress is a very simple matter, and as we have said legislation already existing furnishes abundant precedent.

THE Court of Appeal in Bankruptcy decided on Thursday that an unregistered bill of sale gives no title to the holder who realises before the grantor files a petition for liquidation, if before the holder so realises the grantor had committed a secret act of bankruptcy. According to this decision it is not enough that the holder of an unregistered bill of sale takes actual possession before the act of bankruptcy upon which the grantor is adjudicated, if there happen to have been a prior although secret act of bankruptcy. This is to put a limitation on sects. 94 and 95 of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, which, we think, will surprise the Profession.

WE understand that it is in contemplation by London solicitors to give united expression to their sympathy with Mr. Lewis, the plaintiff in the recent action of Lewis v. Higgins. It is strongly felt that however desirable it may be that counsel, like judges and witnesses, should be protected against actions of slander, this protection should not be abused. A solicitor stands in a position with regard to the public quite as delicate as that which counsel holds, and it is felt that some protest should be made by the Profession against the course which was taken by Mr. HIGGINS in standing upon strict law instead of endeavouring by every means in his power to apply a salve to the wounded honour of Mr. LEWIS.

A SOLICITOR (Mr. F. J. KELLY) writes to the Times on the subject of practice at Judges' Chambers, but he appears to take an entirely wrong view of the cause of the delays and difficulties which he met with. He seems to have attended before the Master at an hour when counsel are taken, and he is aggrieved that counsel were then accorded precedence. Whereupon he suggests that business would be facilitated if counsel were not taken to chambers. The answer is that Mr. KELLY need not take counsel. It is a matter entirely within the control of solicitors, and for a solicitor to write to the public Press complaining that solicitors conduce to their own discomfort by taking in counsel, appears to us absurd, as solicitors are not such silly people as to act contrary to their own interests. The explanation of the letter is that Mr. KELLY was admitted in 1874, and is therefore inexperienced.

THE 9th rule of Order LVIII. under the Judicature Act 1875, provides that the time for appealing from any order or decision in the matter of the winding-up of a company under the Companies' Act of 1862, shall be the same as the time limited for appeal from an interlocutory order under rule 15, which provides that no such appeal "shall, except by special leave of the Court of Appeal be brought after the expiration of twenty-one days." An important case under the above rules came before the Court of Appeal, on the 13th inst. in Re the National Funds Assurance Company. This company was ordered to be wound-up in July last by the MASTER of the ROLLS. They appealed, but the appeal was dismissed on the ground that it had not been set down in proper time. On behalf of the appellants it was urged that the wording of rule 9, so far as it relates to the winding up of a company, is identical with the words of the 124th section of the Company's Act 1862. In a case upon the latter provision Lord CRANWORTH, it was said, had directed an appeal from a winding-up order to be received after the expiration of twenty-one days, intimating, at the same time, that the statutory limit of twenty-one days did not apply to an appeal from the original winding-up order. (See Re Universal Bank, L. Rep. 1 Ch. 428.) To this, however, Lord Justice JAMES replied that Lord CRANWORTH's order was only a direction to his own secretary to receive the petition, the whole thing being left open for argument after the petition had been received. The other decision cited in support of the appeal Re The Anglo-Californian Gold Mining Co. (1 D. & Sm. 628) had no direct application to the present case. The 9th rule also provides that the time for appealing from any order or decision made in the matter of any bankruptcy, or in any other matter not being an action, shall be the same—namely, twenty-one days—except by special leave of the Court of Appeal. The urged that the latter clause could not extend to orders under the Company's Acts. The appeal was unsuccessful, and the court refused to extend the time. None of the judges had any doubt that the limit of twenty-one days applied to such appeals. Lord Justice JAMES expressed an opinion that if he had now to construe the 124th section of the Company's Act for the first time he should have no doubt that it applied to an appeal from a winding-up order. "It is difficult to conceive," said his Lordship, "any reason why such an order should be subject to a different rule from all other orders. All convenience and all justice were in favour of imposing the limitation of the time for appealing." There can be no question that upon the making of a winding-up order all the business of a company comes to a standstill, and this fact in itself is sufficient to show the necessity of requiring such a company under ordinary circumstances to allow no delay to intervene before notice of appeal is given.

THE decision of the CHIEF JUDGE IN BANKRUPTCY, in Ex parte Tate, re Tate (35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 531), to which we referred a short time ago, has been upheld in the Court of Appeal. It will be recollected that in this case the trustee under a liquidation petition sought to impeach the replacement of 424*l.* consols, which had been invested by the debtor in the name of his father and himself as trustees under a will. The action was impeached as being either a fraudulent preference under the 92nd section of the Bankruptcy Act 1868, or a fraudulent transfer of substantially the whole of the debtor's property. The CHIEF JUDGE decided in favour of the trustee. The question to which we wish now more particularly to draw attention is contained in the observation of Lord Justice JAMES, to the effect that when a transaction is impeached under the above section, the person in whose favour the payment is made must show the good faith of the transaction, and it does not lie upon a trustee in bankruptcy to prove that the proviso contained in the section does not apply. "The person receiving the money," said his Lordship, "must show that he took it in good faith, and that he did not know that the person paying the money was doing anything injurious to his other creditors. The burden of proof is on the person receiving the money." The importance of determining upon whom the onus probandi lies in any case cannot be denied. The decision of this preliminary question is frequently equivalent to the decision of the case. Hence, it cannot be too widely known that the Court of Appeal has expressly confirmed what indeed was the previous practice, namely, that in dealings challenged as being fraudulent within the 92nd section of the Bankruptcy Act, the person receiving the money must be prepared to show that he acted in good faith without notice.

No greater difficulty has arisen out of the Judicature Acts than that caused by the co-existence of so much of the old with the new practice, but after the decision in Cruikshank v. Floating Swimming Bath Company (L. Rep. 1 C. P. Div. 260), that the Judicature Act (sects. 56 & 57) does not prevent arbitrations being held under the Common Law Procedure Act 1854, we should have hardly thought a decision of the Court of Appeal required, as in the recent case of Lewis v. Lewis (35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 539), to lay down that the old practice still exists as to references to arbitration made before the Judicature Acts came into operation. In that case the order of reference was made prior to, but the award after, the Act, and it was held that the successful party was entitled to sign judgment on the award, and was not bound to set down the case on motion for judgment. Sir W. BRETT was of opinion that "the canon of construction which the court had to apply to the question, and the acts which governed it, was that the law and the administration of the law are to be preserved, and that all crotchets are to be ruthlessly swept away." The learned judge "did not at all draw back from what was laid down in Cruikshank v. The Floating Swimming Bath Company; but was of opinion that the suggestion made that the plaintiff should have taken certain steps [to set down the case on motion for judgment under Order XL, rule 1] was crotchety, useless, and technical." In all this we fully concur, but it may be well to call attention to the fact that until a Procedure Law Revision Act is passed, crotchety and technical objections will continue to be taken. Apropos, by what method of procedure, old or new, can the award of an official referee be sent back to him on the ground that it is against the weight of evidence? The rules as to moving for a new trial seem only to apply to trial before a judge. The case appears to be a casus omisus.

A HISTORY of the proceedings of the Divisional Court which has been sitting fitfully at Westminster, cannot fail to be interesting, however unsatisfactory and disappointing. This Court began to sit when the sittings commenced at Guildhall, the Judges being COCKBURN, C.J. and POLLOCK, B. Motions ex parte were then taken first, and opposed motions followed, a list being made at the end of the day. The Court next sat in the Exchequer, consisting of KELLY, C.B., CLEASBY, B. and FIELD, J., and was occupied the whole day with a single opposed motion. The next sitting was in the Common Pleas before Lord COLERIDGE and POLLOCK. There was a disposition to take the reserved list, but the divisions are so disunited in their fusion that the right in the High Court does not know what its left is doing, and much waste of time, ex parte motions not in the reserved list taken. This delayed for the whole day the reserved motions, and when the list was at length called on, the motions, instead of being taken according to the rank of counsel, called on in their order, to the great surprise and consternation of those engaged. This irregularity had to be rectified the same Judges next sat, and at last, that is to say, at the 4th sitting of the Court, it was arranged that ex parte motions take precedence, but none should be taken unless placed in the list. This arrangement was not communicated to the LORD BARON, who next sat alone in the Exchequer, and much delay place before he was made acquainted with what may be called practice. Finally, we believe, it was settled that the list should be adhered to, unopposed motions to be taken according to rank of counsel. Why the list should not be taken with regard to the rank of counsel it is hard to understand, and we think some sensible and uniform rule will be adopted in guidance of this fluctuating tribunal.

It is a little hard on students and practitioners that they be compelled not only to read and digest the enormous mass of decided cases brought forth from day to day, but also to be acquainted with the numerous dicta of varying degree of importance, and of no importance at all, by which the actually decided are too frequently incumbered. It can be part of the duty of a judge to do more than explain the law on which his judgment is founded, and it must always be a mistake when, instead of concentrating his energies on the law for decision, he dissipates them by entering upon discussions or broaching opinions, or laying down general principles which are remote from, or not essential to, the matter in hand. The dictum of a Judge, however unfounded it may be, carries with it pro tempore, and until neutralised by similar official authority, a certain weight, not perhaps of being defined with precision, but a weight nevertheless which is extremely likely to encourage a hopeless and unnecessary litigation. As an illustration of our remarks we will take the case of Sir R. MALINS in the case of Gowan v. Broughton (31 L. T. Rep. 533; L. Rep. 19 Eq. 77), that a lapsed share of residuary personal property must exonerate the other shares from debts and legacies, which was strongly commented on in the LAW TIMES, vol. 1, 280, Feb. 20, 1875, where it was said that the legatee of a residuary share would be grossly misguided if he endeavoured to take more than a rateable proportion of the testator's debts next of kin claiming any share by lapse. In the case of Ty v. Helyar, before the Master of the Rolls, on the 6th inst., a question arose whether the costs of an administration suit must be borne primarily by a lapsed share of residuary personal property. Sir G. JESSEL expressly dissenting from the dictum of Sir R. MALINS, V.C., in Gowan v. Broughton, held that the costs of an administration suit must be borne by the general residuary estate, and not by the lapsed share primarily.

AGENCY.—LIABILITY OF AGENT FOR NEGLIGENCE EFFECT OF PAROL EVIDENCE IN VARYING PRIMA FACIE LIABILITY ON WRITTEN INSTRUMENT.

THERE is no doubt at all in principle that an agent as such, contracting as agent and not as principal, makes a contract from the very nature of things between his principal and other contracting party, and incurs no personal liability on the contract himself. Consequently when a contract is made, says, "Sold to A. B." or "Sold to my principals," and the agent signs himself as "broker," he does not make himself liable either purchaser or seller of the goods, he is simply the maker of the contract. On the other hand it is equally clear that the rule of law laid down in the case of Higgins v. Senior (8 M. & W. 834), is perfectly correct, namely, that where the agent is a purchaser, though really making the contract between his principals, chooses to make the contract in writing in a form which he declares himself to be the contracting party, he is liable, says, "I am to be liable." (See per Hill, J., in Deane v. Gregory, 2 E. & E. 607.) Then there is another class of cases in which an agent who enters into a written contract as agent for an undisclosed principal may be made personally liable upon the contract upon the evidence of a custom recognising such liability.

In Humphrey v. Dale (7 E. & B. 277, affirmed E. B. & E. 185) an action was brought to recover damages for the non-delivery of a quantity of linseed oil. The defendants were employed by the plaintiff's brokers, T. and M., to sell the oil in question. Being also employed by S. to buy oil, they signed a note following terms: "Sold this day for Messrs. T. and M., as to our principal, ten tons of linseed oil. . . . Quarter per brokerage to C. D. (the defendants)." They did not disclose the name of their principal at the time of the sale.

(a) By WILLIAM EVANS, Esq., of the South Wales Circuit.

became insolvent without having accepted the oil. The plaintiff then brought an action against the defendants, as principals, setting up at the trial a custom in the trade that brokers purchased without disclosing the name of their principal, they were themselves liable to be looked on as the principals. The Court of Queen's Bench decided that evidence of a custom might be given as not being inconsistent, and a decision was afterwards upheld by the Court of Exchequer, Barons Martin and Channell, and Mr. Justice Willes dissenting.

The case of Fleet v. Murton (26 L. T. Rep. N. S. 181; L. Rep. B. 126) decided in 1871, is directly in point as an authority in support of the proposition that an agent who contracts on undisclosed principal may be rendered personally liable in parol evidence of custom. This was an action for the acceptance of a quantity of raisins. At the trial before Justice Blackburn, it appeared that the defendants who were London fruit-brokers were employed by the plaintiffs to sell fruit for them. They gave the latter the following note: "We have this day sold for your account to our principal tons of raisins. Signed M. and W. brokers (the defendants). This was dated 30th Oct. 1869. The defendants' principal accepted part of the fruit, but, becoming embarrassed, refused to accept the rest. The defendants thereupon wrote, on the 10th Dec., to the plaintiffs informing them that Mr. P. (the principal) was the buyer under the above contract, and that he refused to accept the remainder of the raisins. The plaintiffs replied that they knew nothing of P., and sued the defendants as principals. Evidence was given on behalf of the plaintiffs that in the London trade, if the brokers do not name their principal in the contract note itself, the brokers are held personally responsible for the contract. Evidence was also given of a similar custom in the London colonial market. The learned judge received both evidence of evidence, and the jury having found that the custom was proved, a verdict was entered for the plaintiffs. A rule was obtained to enter a verdict for the defendants or to set aside the verdict, as it was argued on their behalf that the custom contradicted the contract, and that the evidence of the custom in the London trade was not admissible, as there was no proof that the two cases were in any way analogous as in Noble v. Kennoway (2 Dougl. 673). The rule was discharged. Chief Justice Cockburn agreed with Justice Fenton (22 L. T. Rep. N. S. 373; L. Rep. 5 Ex. 169), but added "Where a party contracts as agent there would not, independently of some further bargain, be any liability on him as principal; yet if a man, though professing on the face of the contract to contract as agent for another, and to bind his principal only and not himself, chooses to qualify that contract by saying that he will make himself liable, though he is contracting for another, and giving to another rights under the contract, he will incur the same liability as his principal." Mr. Justice Blackburn suggested that the right way to declare in a case like this would be by a count analogous to a count on a del credere commission, at the same time he agreed that he agreed that the evidence of the custom was admissible not so much from a conviction as upon the authority of Humphrey v. sup.)

The case of Murton was followed in 1873 by what must be considered as a much stronger case. In Hutchinson v. Tatham (L. Rep. B. 482), the action was brought on a charter-party, which was expressed to be made between the plaintiffs and the defendants "as agents to merchants," the defendants signing "as agents to merchants." At the trial it was proved that in making the charter-party they had acted as agents for L., and were obliged to do so; but evidence of a trade usage was admitted to the effect that if the plaintiff's name is not disclosed within a reasonable time after the signing of the charter-party, the broker is personally liable. The Court of Common Pleas held that evidence was admissible, on the authority of Humphrey v. Dale and Fleet v. Murton. "It does seem a strong thing," said Mr. Justice Brett, "when a person expressly says to another in a contract document, that he is not contracting with him as principal, but signing that writing states the same thing again, to hold that he can be any evidence, and afterwards be established that he is not as agent but as principal. . . . So strong do I consider the terms of the contract in this respect, taking the terms in the contract and the signature together, that were evidence offered to that from the beginning the defendants were liable as principals, I should be prepared not to admit it; but the cases have gone very far lately as to the admissibility of evidence of custom." The evidence of custom that is inadmissible must be evidence of something inconsistent and irreconcilable with the contract.

In respect to the admissibility of parol evidence to vary an agent's prima facie liability upon a written contract, it may be said that an agent may show by parol evidence:

That although a written instrument purporting to be a contract has been signed by himself and the other contracting party, it was not their intention in signing that it should operate as a contract: (See Rogers v. Hadley, 2 H. & C. 249.)

(2.) That although he has apparently signed a written contract as principal, he in fact signed as agent for a third party, and that the plaintiff verbally agreed that he should not be responsible as principal: (Wake v. Harrop, 30 L. J. 273, Ex., affirmed 31 Ib. 451).

(3.) That he entered into the contract through duress, mistake, or fraud.

These exceptions to the general rule that a party may be added but not discharged by parol evidence, are in truth not exceptions at all for the reasons stated by the Lord Chief Baron: (Davis v. Symonds, infra).

The first question only will be dwelt upon here; the second has already been examined, whilst the third belongs rather to the general law of contracts than to that of agency.

It may then be laid down as a rule that an agent may show by parol evidence that although a written instrument purporting to be a contract has been signed by himself and the other contracting party, it was not their intention in signing that it should operate as a contract, and that the real contract was in writing. This is a distinction from the general rule that although parol evidence, which goes substantially to alter a written agreement cannot be received, yet collateral circumstances may be proved by parol as a defence. Thus duress, fraud, and circumvention may be proved by parol, for although they affect the validity of the agreement, they do not vary it. (See Sugden's Vendors and Purchasers, p. 159, 14th edit.). The principle has been thus stated by Baron Bramwell in Rogers v. Hadley (2 H. & C. 249): "Where the parties to an agreement have professed to set down their agreement in writing, they cannot add to it, or subtract from it, or vary it in any way by parol evidence; otherwise they would defeat that which was their primary intention in committing it to writing. But where at the time when a document, which is apparently an agreement was signed, the parties expressly stated that they did not intend it to be a record of any agreement between them, though this is a conclusion of fact which a jury should adopt with extreme reluctance, the parties would not in such a case be bound by the document. Whether the signature is or is not the result of a mistake is immaterial. The reasoning proceeds on this ground, that the parties never intended that the document should contain the terms of an agreement between them." (See Pym v. Campbell, infra.)

In Davis v. Symonds (1 Cox Ch. Ca. 402), 1787, which though not a question in agency bears directly upon the question, a bill was brought to compel the specific performance of an agreement by which the defendants, S. H. and O., agreed in consideration of 800l. to convey certain premises to the plaintiff and H., H. being a joint contractor with the plaintiff Orwell as one of the defendants. The contract was made with S.; O. was a mortgagee under H. The latter had taken a conveyance from S. to himself. The plaintiff alleged that this had been done in breach of the agreement, and that O. took under H. with notice of the plaintiff's right, and, therefore, could not affect the plaintiff's interest. The material defence was that though the agreement purported to be an agreement by which H. and D. were to be joint purchasers of the estate for a sum of money to be advanced by them jointly, yet that the real meaning of it was that H. should be the purchaser, and D. was only to have some interest in the premises by way of security for such part of the purchase money as he should advance for H. The defendants, therefore, contended that these facts might be proved by parol evidence, and the court held that they might do so. "At Nisi Prius," said the Lord Chief Baron, "when an agreement is spoken of, the first question always asked is whether the agreement is in writing, if so, there is an end of all parol evidence, for when parties express their meaning with solemnity, this is very proper to be taken as their final sense of the argument [of agreement]. . . . In this way only is the Statute of Frauds material for the foundation and bottom of the objection is in the general rules of evidence. I take this rule to apply in every case where the question is, what is the agreement? And this rule applies no further than this precise question; for as often as the question is, what were the collateral circumstances attending the agreement? so often may such collateral circumstances be proved by parol evidence. There is no law which says such collateral circumstances may not be proved by parol evidence. If any of the collateral circumstances are reduced into writing, then the same rule applies to them as to the original agreement; but if not, both at law and in equity such collateral circumstances may be proved by parol."

Rogers v. Hadley (2 H. & C. 227), decided in 1863, affords a good illustration of the principle under examination, although the action was brought not against an agent, but by a person who professed to act as agent. The plaintiff sued upon what purported to be a written contract, in which he, as C.'s agent, sold a quantity of bark to the defendants at a price to be subsequently ascertained by C. in a manner agreed on. At the trial it appeared that the plaintiff induced the defendants to sign a bought note, which described the plaintiff as the seller at an ascertained price per ton, by representing that this price was nominal, and that as the defendants were dealing with the Crown, whose officer C. was, they would incur no risk. A day was fixed by the note on which a deposit of 20 per cent. was to be paid.

The plaintiff had in fact bought the bark from C. by verbal contract, but had not paid for it. Before the deposit was paid, the plaintiff sent the defendants an invoice on the basis of the terms mentioned in the bought note, and requested them to pay the deposit to C. They did so. The plaintiff afterwards treated the sale as a sale by himself as principal, at the price in the bought and sold notes, and the Court of Exchequer held that parol evidence was admissible to show that the bought and sold notes did not really contain the contract between the parties.

In an earlier case (Pym v. Campbell, 6 El. & Bl. 370; 25 L. J. 277, Q. B.) it had been decided that parol evidence is admissible to show that when a document, apparently a written agreement, was signed without any intention of making a present contract, but that it was to be conditional upon the happening of an event which had not occurred.

The result of the authorities is, then, that an agent cannot, any more than any other contracting party, give evidence to vary the terms of a written agreement; but he, like any other contracting party, may give evidence to show that the written agreement contains no contract.

ASSURANCES OF LAND LIMITED TO MARRIED WOMEN FOR THEIR SEPARATE USE.

SOME months ago a question was asked in our "Notes and Queries" column as to the proper mode of conveyance of the freeholds of married women, limited to their separate use, and on the 11th ult. a question was similarly raised as to leaseholds, and, as our readers may remember, the answers which were given to both questions were far from satisfactory to the querists. Now that the principle of separate use is so frequently adopted, it may interest our readers if we shortly discuss the subjects of both questions. First, then, as to the freeholds. It is undoubted that when freeholds are vested in a married woman otherwise than for her separate use, a valid conveyance of them can only be made by her by deed, with the concurrence of the husband, and such deed must be acknowledged by the woman—the concurrence of the husband being necessary to protect his interest, and the acknowledgment by the wife being necessary to prevent her from being unduly influenced by the husband. Separate use is entirely a creature of equity courts, and until recently was not even acknowledged in common law courts as having an existence, so that, as regards the legal estate, it made no difference in a court of law whether the freeholds were limited to the wife for her separate use or otherwise, and courts of equity so far followed the law as to admit the decision of the common law courts to be the correct one, even when the married woman's estate in freeholds was equitable only; but when the estate was limited for the woman's separate use the equity courts further held that the husband was simply a trustee for the wife and her assigns of any legal estate which might be vested in him, and if necessary compelled him, as they would any other trustee, to concur in the conveyance of the legal estate to the person, other than his wife, for the time being entitled to it. That a woman, without her husband's concurrence, can dispose of, by deed or will, the whole equitable estate given to her for her separate use, so as to deprive her heirs of the property, is definitely settled (Lechmere v. Brothridge, 32 L. J. Rep. N. S. 577; Pride v. Bubb, L. Rep. 7 Ch. 64; Hall v. Waterhouse, 12 L. T. Rep. N. S. 297); but in case of no disposition by the wife the husband is entitled to an estate by the curtesy, as if the separate use clause had not existed (Appleton v. Rowley, L. Rep. 3, Eq. 139.) It seems to us that in a court of law, irrespective of any effect which may be given to a recent Act of Parliament, to which we shall presently refer, the legal estate can only be conveyed in the manner pointed out by the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries Act.

As to the leaseholds. In a court of law a husband has full power during coverture to dispose of the wife's leaseholds without her consent, whether they be in possession or in reversion, except they cannot possibly fall into possession during the coverture by being limited to her after his death (Duberley v. Day, 22 L. J. N. S. 99, Eq.); so that it would seem that an assignment by the husband is necessary as regards the legal estate, and an assignment by the wife is necessary as regards the equitable estate, but as her interest is vested in her for her separate use, no acknowledgment of the assignment by her appears to be requisite. If an equitable interest in leaseholds belongs to the wife, otherwise than for her separate use, her concurrence with the husband is necessary, and the assignment must be acknowledged by her: (Donne v. Hart, 1 L. J., N. S., 57, Ch.)

The Judicature Act 1873 directs the Common Law Divisions of the Supreme Court to give effect to old equity principles, and to adopt the rules of the old Chancery courts (sects. 24 & 25); but we believe we have before pointed out the outside limit to which such courts would go, and we are not aware of any rule to the effect that a married woman can alone convey the legal estate in freeholds or leaseholds given to her for her separate use, so that it seems to us that the former rules of both courts will still have to be followed, and in the face of the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries Act, we cannot think that, without further legislation, the courts will think proper to make alteration in the principles governing the question.

In answer to the former question, a reply was given by our correspondents, suggesting that sect. 6 of the Real Property Vendors and Purchasers Act 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 78) might be made use of. This section runs as follows:—"When any land or copyhold hereditament shall be vested in a married woman as a bare trustee, she may convey or surrender the same as if she were a feme sole." The scheme suggested was as follows:—A married woman was first to convey her equitable estate, being of the nature of separate estate, she clearly had a right to do without the concurrence of her husband, and without acknowledging the deed. After this conveyance, our correspondents contended that as regards the legal estate, it was vested in a married woman as a bare trustee, and consequently she was, by the section above-mentioned of the Real Property Vendors and Purchasers Act, empowered to convey it without the concurrence of her husband, and that a simple conveyance by her, with the sake of saving expense, might be by endorsement of the former conveyance, would pass the legal estate. Several questions arise upon the meaning of the section. What is the meaning of the words "vested in a married woman"? What is a trustee?

In whom do the freeholds of a married woman vest? In law trusts were practically ignored, so that freeholds vested in a married woman as trustee would in those courts be treated exactly in the same manner as if they were the absolute property of the wife. Mr. Joshua Williams, in his book on Real Property, says:—"By the act of marriage the husband and wife become in law one person, and so continue during the coverture or until the wife is, as it were, merged in her husband. Accordingly, the husband is entitled to the whole of the rents and profits which may arise from his wife's lands, and acquires a freehold therein during the continuance of the coverture." Under former practice it was unnecessary for the wife to join in the deed upon which a release of the wife's freeholds was grounded, as it is clear a husband had at law, and still has, a legal estate in the coverture. That being so, what meaning can be attached to the words, "vested in a married woman"? The section of the Act does not refer to an estate in a freehold hereditament, but to the hereditament itself, that is, either a hereditament, held in fee simple, or for a smaller estate, and contemplating the whole of such estate is held by the married woman, or estate or interest is vested in her husband. The husband, ever, seems at law to have a legal estate in all hereditaments vested in the wife, so that the section must have one of two meanings—the first being that the married woman may dispose of a curtailed estate vested in her as if she were a feme sole, without the necessity of an acknowledgment, the husband being a necessary party to the extent of the legal estate, which ordinarily devolves upon him in respect of his wife's freehold; the second and more rational construction being that the wife may absolutely dispose of the hereditament itself as if she had had a husband. This second construction quite favours the intention of our correspondent, provided under the circumstances the married woman can be considered a "bare trustee," meaning of which phrase we must now consider.

What is a "bare trustee"? The plain meaning appears to be—a trustee without any active duties to perform in respect of the estate of which he or she is a trustee, so that he or she is liable at any time to be called upon in a court of equity to transfer of the estate vested in him or her to the person beneficially entitled to it; as, for instance, the heir or devisee of mortgaged estates of a mortgagee after the mortgage debt has been paid to the executors or administrators of the mortgagee or the grantee for the absolute benefit of a person where such grantee has no duties to perform, as in the case of freeholds are limited unto and to the use of A. and her heirs, trust for B. and his or her heirs.

Now let us see how the scheme of our correspondent works. An estate in fee is limited to a married woman for her separate use. In equity the married woman can, without the concurrence of her husband, dispose of such estate in fee, but cannot convey the legal estate except in the manner pointed out by the Abolition of Fines and Recoveries Act. At common law the husband is considered to have a freehold estate commencing with the coverture, but in equity he is considered to be a trustee of that estate for his wife and her assigns. If she by deed disposes of the beneficial estate in fee, she in her turn becomes a trustee of the legal estate for the assign. After the conveyance by the wife alone what is the position of affairs? A legal estate during the coverture is vested in the husband, and, as thereto, the whole of the legal estate is vested in the wife. Does the case differ from one in which the wife is a trustee? In the first instance? The husband's estate is in law exactly the same, and in equity he was in both cases considered to have no estate at all. If, therefore, the words "vested in a married woman" have their rational meaning, that is, the second meaning, we have before given to them, we think the scheme practicable. Now that all the courts are to adopt the principles of the equity courts, it seems a pity that the law relating to so far as it affects land, should not be placed upon a better footing, and we would suggest that this can easily be done by an Act of Parliament, which would provide that "where any hereditament or tenement becomes vested in a feme covert for separate use, she alone, without the concurrence of her husband, shall be competent to convey or assign the same without necessity of any acknowledgment by her of the deed of conveyance or assignment, and she shall also be competent to convey of the same hereditament or tenement by will as if she had never been married." It would of course be proper to add a proviso to the effect that in case of no disposition by deed during the right, if any, of the husband to an estate by the wife should not be affected by that legislation.

Now the above was written "A Subscriber," in our issue of Saturday week, has raised a question bearing upon one of the points above considered. His case was as follows:—"A feme covert lends money on security of a mortgage in fee to her; she afterwards marries, and subsequently to her marriage she, about a month ago, received of the mortgagor the amount of principal and interest due on the mortgage. The mortgagor now calls for a receipt. Is she a 'bare trustee' within the meaning of sect. 2 and 3 of the Mortgage and Purchase Act 1874, so as to be empowered to receive without the concurrence of her husband and acknowledgment?" We presume that the money was paid with the concurrence of the husband.

Assuming the definition we have before given to the words "bare trustee" to be the correct one, we have no hesitation in saying that in the case put the married woman is within the letter and spirit of the Act, and can re-convey without the concurrence of her husband, and without the necessity of any acknowledgment.

The object of the Act would seem to be the saving of the expense of the concurrence of the husband and of the acknowledgment by wife in those cases where the reasons, as before stated, for the concurrence and acknowledgment are wanting.

The reason for the concurrence and acknowledgment being wanting, then we think that a good reason exists for legislation to dispense with such concurrence and acknowledgment. Let us take but one instance. A married woman, who is a trustee for real estate, cannot be considered a "bare trustee," as she has active duties to perform; yet why should the estate of which she is a trustee, and in which she is probably not beneficially interested, be saddled with useless expense? Her appointment as trustee being in consequence of her personal fitness, irrespective of any qualifications of her husband.

LAW LIBRARY.

First Platform of International Law. By Sir ED. CREASY.
London: Van Voorst.

It rises upon International Law may be either purely historical or explanatory of rules and principles. Treatises of the latter again may be of almost any degree of completeness from that of a mere sketch to that of an elaborate treatise. We shall find Sir Edward give in his own words the position he means his treatise to occupy. "It does not profess," he writes "to be such a full and elaborate treatise on International Law, that the student who has become familiar with its contents may consider himself master of the subject; but on the other hand I think that it is something more than a preliminary sketch discarded by the advanced student. It is meant to lay a sound foundation and a duly arranged framework, which much must be added from further materials and architects, but which will facilitate the acquisition, by orderly grouping, the perception, the retention, and the employment of continually increasing stores of knowledge; and, all, I earnestly hope that it will serve to teach principles. In order to carry out this purpose, and lay the foundation of knowledge forth, the subject is distributed into twelve chapters, which are considered:—Definitions; The Distinction between Natural Law and Positive Law; Moral International Law; Utilitarianism as a test of International Law; International Positive Law; Retrospective International Positive Law, its Proofs and Authorities; Positive Law; The State; Perfect Rights of States; Conflicts of International Rights; War, and the Obligations and Rights arising out of Warfare; Rights and Duties between the Belligerents; and Liabilities arising out of a state of Warfare with regard to neutrals. There are in addition epilogomena upon the privilege of public ships in foreign ports, and on sheltering fugitives; and a short summary of Lord Palmerston's views upon the question of arbitration. The questions that arise between nations may be conveniently distributed under two general heads, peace and war. This division is so obviously founded upon common sense, that we think the author would have done better to have retained that division instead of distributing the subject-matter as he has done into a number of unconnected chapters. We said that such an objection is trivial, we reply that method is a legal writer what style is to any other, and that the objection is worthy of consideration if only for that reason. If Sir Ed. Creasy hopes that his work will be a platform for future superstructures, no amount of care expended in the proper distribution of the timber of which the platform is composed should be considered as expended to no purpose.

Having said so much with respect to the scope of the work and of its divisions which, after all, may be easily changed or remodelled, we must say that we think the author is worthy of praise for the clearness of his style and his general consistency, and applying the principle of utility as the test of International Law. Without discussing with Sir Edward whether man has or has not an innate moral sense (see page 49) the solution of such a question, if a satisfactory solution will ever be discovered belonging rather to the metaphysician than to the lawyer, we are at one with him in accepting utilitarianism as the "best practical test and standard of 'reasoned truth' in questions of International Law." We have said that the author shows consistency in applying this test. As an instance may be quoted his remarks upon the result of the Geneva Arbitration at page 191, where he says, "I believe the arguments on this subject brought forward by Sir Alexander Cockburn to preponderate greatly over what has been said by the eminent jurists who differed from him. At the same time I may state that according to the principles of Utilitarianism . . . it will be practically best to follow the course evidently preferred by Mr. Adams, and to give notice of denial of the privileges of extraterritoriality to all War ships of the character which the opinion of the great majority of the members of the Geneva Tribunals (if not all of them) ascribed to the Alabama." This is perhaps rather confusing, as it seems to imply that the test applied to the reasoning differs from that actually employed by the author in determining upon the merits of the case. The test ultimately adopted is nevertheless that afforded by utilitarianism. In conclusion we may say that Sir Edward Creasy has practically attained his object and produced a work upon international law which, without professing to be a full and exhaustive treatise, contains the materials for a good foundation of a knowledge of that law.

A Concise Treatise on the Construction of Wills. By H. S. THEOBALD, Barrister-at-Law. London: Stevens and Sons.

WHENEVER we find an author endeavouring to compress the vast bulk of our case law, we are at once prepossessed in his favour. "My object," says Mr. Theobald, "has been to produce something more compendious than Jarman's classical work, the scheme of which, involving the statement of cases at length, would now be very cumbersome, in consequence of the large accumulation of cases since the last edition of his work; and, on the other hand, something more detailed and elaborate than Mr. Vaughan Hawkins's useful little book." The task of extracting rules from the dicta of judges is one of excessive difficulty, and in the case of wills, the facts and phraseology of which are so rarely exactly like those in previous cases, the danger of attempting to generalise is very great. We, however, are confident that the law will never be based upon plain and intelligible principles unless this danger is courted and braved by lawyers who have sufficient strength of mind and intellectual capacity to become authors, and assume a quasi-judicial functions.

We cannot go quite so far as to say that Mr. Theobald has assumed a position of a master, bending the cases to his will and seeking like a discoverer for terra firma of his own amidst the shifting sands of judge-made law. He does not venture to take a step without a case to back him up, and his work induces the suspicion that instead of doing what a skilful novelist or dramatist always does, that is to say settling his plot beforehand, he has moulded his treatise as he step by step extracted light from the cases. And he admits in his preface the guidance of the old text writers, thereby showing that he has lacked that independence of action which alone gives strength to the codifier.

Mr. Theobald, therefore, cannot be placed among the very few who have attempted to walk in the paths of legal principles without the assistance of judicial crutches. He has done no more than to dispense with elaborate statements of the facts of the cases, and his arrangement being good, and his statement of the effect of the decisions being clear, his work cannot fail to be of practical utility, and as such we can commend it to the attention of the Profession.

NEW EDITIONS.

WE welcome the third edition of Mr. Robson's Law and Practice in Bankruptcy (London: Butterworths). No alteration has been made in the scheme of the book, and none was required. The author does not pretend to have done more than revise the text and index, and note up the cases. We have already expressed a high opinion of the work, which has been confirmed by frequent reference to its pages.

Mr. Purkis sends us the third edition of his Student's Guide to Chitty on Contracts, Williams on Real Property, and Hall's Outlines of Equity. (London: Wm. Amer.) It affords a pleasant vade mecum for articled clerks.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

In another column we publish a report of the second annual general meeting of the Legal Practitioners' Society, held in the hall of the Honourable Society of Clement's-inn, Strand. We understand that the meeting was not largely attended, owing, no doubt, to the inconvenient hour for which it was called, which prevented solicitors who live out of town from being present. Judging by the report, however, the meeting seems to have been a decided success. Almost every grievance which of late years has been commented upon in our columns seems to have been referred to and considered. Perhaps the subject most frequently referred to by speakers, was that of a freer interchange between the two branches of the Profession, and we entirely concur in the arguments of Mr. Symonds, of Dorchester, and Mr. Whale, of Greenwich, as reported elsewhere, upon this subject. As is well known, this society introduced two clauses into their Bill of last session, aiming at a solution of this constantly-recurring question. The proposal, as so framed, was not, however, seriously debated by the House, and when the time comes it is impossible to doubt but that any such proposed reform will meet with opposition from certain members of the Bar. We can but admire the energetic action of this young society, but we should almost prefer that a question of this character should be dealt with, as far as solicitors are concerned, through the agency of the Incorporated Law Society. There are some who say the latter society has passed a resolution on the subject, and are not likely to do anything more. We have a much better opinion of the council of the chief society than to suppose that they would feel it consistent with their duty to stop short with a simple resolution on such a question. The so-called accountants, law agents, and others who encroach upon the Profession, and some of whom even express to country solicitors their readiness to undertake town agency, came in for well merited censure at the meeting. Perhaps the work and usefulness of this society was best urged by Mr. A. F. Vaughan, of Stockport, at Monday's meeting, when he pointed out the deterrent effect which it had had throughout the country upon accountants, estate agents, auctioneers, and others who now hesitated to trade upon the Profession, being aware that they are much more closely watched than hitherto. We are convinced—and we are in a position to form a pretty accurate opinion on the point—that the labours and the published reports and circulars of the society have exercised a most beneficial influence in the direction of deterring those who live by their encroachments upon the profession, and have, moreover, warned many men from entering upon a similar mode of living, who would otherwise have done so without the least compunction. "Prevention is better than cure," and, although we do not wish to depreciate the curative effect of the work of the society in this particular direction, yet we feel that its chief good has been in the direction of preventing a large accession to the ranks of would-be lawyers, who, under the cloak of a variety of names, will no doubt continue to hover round the skirts of the Profession. We published the interesting annual report of the Special Parliamentary Committee of this society in our issue of the 2nd inst., and the annual report of the honorary secretary (Mr. Chas. Ford) in our last issue. This report is certainly also full of interest to solicitors, and appears to constitute a resumé of all the many important questions which have agitated the different sections of the Profession during the past twelvemonth. Although the society suffers a loss in the retirement of Mr. W. T. Charley, M.P., as president, yet we congratulate it upon securing the services of Mr. William Gordon, M.P. (solicitor), as his successor.

In another column we publish a report of the last annual meeting of the Denbighshire and Flintshire Law Association. We congratulate this society on securing the valuable services of a member of Parliament (Mr. Ellis Eytton), as president for the ensuing year. The appointment of a special committee to watch over the course of legislation, in the interests of the Profession, is a step which we should like to see all country law societies adopt. This is one of those societies which has joined the Legal Practitioners' Society.

We regret to hear of the painfully sudden but accidental death of Mr. Park Nelson, a member of the well-known firm of Park and W. B. Nelson, who until within the last two years carried on a most extensive practice at No. 11, Essex-street, Strand

London. On the retirement of Mr. W. B. Nelson, the brother of the deceased gentleman, Mr. Park Nelson took into partnership Mr. J. J. Morgan. The deceased was admitted in Michaelmas Term, 1825. He was for many years, and up to the time of his death, a valued member of the council of the Incorporated Law Society, and the learned gentleman filled the office of president of the society in 1873. Mr. Nelson was the solicitor to the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple, and sometimes acted as solicitor for the Treasury in common law matters. His death creates a vacancy in the council of the Incorporated Law Society, which we suppose will not be filled up before the next annual election. The office of solicitor to the Honourable Society of the Middle Temple also becomes vacant. A further notice will appear in our Obituary column. Mr. Park Nelson was a staunch supporter of his own profession.

We have received numerous inquiries as to what may now be considered proper charges to be made by a solicitor employed as agent of another solicitor for the simple purpose of effecting service of a writ. We therefore give below a note of the proper charges in such a case. This does not, of course, apply to the case of an action under the Bills of Exchange Act. In the case of substituted service, three attendances on defendant are usually allowed 3s. 4d. for each attendance; copy writ (if made by agent) for every folio beyond two, 4d.; service thereof, 5s. (if more than one attendance to effect service, a further sum in the discretion of the Master for each attendance; and if more than two miles 1s. for each mile beyond); letter advising service, 3s. 6d.; affidavit of service, 5s.; oath, 1s. 6d.; letter therewith, 3s. 6d. The practice at Chambers now is to allow 1s. for copy writ without regard to its length. It will, therefore, be seen that these charges remain almost the same as before the Judicature Acts came into operation.

On a motion for a new trial on Wednesday last, in the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division, Sir James Hannen is reported to have said:—"I wish I knew of any power of restraining counsel from advancing arguments irrelevant to the issue, which had a tendency to prejudice the minds of the jury." Some very grave considerations are raised by this observation. Surely it is not creditable to counsel that they should deliberately resort to false arguments in order to subvert the legitimate ends of justice. Surely, if counsel is observed by a judge to be urging irrelevant matter upon a jury, in order to prejudice the minds of the jury in favour of his client, the judge would only be performing his duty by at once directing the jury that such issues were irrelevant, and must not be further urged upon the jury.

MR. H. WALKER, the learned Registrar of the Southampton County Court, has, we understand, been appointed Registrar of the Manchester District Registry of the High Court of Justice. Mr. Walker was admitted in Trinity Term 1867, and was also Registrar of the District Registry at Southampton. The new office which Mr. Walker is about to undertake, is one of great responsibility, which by virtue of the operation of the Judicature Acts must necessarily increase in importance from year to year.

A FIRM of country solicitors forward to us the following notice received by a client of theirs:—

Post-office orders must be made payable at the Post-office, Queen-street, Cheapside, to O. Goodrick and Co., and a stamp sent for receipt.

Last application. (Some kind of arms, with the motto Domine dirige nos.) 88, Cheapside, London, E.C. 4. Plaintiff, v. defendant.

Sir,—Take notice that unless the amount due as above, together with 5s., our charges, is forwarded to this office on or before Monday next, the 29th inst., we shall proceed against you without further notice.

O. GOODRICK AND CO.

Dated this 20th day of Nov. 1875.

This company had better lose no time in carefully considering the opinion of counsel, recently taken by the Society of Accountants. The use of the letter "v.," signifying "versus," and the words "we shall proceed," &c., would make a strong case under the Act of 1874.

OUR readers will remember the agitation that followed the Alberta-Mistletoe collision in the Solent, in regard to Mr. E. J. Harvey, solicitor, Portsea, being the coroner who held one of the inquests, and being the Admiralty agent at Portsmouth also. The learned gentleman has resigned the office of coroner for South Hants, and Mr. Edgar Goble, solicitor, Fareham, has been elected in Mr. Harvey's place without opposition. Mr. Goble was admitted in Michaelmas Term 1859.

SPECIMEN DIGEST OF THE LAW SOLICITORS OF THE SUPREME COURT

(Continued from page 114.)

ARTICLE 16.

LOSS OR DESTRUCTION OF THE ART. When the original articles are lost (a), or destroyed by fire (c), a copy of the articles may be enrolled.

(a) 2 & 3 Vict. c. 33, s. 9; Ex parte B. & A., 610.

(b) Ex parte Nash, 5 M. & G. 698.

(c) Ex parte Briggs, 1 D. & L. 94.

ARTICLE 17.

ARTICLES SHOULD BE FOR AT LEAST AS PRESCRIBED BY LAW.

The contract should be at least for period determinable on actual service required term, is valid in form.

Illustrations.

1. A, having successfully passed the middle examinations of Oxford and Cambridge (which included in the regulations of the judges) was for a term of four years. He duly served but the articles were held to be invalid, and refused to permit him, upon entering articles, to have the advantage of his previous service under the former articles: James, 22 L. T. Rep. N. S. 900, Q. B.

Where a clerk has served two years articles and then ceased to serve any longer articles expired, and he then desired to fresh articles and obtain the previous court to such two years' service being the period of service under the new articles court refused consent, leaving it open, to him to apply to have such period computed should have served a sufficient time and articles: (Ex parte Trenchard), 21 L. T. Rep.

2. Where a clerk who had served for five years articles for five years, the court held: entitled to be admitted at the end of the under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 4: (Re Sherry), Q. B. 164; 37 L. J. 83, Q. B.

Note 1.

The provisions for the filing of the affidavits of enrolment and registration of the contract c. 73, s. 8, are not merely for the purpose of revenue, but also for assisting and securing the persons who are to be solicitors of the Court. Hence it is not enough that the articles are satisfied, but the courts also must be satisfied that the other objects of the statute are not frustrated. See Per Curiam, in Ex parte B. & A., 9 N. S. 516.

Note 2.

It is now a rule that before granting an order for the service of a clerk under an unexpired term, the clerk under unexpired term may be computed from their date, and the time of enrolment the court will require an application to be given to the Incorporated Society, in order that an opportunity may of investigating the truth of the state which the application is founded: Ex parte Blades, 44 L. J. 115, C. P.; 33 N. S. 33.

ARTICLE 18.

ON THE RETURN OF THE PREMIUM (SUBMITTED.)

A part of the premium, proportionate to the unexpired term, will be ordered to be returned by a solicitor or his representative—

(a) Whenever the solicitor has been to fulfil his contract, whether by bankruptcy or upon the happening of the events enumerated in c. 77, ss. 5 and 13, as entitled to be discharged.

See Chitty's Practice, vol. i. 46.

(b) Whenever the solicitor refuses the contract.

Note.

Whether it is material that such refusal be the misconduct of the clerk is not free from doubt.

(c) When, on the other hand, the solicitor is willing to carry out his contract, but the clerk is unwilling to carry out his part, behalf of the latter for a refund of premium, or of any portion of the premium.

Note.

The practice when a claim for the return of premium is made.—The application is made whereupon, if the application is enim matter is referred to the Master to determine the amount should, under the particular circumstances, be returned.

Illustrations.

(a) 1. A clerk was articulated to one of two who were in partnership. The master two months of the execution of the premium had been placed to the ship account. The surviving partner articulated clerk, and was thereafter take another. A part of the premium ordered to be returned: (Ex parte C. & C., 691; Ex parte Bennett, W. W. & C. 691.)

2. So where a solicitor who was not ship died before the articles expired equity ordered the payment of part premium out of the assets of the deceased: Tobson, 19 L. J. 441, Ch.

(b) An articulated clerk, after serving about a half, ran away from the service, and the clerk to whom he was articulated (the parents applied to the solicitor the clerk into his service. He refused, whereupon, the court, having referred for the report of the master, the solicitor was ordered to return £196, out of a premium of £400: (Ex parte Prankard, 3 B. & Ald. 257.)

Note.

In a previous case (Cuff v. Brown, 5 Price 297), referred to in Ex parte Prankard (sup.), the Court of exchequer was of opinion that where there is no misconduct on the part of the master, a clerk who runs away, and after absenting himself for some time, on his service, returns, cannot, on a refusal by the master to take him back, recover any part of the premium.

1. Where the clerk died within a month after being articulated, the court refused to order the master to return any part of the premium of 200 guineas: (Re Thompson, 1 Ex. 864.)
2. A ward was articulated to a solicitor under the directions of the Court of Chancery. Subsequently the ward desired to change his profession. The court held that if he did so he could not claim any part of the premium: (34 L. J. 126, Ch.; 11 L. T. Rep. N. S. 402.)

ARTICLE 19.

THE CERTIFICATE.

A solicitor otherwise qualified cannot practise such unless he takes out annually a stamped certificate enabling him to do so. Each member of a firm of solicitors must take a certificate (a).

(a) Edmondson v. Davies, 4 Esp. 14.

Note.

The amount of stamp duty payable

If the solicitor resides within ten miles of General Post Office, and has been admitted three years or upwards ..... £9 0s.
If he has not been admitted so long ..... £4 10s.
If he lives elsewhere:
If he has been admitted three years or more ..... £8 0s.
If he has not been admitted so long ..... £3 0s.
16 & 17 Vict. c. 63, sched.

Solicitors residing forty days or more in any one year within the limits where the higher duties are payable shall become liable to the higher duty.

On an application to take out or renew the annual certificate of a solicitor, the applicant must, six weeks before the application is intended to be made, give notice thereof as in the case of original admission, and the affidavits in support of such an application shall be filed at the Bag Office, and a copy thereof shall, at the same time, be left with the Clerk of the Petty Bag, to be delivered by him to the Registrar of Solicitors, and the order for such taking out or renewal shall (if made) be drawn up as the Master of the Rolls shall direct, on reading such affidavit, an affidavit of such copies having been left notices given in compliance with this order. Upon an application to dispense with the renewal notice of intention to take out or renew a certificate, a summons shall be served on theistrar of solicitors calling on him to show cause within ten days why such taking out or renewal of certificate should not be allowed; and if cause be shown to the satisfaction of the Master of the Rolls he may, if he shall think proper, make an order for allowing such certificate to be issued.

Reg. Gen., dated 2nd day of Nov. 1875.

ARTICLE 20.

PERSONS PRETENDING TO BE DULY QUALIFIED.

Any person who wilfully and falsely pretends to be, or takes or uses any name, title, addition, or description implying that he is duly qualified to act as an attorney or solicitor, or that he is recognised by law as so qualified, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds for each offence.

On costs, fee, reward, or disbursement on account of or in relation to any act or proceeding done or taken by any person who acts as an attorney or solicitor, without being duly qualified to do so, shall be recoverable in any action, suit, matter by any person or persons whomsoever. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 63, s. 12.

Note 1.

For the purposes of this provision those solicitors of the Supreme Court shall be deemed to be duly qualified to act as solicitor who have in force at the time a duly stamped certificate.

Note 2.

The offence may be proceeded against before a court of summary jurisdiction.

Note 3.

ARTICLE 21.

CONSEQUENCES OF ACTING WITHOUT CERTIFICATE.

Any person who in any part of the United Kingdom directly or indirectly acts or practises in any way as an attorney, solicitor, proctor, writer to signet, agent, or procurator, or as a notary public, without having in force at the time a duly stamped certificate, shall forfeit £50, and shall be incapable of maintaining any action or suit for the recovery of any fee, reward, or disbursement on account of or in relation to any act or proceeding done or taken by him in any such capacity. If a person in whose name, either alone or jointly with any other persons, any proceeding is taken in any court, shall, unless the proceeding is aside by the court as irregular, or unless the contrary is otherwise satisfactorily proved, be deemed to have acted in such proceeding: 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, s. 59.

ARTICLE 22.

APPLICANTS FOR CERTIFICATES MUST STATE ALL NECESSARY FACTS.

Any person who in any part of the United Kingdom, on applying for a certificate to practise, does not truly specify the facts and circumstances upon which the amount of duty chargeable upon his certificate depends, shall forfeit £50, and shall be incapable of maintaining any action or suit for the recovery of any fee, reward, or disbursement on account of or in relation to any act or proceeding done or taken by him in the capacity of attorney, solicitor, writer to the signet, agent, or procurator, or as a notary public: 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, s. 59.

ARTICLE 23.

OMISSION TO TAKE OUT CERTIFICATE.

If any solicitor of the Supreme Court, after having at any time taken out a stamped certificate, shall for the space of a whole year from and after the expiration thereof, have neglected to renew the same for the following year, the registrar shall not afterwards grant a certificate to such solicitor, except under an order of the Master of the Rolls, who may direct the registrar to issue a certificate to such person upon such terms and conditions as he shall think fit.

Gen. Rules and Reg., Nov. 1, 1865.

The articles must be entered into with a practising solicitor in England or Wales, but no person who has regularly served his clerkship is prevented or disqualified from being admitted by reason of his master having omitted or neglected to take out his annual certificate, or to enter or register the same. 7 & Vict. c. 86, s. 4.

ARTICLE 24.

STRIKING OFF THE ROLL.

A person ceases to be a solicitor when he is struck off the roll.

He may be struck off the roll at his own request, or

He may be struck the roll upon an application founded upon his misconduct.

ARTICLE 25.

STRIKING OFF THE ROLL AT REQUEST OF SOLICITOR.

A solicitor may not be struck off the roll at his own request unless he satisfies the court that there is no complaint pending against him as a solicitor, and that he does not apprehend any.

Ex parte Gray, 9 Dowl. 336; re Sturdy, 2 Jur. N. S. 452.

Note 1.

This proceeding is necessary before being called to the Bar, and by a rule of the Inns of Court before admission as a student.

Note 2.

The solicitor need not state his object in being struck off.

Ex parte Burrell, 11 Jur. 1062.

Note 3.

If he applies to be re-admitted he must undertake not to take advantage of his privilege in any pending action.

Hull's Case, 2 W. Bl. 991.

ARTICLE 26.

STRIKING OFF THE ROLL FOR MISCONDUCT.

The court will strike the name of a solicitor off the roll:—

- (1) For any indictable offence involving much criminality.

If the offence has reference to a proceeding in court, and is clearly proved, the court will act before conviction or indictment. Stephens v. Hill, 10 M. & W. 28.

Note.

The marginal note in Re Knight v. Hill, 1 Bing. 142, is misleading.

If the offence has no reference to a proceeding in court, the application will not be heard until after conviction. Even in these cases [probably] the court will act where there is no necessity for the interposition of a jury.

- (2) For practising a fraud on the court. Lush's Pract. 1, 326, and Chitty's Pract. 1, 145, 146.

Note.

Although this is given as a distinct ground, it will be found that the fraud upon the court upon which the court has acted has amounted to an indictable offence also.

- (3) [Perhaps] if he contumaciously continue in contempt after being attached. Suggested by Mr. Justice Lush. Practice, O. S. 1, 320.

The court will not interfere where the solicitor is simply charged with:—

- (1) Being unable to refund the amount found due to the client by the allocation of the Master. Mear v. Lloyd, 2 C. B. N. S. 409.
- (2) An irregularity. Loft, 618.
- (3) Acts of which he has not been personally cognisant. Re Eyre, Palmer, and Evans, 1 C. B. N. S. 51.

- (4) Making extortionate charges.

Mear v. Lloyd (sup.).

Note 1.

If a solicitor is charged with such gross misconduct as amounts to an indictable offence he will not be compelled to answer.

Short v. Pratt, 1 Bing. 102.

Note 2.

After the filing of an affidavit of complaint, in which grave charges are made against the solicitor, no compromise will be allowed to be made. If the client withdraws the court will not be satisfied except on the filing of an affidavit by the attorney, denying the charges and affirming that there was no composition, and that he had acted in good faith. Anon. 12 W. R. 1012.

Illustrations.

In the following cases the court ordered the solicitor to be struck off the roll:

1. Where, acting without authority, he instructed counsel to appear for parties interested in money in court, and to consent to its payment out of court: (Re Collins, 7 De G. M. & G. 558.)
2. Where he induced a witness subpoenaed by the opposite party to absent himself from the trial on receiving an indemnity against the consequences of disobedience to the subpoena: (Stephens v. Hill, 10 M. & W. 28.)
3. Where he disobeys the direction of a master, who has ordered him to refund a sum of money, and keeps out of the way: (Anon., 1 D. & R. 528.)
4. Where he has been convicted of larceny: (Ex parte Bramall, Cowp. 529.)
5. Where he sent letters to a person, threatening him with a prosecution in order to extort money from him: (R. v. Southerton, 6 East. 143.)
6. Where he had appropriated money of the client to his own use: (Re Martin cited in Charley's New Practice Cases, 63.)
7. Where, being the only person who acted professionally in a trust, he induced his co-trustee (a client) improperly to sell out the trust fund, which was received by him and applied to his own use: (Re Chandler, 22 Beav. 253.)
8. Where he committed perjury in an affidavit of increase: (Re Garbett, 18 C. B. 403.) This case, however, is scarcely an authority: (See Re Mant, 5 L. T. Rep. N. S. 254; Anon., 3 N. & P. 389.)
9. Where he signed a fictitious name to a pleading, or that of a barrister, or forged a barrister's name thereto: (See Lush's Practice, 1, 321.)

In the following cases the court refused to strike the solicitor off the roll:

1. On an affidavit alleging a distinct case of perjury, there being no admission on the part of the attorney sufficient to render the interposition of a jury unnecessary: (Anon., 3 N. & P. 389.)
2. Where he has merely omitted to pay money pursuant to an order and rule of court: (Guldford v. Sims, 13 C. B. 370.)
3. Where he acted without authority in conducting a prosecution for felony: (Re Davis, 1 B. C. C. 207.)
4. Where he merely disobeyed a rule of court: (Ex parte Townley, 3 D. P. C. 364.)
5. Where he had advised his client to hand him over money, which the Insolvent Debtors' Court subsequently considered to be a misappropriation: (Smith v. Towner, 3 D. P. C. 678.)
6. Excessive and extortionate charges in a bill of costs in the absence of wilful fraud: (Mear v. Lloyd, 2 C. B. N. S. 409.)
7. Publication of a libel: (Anon., 2 D. P. C. 110.)

ARTICLE 27.

EFFECT OF STRIKING OFF THE ROLL UPON ADMISSION OF CLERK.

No person who shall have duly served his clerkship shall be prevented or disqualified from being admitted and enrolled, nor liable to be struck off the roll if admitted, by reason of the solicitor to whom he has been bound having been after such service struck off the roll. 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73 s. 9.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

ORDER OF REFERENCE BEFORE AWARD AFTER THE JUDICATURE ACT—PRACTICE AS TO SIGNING JUDGMENT ON—MOTIONS FOR JUDGMENT.—The old law and practice in connection with arbitration still exist as to references to arbitration made under the old system, and such references are not governed by the Judicature Act or the rules of court made under that Act. An order of reference was made prior to, but the award after, the passing of the Judicature Act: Held, that the successful party was entitled to sign judgment on the award, and that as the rules of court did not apply to such a case, he was not bound to set down the case on motion for judgment: (Lloyd v. Lewis, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 539 Ct. of App.)

ACCOMMODATION BILL—NOTICE OF DISHONOUR—NO EFFECTS—REMEDY OVER AGAINST PRIOR PARTIES.—An indorser of an accommodation bill has a right to notice of dishonour, unless it be shown that he would, if he paid the bill, have no remedy over against any other party to the bill: (Turner v. Samson and others, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 537. Ct. of App.)

DRAMA—INTERNATIONAL COPYRIGHT—FIRST REPRESENTATION—PUBLICATION—INJUNCTION.—The plaintiff, a naturalised American, was the author of a drama which had been first represented in America, and, subsequently, with the plaintiff's consent, at the defendant's theatre.

13. Hill, near Liverpool but late of 50, Balliol-row near Liverpool. March 1; Foster and Son, 20, 21 live } North John-street, Liverpool.

hos.), Oddfellows'-street, Blackpool, Lanroprietor. Jan. 12; Jno. H. Sykes, solicitor et, Blackpool.

1.), Carnforth, Lancaster, joiner and builder.
Wrenside and Son, solicitors, Burion, West-

1.), 8, Earl-street, Great Bolton, Lancaster, eeper. Jan. 31; J. Grundy, solicitor, 29, Ox-

1.), Rye House, Stanstead Abbots, Hoddes-
1, Esq. Feb. 28; Brooks, Jenkins, and Co., ctor's-commons, London.

1.), formerly of 11, Union terrace, Plymouth, eman. Feb. 8; Addleshaw and Warburton,
King-street, Manchester.

1.), Spice Mills, Pembroke Wharf, Caledonian-sex, manufacturer of Thorley's Food for of Selina Villa, Finchley, Middlesex. Jan.
ristow, and Co., solicitors, 4, Bedford-row.

(Robt.), Wroughton, Lancaster, farmer.
it and Ellis, solicitors, The Arcade, King-ard), Toller Fratrum, Dorset, gentleman.

A. Smith, solicitor, Blandford, Dorset.

1. Wm.), Great Cornard, Suffolk, yeoman.
ews, Canham, and Andrews, solicitors, Sudin), 2, Penrill-villas, Upper Bangor, Car-eman. Jan. 21; H. Barber, solicitor, Ban-rgo B.), formerly of 129, Wood-street, Lon-at manufacturer, and also formerly of 24,

-road, Hackney, Middlesex, Esq., but late of Jodge, Carlton-road, Putney, Surrey, Esq.

ters and Gush, solicitors, 3, Finsbury-circus,

Deal, Kent, painter. Mercer and Co., soli-
-en-street, Deal.

he Laurels, Old Chester-road, Erdington, field, Warwick, gentleman. Feb. 1; San-

1 Co., solicitors, 41, Waterloo-street, Bir-), formerly of Worcester, hop merchant, but sett, Stafford, gentleman. March 1; Santh, solicitors, High-street, Dudley.

GENTLEMEN WHO PASSED THE
FINAL EXAMINATION,
NOVEMBER, 1876.

Elford
Charles
y Hill
C. F.
a Sharer
Russell
Ashton
Jared
as J. C. L.
S. G. B. A. r Mellor Henry derick W.
Charles e Henry ottam
Arthur R.
ham E.
C. M. M.
F. W. n, jun.
n James k
Hatt
Newton
Edwin rick G. B.
Blomfield
in G.
s C. s, B.A.
nce W.
um B.
s, B.A.
s, L., B.A. rick mbrose H.

Augustus
Edward
Cavell
Sealy
Ray, B.A.
Edmund avid ansittart as Henry lowman
Revely
D., B.A. d jun.
J. H.
Parkinson
d. er Fredk.

land Edgcombe
d Cateby
James s Edgar win, B.A. ston nt Hamil-M'Gregor

Leak, Oliver
Le Brasseur, Robert E.
Leslie, John E. C.
Littlewood, William B. G.
M'Master, Frank Sheldon
Main, Edmund Lee, B.A.
Mann, Frederick John
Martin, Arthur
Metcalfe, Arthur Tom
Metcalfe, Frederick K.
Mills, Arthur Walter
Morgan, James
Morris, Arthur
Morton, Henry
Mosely, Gerard
Norris, John B., B.A.
Omnanney, Chas. Hy.
Ord, Edward
Page, Thos. Edmund
Pain, Wm. Percy
Parry, John Wm.
Parry, Robert Ivor
Pattinson, Walter Badeley
Pennington, Thos. R.
Perry, Fredk.
Peto, Ernest Wm.
Phillips, Edward Wm.
Poole, Walter Joseph R.
Powell, George
Pride, Walter Henry
Pritchard, Wm. Burchell
Proud, John Thomas
Ratcliffe, Jonathan
Reed, Eugene Ernest B.
Reveley, Thomas
Rigg, John Newton
Robinson, Joe Arthur
Robinson, Thos. James
Rogers, Wm. Thomas
Rogerson, Arthur Robert
Russell, Thos. Hawkes
Senior, James Hubert
Sharp, William
Shepherd, Andrew Thos.
Sidgwick, Alfred, B.A.
Simpson, Hugh James
Slade, James Robert
Sladen, Randolph M.
Smith, Alfred John
Smith, Wynham
Smith, Walter Edward
Stead, Holmes
Stretton, Charles
Sutcliffe, Henry
Sutthery, Frank Pellatt
Thompson, Gustavus
Thornycroft, Charles V.
Tickell, Clifton Herbert
Tomkins, Wm. Jones
Urquhart, Hugh John
Vint, Charles John
Wallis, Joseph
Walpole, Walter Robert
Webb, Wm. Arthur
Weir, Percy Jenner
Wells, Robert
Westbrook, Arthur
White, Wm. Edward
Whittingham, William
Willcox, Samuel
Williamson, Wm. Smedley
Winch, Charles
Winthrop, W. Young, B.A.
Wolston, Arthur C. R.
Wyon, Arthur

Esq., Surgeon, Bridport, Dorsetshire under BURTON'S NERVEIN a specific for y severe cases under my care have ous and permanent relief. I therefore se to the Profession and the Public as who suffer from toothache."—[Advvt.]

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

Inquiries, as to the several Examinations and as to Admission on the Roll of the Supreme Court, as to being called to the Bar, and as to taking out and renewal of annual certificates, should be addressed to the Editor (Students' Department).

No lectures and classes are delivered or held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, during the Christmas vacation, which terminates on the 3rd of Jan. next. On Thursday the 4th of Jan. a lecture on Equity will be delivered by Mr. Dickinson.

THE next preliminary examination will be held in the Hall of the Incorporated Law Society, and at some of the following Towns:—Birmingham, Brighton, Bristol, Cambridge, Cardiff, Carlisle, Carmarthen, Chester, Durham, Exeter, Lancaster, Leeds, Lincoln, Liverpool, Maidstone, Manchester, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Oxford, Plymouth, Salisbury, Shrewsbury, Swansea, Worcester, York, on the 21st and 22nd of Feb. in the ensuing year.

Candidates are required by the Judges' Orders to give one calendar month's notice to the Incorporated Law Society, before the day appointed for the Examination, of the languages in which they propose to be examined, the place at which they wish to be examined, and their age and places of education. All notices should be addressed to the Secretary of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, W.C.

Examination days for 1877—Wednesday 21st and Thursday 22nd February; Wednesday 16th and Thursday 17th May; Wednesday 11th and Thursday 12th July; Wednesday 24th and Thursday 25th October.

A Form of notice was given in our last issue. The next Intermediate Examination will be held on the 18th Jan. 1877.

AN examination certificate is only available for admission on the roll of the Supreme Court within six months from its date, and must otherwise be specially enlarged by an order of the Master of the Rolls, which should be applied for at the Petty Bag Office.

IN case of the death of a principal during articles, fresh articles should always be entered into without loss of time. The time which elapses between the day of the death of the principal and the day of the date of fresh articles being entered into, does not count, so that the further articles must be for a time sufficient to make up for this loss of service, as well as for the unexpired term of the original articles of clerkship.

WHERE articles expire between the 9th April and 23rd May 1877, candidates may be examined on the 24th and 25th April 1877; and if between the 21st May and 2nd Nov. 1877, may be examined on the 19th and 20th June 1877; or, of course, at any subsequent examination. Six weeks' notice at least is necessary for these examinations, the same to be calculated up to the first day of the month of examination.

ARTICLES of clerkship, or assignments of articles of clerkship, dated on any day during December must be enrolled and registered at the Petty Bag Office on or before the same days in the month of June next, and when articles or assignments are required to be, and are, enrolled and registered on any day during the month of December, they must be produced and entered at the Law Institution on or before the same day of the month of March next. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 8 and 9, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 7. Failure to comply with these statutory requirements often entails a loss of time upon articulated students.

THE general rules and regulations as to the several examinations prior to admission on the roll of solicitors, and as to taking out and renewal of annual certificates, issued on the 2nd Nov. 1875, provide in effect "that if any solicitor of the Supreme Court, after having at any time taken out a stamped certificate, shall, for the space of a whole year from and after the expiration thereof, have neglected to renew the same for the following year, or has failed to obtain such a certificate within twelve months from the date of his admission on the Roll, the registrar shall not afterwards grant a certificate to such solicitor, except under an order of the Master of the Rolls, and for the purpose of obtaining such an order the applicant shall, six weeks before the application is intended to be made, give notice thereof as in the case of an original admission, and the affidavits in support of such application shall be filed at the Petty Bag Office, and a copy thereof shall at the same time be left with the clerk of the Petty Bag, to be delivered by him to the Registrar of Solicitors, and the order for such taking out or renewal, shall (if made) be drawn up on reading such affidavits, and an affidavit of such copies having been left and notices given. Upon an application to dispense with the required notice of intention to take out or renew a certificate, a summons must be served on the Registrar of Solicitors calling on him to shew cause within ten days why such taking out or renewal of certificate should not be allowed; and if no cause be shown to the satisfaction of the Master of the Rolls, he may make an order for allowing such certificate to be issued."

IN another column we print an inquiry from a law student, from which it will be seen that it was six weeks from the day he went up for the Intermediate Examination before he was informed that he had failed to pass. We cannot admit that so long a delay is necessary or desirable. On the contrary, one consequence of this protracted delay in this particular case is that our correspondent is thrown over the January examination, not now having time to give a full month's notice. Greater dispatch is absolutely needed in such case, and if necessary the staff of clerks at the Law Institution should be increased.

ELSEWHERE we publish a report of the annual general meeting of the United Law Students' Society, which was held in the hall of the Honourable Society of Clement's-inn, on Wednesday last, Mr. J. T. Davies (solicitor), in the chair. The honorary officers of this society are certainly deserving of all praise for the very close attention they give to their several duties, and foremost among them are probably the honorary secretary (Mr. Rubinstein), and the honorary treasurer (Mr. Walter Dawson), who now retires from office. The society has achieved a great success, in the midst of which we have only one fault to find, namely, that for one dry question of law discussed by the society, there are probably ten which have little or nothing to do with law at all. We should like to see a larger number of legal and jurisprudential questions discussed at the weekly meetings.

A PRIZE offered to the law students of Huddersfield for the best essay on the question, "Do the changes effected by the recent Judicature and Appellate Jurisdiction Acts constitute a reform in keeping with the requirements of the age," has been awarded by the learned judge of the Huddersfield County Court under the most favourable circumstances, as will be seen from a report in our present issue. The students of Huddersfield are to be congratulated upon securing the warm support of the learned judge (J. W. de Longueville Giffard, Esq.) in promoting the welfare of their local debating society, the advantages to be derived from which societies, by law students, can hardly be exaggerated, and hence our endeavours to promote their formation and their welfare throughout the country.

BRADFORD LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

THE ordinary fortnightly meeting of the above society was held at their rooms in the West Riding Court Hall, Ings, on Wednesday, the 6th Dec., 1876, A. W. Robinson, Esq., in the chair. The debate was on the following subject: "Should the borough franchise be extended to the counties, and a consequent redistribution of seats made?"

BRISTOL LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

AT a meeting of this society held in the Law Library, Small-street, on Tuesday evening last, Mr. John Miller, solicitor, in the chair, the following was the subject for discussion: "A. enters into an agreement by parol, whereby he lets an estate from year to year to B., reserving the game; is such reservation good?" The affirmative side of the question was taken by Mr. Fenwick and Mr. Cross, who relied in their arguments upon the Game Act (2 & 3 Will. IV. c. 32, s. 8) and the case Reg v. Thurstone; whilst the negative was led by Mr. Foster (Hon. Sec.), and supported by Mr. Powell, both relying upon Bird v. Higginson, and that sect. 8 of the same Act did not prevent the operation of the principle that the right of shooting was an incorporeal hereditament, and the grant of it must be by deed. The following members spoke on the subject, viz., Messrs. Blake, Mosely, Gachy, Caparn, and Carpenter, and the motion was affirmed by a majority of six votes. At the same meeting Mr. T. C. Fenwick was elected chairman of the society in the room of Mr. A. H. Dymond (resigned), and Mr. W. F. Foster gave notice of his intention to resign his duties of honorary secretary, and was snatched from his past services.

HULL LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

THE usual ordinary meeting of this society was held on Tuesday, the 19th inst. Mr. Farrell took the chair. The subject discussed was: "In an action of slander, can the special damage consist of the tortious act of a third person induced by the slander?" Mr. Babington took the affirmative, and was followed by Mr. Johnson. The negative was taken by Mr. Lambert. Finally the question was decided in the affirmative by a majority of three. The next meeting will be held on Tuesday, 2nd Jan. 1877.

HUDDERSFIELD LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

A GENERAL meeting of this society was held last Monday night at the County Court, James Yeoman, Esq., in the chair. There was a large attendance of members. After the transaction of some preliminary business, the chairman said that it would no doubt be within the recollection of those present that some time ago Mr. Charles Ford, of the LAW TIMES, offered a prize, to be called "the LAW TIMES Prize," of the value of two guineas, to the writer of the best essay on the question, "Do the changes effected by the recent Judicature and Appellate Jurisdiction Acts constitute a reform in keeping with the requirements of the age?" In addition to this prize two prizes were offered by the society, one of the value of two guineas to the winner of the LAW TIMES Prize, and a second, of the value of one guinea to the writer of the next paper in order of merit. The essays were forwarded by their writers to the learned president, Mr. Learoyd (solicitor), on the 1st Dec. last, one bearing the motto "Foy et Devoir," written by Mr. R. Welch; another, bearing the motto "Sic vos non vobis, &c.," written by Mr. D. F. E. Sykes. The essays were submitted by Mr. Learoyd to the learned County Court Judge (J. W. de Longueville Giffard, Esq.), who had kindly consented to act as adjudicator on their merits. His Honour had with extraordinary dispatch already arrived at his decision. Mr. Yeoman then read the judge's award, which was addressed to the president, and was as follows:

"I have read with great interest and, I may add, profit, the two essays submitted to my consideration, and have been very much impressed with the amount of learning and ability that both exhibit. The subject of the essay is one by no means easy to deal with within the limits assigned, involving as it does necessarily the consideration of the former state of our law in order to illustrate the beneficial character of the changes effected by recent legislation. Both of the essayists have treated the subject very much in the same way, and, so to speak, on the same lines, both estimating favourably, perhaps too favourably, the advantages to be expected from the change. I have really felt great doubt how to determine a question so nicely balanced, both the essays showing very great merit, and both some few blemishes. To define more precisely my meaning I would say that 'Sic vos non vobis' exhibits greater vigour and originality than his competitor, but is inferior to him in patient thought, in sobriety of reasoning, and conciseness of style. For these reasons I am of opinion that the first prize ought to be awarded to the writer who adopts as his motto 'Foy et Devoir.'"

The learned judge then adds, with reference to law students' societies:

"If I had entertained any doubt of the usefulness of these institutions, which I did not, the perusal of these essays would have convinced me that they are admirably calculated to encourage and assist our young men in the study of the laws of our country."

After the reading of the Judge's award, the Chairman called upon Mr. D. F. E. Sykes to open the evening's discussion on the proposition "That a codification of our 'corpus juris' is both practicable and desirable." The negative of the proposition was sustained by Mr. J. W. Piercy and Mr. J. A. Slater. The advantages and difficulties of codification met with a full discussion, the result being, on the proposition being put to the vote, a decision in favour of the affirmative by a majority of three.

LEICESTER LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

THE sixth meeting of this society for the session 1876-77 was held in the Law Library, Friar-lane, G. W. Randa, Esq., in the chair. The question for discussion was: "If goods are sold by a trader in the ordinary course of his business on a Sunday, and the purchaser afterwards promises to pay therefor, can the trader maintain an action for the price?" Mr. Dickinson opened the debate in the affirmative, and was supported by Mr. Ellis. Mr. Kowatt and Mr. Holyoak supported the negative side of the question, and after the summing by the chairman, the question was put to the meeting, and decided in the negative by a majority of 6.

PLYMOUTH, STONEHOUSE, AND DEVON-PORT LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

THE last meeting of this society was held at the Athenaeum, Plymouth, on the 15th inst., J. Shelly, Esq., in the chair. The attendance of members being larger than at any previous meeting, the advisability of having a mock trial was discussed, and after the president had explained the manner in which these trials had been conducted in other societies, it was resolved that one should be held at the first meeting in February next. The chairman then read the rules as settled at a special meeting held on the 8th inst., and after a long discussion and their alteration in one or two particulars, the same were passed. The moot point for the evening was then discussed: "Where A., an executor, asks a banker to pay him money for the purpose of discharging a debt of the testator, and the banker pays the money, will such money be construed to be paid to the use of A. in his capacity of executor?" In the affirmative Mr. Gny and Mr. Graves, in the negative Mr. E. F. Fox. After the last gentleman had spoken, and before the seconder (Mr. Helpman) had been called upon, it was moved, seconded, and resolved to adjourn the meeting. The next meeting of the society will be held on 12th Jan. 1877.

UNITED LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

A MEETING of this society was held at Clement's-inn Hall, on Wednesday evening, 20th Dec. 1876, Mr. Jesse Thomas Davies in the chair. This meeting was the annual meeting of the society. The respective officers presented their reports, which showed the condition of the society to be highly satisfactory. Subsequently the officers for the ensuing session were elected. Mr. J. S. Rubinstein was re-elected for the second time as secretary; Mr. W. Shirley Shirley was elected as treasurer; Mr. W. Dawson, as secretary for societies in union; and Mr. E. Dean as secretary of the legal correspondence department. Mr. E. C. Rawlings was re-elected as secretary of the general correspondence department; Mr. E. H. Quick was elected as reporter; Messrs. J. T. Davies (re-elected), P. Thornton, and W. C. Owen were elected on the committee; and Messrs. H. Lewis, Arnold, and C. E. Beal, auditors. The society will resume its meeting on the 17th Jan. 1877.

EXAMINATIONS AT THE INCORPORATED LAW SOCIETY.

NOVEMBER 1876 FINAL EXAMINATION.

AT the examination of candidates for admission on the roll of solicitors of the Supreme Court, the examiners recommended the following gentlemen, under the age of twenty-six, as being entitled to honorary distinction:—

1. George Henry Carthew, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Sparkes and Pope, of Crediton, and Messrs. Guscotte, Wadham, and Daw, of London.
2. William Thomas Rogers, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Bateson and Co., of Liverpool.
3. William Percy Pain, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Pain, Clarke, and Webb, of Whitchurch, Hants, and Messrs. Austen, De Gex, and Harding, of London.
4. Arthur Mellor Bramall, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Gollaty and Warton, of London.

The Council of the Incorporated Law Society have accordingly awarded the following prizes of books:

- To Mr. Carthew, the prize of the Honourable Society of Clifford's Inn.
- To Mr. Rogers, the prize of the Honourable Society of Clement's Inn.
- To Mr. Pain and Mr. Bramall, prizes of the Incorporated Law Society.

The examiners have also certified that the following candidates, under the age of twenty-six, passed examinations which entitle them to commendation:

1. William Burchell Pritchard, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Burchells, of London.
2. Arthur Tom Metcalfe, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Marshall, Sons, and Bescooby, of East Retford, and Mr. Richard Smith, of London.
3. Thomas Edmund Page, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Coaks, Rackham and Cooper, of Norwich, and Messrs. Sole, Turners, and Knight, of London.
4. Arthur Walter Mills, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Cousins and Burbridge, of Portsmouth.
5. Clifton Herbert Tickell, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Lyne and Holman, of London.
6. Thomas Hawkes Russell, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Ryland, Martineau, and Carslake, of Birmingham, and Messrs. Sharpe, Parkers, and Co., of London.
7. Arthur Robert Rogerson, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Bagshaw and Wigglesworth, of Manchester.

8. Wyndham Smith, who served his clerkship to Messrs. Erie, Son, Orford, and Co., of Chester, and Messrs. J. E. Fox and London.

The council have accordingly awarded certificates of merit.

The examiners have further announced following candidates that their answers to questions at the examination were highly satisfactory, and would have entitled them to distinction if they had not been above the twenty-six:—

John Buckley Norris, B.A., who served his clerkship to Messrs. Keen and Eq London.

Walter Henry Pride, who served his clerkship to Mr. Edwin Hughes, of Liverpool.

The number of candidates examined was of these 150 passed and thirty were posted.

By order of the council,

E. W. WILLIAMSON, Secy
Law Society's Hall, Chancery-lane, Lond

Queries.

INTERMEDIATE EXAMINATION.—On the 9th inst. sent myself for Intermediate examination morning (five weeks and five days after) I have a letter from the secretary expressing regret that I was unsuccessful. The next examination is fixed for proximo. What opportunity (I should like to know) left me to prepare for that examination? the long delay in sending out the notices to me apprising them of their success or non-success and prejudicial to them? I was article in Sep 1874, for three years, my term therefore expires September, 1877; under the circumstances when I advise me to go in for the Intermediate, and when Final? I had hoped to have passed the Final before expiration of my articles, but cannot see what there is of my now doing so. Kindly advise me above points.

[Go up for the Intermediate on the 25th Apr and in June for the Final examination. You fairly have expected to learn sooner the result examination.]

— I was article on 27th Jan., 1875, for five years; what is the latest date that I can go up for my intermediate examination?

[The 8th Nov. next.]

— I was article on the 10th June, 1875, years; when must I go up for my Intermediate examination?

[J. Moore.]

[You can present yourself in January or Apr 1877, and passed my Intermediate examination 9th Nov. last. Will you kindly inform me what earliest time at which I can present myself for examination?]

[November 1878.]

DEATH OF PRINCIPAL DURING ARTICLES.—article in June, 1874, for five years, and my principal died in October, 1874. In April 1875 I entered articles with my present principal for a period of years and eight months, which with the period months I served with my late principal, will amount to five years' actual service. If I write the third paragraph in your issue of 1 inst., under the heading "Law Student's Journal," articles will expire in December 1879. Will that do?

[Yes.]

— I was article on the 14th June, 1870, to Mr. man, of Manchester; he died on the 10th Jan 1875, and my articles have not been transferred to one. I have passed my Intermediate examination only wanted five months to the completion of articles at the time of his death. Since then I have been and still am under medical treatment, and doctor ordered me to have plenty of exercise in open air, in consequence of which I have not been attending at the office. Can my articles now be transferred for the residue of my term, viz., five months, or there have to be an application to a judge for leave to transfer them? What course would you suggest in the above circumstances?

[No application is necessary. Merely fresh articles for the residue of the term of five years still stand under articles, namely, five months from signing the fresh articles. The time between death of principal and date of entering into fresh articles does not count.]

FINAL EXAMINATION.—My articles expire on the 1st July next, and I shall be of age on the 25th Apr following. When can I present myself for Final examination?

[In June next upon obtaining a judge's order allowing you to present yourself notwithstanding your minority; if not, in November next.]

STAMPING ARTICLES.—What time is allowed of execution, without penalty?

[Articles cannot now be stamped after sunset except upon payment of a penalty of £10.]

Answers to Correspondents.

LONDON L. L. B.—(1) Yes. (2) About £15 for the examinations. (3) The Registrar of the Law University, Burlington House, Piccadilly, will the regulations for Degrees in Law, on application.—In answer to the query of "Subsidiary" in the TIMES for Dec. 9, I am pleased to inform him that he can take the London L.L.B. without going to London at all, except for a few days at each session. (2) The fees are about £12. (3) For information write to The Registrar of the Law University, Burlington-gardens, W. In reply to your correspondent "Subsidiary" inform him. (1) It is not at all necessary, it is impossible, to keep terms in London, as the don for residence at the University. (2) The re #5 for the first LL.B. examination, and the re for the second LL.B. examination. (3) On ation to the Registrar of the University, seed London, W., he will receive post free a of the regulations relating to degrees in law, a reference to the University calendars he will se questions put at each examination. I presume re, that "Sebach" has already matriculated at m, for until he has done so he is not eligible for LL.B. examination.

J. W. P.

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

"THE LUNATIC—ORDER FOR MAINTENANCE. Action was brought on an order made by the court under 16 & 17 Vict. c. 97, s. 96, directing the guardians of a union to pay certain costs for maintenance of a lunatic pauper. The defendant defended the action. An application was made to have the statement of defence put under Order XXVII, rule 1. Held (by Mr. J. and Lush, J.) that though the defendant could not be appealed against, yet such order formed the subject matter of an appeal and the defendant was entitled to plead to such an order and if such plea affords no answer to the claim of maintenance the proper mode of objection is by a writ of certiorari. (Finch v. The Guardians of the Union, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 360. Q. B. Div.)

Y-WALL—METROPOLITAN BUILDING ACT 85—APPOINTMENT OF THIRD SURVEYOR
ION LAW PROCEDURE ACT 1854, s. 12—
G ACTION.—Where “a difference arises” a “building owner” and the “adjoining with reference to a party-wall, and the veyors appointed by the parties refuse to a third surveyor, the court has power, he Common Law Procedure Act 1854, s. 12,
int a third surveyor to act with the other settling the matters in dispute between ties, under the Metropolitan Building Act 85, sub-sect. 7, although an action be then to restrain the building owner from ing with an ancient right of the adjoining in the party-wall: (Re the Metropolitan g Act 1855; ex parte McBryde, 35 L. T.
.S. 543. Ch. Div.)

ZZLEMENT—PROCEEDS OF CHEQUE—FOR ACCOUNT OF MASTER—INDICTMENT.—The ices of an insurance company was at L.
were branch offices at M. and G. The managers at M. and G. having moneys to to the head office, paid them into local obtaining cheques thereon for the amount to the order of the prisoner (the chief r at the head office), and forwarded the by letter to the head office. It was the s duty to open the letters at the head ceive the remittances, and hand the same the cashier. The local managers at M. remitted by letter two such cheques for nd £400 respectively to the head office, he prisoner duly received. He indorsed the t them discounted by friends of his own, of handing them to the cashier to pay company's bank, and converted the pro-o his own use: Held, that the prisoner l the proceeds for and on account of his l, and that he was properly indicted for ing the money: (Reg. v. Gale, 35 L. T.
S. 526. Cr. Cas. Res.)

AL. IN CRIMINAL CASES.—The Judicature 1873 and 1875 have not changed the practice procedure in criminal cases; there is no appeal in such cases unless there is a point reserved for the consideration of the Crown Cases Reserved. An order made on the trial of a criminal information, in a criminal cause, and therefore an order made on the Crown side of the Bench Division, cannot be the subject of an appeal. (Reg. v. Steel and others, 35 L. T. Rep. 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 89

ANCE—DOCUMENT TO REFRESH MEMORY
STOCK COMPANY.—It was the prisoner's a timekeeper, to give to a clerk (not the ) a list of the number of days on which man had worked; and it was the clerk's enter these times in the time book, and out of wages due to each workman according returns; and from the time book at of paying the wages it was the prisoner's read out aloud the number of days each worked, and the wages were then paid to man by the pay clerk. The prisoner had falsified the list by overstating the time the workmen had worked, and the false it was entered in the time book by the d wages calculated accordingly. On the the entries were read out aloud by the and the amount of wages so represented the workman. On an indictment against for false pretences, the pay clerk was a witness, and, not remembering the parof the entries, he was allowed to refrain his memory by reference to the time book, because he saw the entries at the pay time when they were read out by the prisoner, and knew that the prisoner then read the entries correctly, and that he, witness, had paid the sums mentioned in those entries, although the entries were not made by himself. Held, that the time book was properly admitted to refresh the witness's memory. Parol evidence that a Joint Stock Company Limited has acted as an incorporated company is sufficient evidence of its incorporation as a limited company on an indictment for false pretences in which the property obtained is alleged to be the property of the A. B. Company, Limited: (Reg. v. Langton, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 527. Cr. Cas. Res.)

LANDS CLAUSES ACT—COMPENSATION TO TENANT—JURISDICTION OF JUSTICES.—Justices under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845 (8 Vict. c. 18, s. 121) may award compensation in respect of any interest being less than that of a tenant from year to year, although such interest arises out of a lease originally created for a longer term. In Aug. 1871 A. demised to the prosecutors for one year a piece of land by an agreement, giving option of renewal for a further two years afterwards. In Aug. 1873 the defendants served the prosecutors with a notice to treat, and in the same month of that year the prosecutors served the defendants with a notice of claim, requiring them to proceed to arbitration. An arbitrator was appointed by the defendants under protest, and an award was made, which the defendants refused to take up. Held, upon a special case stated in an action by the prosecutors for a writ of mandamus, that the claim was one for the determination of justices under the 121st section of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act: (Reg. v. Great Northern Railway Company, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 551. Q.B.).

RATING OF THE METROPOLIS—VALUATION LIST—STATUTE.—By sect. 42 of the Valuation of Property Metropolis Act 1869, the overseers "shall make and deposit the valuation list" before the 1st June, and the assessment committee "shall hold a meeting for hearing objections to the list" before the 1st Oct., and "shall finally approve the list" before the 1st Nov. Held, that the section was directory and not imperative, and that a valuation list deposited on 27th Sept., and finally approved on 21st Jan., was good: (Reg. v. Ingall, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 552. Q.B.).

BOROUGH QUARTER SESSIONS.

Borough.	When holden.	Recorder.	What notice of appeal to be given.	Clerk of the Peace.
Andover .....		W. W. Ravenhill, Esq. ....	10 days .....	Thomas Lamb.
Birmingham .....	Monday, Jan. 8 .....	A. R. Adams, Esq., Q.C. ....	14 days .....	T. B. T. Hodgson.
Bridgewater .....	Tuesday, Jan. 9 .....	P. H. Edlin, Esq., Q.C. ....	14 days .....	John Trevor.
Chichester .....	Tuesday, Jan. 9 .....	John J. Johnson, Esq., Q.C. ....	10 days .....	E. Titchener.
Doncaster .....	Thursday, Dec. 23 .....	Edgar John Meynell, Esq. ....	10 days .....	Edward Nicholson.
Dover .....	Friday, Dec. 29 .....	Harry B. Poland, Esq. ....	2 days .....	G. W. Ledger.
Exeter .....	Monday, Jan. 1 .....	C. G. Frideaux, Esq., Q.C. ....	2 days .....	T. J. Bremridge.
Faversham .....	Monday, Jan. 1 .....	C. E. Dering, Esq. ....		F. F. Giraud.
Gloucester .....	Tuesday, Jan. 9 .....	G. S. Whitmore, Esq., Q.C. ....	7 days .....	Francis W. Jones.
Gravesend .....	Friday, Dec. 29 .....	Standish G. Grady, Esq. ....	2 days .....	Geo. E. Sharland.
Northampton .....	Friday, Jan. 5 .....	John H. Brewer, Esq. ....	10 days .....	C. Hughes.
Oswestry .....	Friday, Dec. 29 .....	J. R. Kenyon, Esq., Q.C. ....	14 days .....	Wm. Isaac Bull.
Portsmouth .....	Friday, Jan. 5 .....	Mr. Serjeant Cox .....	10 days .....	Jno. Howard.
Reading .....	Wednesday, Jan. 3 .....	J. O. Griffiths, Esq., Q.C. ....		Jos. O. Whitley.
Shrewsbury .....	Wednesday, Jan. 3 .....	W. F. F. Boughey, Esq. ....	14 days .....	Richard Clarke.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

MANDATORY INJUNCTION—LIGHT AND AIR—DAMAGES.—Mandatory injunction refused, and nominal damages, without costs on either side granted in a case where the plaintiff had only a life interest, subject to an existing lease, and where, though there was a substantial interference with present comfort in respect of light, there was no prospective injury or diminution in the saleable value of the property. There being no case as to air, the plaintiff's case as to light was made less strong by its being addressed conjointly to air and light. As proceedings were taken under the old practice, the plaintiff should have sought his remedy by action at law: (Perkins v. Slater, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 356. Chan. Div.)

PROBATE OF COPY WILL—PERSONS INTERESTED IN TESTACY—COMPLETION OF TITLE.—The copy of a will may be admitted to probate in order to aid the completion of the title of a testator's representative in the Court of Chancery, but the consent of those persons, if any, who may be interested in the event of an intestacy is required before a grant of probate can be made: (In the goods of John Entichnap, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 427, Prob.)

ANNUITY—FORFEITURE CLAUSE—WRIT OF SEQUESTRATION—SPECIAL CASE—PRACTICE—STAY OF PROCEEDINGS—COSTS OF SPECIAL CASE—RULES OF COURT 1875, ORDER XXXIV., RR. 1 AND 2.—Testator gave an annuity to the plaintiff for life, or until he should assign or encumber his interest under the will, or any part thereof, or until he should assign or encumber his interest under the will, or any part thereof, or until he should do or suffer some act or thing, or something should occur, whereby his interest under the will, or any part thereof, should, or might be, or but for that stipulation would, become vested in some other person, or whereby he would cease to be beneficially in receipt of the annuity; the testator also gave two other specific gifts to the plaintiff, to which the same clause of forfeiture was by reference appended, and a share of the ultimate residue of his estate to which the forfeiture clause did not apply. In Dec. 1874, a writ of sequestration was issued against the plaintiff. Upon this the trustees of the will were advised that the forfeiture took effect, and they ceased to pay the proceeds of the annuity and the other gifts to the plaintiff. In March 1875 the plaintiff commenced this suit against them. In May 1875, the plaintiff's in the residue of the testator's estate was sold under an order of the court that issued the writ of sequestration. A special case was stated for the opinion of the court as to whether the plaintiff's interest under the will had not ceased under the forfeiture clause. Held, that plaintiff was no longer entitled to receive the annuity, or the proceeds of the other gifts, which ceased to be payable from the date of the sale of the residue; that all further proceedings in the suit must be stayed, and that plaintiff must pay the costs of the suit and the special case. Held, also, that plaintiff had no ground of action against the trustees, and that they were perfectly right in refusing to pay the annuity and proceeds of the other gifts after the issue of the writ of sequestration, and that plaintiff must pay the costs of a motion made to restrain them paying them to anyone but himself: (Dixon v. Rowe, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 548. Ch. Div.)

VOLUNTARY GIFT—BONDS PASSING BY DELIVERY—CORROBORATIVE EVIDENCE—LEASEHOLD HOUSE—IMPERFECT GIFT—INSUFFICIENT DECLARATION OF TRUST.—The defendant, A. B. K., alleged that the testator had given her in his lifetime two Egyptian bonds, which, together with one admitted to be the defendant's, were found in the testator's safe after his death. Upon one of the bonds in question was written, in the defendant's handwriting, "given to me with bonds 18th April, 1870, A. B. K." The coupons on these bonds were proved to have been carried to the testator's account at the bank. The defendant alleged that these bonds were in the testator's safe for safe keeping only, and that the cash for the coupons carried over to the testator's account had been regularly paid to her. The only evidence proving the delivery of these bonds, and explaining the fact of their being in the testator's safe, was that of the defendant herself and her sister. The defendant also claimed a leasehold messuage, which she alleged the testator had built for her. The land on which this house was built was to be held on a long lease from the Dover Harbour Board, to be granted to the testator upon the completion of the house. This lease, however, had not been granted at the time of the testator's death, but there was a duplicate copy in an envelope amongst the testator's papers, on which was written "for A. K." Proposals for a lease of a part of this house had been made and accepted, and on the envelope, which contained the letter of acceptance, was written, "The lease of twenty-one years to C. F. T., of London, to be made out in A. B. K.'s name," also "T.'s rent to be paid to A. B. K., making, without harbour rent, £45." Evidence of the testator's intention was given. The defendant, A. B. K., was appointed executrix. Held, as to the bonds, that the evidence of the gift by delivery was sufficiently established, and the fact of their being found in the testator's safe satisfactorily explained, and the defendant to them allowed. Held, as to the leasehold house, that the gift was an imperfect gift, which could not be perfected without the aid of the court, and that aid, according to the principles laid down in Milroy v. Lord (7 L. T. Rep. N. S. 178; 4 De G. F. & J. 264), could not be given: (Bottle v. Knockor, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 545. Chan. Div.)

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

TRADER—KEEPER OF HOTEL—LODGING-HOUSE KEEPER—PROFESSIONAL NURSE—BANKRUPTCY ACT 1869 (32 & 33 VICT. C. 71), s. 1.—A professional nurse who keeps a lodging-house for invalids, and nurses and boards them at a profit is a "keeper of an hotel," and therefore a trader, within the meaning of schedule 1 to the Bankruptcy Act 1869. Decision of Mr. Registrar Pepps affirmed: (Ex parte Thorne, re Jones, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 532. Ct. of App.)

FRAUDULENT TRANSFER OF PROPERTY—PAST DEBT—PRESSURE—FRAUDULENT PREFERENCE—PAYEE IN GOOD FAITH.—The burden of proof is on the person who claims the protection of the proviso at the end of the 92nd section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869 as "a payee in good faith." Semble, that that proviso applies not only to cases of fraudulent preference under the 92nd section of the Act, but also to cases of "a fraudulent conveyance, gift, delivery, or transfer of the debtor's property or any part thereof" under sect. 6, sub-sect. 2: (Ex parte Tate, re Tate, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 531. Ct. of App.)

COMPROMISE BETWEEN TRUSTEE AND CLAIMANT—EXAMINATION OF CLAIMANT—BANKRUPTCY ACT 1869 (32 & 33 VICT. C. 71), s. 27.—A mortgagee of property of a bankrupt who had foreclosed before the bankruptcy, sent in a claim three years after the commencement of the bankruptcy to prove for £21,000 as the balance of his debt after giving credit for the value of his security, treating the foreclosure as reopened. The trustee in the bankruptcy, believing that the claimant's right to reopen the foreclosure could only be decided by a very expensive litigation, effected a compromise with him with the assent of the creditors, by the terms of which compromise his claim was to be admitted for £20,000, all the other creditors were first to receive 18s. in the pound, then the claimant was to receive 18s. in the pound, and afterwards he and the other creditors were to share pari passu in the remaining assets. But for this claim the estate would have been sufficient to pay all the other creditors in full and to leave a large surplus for the bankrupt. The bankrupt disputed the validity of the claim altogether, and applied to the Court of Bankruptcy for an order for the examination of the claimant in respect of his claim: Held, that the bankrupt was entitled to the order asked for, as the compromise was one which was only detrimental to the bankrupt, and was not such a one as the trustee could effect under sect. 27, sub-sect. 3 of the Bankruptcy Act 1869: (Ex parte Austin; re Austin, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 529. Ct. of App.)

COMPOSITION—CREDITOR VOTING FOR COMPOSITION WITHOUT DEDUCTING VALUE OF SECURITY.—A judgment creditor delivered a writ of f. fa. to the sheriff before the judgment debtor had filed a liquidation petition. The creditors duly passed resolutions accepting a composition of 2s. 6d. in the pound. The judgment creditor proved for the whole amount of his judgment debt, and voted in favour of the composition. After the registration of the resolutions the sheriff seized under the writ. Held (affirming the decision of Bacon, C.J.), that the judgment creditor, not having seized before the composition was accepted, had no security upon the debtor's property, and could not enforce the writ after the resolutions were registered. Held also (affirming the decision of Bacon, C.J.), that the judgment creditor, having voted as an unsecured creditor, could not afterwards be allowed to set up his security: (Ex parte Jameson; re Balbirnie, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 533. Ct. of App.)

GUARANTEE—OSTENSIBLE PARTNER—RELEASE OF—PROOF—DELAY.—In consideration that the Halifax Bank would open a banking account with A. and B., and make advances to them, B. guaranteed the payment of the balance which upon the closing of such account should be due to the bank from A. and B. individually or in partnership to the extent of £1000. No partnership at any time existed between A. and B., but when the guarantee was given, B. represented to the bank that he was a partner with A., but did not wish his name to be disclosed. A. traded under the name of A. and Co. for about two years, and then became bankrupt. The bank proved against A.'s estate for the whole amount due upon the balance of account. Subsequently B. paid the bank £1000 under his guarantee and received a receipt "in discharge of all claims against him in reference to the guarantee or in connection with

A. and Co." The trustee of A.'s estate having rejected the proof by the bank upon the ground that the release to B. operated also to release A.: Held, that as no partnership had existed between A. and B., and no right of contribution which A. could enforce against B., the release of B. by the bank did not operate as a release to A.: (Ex parte The Halifax Joint Stock Banking Company; re Armitage and Company, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 554. Bank.)

COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

Friday, Dec. 15.

(Before Mr. Registrar PEPPS.)

Re VARBETIAN; Ex parte LEVY.

Injunction—Composition—Default—Action.

THIS case raised questions of importance in regard to the rights of creditors in cases of composition. It was an application by a debtor, who had registered a resolution for a composition, to restrain proceedings in an action brought by Messrs. H. and E. N. Levy against him, in the Common Pleas Division of the High Court of Justice, for the recovery of a debt of £1314.

De Gez, Q.C. and E. C. Willis appeared in support of the application.

F. O. Crump for Messrs. Levy.

The evidence showed that on the 24th Nov. 1870, H. Varbetian, a merchant, carrying on business at Finsbury-chambers, London-wall, presented a petition to this court for the liquidation of his affairs by arrangement or composition. His debts were then returned at £15,693, with assets £2000. At the first meeting, held on the 12th Dec., a resolution was passed by the creditors to accept a composition of 3s. in the pound, by the three instalments of 1s. each, at three, six, and nine months from the 1st Jan. then next; and such resolution was confirmed at the adjourned meeting and duly registered. Messrs. Levy, who were merchants, carrying on business in Market-buildings, Mark-lane, proved under the petition as creditors for the sum of £1010. The first instalment of the composition having become due on the 1st April 1871, default was made in payment of the amount on that day; but on the 4th April the money was tendered by the clerk of the debtor's solicitor to Messrs. Levy and refused. On the 1st July 1871, the second instalment was tendered to Messrs. Levy with the like result, and they also, on the 3rd Oct. 1871, refused to receive the third instalment of the composition which became due on the 1st of the same month. On the 18th Nov. last, Messrs. Levy commenced an action in the Common Pleas Division for the recovery of the whole amount of their debt and interest, amounting together to £1314. An application was now made by the debtor for an injunction to restrain further proceedings in the action. The application was opposed by Mr. Levy on the ground that at the date of the petition the debtor traded at Manchester and Smyrna, and that, in fraud of his creditors, he described himself in his petition for liquidation simply as trading in Finsbury-chambers, London-wall; and on the further ground that the amount of the instalments of the composition had not been duly tendered. The debtor denied that he had any interest in the businesses carried on by his brothers at Manchester and Smyrna.

De Gez, Q.C., in opening the case on behalf of the debtor, pointed out that the first objection made by Levy went to the whole resolution; and he contended, upon the authority of Ex parte Harley (L. Rep. 8 Ch. 743), that where a resolution accepting a composition payable by the debtor had been duly passed and registered, an individual creditor was precluded from proceeding at law in order to try the validity of such resolution.

Mr. Registrar PEPPS said he did not think he could deal with the first objection upon the present notice of motion; there must be a substantive motion to set the resolution aside.

De Gez proceeded to contend, in regard to the second point, that the court would allow a reasonable time for payment of the composition, and that the debtor had, in substance, complied with the terms of the resolution.

Crump, on the other side, urged that the agreement by which the creditors were bound was that the debtor should pay the instalments on certain specified days, and that if he made default, the right which the creditors had to sue for the whole amount of their debts revived. He pointed out that no excuse was offered by the debtor for non-payment of the first and third instalments of the composition on the days when they respectively became due. He cited Edwards v. Coombe; Re Hatton; and Re Harper.

Mr. Registrar PEPPS said the question appeared to be whether or not the tender has been properly made. That was a matter personal to the debtor and the creditor. The other creditors had assented to the resolution, and had obtained all they wanted, and the debtor, being in possession of his estate, was in a position to defend an action which might be brought against him. He did not think this court ought to exercise its power of restraining actions unless it was satisfied that complete justice could not otherwise be done, or the interests of persons besides the debtor and the creditor were affected. This was simply a question between the debtor and creditor, and he did not think sufficient ground had been shown for an injunction.

Application refused.

LEGAL NEWS.

JURORS' PENALTIES.—In the Common Pleas Division, Mr. Justice Grove said he had previously fined the absent jurors 40s., but now had not secured attendance he now fined them each. He added that he would, if necessary, fine them £10 each, and so on until they came.

The Legislature of Western Australia has passed a Bill to legalise marriages with a dead wife's sister. When this Bill and that of Queensland have received the Royal sanction marriages will be legal throughout the Australian Continent. The Lower House of the New Zealand Legislature have five times passed similar Bill.

LADY LAWYERS.—The Council of Union College, London, have awarded the Josephine Scholarship in Jurisprudence to a lady who has already taken the first place in all that she is permitted to attend at this institution, who is now working her way in such assiduousness at the law as is allowed to persons not called to the Bar.

STOCKBROKERS AND THE BANKRUPTCY.—The Court of Appeal at Lincoln's Inn before them on Thursday an appeal, inter partes Saffery re Cooke, from a decision of Mr. Registrar Pepps as Chief Judge, which raised a question of great importance to members of the Stock Exchange. On the 27th April last Mr. Edward Cooke, a stockbroker, and a member of the Stock Exchange, found that he was unable to meet his engagements on the 1st day, and he wrote to the secretary of the Stock Exchange informing him of the fact. Cooke was accordingly declared a defaulter in the usual way. He was then summoned to attend a meeting of the committee and the result was that the next day he was the official assignee of the Stock Exchange, cheque for £5000, the whole, or nearly the whole of the balance standing to his credit as a banker's. The sum was distributed among the Stock Exchange creditors, and he had then about £3000 to meet the claims of other creditors amounting to £100,000. He was then adjudicated a bankrupt, and the trustee in bankruptcy applied for an order on the official assignee of the Stock Exchange to refund the £5000, on the ground that the payment was a fraudulent breach of the trust. The registrar refused the application, and the trustee appealed. The court reversed the decision of the registrar.

FRIENDLY SOCIETIES AND POOR GUARDIANS.—Last week a deputation of Friends waited upon Mr. Salt, M.P., the Parliamentary Secretary of the Local Government Board, in reference to a grievance arising from the Law Amendment Act of last session, under which the deputation allege that the guardians are to be removed from the managing body of a friendly society, so far as a member's sick pay, and to recompense them for his maintenance while in receipt of a workhouse or asylum connected with a law union. The deputation consisted of Messrs. Shawcross, Pinchbeck, Wood, Brown, Tummon, Fisher, and Glover, the chief officers of the Foresters, and they explained that the clause, which had been put into the Act at the close of last session, had raised a great outcry in all the large towns, and they wished to have it abolished. There were over 2,000,000 members of friendly societies, and by their frugal habits, saved the poor rates much, and they considered it very hard to deprive an unfortunate man's family of what he contributed to him from a friendly society. Mr. Salt, in reply, said the clause was introduced to remedy the grievance which arose in a case where a man was in the habit of getting drunk and was chargeable to the parish, and after being received his club money, with which he went into such a state as to become an inmate of a workhouse; and this was really a great loss upon the poorer class of ratepayers. He thought the clause would apply to any other and he could assure them that if it was generally in the way they had indicated the Department would see that the grievance was remedied.

THE VACANT CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE LAND.—A printed circular, issued to certain servative members of the Bar, invited them to attend an "an adjourned meeting," in the a room, Four Courts. The circular bore the names of James P. Hamilton, Q.C., Henry Fitzgibbon, C., M. Blood Smyth, John Frazer, Robert Leton, William Irvine, Wm. B. Kaye, and Kisbey. Shortly after the hour named for meeting, the following assembled at the appointed place: Dr. Andrews, Q.C., J. P. Hamilton, Atcheson Henderson, Q.C., W. B. Kaye, John Frazer, J. Creed Meredith, LL.D., Raymond, W. H. Kisbey, John Giblin, J. H. Blake, J. Hewson, T. Pakenham, M. Blood Smyth, R. Irwin, J. arte, John Sullivan, George E. Price, arphrey, R. Shackleton, D. Colquhoun, W. S. Eades, E. F. Beatty, &c. The most privacy guarded the proceedings so far as the topics discussed, the speakers, and the way they expressed, but after an hour spent in debate, the following resolution communicated to the representatives of the as having been passed by the meeting:— "we desire to give the strongest contradiction to the language of the Daily Express, derogating the professional ability of the Vice-Chancellor and Attorney-General for Ireland, and disclaiming any intention of dictating in any way to the Government, to express our opinion at the tone of disparagement adopted in that paper towards the Conservatives of the Bar and generally." — The Freeman's 21.

EUPION GAS DIRECTORS.—Judgment was given by the Court of Appeal (Sir Balliol Sir E. Amplett, and Mellish, L.J.), on the day morning at Westminster, in the case of all and others v. The Queen, better known as the Aspinall case. The appeal was brought by Aspinall, Whyte, Muir, and Charles, from the judgment of the Queen's Bench on, sitting on "the Crown side," affirming the verdict of the indictment upon which they found guilty of conspiring to obtain a settlement on the Stock Exchange by false and silent means. A very elaborate argument delivered by Mr. Benjamin for the purpose showing that the only counts on which the indictment of guilty was founded were so drawn that it was impossible for the defendants to know the precise nature of the offence — if, indeed, it was one — which they were charged. The Queen's Bench (the Lord Chief Justice and Justices Turner and Field) were of opinion that the charge was sufficiently stated, and that the evidence was sufficient to sustain the verdict. The decision was now affirmed by the Court of Appeal (whose judgment was read by Sir Balliol and the defendants were thereupon taken into custody by the officer of the court, an application by Mr. Bowen for four days' grace in which to obtain bail being refused. Messrs. Muir and Aspinall have already suffered their two months' imprisonment, and the substantial question before the court was as to the twelve months' imprisonment to which Aspinall and Knockner were sentenced, and to undergo which the Court of Appeal has now committed them.

EARLDOMS.—Lord Redesdale's promotion may give some reflections on the composition of the peerage to which he will henceforth belong. Though an earldom is the most noble of English titles of nobility, the senior earldom of England not merged in a title dates only from the reign of Henry VI.; and Lord Shrewsbury has a precedence of forty-three years over Lord Derby, the earl on the roll of peers, whose ancestor preceded to the rank which his descendant now holds by Henry VII. The third earldom, Huntly, was created by Henry VIII.; the fourth, Duke, by the Government of Edward VI.; the fifth, Devon, by Queen Mary; the next three, viz., Donbigh, and Westmoreland — by James I.; the next four — Lindsey, Stamford, Winchester, and Chesterfield — by Charles I.; the next — Sandwich, Essex, Carlisle, Doncaster (the Duke of Devonshire sits in the House of Commons), Shaftesbury, Berkeley, and Abingdon — by Charles II.; the next four — Scarborough, Rutland, Coventry, and Jersey — by William III. while the last surviving earldom in the Peerage of England, not merged in a higher title, of Poulett, which dates from the reign of Anne. The remaining earls in the House of Commons, of course, either "of Great Britain" or "of the United Kingdom," or representative for Scotland or Ireland. Several dukes, marquises, however, hold earldoms of early date. Thus, the Duke of Norfolk is Earl of Arundel, and premier earl, the Duke of Beaufort is Earl of Worcester (1514), and the Duke of Rutland is descended from Thomas Manners, third Lord De Ros, created Earl of Rutland in 1525. This peer, by the way, made a very dog Latin about his creation, obliging to Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor, to say "mutant More." "Nay, by your leave, my lord," replied More, "the pun is better in the Honour change Manners." The English earldoms now in existence, and dating back from the fifteenth century, appear to be but three in number, while those dating from the sixteenth century may be counted on one's fingers. Indeed, though the aristocracy of birth in this country is both ancient and illustrious, the titles borne by its members are nearly all of modern origin. The oldest barony, that of de Ros, dates from 1284, the 49th of Henry III., though the Irish barony of Kingsale was created by Henry II. in 1181. But hardly a score of baronies can boast an older origin than the reign of James I., the first of our princes who seems to have bestowed honours with a prodigal, not to say a reckless, hand. Yet long before his time "the commonalty murmured that there never were so many gentlemen or so little gentleness." Meanwhile, it is satisfactory to know that, in spite of pretty numerous creations in late years, the peerage at the present day probably bears a smaller proportion to the number of the Queen's subjects than in any former reign. In William III.'s time the House of Lords counted little less than 200 peers to a population of some 5,000,000. It now counts about 500 lords temporal to a population for England alone of about 24,000,000. The earls are less than a third of the Upper House; and rarely indeed is the title attained by anyone who has begun life as a commoner. Since the Revolution, however, three Prime Ministers have crowned their careers by the acceptance of earldoms. History, nevertheless, has obstinately refused to change Walpole's name into Orford, though the elder Pitt is frequently known as Chatham. Earldoms won by lawyers during the same period have been more numerous, as the titles borne by Lords Aylesford, Cowper, Macclesfield, Hardwicke, Mansfield, Eldon, and Cottenham bear witness. Lord Aylesford was himself the son of a Chancellor and an Earl (of Nottingham). Mansfield was a son of the Scottish Viscount Stormont. The rise of the first Earl of Hardwicke is perhaps the most extraordinary in our legal annals. Philip Yorke, the son of "solicitor of respectability at Dover," was called to the Bar in 1715, at the age of twenty-four, and in 1720 was made Solicitor-General. Four years later he became Attorney-General, and in 1733, before he had completed the forty-third year of his age, Lord Chief Justice of England and a peer of the realm as Lord Hardwicke. A little more than three years placed him on the woolsack, where he sat comfortably for some nineteen years, being further raised during his tenure of office to an earldom. It must be remembered, too, that the office of Chancellor meant a good deal more in those days than at present; both the power and patronage enjoyed by the Keeper of the Great Seal were greater, while the authority of the First Lord of the Treasury was not so great. — Pall Mall Gazette.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editors do not hold themselves responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.

LAW BOOKS.—When I quitted my home, A.D. 1838, for article clerkship, my chattels included standard legal works, viz.: Jacob's Law Dict. 2 vols. 4to.; Burn's Justice of the Peace, 5 vols. 8vo., by Dr. Burn, LL.D., 1762, 9th edit. 1783; Beccaria on Crimes, 1 vol. 8vo.; De Lolme on the British Constitution, 1 vol. 8vo.; the editions were old, but the books, even now, are esteemed sufficiently to justify this notice. Giles Jacob published his dictionary A.D. 1729, abridged A.D. 1743; Sir P. E. Tomlins, Kt. (the 4th edit. of whose law dictionary, based upon Jacob's, appeared A.D. 1835) edited the 11th edit. 1797. Mr. Jacob published, A.D. 1714, the Accomplished Conveyancer; A.D. 1716, the Clerk's Remembrancer and Conveyancer's Guide; A.D. 1717, the Catalogue of Writs, &c., of the Westminster Courts, and Lex Mercatoria; A.D. 1718, the Law of Appeals and Murders, compiled from Gale's MSS., also Lex Constitutionis; A.D. 1721, Treatise of Common, Civil, and Canon Law; A.D. 1724, the Court Keeper, with precedents, 7th edit. 1781; A.D. 1725, Reason of the Law, or Pleadings on Common and Statute Law; A.D. 1726, Common Law Common Placed, a substance of collected cases; A.D. 1730, Chancery Practitioner; A.D. 1736, The Seventeen Tables to the Law, The Attorney's Practice, and Cite Liberte of London; A.D. 1740, Treatises on Estates and The Game Laws; A.D. 1744, the Compleat Conveyancer; A.D. 1748, The Statute Law Common Placed, including the Statutes from Magna Charta to 22 Geo. 2; A.D. 1749-54, Jacob's Law Grammar concluded the list. Richard Burn published, A.D. 1755, his Justice of the Peace, 5 vols., 8vo., 30th edit. 1869; A.D. 1760, Ecclesiastical Law; A.D. 1764, History of the Poor Laws; A.D. 1775-6, Observations on the Bill for Erecting County Workhouses. The final edition of Blackstone's Commentary intact is stated to be the 21st, which appeared A.D. 1844. The Marquis Beccaria's Treatise on Crimes, based on humane principles, was issued in Italian A.D. 1770, and English 1775: is cited by Blackstone, Book IV., Com. Ch. 25, and elsewhere. De Lolme's vol. was published in French A.D. 1771 and A.D. 1790; English editions appeared anonymously A.D. 1775-6-7, 1781-4, 1807-10, '14, '16, '21; the latter one by a barrister. In 1827 a small edit. was published with a frontispiece, showing Minerva teaching law to Britannia; A.D. 1834, an edit. by W. H. Hughes, M.P., with portrait of De Lolme and copious notes; in 1838 the edit. of A. J. Stephens was published, vol. 1 contains pedigree tables of the British Kings, &c., and a Treatise on Government, by Mr. S.; A.D. 1846-50 Bohn's edit., 1868 the Chandos edit., and 1870 Hallam's edit. appeared. The letters of Junius were attributed to De Lolme, who published also A Parallel between the English Constitution and the Antient Government of Sweden, A.D. 1772; Thoughts on Taxes and on Marriage, no date; The British Empire in Europe, A.D. 1787; A Treatise on Executory Devises, A.D. 1798-1800. His History of Human Superstition, Paraphrase on Mons. Boileau's Work on Flagellation, and An Introduction to De Foe's Treatise upon the Union between Scotland and England were received were received with favour. Jean Louis De Lolme was a Swiss barrister, clever but imprudent, who died A.D. 1806, aged 66 years. The European Magazine for Dec. 1816 contains a memoir and portrait of Mr. Granville Sharp, with a description of his works, including the volume on Retribution. — CHR. COOKE.

SECRETARIES, &c., AS ADVOCATES.—Referring to your remarks on the appearance of secretaries in courts of justice as advocates, may I suggest the true rule as it appears to me. All the Queen's subjects have a right to appear in person, and are under no obligation to employ solicitor or counsel. Surely this right ought not to be lost by persons who become a corporation aggregate; but should only be modified so as to meet the altered circumstances. From this consideration I deduce, as I think, the true rule, viz., that the person upon whom service of process is sufficient and equivalent to personal service in other cases is for all the purposes of a court of justice the corporation in person; and that appearance by that officer is the only manner in which a corporation can exercise the universal right of appearing in person. On this view I have a dozen times allowed prosecutions to be conducted by a clerk to a local board of health, who is not a solicitor. — A MAGISTRATE'S CLERK.

[Your view is not entirely correct. Suppose the case of a company formed to assist creditors to recover debts, is the secretary of such a company, paid say £100 a year for acting as advocate of the company in court, to have all the privileges of an advocate in a court of justice as though he was appearing for himself? He, or any director, or officer, or servant, may appear to give evidence and prove facts, but not cross-examine witnesses, address the jury, argue before the court, and otherwise act as a lawyer. See the Solicitors' Acts. Police officers have been known to appear as advocates for railway companies, but County Court judges have at once denounced the practice. — ED. SOLS.' DEPT.]

MAGISTRATES CONFERRING WITH THEIR CLERKS.—There is not much fear of your correspondent putting an end to the sensible practice of magistrates conferring with their clerks in private. Will he contend that when the magistrates confer with one another the parties have a right to hear all that is said so as to answer it? Of course not. Then why have the parties the right to answer the clerk's advice? The clerk is no advocate or partisan of either side, but an adviser of the magistrates. If he is to be prevented correcting all the erroneous views of the law that magistrates take in any other manner than by exposing them, I am afraid "justices' justice" will justly become the byword it is sometimes said to be. I go a step further, and say that the clerk's advice to the magistrates is a privileged communication of the same or a higher kind than other advice by a solicitor to his clients. It is no part of his duty to advise upon the facts, and a wise man will not volunteer to do so; but if his opinion be asked, I fail to see why it is improper to give it. — A CLERK OF PETTY SESSIONS.

ADVOCATES IN POLICE COURTS.—I shall feel greatly obliged if you will reply to the following question in your next number, at the same time referring me to the Act regulating the practice. Is a person, who is neither a barrister, solicitor (either certificated or uncertificated), nor an articulated student, entitled to appear in a Police Court or a County Court to advocate a case on behalf of a client? A practice prevails at one of the London Police Courts at least, by which, if a manager clerk brings a letter addressed to the magistrate from his principal requesting that such clerk should conduct the case he is allowed to do so. This, sir, you will see at once opens the door to practitioners not too particular to having "managing clerks" in this capacity to any number, and it is really not just to Professional men, who have not only had the expense of entering their Profession, but have annually, so long as they remain in practice, their certificate to pay. I do not wish to disparage the legal knowledge of many of these managing clerks, but in common fairness, if they wish to act as, and appear before the public as, members of the solicitors' branch of the Profession, they should be compelled to pass through the same tests and be liable to pay the same fees as solicitors themselves. K.

[We entirely agree with your views. None but barristers and solicitors can appear as advocates in County Courts. See the Solicitors' Acts 1843 and 1860. As to Police Courts, see sect. 2 of 6 & 7 Vict., c. 73. There is some difference of opinion as to the exclusive rights of barristers and solicitors in the latter courts. We do not approve the practice you name, and which we are aware obtains in the metropolitan police courts.—ED. SOLS.' DEPT.]

NOTES AND QUERIES.

None are inserted unless the name and address of the writer are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

Queries.

42. CRIMINAL.—A person styling himself a commercial traveller, puts up at various first class hotels in this and neighbouring towns, in some cases staying some days, and living in a most expensive manner. From each place he decamps, leaving no address, and without paying the hotel bill. A warrant is applied for and returned, the applicant being referred to the County Court. As it is evidently a systematic swindle, I shall be glad to know whether any and what criminal proceedings can be taken in the matter? S. S. C.

43. SUCCESSION DUTY.—A. becomes entitled to an estate for life upon the death of B.; B. died before A.; A. died without paying the duty. Is the personal estate of A., or the estate in which he only had a life interest, liable for the duty? H. B. H.

44. POWER OF ANTICIPATION.—Testator devised all his property to trustees for conversion, and declared that the trustees should invest the sum of £2,000, and pay the income thereof unto his daughter M. during her life, but so that, whenever she should be under coverture, the same should be for her separate use, without power of anticipation, and after her death should hold the investments and the income thereof upon trust for the children of his said daughter M., as she should appoint, with trusts over. Proviso, that his trustees might raise any part or parts of the fortune of his daughter M., or her children, under the trusts aforesaid, and apply the same for her or their advancement and benefit. Although the testator before declared that his daughter (if married) was not to have the power of anticipation, would the trustees be authorised by the last proviso to raise her (testator's daughter M.) fortune if she were married and had children, or were married and had no children, or were unmarried? ARTICLED CLERK.

45. LEASE.—Lease provides all future rates and taxes shall be paid by lessee. Subsequent local Act throws first instalment of rate on landlord, and the remaining instalments on tenant. In present case who pays first instalment?—J. H. L.

LAW SOCIETIES.

THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS' SOCIETY.

ANNUAL MEETING.

THE annual meeting of this society was held on Monday evening, 18th Dec. 1876, at Clement's Inn Hall, under the presidency of Mr. W. T. Charley, D.C.L., M.P.

The circular convening the meeting having been read, and the minutes of the last general meeting having been confirmed,

Mr. Charles Ford (hon. sec.) said he had received a number of letters and some telegrams from gentlemen who were unable to be present. He was glad to be able to announce the receipt of a letter from Mr. William Gordon, M.P., intimating his willingness to undertake the office of president of the society if elected. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. W. T. Charley, M.P., then rose to address the meeting, and was received with applause. He said: Gentlemen—It is with feelings of satisfaction at the progress which this society has made during the comparatively short period of its existence that I rise to address you as its president for the last time. This society has mainly two objects in view: first, to protect the profession against the encroachments of unqualified persons; and, secondly, to promote the amicable arrangement of questions arising between the two branches of the profession. With regard to the first point, the encroachments upon the profession of unqualified persons, I think that these encroachments have for the most part been upon solicitors. It is impossible to disguise the fact that there are questions which arise between the two branches of the profession, some of them, indeed, being of a burning character, with regard to which the interests of the two branches of the Profession are not identical—(hear, hear)—and, I may almost say, are antagonistic. Solicitors say that they are encroached upon by the Bar, and barristers say that solicitors encroach upon the Bar. I had fondly hoped at one time that this society would act as a kind of board of conciliation or board of arbitration, between the two branches of the Profession (hear), but the weakness of the representation of the Bar in the membership of this society, and the strength of the representation of solicitors, have convinced me that the time was not yet opportune of considering the matters connected with the second object of the society, and that, therefore, we should confine our attention as much as possible to protecting the Profession and the public against the encroachments of unqualified persons. (Hear, hear.) If we had succeeded in finding some energetic young barrister, gifted with the same indomitable perseverance of Mr. Charles Ford (hear, hear), who is, as you are aware, a member of the solicitors' branch of the Profession, I think we might have succeeded in making the element drawn from the Bar as strong in the membership of this society as the element drawn from the other branch of the Profession; but, unfortunately, we have not succeeded in securing the services of this energetic barrister, and, consequently, the enactments promoted by the society seem almost exclusively to trust to the promotion of the interests of solicitors. (A voice: "Quite right too.") At the same time, I would venture to point out that, when legislating in regard to outsiders, the interests of the two branches of the Profession are practically identical (hear, hear), and that any Legislative enactment which tends to promote the interests of one branch of the Profession directly, must indirectly tend to promote the interests of the other branch of the Profession. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Ford will bear me out when I say that I have declined to promote any measure in the House of Commons which would infringe upon the privilege of that branch of the Profession to which I belong (hear, hear, from Mr. Ford). I trust the time may arrive when a body may be formed which may adequately represent the Bar, and by the decisions of which the Bar of England may consent to be bound. (Hear, hear.) It certainly was a singular anomaly, notwithstanding the existence of many powerful organisations connected with solicitors, formed mainly for the protection of their interests, that it was not until this society took the matter up that any attempt was made to extend to the legal profession the benefits of the measure, which had for a long time existed on the statute-book, from protecting the medical profession against the encroachments of unqualified persons. The 12th section of the Attorneys and Solicitors Act 1874, which was entirely due to this society, has extended to solicitors the protection against unqualified practitioners which has long been enjoyed by the medical profession. The solicitors of Ireland considered this enactment so useful that they promoted and carried last session a Bill, the principal clause of which was copied from it word for word, to extend its benefits to Ireland. This is an answer to those who say that the point was not hardly worth considering. Now, I think that both the public and the Profession owe a debt of gratitude to this society for passing that enactment. I say deliberately "the public" as well as "the Profession," because it is quite as much to the interest of the public as to that of the Profession that quack lawyers should be suppressed. (Hear, hear.) I am happy to say that that is the view entertained by the chief magistrate of the metropolis. A case was heard at Bow-street Police-court before Sir James Ingham, on the 29th Aug. last, in which a person of the name of Dobson was proceeded against under one enactment of having illegally used the name of a qualified practitioner in the matter of a petition in bankruptcy. Sir James Ingham characterised the offence as "one of the most serious nature to society at large." You observe the words of Sir James Ingham, "to society at large"—not merely to solicitors, but "to society at large." (Hear, hear.) This is our answer to those who say that this society is merely a "trades union," and that it ignores the interests of the public. This society has also been instrumental in passing two small enactments, called after itself, "The Legal Practitioners' Acts 1875 and 1876." It was an undoubted fact that unscrupulous persons came to solicitors, and engaged their services, and not only so, but induced them to disburse money on their behalf, and then, within the month which must elapse, according to the law of the land, before a solicitor can sue his client, absconded. It was necessary that some relief should be afforded against this abuse, accordingly the Legal Practitioners' Act of 1875 was passed, an enactment enables solicitors to go before a jury, and, on proof that the client is trying by means to defeat or delay his claim, he can leave to bring his action within the month, to tax his costs, and immediately levy them. A short enactment was also passed last session the society—"The Legal Practitioners' Act 1876." Under the Probate Act, proctors were admitted all the privileges enjoyed by solicitors, but the other hand, solicitors were only admitted practice in the Probate Court, and were not admittance to the ecclesiastical courts. This anomaly was subsequently remedied as regards most of the diocesan courts, but the anomaly still remained that solicitors could not appear in the provincial courts of Canterbury and Exeter, while proctors were permitted to practise in the courts. It was possible this anomaly have been unredressed had it not been for the passing of the Public Worship Regulation Act 1874, which enabled Lord Penance to discipline with regard to the conduct of public services of the church; and I trust that the Recorder of the City of London may the Act as a necessary supplement to the Worship Regulation Act 1874. It certainly objectionable to those who promoted those courts, and clergymen who were not then should be obliged to go to the trouble and expense of procuring proctors to represent them instead of being in a position to employ their own solicitors. This society enables anyone to appear in the provincial courts of Canterbury and York by his own solicitor. In this enactment will be the means of those who sue and those who are sued in provincial courts, before Lord Penance, no trouble and expense. (Cheers.) Gentlemen, is another matter I should like to refer to, and is the clause for protecting the public and the profession against unqualified competitors. (Hear, hear.) By the 60th section of the Act, a penalty of £50 is imposed upon anyone not being duly qualified, who draws contracts for fee or reward. That enactment was intended to induce the authorities at the House to take action in case the Act was violated with impunity, and it was very much indeed to induce the authorities at the House to take action in case the Act was violated. It was necessary that proceedings should be taken in the name of the Attorney General in such action. Our object was to simplify the law while preserving the principles of the 60th section of the Stamp Act; at the same time reducing the penalty. Unfortunately, owing to the opposition of the mercantile members of the House of Commons, session after session we have been unsuccessful in carrying that clause, but the night which we initiated has been productive of results. You probably will have seen the report of the case, heard before Mr. Baron Pollock, special jury, on the 28th of last month, in which Sir John Holker (Attorney General) recovered a penalty of £50 against an accountant for drawing a bill of sale. I think that accountants draw a bill of sale every day. I look upon the decision in that case as a very great triumph, and I will prove a warning to those who violate the law. There is a remarkable incident connected with the history of this agitation, and that is the opinion on the part of the chief law adviser to the crown. (Hear, hear, and a laugh.) Sir John Holker is a personal friend of mine, and I will speak of him with every respect. He was Attorney-General in 1874 when I brought forward this clause. In his reply to me he said he considered the clause was entirely open to free trade. I think he might have said the words "free piracy," (hear, hear,) the accountants were better qualified to draw many legal instruments than solicitors (oh!), especially in connection with banking proceedings. This was the language of John Holker in 1874, and in the report of our Parliamentary committee for that year took the liberty of animadverting upon the language. In the case heard on the 28th of last, the Attorney-General spoke as follows: "This was a proceeding for a penalty incurred by the defendant under the provisions of the 60th section of the 34th Vict. c. 97 s. 60, which provided that no person who (not being a serjeant-at-law, barrister, or a duly certificated attorney, solicitor, or public, writer to the signet, agent, promoter, conveyancer, special pleader, or draughtsman in equity), either directly or indirectly, for an expectation of any fee, gain, or reward, shall prepare any instrument relating to real or personal estate, or any proceeding in law or equity, shall forfeit the sum of £50." The result of this provision was that every unqualified person drew certain legal instruments incurred a penalty, and in his opinion the provision was a wise and necessary for the protection of the qualified practitioners as well as for the public. It was very hard upon a man who had, through a long, a laborious, and an arduous training, and who had thereby duly qualified himself for the practice of the law, that he should it to the competition of those who were lifted, and, as a rule, were quite unfit to take the conduct of legal matters; and it is the interests of the public that their legal business should be transacted by duly qualified men, who, in case of want of skill or sense, were liable to an action, or subject to the control of the courts. Men, in my opening remarks I said this be the last time I should have the honour of seeing you as president of this society. I am to be able to state that a gentleman, who is highly respected, and who is one of the most of our metropolitan representatives in Parliament, Mr. William Gordon, has consented to become president of this society for the year. The selection of Mr. Gordon for this office is, I think, appropriate. As your out-president is a member of the Bar, I think it that your incoming president should be a member of the other branch of the Profession. Gordon is also a member of the Legislature, and has materially assisted me in carrying out measures promoted by the society; and I have felt that as he has done good service to the Bar in the past, he will do good service in the future. (Cheers.)

Charles Ford then read the Report of the Parliamentary Committee for the past

William Griffith, M.A. (barrister-at-law, chairman of the committee), in moving the adoption of the report, said it was the result of labour and energy on the part of the president and the hon. secretary, Mr. Ford. Through the assistance of Mr. Charley, M.P., they had been enabled to carry measures of interest to the Bar. It had been said that the society was a "dead union," but this he (the speaker) felt, for the Bills brought forward had been of great importance (hear, hear), benefiting the Bar at large. They must congratulate themselves upon having roused public opinion on these subjects, especially as regarded the Act of 1870, in the case of the Attorney-General v. Tett, which was reported in the Law Times of 2nd Dec. 1876. (Hear, hear.) There was another matter of importance which had been brought forward, viz., that the attesting of a bill of sale should only be by a qualified practitioner. (Hear, hear.) This principle was adopted by the Lord Chancellor in the Bill sent from the Upper House to the Lower House, and as long as Lord Cairns sat in office they would have this measure enacted. (Hear, hear.) The Parliamentary Committee had considered the relations of the two branches of the Profession, as well as inter se as in relation to the public, and they were of opinion that time had arrived when some practical measure should be made to shorten the transition of enforced idleness in passing from one of the Profession to the other. Why should not solicitors have the opportunity of joining the Bar, if they wished to do so? (Hear, hear.) Three years was a long time to deprive this privilege. On the other hand, members of the Bar thought that solicitors abused their calling if they wanted to go to another branch of the Profession. As a matter of opinion, however, that there should be facilities given for changing from one to the other. (Hear and cheers.) The Incorporated Law Society had discussed this question, and the other societies had been moving in the same direction, and it was to be hoped as the public became more enlightened, coupled with the energy of both societies, that before long this measure could be carried. Then, with regard to the Act of 1870, passed into law last session, which it was provided that it should be lawful for a certified solicitor of the Supreme Court to act as a proctor in the provincial courts of London and York, it was found that when the Workshop Regulation Act came into force, there were not a sufficient number of proctors to attend the persons who were engaged as suitors. In a case in the provincial court of York, it was found that the only proctor in the town engaged on the other side—(hear)—consequently the solicitor had to obtain a proctor from the other side. Solicitors, certainly, were admittedly competent to undertake the duties of a proctor, and Parliament had showed its sense of their competence, and wisely passed the enactment referred to. (Hear, hear.) With regard to the retirement of a member from the society, the decision was much to be regretted. (Hear, hear.) The society was greatly indebted to him for the position now occupied, for it was Mr. Charley who had occupied it, and his skill and eloquence in Parliament had been freely devoted to its interests; but to his numerous parliamentary engagements he had been compelled to resign. The hearty thanks from all the members he deserved for his valuable services. (Hear, hear.)

Wheatcroft seconded the adoption of the report, which was carried.

Mr. W. T. Charley, as honorary treasurer, then read the annual balance sheet.

Mr. Edwin Low (Smith, Fawdon, and Low) briefly moved its adoption, and he considered the report was thoroughly satisfactory.

Mr. W. H. Fullager, in seconding the motion, said the first observation he had to make was with reference to the subscriptions of the members to this society. It had been mentioned that they were only nominal, and so they were. He could not help characterising them as perfectly useless, for how could a society be of any practical use if its members, being of the legal profession, could only afford to pay a subscription of 5s. a year. He had spoken to some members of the Profession about this, and they had ridiculed the lowliness of the subscription. He thought the amount should be raised to one guinea a year. The sum of 5s. a year could hardly repay their excellent friend Mr. Ford for postage stamps and paper used in propagating the utility of this society (Hear, hear). If, as professional men, they really wanted to carry out the aims of this society, which was the object of every member belonging to it, they must know, from practical experience, that without money they could do nothing (Hear, hear). They got no assistance from the Incorporated Law Society to resist the encroachments of unqualified practitioners. (Hear, hear.) He had laid before the society several cases for prosecution, but they had refused to take any action in the matter. He could not appeal to the Legal Practitioners' Society because they wanted funds. He had come across many instances of encroachments upon the Profession by men who were a disgrace to it, yet he personally did not feel he could act the part of public prosecutor. If he belonged to a society, whose object was to suppress unqualified practitioners, by all means let them have funds to put down men who were a disgrace to the Profession. Instead of saying that they had only got £229 in hand it ought to be said that they had £500. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Charley.—In the first place, the officers of this society are all honorary, and, therefore, any money that is disbursed by them is afterwards recouped. In the second place the work of the society hitherto has been chiefly confined to Parliamentary action. The Bills being of a public character are paid for by the public. I may also point out that in connection with this society, there are fourteen law societies throughout the country, some of which are very large, like that of the Bristol Law Society, and many energetic, like the Stockport Law Society; the vice-presidents each subscribe a guinea a year. At the same time, if we could get a larger number of vice-presidents, each paying their guinea annual subscription, it would be very desirable in the interests of the society. The object of the smallness of the subscription is to enlist the sympathies of the legal profession throughout the kingdom. It is by moral means alone we can hope to carry out the objects we have in view. (Hear and cheers.)

A gentleman in the body of the hall, whose name did not transpire, asked the chairman if he had well considered the announcement he had made regarding his retirement from the presidential chair.

Mr. Charley.—Mr. Gordon has worked very hard in the interests of the society, and I think it is time that there should now be at the head a member of another branch of the Profession than that to which I belong. I shall, however, continue to hold the office of hon. treasurer. (Cheers.)

Mr. Holroyd Chaplin then moved the election of Mr. William Gordon, M.P., as president for the ensuing year, and that the gentlemen, who were annual subscribers of a guinea, be affirmed as vice-presidents of the society.

Mr. Wingfield seconded the resolution, which was unanimously carried.

Mr. Edwin Low then moved the election of Mr. Charles Ford as hon. secretary, Mr. W. Charley, M.P., as hon. treasurer, and the re-election of the retiring council, which was agreed to.

Mr. Charles Ford then read his annual report.

Mr. Holroyd Chaplin moved the adoption of the report, and trusted that in the ensuing year the society would have the benefit of the influence of Mr. Charley, M.P., and Mr. Gordon, M.P., in bringing before the House of Commons any measures that might involve the interest of the profession. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. A. F. Vaughan (Stockport) seconded the adoption of the report, and said that it seemed as if the society was showing the white feather in regard to the clauses of the Legal Practitioners' Bill, 1876, which dealt with bills of sale. He thought the best plan would be to continue to agitate the question. (Hear, hear.) They all knew that the property of the men who gave a bill of sale was frequently swept off. The society should endeavour by every possible means to carry out what they last proposed in regard to this matter. With respect to the relations between barristers and solicitors, he spoke in strong terms of the former neglecting their business after being "briefed." He advocated a special tribunal of the regulation of the bar, and did not see why barristers should not be under the same regulations as solicitors. (Hear, hear.) The Bar existed for the public, and not the public for the Bar. (Hear.) They all knew from practical experience that they could get no remedy against barristers, and if they were rash enough to complain to the benchers they were smothered at once. (Hear.) The Bar arrogated to themselves privileges totally out of reason, which privileges wanted abolishing. (Hear, hear.) Mr. Ford had referred to accountants doing the work of solicitors. He (the speaker) was glad to say that his brother had "nobbled" one of them, who, a short time back, was committed for subornation and perjury, and would have an opportunity of explaining his conduct before the jury at the next March assizes. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Charley.—With regard to the bills of sale clause, there is no intention on the part of the society to abandon it. The Lord Chancellor has sanctioned the principle by sending down to the House of Commons the Bill. In respect to the privileges of the Bar, they are as essential to maintain as the privileges of the House of Commons, and, as long as I have any voice in the matter, I should think the infringement of any privileges would result in a loss to the auditor, for how could he properly do his duty if he feared an action?

Mr. Vaughan.—So have solicitors the fear of an action.

Mr. Charley.—I am speaking of barristers in the character of advocates. With respect to barristers accepting work they cannot attend to it, it is becoming a glaring grievance; but the remedies lie in the hands of solicitors themselves. The chances are that a popular barrister will not be able to be present at a trial, yet solicitors are willing to "brief" him on the chance of his being present. It is really a great grievance. If counsel of the Common Law Courts were to confine themselves to their particular courts that would be a step in the right direction. (Hear, hear.)

Upon the resolution being put to the meeting it was carried.

Mr. W. H. Wheatcroft (Eastbourne) moved a vote of thanks to the Earl of Donoughmore for having again taken charge of the bills in connection with the society in the House of Lords. The noble Earl, he said, had been of great use to the society, which would be wanting in duty if they forgot to tender a vote of thanks to him. They heard from day to day constant complaints of the Incorporated Law Society. Some of the complaints were well merited, but out of the numerous body of solicitors throughout the country how many were there who did not belong to any society at all? (Hear, hear.) With regard to the lowliness of the subscription to the Legal Practitioners' Society, it was impossible for them to do much good unless they had a good sum at their bankers. Some solicitors had said "Why not join the Incorporated Law Society?" but the initiation fee was four guineas, and its general expenses were large. If the Legal Practitioners' Society was to be of any use to the Profession, every individual member must help. (Hear, hear.) It was no use their learned president bringing bills in the House of Commons unless the legal members of the Assembly supported him. Every country solicitor who had something to do with electioneering matters knew his power when election time came; and when a Bill was before Parliament solicitors should write to the members and urge them to support their bills. They all grieved very much on the retirement of the president (Hear, hear), who had worked very hard in the interests of the society, and he trusted on another occasion Mr. Charley would again fill the presidential chair. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Symonds (Dorchester), with some well-chosen observations, seconded the resolution, which was also carried.

A general discussion then took place upon questions of professional interest.

Mr. Wingfield, barrister-at-law, said he had listened with a great deal of interest to all that had been said relative to both branches of the Profession. He certainly considered that the time had arrived when the invidious distinction between the two branches of the Profession ought to be put an end to. (Hear, hear.) They knew that a house divided against itself could not stand, and that there is strength in unity. The existing state of things was an innovation. A very able man, the late Mr. Edwin Field, a descendant of Oliver Cromwell, nearly half a century ago, advocated the amalgamation of the two branches of the Profession, and on the 8th July 1833, there was a leading article in the Times newspaper to that effect, which was known to have been written by Mr. Field. All great reforms were works of time. It had been said that people did not like change, but men were only "creatures of habit." (Laughter.) As the late Dr. Arnold used to say, "All men by nature are Tories, and education makes them Liberals." (Laughter.) The invidious distinction between the two branches of the Profession was a great curse, and he hoped to live to see the day when this great reform would be carried out. (Cheers.)

Mr. Symonds wished to refer to page 13 of the parliamentary report concerning the Bill to amend the law relating to legal practitioners. It was there stated: "Every person who shall have been a solicitor of the Supreme Courts for a period of not less than five years, and after ceasing to be a solicitor, shall have been a student of one of the Inns of Court for a period of two years, and shall have passed the usual examinations for the degree of barrister-at-law, shall be entitled to be called to the Bar." He thought that if a gentleman had been through five years' articles he ought, if he passed his examination, to be at liberty to pass directly. (Hear.) He was not favourable to amalgamation, but thought that the clause should read as follows: "Every person who shall have been a solicitor of the Supreme Court for a period of not less than five years, and shall have passed the usual examination for the degree of barrister-at-law, shall be entitled to be called to the Bar." He knew a case where a gentleman was articled for five years, and then had to commence another three years study for the Bar. This was an anomaly, and he trusted that the society would consider this matter. With regard to raising the annual subscription, if they intended to give their able secretary a salary, or authorised him to instruct people in the provinces to prosecute unqualified persons, then he (the speaker) would advocate the raising of the subscription. He did not think the amount of the subscription was any criterion of the ability of a society. At present they must not be too hasty in raising the subscription, unless it were for giving the secretary a salary or for prosecuting unqualified practitioners.

Mr. Cutcliffe (solicitor) spoke in strong terms against the practice of the lessor's solicitors putting into leases the covenant that he had to prepare all under-leases and assignments. Clerks of various city companies invariably inserted this covenant. If the system was to be attacked it must be attacked in high places. (Hear, hear.) With regard to unqualified practitioners, solicitors in the country greatly felt the want of a public prosecutor. The general feeling was that solicitors were perfectly capable of taking care of themselves. He firmly believed that the society would do good by its indirect influence (hear, hear), and he did not think they could measure their results by the prosecutions that had taken place. There were very many unqualified practitioners who were held in check by the knowledge of the Acts of Parliament brought about by this society. (Hear, hear.) The hearty thanks of the society were due to Mr. Stephen Tripp, of taking the part of public prosecutor in the summoning of Mr. Dobson for having illegally used the name of a qualified solicitor in the matter of a petition in bankruptcy. Mr. Ford had truly said, "The practices complained of are notoriously on the increase, while the Profession at large is too lukewarm in the detection and punishment of the offenders." (Hear, hear.)

Mr. George Whale, jun. (solicitor), heartily concurred in the third and fourth clauses of the Legal Practitioners' Bill 1876, and regretted that the Bill had to be passed without them. Many people thought that "half a loaf was better than none," but they had come off with only a small portion of the loaf. Without wishing to depreciate the labours of the committee, would it not be better to postpone the Bill? (no, no), the third and fourth clauses of which, he thought, were of the utmost importance to the Profession. The grievances these clauses sought to remedy were of a very grave character. For himself, he could not afford to stand idle for three years before he could be called to the Bar. Why should a man be subject to social degradation because he belonged to another branch of the Profession? (Hear, hear.) In the interests of the Profession, especially of its younger members, he hoped these clauses would be carried.

Mr. Holroyd Chaplin said that when the question was discussed before the Parliamentary committee, it was treated as a practical question, "How long it would fit a man to become a barrister?" For his part he did not think two years was too long an interval for him to acquire a thoroughly practical knowledge of the profession of a solicitor. He had had articled clerks who had taken degrees at the universities, and had a knowledge of the law, and yet did not have two years' articles to acquire a knowledge of the practice of a solicitor. If two years was right in one place it was far better to offer the same term at another place. The question was whether a man educated for a barrister's office, to do the work without being in a solicitor's office, which he very much doubted. Mr. Chaplin then moved a vote of thanks to the president, expressing at the same time the regret of the society at his retirement, and stating that he would continue to take the interest in its welfare as he had always done, especially in the House of Commons. (Cheers.)

Mr. Wheatcroft said that there was one thing they had forgotten, viz., a vote of thanks to the author of this society (Mr. Ford), who had laboured hard in its interests. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Fullager seconded the vote of thanks to the president, and reiterated most cordially all that had been said of the labours of Mr. Charley, whose energy and perseverance had done much to promote the welfare of the Profession. In fact, he was the foundation stone of the society. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. Geo. Whale seconded the vote of thanks to Mr. Ford.

Mr. Charley, in supporting the resolution, said—I certainly never met with more indomitable energy or perseverance in any one than on the part of Mr. Ford. (Hear, hear.) These qualities which he possessed had been given without stint.

Mr. Ford, in reply, said—I thank you very much for the kind compliment you have paid me this evening in recognition of my services. Nothing gives me more pleasure than to labour for the welfare of my own Profession. We ought all to make some sacrifices to this end. Before I sit down I should like to take the opportunity of saying that what I have done—be it little or be it much—I should have been utterly unable to do it had I not had the constant support of my valued and excellent friend Mr. Charley, who has always been ready in every possible way to help me and to encourage me, and has always received me with that courtesy which he can so well command. I know that in the small hours of the morning Mr. Charley was to have been seen in his place in the House of Commons waiting for an opportunity of bringing forward this society's Bills. Only to-day Mr. Charley has come from Manchester to attend this meeting. No one more than myself can possibly regret or feel the loss of his retirement from the presidential chair. I am, however, sure that Mr. William Gordon, M.P., who is a solicitor, will prove a valuable president, and he will command my best support so long as I continue to fill the office of hon. secretary. Again I thank you for your vote.

The vote having been carried by acclamation, Mr. Charley said—Gentlemen, I sincerely thank you for the honour you have done me, and for the kind—too kind (no, no)—expressions that have fallen from the different speakers. When sitting up, night after night, promoting the Bills of this society, and trying to save the remnants from the burning (laughter), it has always been my consolation to feel that a number of gentlemen like yourselves were deeply interested in the success of the measures, and I always knew, when our annual meeting took place, that my efforts would be appreciated. I have never heard more kind words, and I can assure you I feel deeply grateful. I trust the society, under Mr. Gordon's presidency, will have "God speed." (Cheers.)

The proceedings then terminated.

DENBIGHSHIRE AND FLINTSHIRE LAW ASSOCIATION.

At the recent annual general meeting of the association, held at Denbigh, present: Ellis Eyton, Esq., M.P., M. Louis, Esq., J. C. Owen, Esq., A. S. Weston, Esq., T. Bury, Esq., J. Parry Jones, Esq., John Davies, Esq., Mr. M. D. Roberts, hon. sec., T. T. Kelly, Esq., president, J. A. Hughes, Esq., J. Parry Jones, jun., Esq., E. A. Hughes, Esq., Evan Morris, Esq. In the absence of the president, it was proposed, and carried unanimously, that Mr. Ellis Eyton should take the chair. The minutes of the last meeting having been read and confirmed, letters of apology for non-attendance at to-day's meeting were read from Messrs. Gold Edwards, Keene, George, Lewis, Trevor-Roper, and Sison. The secretary reported the deaths of Mr. J. G. Buckton, Wrexham, and Mr. Francis Wynne, Denbigh, since the last meeting. It was resolved that expressions of regret at the loss the association had sustained in the deaths of these gentlemen be entered upon the minutes. Proposed by Mr. Weston, and carried: "That at the annual general meeting a committee shall be appointed for the year to watch over the course of legislation, and the interests of this society and of the profession. Such committee shall consist of the president for the year, the retiring president, and three other members of the society." Proposed by Mr. Parry Jones, and carried: "That a donation of £5 5s. be given by this society to the funds of the Legal Practitioners' Society." Proposed by Mr. Louis, and carried: "That the minutes of this meeting be printed, and copies sent to the various law associations and to each member." Votes of thanks were passed, to the president for his services during the past year, to the hon. treasurer (Mr. Parry Jones), and to the hon. secretary (Mr. M. D. Roberts). It was unanimously resolved that Mr. Ellis Eyton, M.P., be the president for the ensuing year, and that the next annual meeting be held at Rhyl.

LEGAL OBITUARY.

NOTE.—This department of the LAW TIMES, is edited by Edward Walbrook, M.A., and late scholar of Magdalen College, Oxford, and Fellow of the Geological Historical Society of Great Britain; and, as it is intended to make it as perfect a record as possible, the friends of deceased members of the Profession will be forwarding to the LAW TIMES Office any materials required for a biographical notice.

SIR B. EDWARDS.

THE late Sir Bryan Edwards, formerly Justice of Jamaica, who died on the 6th inst. at his residence, Eltham Park, Spanish Brompton, Jamaica, in the seventy-seventh year of his age, was born in 1799, and was called to the Honourable Society of the Inner Temple in 1825. He was for many years Chief Justice of the Admiralty Court of Jamaica.

SIR C. W. TURNER.

THE late Sir Charles Robert Turner, Master of the Court of Queen's Bench, died on the 13th inst., at his residence in the terrace, Regent's Park, in the eighty-eighth of his age, was the fifth son of the late Richard Turner, vicar of Great Yarmouth, Norfolk, by his marriage with Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Rede, Esq., of Beccles, Suffolk. He was born in the year 1789. He was called to the Bar by the Honourable Society of the Temple in Michaelmas Term 1839, and held the above-mentioned office from 1839 down to when he retired on a well-earned pension. Charles, who was formerly in practice as a solicitor in London, received the honour of knight in 1871. He married, in 1816, Judith, daughter of the late Charles Harvey (afterwards Sir Charles Onley), Esq., M.P., and sister of Onley, Esq., now of Stisted Hall, Essex.

MR. EDWARD RYE.

THE late Mr. Edward Rye, solicitor, formerly of Chelsea, and of St. James's, Westminster, died on the 8th inst., at Brompton, in the fourth year of his age, was the eldest and surviving child of the late Mr. Edward Rye, formerly of Wells-by-the-Sea, in Norfolk, and wards of London, merchant. He was born in London, and after private tuition at home, and St. Omer, was educated at St. Paul's. He was admitted a solicitor in Trinity Term 1840, and, says one who knew him well, "he was well known in the Profession, not only as of great erudition and legal knowledge, but very willing to impart his knowledge and to freely with his friends and neighbours the fine library (over 13,000 vols.) he had collected. His acquaintance with general literature was curious and exact, and being possessed very considerable attainments, though of a retiring disposition, he numbered among his several well-known artists and literary men." long and painful illness forced him to retire from business two years ago, after having been of rolls for more than half a century. The late the deceased gentleman has been long resident in Norfolk, where it once held considerable positions, including the Barony of Rye of Elm and numbered among its members a Cardinal, Norwich Castle, a part founder of Norwich Cathedral, and the founders of Binham and other Abbeys, of Aldeby Priory, and of Wolsey's charity. The "Court of the Honour of Rye" exists in the county, but the name—the only folk name that appears in the "Domesday Book" of 1086, and the recent Government map of 1873—has very nearly become extinct. He married in 1828 Maria, daughter of Mr. Rye Tupper, of Brighton, by whom he had a family of nine children. Of his sons, Mr. Edward Rye, of Putney, is Librarian to the Geographical Society; Mr. Walter Rye, of Wandsworth, a solicitor, has succeeded to his father's business; and Mr. Francis Rye is a solicitor and solicitor of Barrie, Ontario, Canada. The remains of the deceased gentleman were interred at Kensal-green.

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

NOTE BEVE.—Information intended for publication in the above heading should reach us not later than 10 day morning in each week, as publication is often delayed.

MR. CHARLES HENRY SIMPSON, solicitor, of Chester, has been appointed by the Lord Chancellor a Commissioner to Administer Oaths in the Supreme Court of Judicature.

MR. HENRY INSHELMOORE, solicitor, of St. Abbott, has been appointed by Lord Chief Justice Coleridge, a Perpetual Commissioner taking the Acknowledgments of Married Women for the county of Devon.

MR. JOHN CAMDEN HAYWARD, of Dal and 5, Frederick's-place, Old Jewry, London, has been appointed a Commissioner to Administer Oaths in the Supreme Court.

Gazette, Dec. 12, 1876.

ATKINSON, WILLIAM, out of business, Beeston, par. Leeds. Pet. Dec. 15. Dec. 30, at one, at office of Sol. Pullan, Leeds.

ALEXANDER, NATHAN, wholesale clothier, Houndsditch. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 9, at two, at the Chamber of Commerce, 145, Cheapside. Sol. Catlin, Guildhall-yard.

ALLOTT, ALFRED, public accountant, Sheffield; ironmaster Renshaw, par. Fokington, under firm of Appleby and Co., and at Woodford, under firm of the Newbridge Iron Ore Co.; also iron mine proprietor, St. Austell, under firm of the Ruby and Treborth Iron Mine Co. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 8, at two, at the Cannon-st. hotel, Cannon-st., London. Sols. Burdett, Smith, and Fry-Smith.

BARNES, WILLIAM, farmer, Newborough. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 20, at twelve, at office of Sol. Gaches, Peterborough.

BOON, JAMES, blacksmith, Newbury Weston. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 1, at two, at the George hotel, Huntingdon. Sol. Gaches, Peterborough.

BENNETT, MATTHEW, carpenter, Bristol. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 2, at two, at office of Sol. Beckingham, Bristol.

BIRKETT, ROBERT CHAMBER, schoolmaster, Harrogate. Pet. Dec. 15. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sols. Hirst and Capes, York.

BURNBY, MATTHEW ASHTON, oil manufacturer, Carbrook, par. Sheffield. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 20, at twelve, at the Cutler's Hall, Sheffield. Sol. Mellor, Oldham.

BARBER, RICHARD, grocer, Sheffield. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 30, at four, at office of G. E. Gee, 23, Fig Tree-lane, Sheffield. Sol. Binns, Sheffield.

BELL, PETER, carpenter, Erith. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 1, at one, at the Lord Baglan hotel, Burrage-lane, Plumstead. Sol. Wymond, Chatham.

BEVERIDGE, RICHARD, grocer, King-st., Maidstone. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 6, at twelve, at the Bridge House hotel, London Bridge. Sols. G. and F. S. Stebbing, Maidstone.

BECKETT, JOHN, wholesale confectioner, Upper Kennington-lane. Pet. Dec. 4. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Cooper, Chancery-lane.

BOYES, THOMAS MASON, and THOMAS, RICHARD KIRKBY, drapers, Upper-st., Ilkington. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 3, at two, at office of Sol. James, Birmingham.

COOPER, WALTER JOSEPH, bookseller, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 1, at three, at office of Sols. Buller and Bickley, Birmingham.

COFF, JOHN, bootmaker, Skeen, near Neath. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 1, at eleven, at office of Sol. Davies, Neath.

CARPENTER, WILLIAM, innkeeper, Cheltenham. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 3, at three, at office of Sol. Champion, Brighton.

COASH, WILSON, farmer, Kirby Knowle. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 20, at eleven, at office of Sols. Arrowsmith and Richardson, Thirsk.

CROFT, JOHN, baker, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 2, at one, at office of Sol. Brown, Liverpool.

COLLETT, WILLIAM PERKINSON, butcher, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 11, at three, at office of Vine, public accountant, Liverpool. Sol. Bartlett, Liverpool.

COLLINS, EDWIN, beerhouse keeper, Upper Kennington-lane, Lambeth. Pet. Dec. 6. Dec. 23, at twelve, at 37, Bedford-row. Sol. Marshall.

CAMPBELL, ANDREW, licensed victualler, Minorca. Pet. Dec. 13. Jan. 1, at three, at office of Sol. Walker, King's Arms-yd., Moor-gate-st., E.C.

COXHEAD, WILLIAM FREDERICK, commission agent, Osborne-st., Strand Green-st., Hornsey, and Jewin-st. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 27, at three, at the Inn of Court hotel, Holborn. Sol. Godfrey.

DAVIES, HENRY, draper, Llanelli. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 6, at eleven, at office of Sol. Howell, Llanelli.

DAVIES, JOHN, builder, Aberystwyth. Pet. Dec. 15. Dec. 23, at eleven, at office of Sol. Thomas, Aberystwyth.

DAVIES, WILLIAM, watchmaker, Hay. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 5, at twelve, at office of Sol. Chene, Hay.

DAVIS, JOHN, furniture dealer, Bishops Waltham. Pet. Dec. 12. Jan. 2, at twelve, at office of Deacon, Pearce, Deacon, Paris, and Smith, Southampton. Sol. Smith.

EDWARDS, EVAN, farmer, Giffordby Farm, par. Llanwennor. Pet. Dec. 12. Jan. 4, at twelve, at office of Sol. Rosser, Pontypridd.

EWEN, FREDERICK WILLIAM, merchant, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 13. Jan. 3, at three, at office of Sols. Addleshaw and Warburton, Manchester.

EVERETT, DAVID, music seller, Tunbridge Wells. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 23, at half-past ten, at the Chamber of Commerce, 145, Cheapside. Sols. Stone and Simpson, Tunbridge Wells.

FISHER, JOHN WALE, refreshment house keeper, Whitehaven. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 9, at two, at office of Sol. Atter, Whitehaven.

FORD, MALACHI HENRY, draper, Bradford. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 2, at twelve, at office of Sol. Berry and Robinson, Bradford.

FLETCHER, THOMAS, contractor, Grendon, par. Halifax. Pet. Dec. 11. Jan. 15, at ten, at office of Sol. Rhodes, Halifax.

FILMER, JOHN, corn merchant, Wandsworth-rd. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Ald, Eastcheap, E.C.

FILLISTON, JOSEPH, grocer, St. Leonard-st., Bromley-by-Bow. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 23, at one, at office of T. Ager, 3, Bernard's-lane, Holborn. Sol. Padgett, Finsbury.

GOODRICH, GEORGE HENRY, contractor, Buckingham-villa, Ealing Green. Pet. Dec. 5. Dec. 23, at three, at 37, Bedford-row. Sol. Marshall.

GRAHAM, JOHN, brickmaker, Walton-on-the-Hill. Pet. Dec. 13. Jan. 2, at eleven, at office of Sol. Morrison, High-st., Reigate.

HILLIARD, EDWARD, surgeon, Beckington. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 1, at eleven, at the Bristol Arms hotel, Sleaford. Sol. Bean, Boston.

HOBBS, WALTER, baker, Cheltenham. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 20, at three, at office of Sol. Preen, Cheltenham.

HARDWICK, HENRY, out of business, Stockton, near Tenbury. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 30, at three, at office of Sol. Tree, Worcester.

HAERDINE, FREDERICK, stationer, Balaall Heath, near Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. East, Birmingham.

HURLEY, GEORGE, publican, Harborne, and Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Boraston, Birmingham.

HARRIS, HENRY, shoe manufacturer, Stone. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 3, at eleven, at office of Sol. Griffith, Newcastle.

HARKER, WILLIAM, out of business, Bradford. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 1, at eleven, at office of Mossman and Haley, Bradford.

HOLLIS, HENRY HENRIK, hair dresser, Southampton. Pet. Dec. 14. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Shuttle, Southampton.

HEATON, THOMAS, twine spinner, Lancaster. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 4, at eleven, at office of Sols. Hall and Marshall, Lancaster.

HARRIS, JOHN, no occupation, Bexley Heath. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 23, at three, at the Lord Bexley Arms, Bexley Heath. Sols. Russell, Son, and Scott, Old Jewry-chambers.

HOLLIDGE, WILLIAM JAMES, and SMALLBRIDGE, THOMAS, contractors, Portland-rd. and High-st., South Norwood. Pet. Dec. 12. Jan. 5, at twelve, at the Chamber of Commerce, 145, Cheapside. Sol. Rogers, Leadenhall-st.

JONES, WILLIAM THOMAS, electro plate manufacturer, Birmingham. Pet. Nov. 29. Dec. 23, at a quarter-past ten, at office of Sol. East, Birmingham.

JOHNSON, JOSHUA, cabinet maker, Leicester. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 4, at three, at office of Sols. Fowler, Smith, and Warwick, Leicester.

JOHNSON, WILLIAM, farmer, Mill House, near Thirsk. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 4, at eleven, at the Three Tuns hotel, Thirsk. Sol. Jefferson, Northallerton.

KETTLE, BENJAMIN, machinist, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 1, at three, at office of Sol. Pullan, Leeds.

KEMPELL, JANE, and DUNDIDGE, ELIZABETH, clothiers, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 2, at twelve, at office of Sols. Bond and Borwick, Leeds.

LEE, THOMAS, fish merchant, New Glace. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 1, at twelve, at office of Sols. Green and Winttingham, Great Grimby.

LEGG, GEORGE, licensed victualler, Bilston. Pet. Dec. 15. Dec. 30, at eleven, at office of Sols. Stratton and Rudland, Wolverhampton.

LONGSHAW, CHARLES, potter, Hanley. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 27, at half-past ten, at office of Sol. Stevenson, Hanley.

LEWIS, JOHN, sen., and LEWIS, JOHN, jun., tailors, Landore, near Swansea. Pet. Dec. 2. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sols. Davies and Harland, Swansea.

LEES, SAMUEL, stationer, Sheffield. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sols. Meers, Clegg, Sheffield.

LAVENDER, ROBERT JAMES, bookseller, Gravesend. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 4, at twelve, at office of Sol. Mitchell, Gravesend.

LAZARUS, NATHAN, commission agent, Charterhouse-st. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 3, at twelve, at office of Sol. Montague, Bucklers-

MULLAND, JOHN, potato dealer, Wrafton, par. Heanton Panchard. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 30, at eleven, at office of Sol. Thorne, Barnstaple.

MEADOWS, THOMAS, miller, Smeeton Westerby. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 2, at three, at office of Sol. Owston, Leicester.

MARSDEN, BENJAMIN, joiner, Brighouse. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 20, at eleven, at office of Sols. Foster and England, Halifax.

MANNFIELD, ALFRED, baker, Droxford. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 20, at eleven, at the Royal Oak Tavern, Farnham. Sol. Ford, Portsea.

MEAD, WILLIAM, journeyman carpenter, Palace-st., Prince of Wales-rd. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 23, at ten, at H. T. T. Waites' offices, 42, Basinghall-st. Sol. Fulcher, Cornwall-rd., Kensington Park.

NASH, GEORGE PERGRINE, grocer, Bedford. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 2, at twelve, at office of Sols. Conquest and Clara, Bedford.

NEVILLE, JOHN, out of employment, Gateshead. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 4, at eleven, at office of Sol. Bush, Gateshead.

NAYLOR, EDWARD, brass founder, Birmingham, and Lozells, par. Aston. Pet. Dec. 14. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of Sol. Green, Birmingham.

NEDDIAH, JOHN, farmer, Delph. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 2, at twelve, at office of Messrs. Horner, Manchester. Sol. Law, Manchester.

NIBLETT, WILLIAM THOMAS, builder, Highbury Works, Hornsey-rd., off. Bessville-rd., Holloway. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 20, at eleven, at the Ashford Arms, East of Court-hill, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Sols. Meers, Heathfield, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

PARKS, ROBERT, hotel keeper, Bytton. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 4, at three, at office of Sol. Owston, Leicester.

PLATT, JOHN, sawmill manufacturer, Saddleworth. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 4, at three, at the King's Arms hotel, Oldham. Sol. Mellor, Oldham.

PERKINSON, THOMAS, smallware dealer, Warrington. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 2, at three, at office of Sol. Bretherton, Warrington.

PRESTON, WILLIAM JAMES, grocer, Sudock, near Ewbury. Pet. Dec. 14. Dec. 23, at three, at office of Sol. Jenkins, Falmouth.

PULLIN, THOMAS JONAH, iron merchant, late of 6, Gracechurch-st., London, and Auckland Hill, Lower Norwood. Pet. Dec. 12. Dec. 23, at two, at office of Panam and Webber, 50, Bow-lane. Sol. Currie, King-st.

RICHARDS, BENJAMIN, tinman, Glydech, near Swansea. Pet. Dec. 13. Jan. 6, at two, at 34, Wind-st., Swansea. Sol. Kempthorne.

REEK, DAVID, labourer, Bridgend. Pet. Dec. 13. Jan. 3, at eleven, at office of Sol. Jones, Bridgend.

ROOTH, JOSEPH, fruiterer, Chesterfield. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 5, at twelve, at office of Sol. Cowdell, Chesterfield.

RICHARDSON, DAVID, RICHARDSON, GEORGE, and RICHARDSON, JAMES, manufacturers, Rawdon. Pet. Dec. 15. Dec. 20, at eleven, at office of Sol. Howson, Rawdon.

RICHARDS, RICHARD, engineer, Old Barge House-st., Upper Ground-st., Blackfriars-rd. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 4, at twelve, at office of Sols. Willoughby and Cox, Clifford's-inn.

SHILLCOCK, JOHN, general dealer, Cooper's-rd., Old Kent-rd., Camberwell. Pet. Dec. 12. Jan. 4, at two, at office of Sol. Martin, Mitre-chimbs, Fenchurch-st.

SHUBB, RICHARD CORRIE, farmer, Dorch ester, near Wallingford. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 2, at two, at 13, Friar-st., Reading. Sol. Dodd, Reading.

SMITH, WILLIAM, builder, Halton, near Hastings. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 3, at three, at office of Miller and Miller, 5 and 6, Shear-borne-lane, London. Sol. Savery, Hastings.

SUTTON, WILLIAM, pianoforte manufacturer, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 2, at twelve, at office of Sol. Solomon, Birmingham.

SKELP, GEORGE, plumber, Sherwood. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 5, at twelve, at office of Sols. Meers, Bright, Nottingham.

SCRAGO, JOSEPH, butcher, Hanley. Pet. Dec. 11. Dec. 27, at half-past eleven, at office of Sol. Stevenson, Hanley.

SWITHAM, EDWARD, grocer, Hingley. Pet. Dec. 18. Dec. 27, at ten, at 30, Manor-row, Bradford.

SEED, GEORGE, boatman, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 14. Dec. 20, at three, at office of Sol. Lodge, Leeds.

STRAW, THOMAS, grocer, Sheffield. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 4, at two, at the rooms of the Sheffield District Incorporated Law Society, Sheffield. Sol. Exam, Sheffield.

SACHS, JOSEF JULIUS, chemist, New Barns, near Barrow-in-Furness. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 23, at twelve, at the Royal hotel, Cumberland, Blackfriars. Sols. Southall, Thomas and Southall, Birmingham.

SHARPLES, RICHARD, coal dealer, Over Darwen. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 3, at twelve, at office of Sol. Hindle, Over Darwen.

SANKE, EDWIN, commission merchant, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 3, at eleven, at office of Sol. Gill and Archibald, Liverpool.

TURNER, CHARLES, fruit merchant, Bristol. Pet. Dec. 15. Dec. 23, at twelve, at office of S. Hare, accountant, 4, Exchange-buildings, Bristol. Sol. Burnard, Bristol.

TANKER, WILLIAM, mast maker, Great Grimby. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 1, at eleven, at office of Sols. Grange and Winttingham, Great Grimby.

THOMPSON, JOSEPH, builder, Skelton. Pet. Dec. 15. Dec. 20, at half-past ten, at office of Sol. Draper, Stockton-on-Tees.

THOMAS, JOHN, licensed victualler, Providence Inn, par. Narberth. Pet. Dec. 8. Dec. 27, at two, at office of Sols. Green and Griffiths, Carmarthen.

TARVER, WILLIAM HENRY, French master, Eton. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 3, at three, at the Adelaide hotel, Windsor. Sol. Durant.

TREWLINS, HENRY, out of business, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 4, at eleven, at the Royal hotel, Brigsteed. Sol. Lake, Wakefield.

TRILL, JAMES DAVID, boot maker, Landport. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 5, at two, at the Chamber of Commerce, 145, Cheapside. Sol. Cole, Portsea.

WILSON, JONATHAN, builder, Spennymoor. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 3, at two, at office of Sol. Slader, Bishop Auckland.

WOODS, JAMES MATTHEW, grocer, Wymondham. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 1, at three, at office of Sol. Cooks, Norwich.

WETTON, SAMUEL, milliner, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 1, at twelve, at office of Sols. Southall, Thomas, and Southall, Birmingham.

WALKER, GEORGE, clogger, Maryport. Pet. Dec. 13. Jan. 3, at eleven, at 7A, Kirkby-st., Maryport. Sol. Collin, Maryport.

WILLEY, JAMES, outfitter, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 1, at three, at office of Sol. Spillett, Leeds.

WARD, JAMES, builder, Blackpool. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 3, at three, at office of Sol. Morgan, Blackpool.

WOODLAND, JOHN WILLIAMS, and WOODLAND, GEORGE EDWARD, printers, Runcorn. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 2, at one, at office of Sol. Linaker, Runcorn.

WILLIAMSON, JOHN, grocer, coal merchant, Regent-st., Piccadilly, Chesham-st., Lupat-st., Pimlico, and Parson's Mead, Croydon. Pet. Dec. 14. Dec. 20, at ten, at the Chamber of Commerce, 145, Cheapside. Sol. Holmes, Fenchurch-st.

WILLIAMS, JOHN, coal merchant, Harpenden. Pet. Dec. 13. Dec. 20, at half-past eleven, at the George hotel, Bedford. Sol. Shires, Leicester.

Dividends.

BANKRUPT'S ESTATES.

The Official Assignees, &amp;c., are given, to whom apply for the Dividends.

High J. engineer in royal navy, 2s. 6d. At Trust. J. E. E. Dawe & Co., Union-st., Plymouth.—Intermittent, W. F. gentleman, Torquay, fifth and final, 2s. 1d. At office of Harding, Whinney, and Co., 8, Old Jewry.—Bryant & Co., grocer, third and final, 2d. At Trust. W. Isard, 46, Eastcheap.—Capers, C. merchant, first, 3d. At office of Benson, Elard, and Co., 42, Westgate-rd., Newcastle.—Wines, B. L. solicitor, third and final, 2d. At Trust. J. E. Guard, 1, Wolsley-st., Ipswich.—Knots, J. and E. steel manufacturers, first joint, 3s.; first sep. of J. Knott, 2s.; first and final sep. of E. Knott, 3d. At office of Camm and Corbridge, 133 and 131, Abchurch-lane.—Wines, T. C. bootmaker, first and final, 3d. At Trust. J. S. Pitt, 30, Broad-st., Bristol.—Wines, J. W. the manufacturer, first, 2s. 4d. At Trust. K. W. Bowen, 41 and 44, Gresham-st.—Richardsons, A. ale and spirit merchant, final, 9d. At Trust. J. C. Wannop, 3, Carruthers-st., Scotch-st., Carlisle.—Verdery, W. beerkeeper, first and final, 3s. At Sols. Woodbridge and Sons, 8, Clifford's-inn.

Orders of Discharge.

BANKRUPT'S ESTATES.

Gazette, Dec. 12.

MOORE, WILLIAM, manufacturer, Pudsey. Gazette, Dec. 15.

ABBOTT, THOMAS, clerk in H.M.'s Court of Probate, Sydney-rd., Romington.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS.

BIRTHS.

DEANE.—On the 17th inst., at Loughborough, the wife of Deane, solicitor, of a son.

KNOWLES.—On the 17th inst., at Biddulph, the wife of Knowles, of Blackburn, and the Middle Temple, of a son.

POPE.—On the 13th inst., at South Walk House, Rome, wife of Alfred Pope, solicitor, of a son.

SANDERSON.—On the 24th ult., at Barbadoes, W. L. M. wife of J. M. Sanderson, solicitor, of a daughter.

WHITLEY.—On the 14th inst., at 77, St. George's-square, wife of William Whitley, barrister-at-law, of a son.

MARRIAGES.

HAGUE—DRAKE.—On the 18th inst., at St. Dunstan's London, Temple Lutton Square, solicitor, to E. Georgians, only daughter of the late Rev. George James Drake, M.A.

DEATHS.

BIRD.—On the 17th inst., at Brighton, aged 61, Charles of the Middle Temple, and Woodford, Wells, Essex, at-law.

CLARK.—On the 18th inst., at his residence, 9, Doughty, aged 89, Thomas Clark, solicitor, 9, Gray's-inn-square, 1 year of Clement's-inn.

TURNER.—On the 13th inst., at 17, Chester-terrace, 1 park, aged 67, Sir Charles Robert Turner, formerly a Master of the Court of Queen's Bench.

PARTRIDGE &amp; COOP

WHOLESALE &amp; RETAIL STATION

102, FLEET-STREET, AND 1 &amp; 2, CHANCERY-LANE, LONDON.

Carriage paid to the Country on Orders exceeding

Legal Stationery 25 per cent. lower than any other

COMMERCIAL AND LEGAL DIARIES

NOW READY.

THE TIMES, Nov. 25, 1874.

"The diaries of Messrs. Partridge and Coop are got up so as to be admirably adapted to being cheap, handy, and not overloaded with matter, while giving good writing space."

THE NEW "VELLUM WOVE CLUB-HOUSE" 9s. 6d. per ream. Samples post free.

INDENTURE SKINS, Printed and Machine-made twenty or thirty folios, 2s. 5d. per skin, 2s. 13s. per roll.

SECONDS OR FOLLOWERS, Ruled, 2s. 1d. each, 2s. 11s. per roll.

RECORDS OR MEMORIALS, 8d. each, 7s. 6d. per doz.

LEDGERS, DAY-BOOKS, CASH-BOOKS, LETTERS OR IN AN IMMENSE STOCK IN VARIOUS BINDINGS

ILLUSTRATED PRICE-LIST of Inkstands, Post Copying Presses, Writing Cases, Despatch Boxes Walnut Stationery Cabinets, and other useful adapted to Library or Office, post free.

TRANSLATIONS Legal, 8

Literary, and Commercial, from and in European Languages.—ALFRED ELWEN, Author Philological Works, 6, 7, Coleman-street, Le Rd. published in 1848.

NORTHAMPTON ASI

Established in 1835.

FOR THE UPPER AND MIDDLE CL

President—The Right Hon. the Earl Spencer Chairman of Committee of Management—His Duke of Grafton.

Vice-Chairman—The Venerable the Lord Alwyne

This Asylum is entirely devoted to the care of Patients of the Upper and Middle Class of the Directors being to provide Area and Comfort suitable to the former Social, a Mental, condition of persons belonging to these moderate rates of payment. The terms of Admission from £1 1s. to £2 2s. a week, according to the rate of the case.

Patients paying higher rates can have private and special attendants as well as the use of sitting rooms.

For further information apply to the Medical Superintendent.

EDE AND SON,

ROBE &amp; MAK

By Special Appointment

To HER MAJESTY, THE LORD CHANCELLOR

The Whole of the Judicial Bench,

Corporation of London, &amp;c.

SOLICITORS' AND REGISTRARS' GOW

BARRISTERS' AND QUEEN'S COUNSELS

CORPORATION ROBES.

UNIVERSITY AND CLERGY GOWNS

Established 1808.

94, CHANCERY LANE, LONDON

MUCH TIME AND WORRY SAVE

BY SORTING YOUR PAPERS INTO

STONE'S PATENT BOXES AND CABINETS

"Exceedingly useful"—Standard.

Sold by Stationers everywhere. Illustrated Catalogue free from Henry Stone, Manufacturer &amp; Patentee, &amp;c.

All Sizes can be seen at

13, CRANBOURNE-ST., LEICESTER-SQ., LONDON

DR. KING'S DANDELION AND QUININE PILLS (without Mercury),

FOR BILE, WIND, INDIGESTION, ACIDITY

ACHE, HEARTBURN, &amp;c.

and acknowledge by many eminent surgeons to be the mildest pills for every constitution.

In boxes at 1s. 1d., 2s. 3d., and 4s. 6d., at all dr.

To Readers and Correspondents.

Communications are invariably rejected. Communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. Communications intended for the Editor (SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT) should be sent.

Vol. XIII., Part 4, price 5s. 6d..

CRIMINAL LAW CASES. Edited by EDWARD W. COX, Esq., at-Law, Recorder of Portsmouth. The Parts and Volumes may still be to sets. It is the only complete series of Criminal Cases published in Appendix contains a valuable collection of Precedents of Indictments. London: "LAW TIMES" Office, 10, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C.

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

COURT OF JUDICATURE.

APPEAL, WESTMINSTER.
WESTERN RAILWAY
v. HARRIS—no defendants—Verdict for plaintiff and against the other by one defendant for new trial ordered against successor ..... 605

OF JUSTICE—CHANCERY

DIVISION.
OLLOCK; Re parte WETHEson—Trust money—Following into land—Statute of Solicitor and client ..... 608

BOUQUIN—
Bonds drawn for but unpaid—Interest—

..... 609

UTRECHT—
Power—Exclusive power ..... 612

FROM— state—Class gift—Devise to ring at testator's death or if he died leaving issue in death—Lease—Title

..... 614

ORDNANCE COMPANY
(E)— Judgment debtor—1 & 10, ss. 14, 15—Stock "standing in his own right"— owner—Notice ..... 617

ILLY—
Frauds—Parol promise to se—Agreement in consideration—Entry—Part per-
-incurances ..... 619

WEBB—
to amend defence—
Court—Order XXVII., rule 6

..... 621

DFORD—
Counter-claim—Application to file—Delay—Foreclosure

..... 622

INTERNATIONAL FINANCIAL
Resolutions for diminishing buying-up shares—Ultra vires by shareholder—Forfeiture—Injunction ..... 623

'S BENCH DIVISION.
NORTH-WESTERN RAILWAY
OVERSEERS OF WALSALL—
Right to improvement rate rating under local Act—
Public Health Acts upon

..... 626

COURT FOR APPEALS FROM
PERIOR COURTS.
ATTORNEYS—
n of private culvert on
-Removal of culvert as by surveyor—Prosecution or for malicious injury to

..... 628

REQUER DIVISION.
ATTORNEYS—
n against—Tort indepen-
-contract—Plea of infancy available as a defence ..... 631

INLAP—
Property found on suspected of having stolen and acquittal of suspected

..... 633

COURT OF THE RAILWAY COMMISSIONERS.
ROBERTSON v. THE MIDLAND GREAT WESTERN COMPANY OF IRELAND—
Parcel rates—Stamped and unstamped parcels—Undue preference—Injunction—Costs ..... 636

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS ..... 145

LEADING ARTICLES—
Topics of the Week ..... 145

Discovery ..... 146

The Effect of Ex Parte Attorney ..... 146

The Use of Extrinsic Evidence to Supplement or Control Documents of Title ..... 147

Agency—Liability of Agent to Principal ..... 147

LAW LIBRARY ..... 148

SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT

(Edited by a Solicitor).

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL—
Topics of the Week ..... 148

Court of Appeal, Lincoln's Inn ..... 149

High Court of Justice—Chancery Division ..... 150

Replevin—Law and Facts of Kin ..... 150

Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the
Bank of England ..... 150

Appointments under the Joint-Stock
Winding-up Acts ..... 150

Creditors under Estates in Chancery ..... 150

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 ..... 150

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL—
Topics of the Week ..... 151

Bolton Articled Clerks' Society ..... 151

Law Students' Debating Society ..... 151

Leeds Law Students' Society ..... 151

Preliminary Examination before Entering into Articles of Clerkship to Solicitors ..... 151

Middle Temple Scholarships ..... 151

Queries ..... 151

NOTES AND QUERIES ..... 151

MUNICIPAL LAW—
Manchester Municipal Election Petition. 152

MAGISTRATES' LAW—
Notes of New Decisions ..... 153

Marlborough-street Police Court ..... 153

Borough Quarter Sessions ..... 154

MARITIME LAW—
Notes of New Decisions ..... 154

Supreme Court of the United States ..... 154

COMPANY LAW—
Railway Clauses Consolidation Acts ..... 156

COUNTY COURTS—
Chester County Court ..... 157

Wakefield County Court ..... 157

BANKRUPTCY LAW—
Court of Appeal, Lincoln's Inn ..... 157

Court of Bankruptcy ..... 158

Newcastle upon Tyne County Court ..... 158

Worcester County Court ..... 159

The Bankruptcy Law ..... 159

LEGAL NEWS—
The late Chief Justice Whitelaw ..... 160

Miscellaneous ..... 160

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION ..... 160

THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS—
Supreme Court of Judicature ..... 160

January Sittings of the Supreme Court
of Judicature ..... 161

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS ..... 161

THE GAZETTE ..... 161

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS ..... 162

THE LAWYERS' ALMANAC FOR 1877.

The Almanac will be sent to Subscribers to the LAW TIMES with the issue for next week.

The Law and the Lawyers.

MEMBER of the ROLLS recently stated, for the information of members of the Bar, that on motion to vary minutes question which he could allow to be argued was what actual order made, and that he could not, on such a low the case to be re-argued. The only exceptions were parties consented to something being added to the order, as sometimes happened, when it could not be ascertained what order had been made, when his Lordship would allow it to be put in the paper and argued again.

Council of Law Reporting having been in existence for ten years cannot be considered premature in inquiring what it has done. The answer is extremely unsatisfactory. Numerous reports have been issued, but in nothing but type and very excel if indeed they come up to the contemporary requirements. No 1761.

ports. The selection of cases is by no means always judicious, whilst some of undoubted importance have not been reported at all. In short, there is ample evidence that the reporters are left pretty much to their own devices. The same remark applies to the Digest, which we have already characterised with sufficient vehemence. The council might have rendered great services to the Profession and the public, but it appears to have neither capacity nor industry. It has done nothing more than pile upon judges and lawyers the ever accumulating and unassorted decisions and dicta of a large judicial bench.

In dealing with "matrimonial reconciliations," the Times recognises the important part played by solicitors, putting them quite on a level with clergymen as peacemakers. It is very satisfactory to find the leading journal taking the true view of the duties and responsibilities of a class which receives from the public generally so little credit for the discharge of functions the result of which is never heard of outside private circles, whereas the miseries of litigation are readily heaped upon the very often unoffending heads of the legal profession.

WE notice the reversal of the decision of the Common Pleas Division in Burchell v. Clarke (L. Rep. 1 C. P. Div. 602) by the Appeal Court on the 18th inst., Sir FITZROY KELLY, C.B., dissenting. In this case, as it may be remembered, a lease was granted, habendum for ninety-four and a quarter years, reddendum for ninety-one and a quarter years. Reading the lease and counterpart together, it was, as observed by Mr. Justice BRETT, obvious that the term was intended to be for ninety-one and a quarter years, not for ninety-four and a quarter years. The consequence of holding the lease to be good for ninety-four and a quarter years would have been to give the tenant three years of occupation without paying a farthing of rent. This notwithstanding, the Common Pleas Division (consisting of Justices BRETT and ARCHIBALD) held that in an ejectment by the assignee of the lessor against the assignee of the lessee, the lease must be taken to be a lease for ninety-four and a quarter years. The reversal turned on the question whether the counterpart could be looked at as explaining the error and inconsistency on the face of the lease. The LORD CHIEF JUSTICE, with BRANWELL and AMPHLETT, J.J.A. thought it could. The LORD CHIEF BARON pronounced a weighty opinion to the contrary effect. With all respect for the majority of the Court of Appeal we cannot help thinking that the desire of carrying out the intentions of the original parties to the deed has led them into an error. The pith of the case cannot be better stated than in the decision of Mr. Justice BRETT, where he says: "The defendant has bought the premises from the lessee upon the faith of the lease. I cannot think it right to say that the purchaser of a lease, if the construction upon the face of it is doubtful, is under any obligation to look from the superior to the inferior document to see whether or not the two are consistent. He has a right to assume that the counterpart is in all respects in conformity with the lease. I think the plaintiff is not entitled to this remedy as against the defendant who was not a party to the original lease. We must, therefore, treat the lease as unreformed." It appears to us a perilous extension of the doctrine of constructive notice to hold that contradiction or ambiguity in an original instrument casts upon the person taking the benefit of it notice by which he is put to an inquiry whether such contradiction or ambiguity may not be explicable by reference to a counterpart or other extrinsic circumstances.

THERE are few branches of law probably which require a more careful consideration or more accurate knowledge for the application of the appropriate principles in any given case than that respecting nuptial settlements. Vice-Chancellor HALL decided in Price v. Jenkins, on the 20th inst., rather a novel question with respect to the validity of such a settlement as against a bona fide purchaser for valuable consideration. The question actually raised was whether the consideration of marriage, which is itself a valuable consideration, extends to limitations in an ante-nuptial settlement in favour of children by a former marriage as against subsequent bona fide purchaser for value. This obviously raises a question as to the extent of the consideration. Of the general rule there can be little doubt. The valuable consideration of marriage extends only to support interests given to the husband, wife, and the issue of the marriage, and to no other persons (see May's Voluntary and Fraudulent Alienations of Property, p. 326). Two limitations were engrafted upon this rule by subsequent cases. Thus it was said by the LORD CHIEF JUSTICE, in Clarke v. Wright (30 L. J., 113, 120 Ex.), "Upon the rule that in a marriage settlement a limitation in favour of the relations of the settlor, other than the issue of the marriage, will be invalid, two exceptions have, it seems to me, been engrafted by very high authority. In Newstead v. Searles (1 Atk. 265), Lord HARDWICKE held that in a marriage settlement the settlor might introduce a limitation in favour of the children of a former marriage, while in Clayton v. The Earl of Wilton (3 Mad 362n.), Lord ELLENBOROUGH, and the Court of King's Bench, upheld against a purchaser for value a similar limitation on a marriage settlement, in favour of the issue of the settlor by a future wife in default of issue of the intended marriage." In Newstead v. Searles a settlement by a widow on her grandchildren was held valid as against creditors. In Clarke v. Wright a widow having settled her property in trust for herself for life with remainder to her husband for life, with remainder to her illegitimate son in fee, joined with her husband in mortgaging the property. The last limitation, however, was held good as against the mortgagee. Mr. Justice WILLIAMS dissented from this decision in the Exchequer Chamber, contending that Newstead v. Searles simply decided that the limitation was not fraudulent, nor that it was founded on a valuable consideration. The same learned Judge also rested his opinion upon the fact, that it is now established that every voluntary conveyance is fraudulent against a subsequent purchaser for value. Thus Lord HARDWICKE himself has said in Townsend v. Windham (2 Ves. Sen. 10), "Every voluntary conveyance made, where afterwards there is a subsequent conveyance for valuable consideration, though no fraud in that voluntary conveyance, nor the person making it at all indebted, yet the determinations are that such mere voluntary conveyance is void at law by the subsequent purchase for valuable consideration." In another case Lord HARDWICKE upheld a settlement by a man on his second marriage in favour of a son by his former marriage as against creditors: (Ithell v. Beane, 1 Ves. Sen. 215.) Vice-Chancellor HALL has decided in the present case that the marriage settlement, so far as regarded a son by the former marriage, was voluntary, and therefore void as against a subsequent purchaser for valuable consideration. We shall look forward with some interest to the publication of the report of this judgment, inasmuch as the authorities are certainly not clear.

DISCOVERY.

THE framers of the Judicature Act evidently intended that in the majority of cases a writ of summons should be the end, as well as the beginning, of an action. Hence the numerous indorsements which are to be made upon it, such as the names of the parties (and their character, where representative), the general nature of the action, and the amount of money claimed, or the other relief sought.

It lies upon the defendant, in the first instance, to decide whether any further proceedings are necessary. If he cannot gather from the writ of summons what is the demand made upon him, or if the writ does not suffice to bring the circumstances to his memory, he must apply to the plaintiff to furnish him with a more detailed statement of his claim.

The courts have decided that until pleadings have been exchanged by the parties, discovery will not be ordered, whether in the shape of answer to interrogatories, or of the production, or inspection, of documents. Before an opportunity has been given to a party to state his own case, he may not be called upon to do so by process of discovery.

The exceptions to this rule are very few. It has been decided that the mere fact of ignorance of one of the parties as to his opponent's claim gives him no right to seek discovery before pleading. If a defendant, for instance, is utterly unaware of the cause of action he must first plead, stating his inability through ignorance to make a more complete defence; and reserving any defence which may be open to him when he knows more of the facts. The decisions, however, do not abrogate the rule of court which allows interrogatories at any stage of an action. There may be a state of circumstances rendering discovery proper before pleading. It is most probable that the economy of such a proceeding would have to be very clearly shown; or else, which is more likely, the time available for obtaining discovery must be proved to be very limited.

Nothing has been decided as to whether discovery may be obtained before reply, or subsequently pleaded. Take, for example, a case where the defendant is in total ignorance of the claim of the plaintiff, and pleads the fact. May the plaintiff resist discovery on the ground that he will amend his statement of claim? The point seems to be immaterial, and for this reason: The claim must have made out a prima facie case; the defence has denied liability, and pleaded ignorance as an excuse for a fuller answer. Surely the defence should move further, so as to bring itself au courant d'affaires: and discovery is the means it should adopt.

In the usual course of things pleading must precede discovery. There are two ways in which discovery may be obtained, when the proper time for it comes: the one is by production of documents, and the other by answers to interrogatories. It is clear that the two processes are to be conducted upon the same principles—that there is no other distinction between the two kinds of evidence than the mere fact that the one is originally in writing and the other is material within a party's own knowledge and reduced to writing. Discovery, it is true, sometimes incidentally aims at the security of a document, but its object is generally nothing more than to procure information, and never to pass a title. That would be an encroachment upon the objects of relief. For information the inspection of a document, liberty to copy it, is as valuable as the possession of it. Inspection is in effect the same thing as production.

The object of discovery is to enable a party to prove his case of his opponent's mouth, or from documents in his possession, not to enable him to fish out a case to bring, or a defence to put. An interrogatory may ask whether a specific fact is true, but what are the general facts of a supposed case. Production of the documentary evidence relating to a matter in dispute may be obtained, but it is not regular to interrogate as to what documents generally a party has. A specific question, "have you documents relating to a specific statement in the plaintiff's case," has, however, been allowed.

As a general rule, discovery will be given in aid of an action of anything within the personal knowledge of an opponent, or documents in his possession, provided that the action in which they are sought is maintainable, that the discovery relates to a case of the party seeking it, and that it is not sheltered by some ground of protection.

The facts relied on by the parties are contained, partly in indorsement upon the writ of summons, and partly upon pleadings. As discovery is the evidence of a party to be given before trial, it must relate to the facts so stated. The nature of the action indorsed upon the writ would usually be general to be the foundation for an interrogatory. Besides more detailed statement must be asked for before interrogatories can be put. The representative character of a party is a ground of protection. The amount of the claim may, at proper time, be the subject of discovery. If a claim is liquid its amount will rarely be disputed; if unliquidated, the conditions by which it is arrived at must be fully disclosed. Stories related by the parties in their pleadings are the primary basis of interrogatories. In reference to them, any interrogatory may be put which does not encroach upon one of the grounds of protection afforded by the law, viz.:

1. That the answer may tend to subject to a penalty or forfeiture.
2. That an answer would be immaterial to the purposes of the action.
3. That an answer would be a breach of professional confidence.
4. That the answer sought is not evidence to support the case of the party seeking it.

The more reticent a party is in his pleading, the more search may be the discovery sought for. For instance, if a defendant in an action for breach of promise of marriage were merely to state his liability, he might be specifically asked, "Did you not make such a promise (as alleged)?" Where, however, the cause of action may be the subject also of a criminal proceeding, a question would offend against the protection (1) as above.

Production and inspection of documents may be resisted on the same grounds.

In conclusion, there are some points of discovery which depart from the rule that discovery is granted equally to both sides. A claimant, for example, must discover strictly his case which the party in possession need not do. This follows from the fact that a claim for relief not showing a cause of action cannot be sustained.

A compromise has been ordered to be discovered. A defendant has been required to state upon what terms he had compromised with a third party a claim similar to that of the plaintiff; the plaintiff has been ordered to discover to some of the defence the terms he had come to with others of them. The discovery afforded in these cases was not within any ground of protection.

THE EFFECT OF RE TURNER, EX PARTE ATTWATER

WE briefly mentioned last week that the Court of Appeal in Turner v. Attwater had decided that an unregistered bill of sale which takes actual possession before the grantor commits an act of bankruptcy on which he is adjudicated or files his petition nevertheless unprotected if the grantor has committed a prior act of bankruptcy.

One effect of this is:

If A. on Jan. 3 advances B. £1000, in consideration of which B. assigns him personal chattels, and B. does not register the assignment, but on Jan. 30 takes possession and sells, he is to refund the proceeds to the trustee of B. appointed under a petition filed by B. in December, should B. have committed an act of bankruptcy on Jan. 1.

Sections 94 and 95 of the Bankruptcy Act of 1869 say that a bona fide disposition by the bankrupt of his property shall be notwithstanding a prior act of bankruptcy.

In Ex parte Arnold, re Wright, Lord Justice Mellish said that sect. 94 was intended to protect every transaction not amounting to a giving away of the bankrupt's property.

Therefore the Court of Appeal must mean that an assignment of personal chattels which, although not registered, is good against the grantor, is not a disposition of the bankrupt's property.

If it is a disposition of his property, it is valid as against the trustee, notwithstanding a prior act of bankruptcy (sect. 95).

It was admitted in this case that if the debtor had sold the goods and paid the creditor, the payment would have been proved by the proviso in sect. 92.

But because the creditor paid himself without the assistance of the debtor, the prior secret act of bankruptcy is brought in to meet him, and give the proceeds of the goods to the trustee. His remarkable decision is based entirely on the words of the 1st of Sale Act, which says that a bill of sale not registered within twenty-one days shall be void against assignees of the estate of a bankrupt, if the goods and chattels comprised therein were sold at or after the time of such bankruptcy, or the filing of the bankrupt's petition, in the possession or apparent possession of the grantor.

The Court of Appeal say that "such bankruptcy" means the committing of any act of bankruptcy within twelve months before adjudication, disregarding the fact that when the Bills of Sale Act was passed in 1854, the Bankruptcy Act of 1849 was in force. Justice Bramwell observed that the Act of 1869 could not repeal the Bills of Sale Act, and that the latter must be construed strictly, although inconsistent with the Bankruptcy Act of 1869, in which the title of the trustee rested.

USE OF EXTRINSIC EVIDENCE TO SUPPLEMENT OR CONTROL DOCUMENTS OF TITLE.

VIII.—EQUITABLE PRESUMPTIONS.

7.—Vendor's Lien.

(Continued from p. 113.)

Lord CHANCELLOR HATHERLEY, when Lord Justice Wood, was of opinion (Wing v. Tottenham and Hampstead Junction Railway Company, L. Rep. 3 Ch. App. 740), that the 85th section of the Bills of Sale Act does not transfer the absolute ownership to a venditor, and that it merely empowers them to take and use the land on making a deposit of a sum of money and giving a bond. Lord Justice Selwyn further held that a vendor of land to a railway company who have entered and used it for the purpose of their railway is entitled to the same lien on the land for unpaid purchase money, and the same remedies for enforcing it as an ordinary vendor.

Parties purchasing a guaranty which eventually fails, have no right to the benefit of the vendors. Thus the Western Assurance Society, in consideration of the Albert Company taking upon itself all the liabilities of the society, agreed to refer to the Albert all the funds and property of the society. The Chancellor James and Vice-Chancellor Bacon held that the vendor of the society was not entitled, upon the principle of the vendor's lien for unpaid purchase-money, to have delivered back to him by the liquidators of the company a lease, mortgages, and insurance policies, which had been handed over; also that the vendor of the society was not entitled on any principle analogous to the right of a surety who discharges the debt of the principal to the benefit of the reinsurance policies (23 L. T. N. S. 726; L. Rep. 10 Eq. Ca. 178).

And where the consideration is an annual rentcharge, the extinction of the parties negatives the existence of the lien, The Jersey v. The Briton Ferry Floating Dock Company (L. Rep. 1 Ch. App. 409).

In Re Parkes (1 Glyn & J. 228) Vice-Chancellor Sir John B. held that a bond, being merely a security for payment of purchase-money, does not destroy the lien, but that the promise of a covenant by which the vendor consents to the postponement of payment till two years after a resale do destroy it. Such a covenant is an implied authority to the vendee to take premises discharged of the lien, and a consent to rely upon personal security of the bankrupt.

A contract for re-purchase is to be distinguished from the relation of debtor and creditor in an ordinary sale. Thus in Knox v. Porter (L. Rep. 5 Ch. 515; 23 L. T. Rep. N.S. 227), the plaintiff took an annuity, to continue during his own life, to the defendant, it was agreed that the plaintiff should appear at an insurance office for the purpose of having his life insured, and should, if he died beyond the seas, pay any extra premium which might be charged thereby, and that he might at any time re-purchase the annuity for the sum which was originally paid for it. The defendant insured the life of the plaintiff and paid the premium in full. The plaintiff afterwards re-purchased the annuity, and the question was raised whose property was the annuity. Lord Chancellor Hatherley thought that the Chancellor Stuart had made a fundamental error in treating the case as one of debtor and creditor, and in speaking of the annuity money as property created by the plaintiff's money, and in his opinion, the annuity belonged not to the plaintiff but to the purchaser until the plaintiff chose to buy it back.

Mr. Sugden, in the seventh edition of his work on "Vendors and Purchasers," p. 258, expressed a doubt, which he repeated in the eighth edition, p. 284, whether the lien existed in favour of the vendor who has paid the purchase-money. In Burgess v. Wheate (Black 150; 1 Eden, 211) Sir Thomas Clarke impugned the authority of Mr. Sugden's doubt, viz., that it would be raising a debt against the express agreement of the parties. Lord Eldon, in Mackreth v. Symmons (15 Ves. 345), agreed with Sir T. Clarke, and thought that Mr. Sugden assumed this very matter in controversy in assuming that there was no debt between the parties.

Accordingly, in Rose v. Watson (33 L. J. 385, Ch.; 10 Jur. Rep. N. S. 297; 10 L. T. Rep. N. S. 106), where the evidence failed to establish the title, Lord Chancellor Westbury thus laid down the law: "When the owner of an estate contracts with the purchaser for the sale of it, or even for the immediate sale of the ownership of the estate is in equity transferred by that contract. Where the contract is undoubtedly an executory contract in this sense, viz., that the ownership of the estate is transferred subject to the payment of the purchase money, every portion of the purchase money paid in pursuance of that contract is a part performance of the contract, executes it, and to the extent of the purchase money so paid does in equity finally transfer to the purchaser the ownership of a corresponding portion of the estate. If that contract fails, and the failure is not to be attributed to any misconduct or default on the part of the purchaser, the question is a very obvious one. Is the purchaser to be deprived of the interest in the estate which he has acquired by that bonâ fide payment? It only gives in point of fact an additional ground of complaint to the purchaser that he cannot obtain the estate he contracted for. The money was money advanced on the faith that the land, the subject of the contract, would become the property of the respondent, and being so paid as part of the purchase money, the Lord Chancellor thought that their lordships would have little difficulty in ruling that these sums of money thus paid formed powerful sums, in respect of which a lien arose from the time of payment in consequence of the subsequent failure of the vendor to perform the contract, and being a lien they bore fruit consequently, that is to say, they entitled the person who is possessed of the lien to interest in respect of them."

AGENCY.—LIABILITY OF AGENT TO PRINCIPAL.

NEGLIGENCE IN PERFORMING UNDERTAKING.

An agent is liable for misfeasance in performing a gratuitous undertaking if he fails to exercise that degree of skill which is imputable to his situation or employment. Any failure on his part to fulfil the obligations imposed upon him as being possessed of the skill which he holds himself out to the world as possessing is actionable negligence. The expression "gross negligence" is discarded for reasons already mentioned. A reference to any reported case where the defendant has been charged with negligence will show at once that the whole argument and reasoning have gone to demonstrate that the negligence, if any existed, was or was not actionable. That this is always the real inquiry in an action for negligence cannot be doubted, and it is impossible to see in what way this inquiry is facilitated by attempting to qualify the variable term "negligence" by an adjective (gross), which cannot be defined to any useful purpose.

The following cases sufficiently illustrate the above propositions:—

In Shiells v. Blackburne (1 H. Bl. 158), decided 1789, the defendant, a general merchant, undertook without reward to enter a parcel of goods of G. together with a parcel of his own of the same sort at the custom house for exportation. In order to save the expense and trouble of a separate entry at the custom house, he by agreement with G. made one entry of both the cases, but did it under the denomination of wrought leather instead of dressed leather. Owing to this mistake the two cases were seized, and the assignees of G., who had become bankrupt, brought an action to recover the value of G.'s parcel. The defendant's liability was urged on the ground that although an action would not lie for nonfeasance it would for a misfeasance.

Lord Loughborough agreed with Sir William Jones (Law of Bailments, p. 120) that when a bailee undertakes to perform a gratuitous act, from which the bailor alone is to receive benefit, there the bailee is only liable for gross negligence; but if a man gratuitously undertakes to do a thing to the best of his skill, where his situation or profession is such as to imply skill, an omission of that skill is imputable to him as gross negligence. His Lordship acknowledged too that if in this case a ship-broker or a clerk in the custom house had undertaken to enter the goods, a wrong entry would in them be gross negligence, because their situation and employment necessarily imply a competent degree of knowledge in making such entries; but when an application under the circumstances of this case is made to a general merchant to make an entry at the custom house, such a mistake as this is not to be imputed to him as gross negligence.

Mr. Justice Heath said "The defendant in this case was not guilty either of gross negligence or fraud, he acted bonâ fide. If a man applies to a surgeon to attend him in a disorder, for a reward, and the surgeon treats him improperly, there is gross negligence, and the surgeon is liable to an action; the surgeon would also be liable for such negligence if he undertook gratis to attend a sick person, because his situation implies skill in surgery; but if the patient applies to a man of a different occupation for his gratuitous assistance, who either does not exert all his skill, or administers improper remedies to the best of his ability, such person is not liable."

Wilkinson v. Coverdale (1 Esp. 74, 1793), was an action against a person who had gratuitously undertaken to procure an insurance against fire for certain premises belonging to the plaintiffs, but who, in effecting it, acted so negligently that the plaintiff lost the benefit of it, and suffered a total loss. Lord Kenyon, before whom the case was tried, expressed a doubt whether any action could be maintained on such an undertaking. Erskine for the plaintiff thereupon cited a manuscript note of the case of Wallace v. Talfair, decided at Nisi Prius before Mr. Justice Fuller, when it was ruled in a similar action, "that though there was no consideration for one party's undertaking to procure an insurance for another, yet where a party voluntarily undertook to do it, and proceeded to carry his undertaking into effect, by getting a policy underwritten, but did it so negligently that the party could derive no benefit from it, in that case he should be liable to an action." Lord Kenyon acquiesced, but the plaintiff failing to prove any promise to insure on the part of the defendant, was nonsuited.

Coplett v. Gordon (3 Campb. 473) decided in 1813, was an action for the value of goods which the defendants had neglected to insure. The plaintiff residing in South America, sent a bill of lading of certain bales of cotton to the defendants, who were merchants in London, and requested them to effect insurance to the full amount. The defendants had not done business for the plaintiffs before, and had given no promise to act as his consignees, nor did they wish to do so. On receiving the bill of lading they indorsed it over to M., a friend and creditor of the plaintiff. M. procured the insurance, and received the goods, but afterwards became insolvent, with the proceeds in his possession. The plaintiff then sued the defendants for the value. The case was tried before Lord Ellenborough, who told the jury that the defendants had no right to indorse the bill of lading, though he was not quite clear what they ought to have done. "They had their election," said his Lordship "either to take or reject the bill of lading. If they took it, they were bound to take it according to the terms of the consignment, by which they themselves were to insure and sell the goods." A verdict for the value of the goods was entered for the plaintiff.

In Pappa v. Rose (L. Rep. 7 C. P. 32, affirmed ib. 525, 1872) the defendant was a broker employed by the plaintiff to sell some raisins on the terms of the following sale note: "Sold by order, and on account of P. (the plaintiff), to arrive, to my principals H. and Son, 500 tons of black Smyrna raisins, 1869 growth, fair average quality, in the opinion of the selling broker," signed J. R. (the defendant). Upon the arrival of the raisins, H. and Son objected to their quality, the defendant accordingly examined them, and decided that they were not of the quality mentioned in the sale note. The buyers accordingly refused to accept them. The plaintiff then brought an action against the broker on the ground that he had shown want of skill in deciding upon the quality of the currants. The Chief Justice of the Common Pleas (Sir W. Bovill), after consulting Mr. Justice Willes, ruled, so far as the ruling is material for the present question, that the defendant was appointed to act as an arbitrator or judge of the quality, and was, therefore, not liable for an error in judgment or want of skill in certifying the quality if he acted honestly and bonâ fide. The plaintiff elected to be nonsuited. A rule for a new trial was discharged by the Common Pleas, the judgment of which court was affirmed in the Exchequer Chamber. Mr. Justice Brett said, "I think it is quite unnecessary for us to determine what is the true construction of the contract, because I think the Lord Chief Justice was clearly right on the second point. The ruling upon that was not that the defendant was in the strict sense of the term an arbitrator, but that he was a person filling a position which brought him within an exception well-known to the law of England, viz., that a person who is appointed and is acting as an arbitrator to determine a matter in difference between two more persons does not enter into an implied promise to bring the performance of the duty entrusted to him a due and reasonable amount of skill and knowledge. The question is merely as to an implied undertaking; and the law says there is none such. If then, the defendant within that exception? I apprehend that every person falls within it who has taken upon himself to determine a disputed matter between two persons who have agreed to be concluded by his opinion."

In the Exchequer Chamber, Chief Baron Kelly said: "It is the duty of the broker to make the contract, and he must engage his principal to enforce it, which he cannot do unless he (the broker) expresses his opinion on the goods. But having entered into an implied contract to give that opinion, is he bound to exercise skill in the matter? He may have impliedly contracted to do all that is necessary to enable him to give an opinion, it is to say, he is bound to examine the goods, as no one can give an opinion on goods without looking at them. . . . The position of an arbitrator was used in the court below only as an illustration, and to assist the court in determining the nature of the contract. If two parties agree to submit a question to a third, the third party is not bound to give an opinion. But if this third party is in any way a party to the transaction, and is acting for his reward, he is just as much bound to give his opinion as the other two are to abide by it. . . . If the arbitrator agrees to give an opinion, I deny that there is any contract to use skill."

Jenkins v. Bethan (15 C. B. 160; 24 L. J. 94, C. P.) was distinguished on the ground that the defendant, who was employed as a valuer, was a valuer, and thereby held himself out as a person possessing skill in the subject-matter.

The result of the cases may be stated in the following terms:

1. An agent, whether remunerated or unremunerated, is liable for negligence in performing an undertaking.
2. Actionable negligence in the case of an unremunerated agent consists in a failure to exercise that skill which is implied in his situation or employment, or which he holds himself out to the world as possessing.

LAW LIBRARY.

The Merchant Shipping Laws. By A. C. BOYD, Barrister-at-Law. London: Stevens and Sons.

MR. BOYD has adopted an excellent plan in this treatise, he has brought together under the sections of the Merchant Shipping Act of 1854, all cognate sections of other Acts and orders by which means he provides the practitioner with something approaching to a digest of the law and procedure connected with shipping. Having done this he leaves the statutes to speak for themselves, but in some instances he adds notes which show an intelligent acquaintance with the law. The work thus being mainly a collection of the provisions of Acts of Parliament, the great desideratum is obviously a good index, and this Mr. Boyd has taken particular care to supply. We recommend the work as a very useful compendium of shipping law.

The Popular Conveyancer. By JAMES BALL. London: B. T. B. worths.

THIS is mainly a book of precedents, comprising ordinary conveyances, leases, mortgages, marriage settlements, simple wills. Mr. Ball is "a conveyancing clerk, reading to the Bar," and as he says, able by his own experience to anticipate the wants of others. The work shows that Mr. Ball has a clear conception of conveyancing, his notes are well written and compendious, and the precedents have been selected with great care. Such a book must commend itself to students and practitioners.

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL.

THE "law's delay" has become proverbial, and the confusing and unsatisfactory manner in which the routine business of the law courts is administered, is at the present time more loudly complained of than ever. These complaints find their way into the columns of the leading journals, at the instance of lawyers themselves be it observed. Two points have to be considered—are these complaints well founded, and does the publication of such complaints serve any useful purpose? The first question may be dismissed by giving it an affirmative answer. It is beyond dispute that the common law judges' chambers bear a greater resemblance to a bear garden than to an important branch of a court of justice. We speak strictly within the limits of truth when we say that nineteen solicitors out of twenty will not attend these chambers, so that what common law clerks cannot do, counsel is called upon to undertake. This has lately been very properly pointed out by a letter from a solicitor published in the Times. In all the law chambers and law offices, there is a great deal of unnecessary delay, but nowhere to such an extent as in the Chancery Judges' chambers. Even in friendly suits, as a solicitor writing to the Times on Tuesday last pointed out, the delay that now takes place is as serious and as unnecessary as ever it was. We have pointed out in these columns that one of the chief reasons for this is that the chief clerks have more work than they can possibly get through. The business of these offices is conducted with the greatest quietude and decorum, the arrangements are excellent, and nothing but an insufficient staff of chief clerks can account for the delay which is often so serious in its consequences to suitors and their interests. But it is quite unnecessary to pursue this investigation further; every lawyer in active practice knows very well that what we allege is correct. Now, as to the second question, does the discussion of these complaints in the public press serve any useful purpose? This course has for years been adopted by lawyers without any substantial remedial reform, that we posed to doubt whether it does serve any purpose, for nothing but the interference of the Legislature will provide a remedy, and in the Times very properly points to complaints such as his serve to excite the ears and to prevent blame being cast upon the shoulders of those who ought not to bear it, but not to secure any redress. In short, the Profession complains to no

CONSISTENCY, in its strictest sense, is of which few men can fairly boast. The statesmen have been guilty of grave inconsistency. It is not, therefore, to be wondered at that a law officer in the person of John Holker, M.P., should be found to lack this virtue when submitted to a crucial comparing what he said about the privileges when, as Solicitor General, he learned of the proposed Bill 1874, which proposed accountants to a penalty of £10, veral, when infringing the provisions of the Stamp Act 1870, with what he said the in the Exchequer Division at West- hen, as Attorney-General, he represented in the case of the Attorney-General v. Whiffin, which case the learned gentleman re- judgment for £50 by way of penalty Stamp Act 1870, against the defendant, ing a bill of sale. We reported this in our issue of the 2nd instant. The the chief law officer, to which we refer be found in our issue of the 11th July 193. This report was specially taken v. TIMES, and we can vouch for its cor- In order to do the learned Attorney- possible injustice, we will place his is in each case in juxtaposition, and readers to judge how far the soft im- to which we have subjected the chief is warranted by facts.

om the speech Extract from the speech of Sir John Holker, as Attorney-General, in the recent case of The Attorney-General v. Tett :—

"The Attorney-General, in opening the case, said that this was a proceeding for a penalty incurred by the defendant under the provisions of the 33rd & 34th Vict. c. 97, s. 60, which provided that—'Every person who (not being a solicitor, barrister, or a duly certificated attorney, solicitor, proctor, notary public, writer to the signet, agent, procurator, conveyancer, special pleader, or draughtsman in equity) either directly or indirectly, for or in expectation of any fee, gain, or reward, draws or prepares any instrument relating to real or personal estate, or any proceeding in law or equity, shall forfeit the sum of £50.' The result of that provision was that any unqualified person who drew certain legal instruments incurred a penalty, and in his opinion the provision was a wise one, and necessary for the protection of properly qualified practitioners as well as for the public. It was very hard upon a man who had gone through a long, a laborious, and an expensive training, and who had thereby duly qualified himself for the practice of the law, that he should be subject to the competition of those who were unqualified, and, as a rule, were quite unfit to undertake the conduct of legal matters; and it was for the interest of the public that their legal affairs should be transacted by duly qualified persons, who, in case of want of skill or negligence, were liable to an action or were subject to the control of the courts. The facts of the case were short and simple. In 1874 the defendant, who appeared to be an accountant, took a part of a house in Westbourne Park, from a Mr. Smith. He then seemed to have entered into the transaction of legal business of various kinds. In August, 1874, a gentleman who was in want of money obtained through the defendant the loan of £147 from the defendant's land- lord. How much of that sum eventually reached the hands of the borrower it was difficult to say, but there were considerable sums deducted from it for interest and commission. The loan, however, was to be secured by a bill of sale on the borrower's furniture. He was in a position to show that that bill of sale was prepared by the defendant, who wrote it and got it executed, and who charged for his services in that respect the sum of 10 guineas, the amount being deducted from the sum lent before it reached the borrower's hands."

Under this accountant a document in the cre of 1th reference apcy, would a penalty of us should be understand, the business and than an he was more an attorney k. Again, an prepared a h regard to herty, would o the same ould not be er the rema- is work. He ould be most sanction any ling to these h regard to ause, which ls of sale, it thought, de- ge a man to ttorney. It ppened in that an at- n sooner or eing eagerly there was a other House visions with ls of sale, robably meet ents of the He should the second ill, but he the third either to be considerably mittee." ition that Mr. C. E. Lewis warmly supported the Legal Practitioners' Bill, and retorted upon the Solicitor-General by saying that he was surprised that the learned gentleman should have objected to the third clause of the Bill, which only embodied a principle contained in earlier statutes, the 44 Geo. 3, c. 98, s. 14, and 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, s. 60, which Mr. Lewis read to the House. The following is the third clause referred to, to which the learned Attorney-General is—we suppose—not now so strongly opposed :—

Every person who (not being a serjeant-at-law, barrister, duly certificated attorney or solicitor, proctor, notary public, writer to the signet, agent, procurator, certificated conveyancer, special pleader, or draughtsman in equity), either directly or indirectly, for or in expectation of any fee, gain, or reward, draws or prepares any instrument relating to real or personal estate, or any proceedings in law or equity, shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of £10. Provided as follows:

- (1) This section does not extend to—
Any public officer drawing or preparing instruments in the course of his duty;
Any person employed merely to engross any instrument or proceedings.
- (2) The term "instrument" in the section does not include—
(a) Wills or other testamentary instruments;
(b) Agreements under hand only;
(c) Letters or powers of attorney;
(d) Transfers or assignments of stocks, shares, or bonds.

Penalties incurred under this section are to be sued for by a qualified practitioner by action brought in the county court within the jurisdiction of which the cause of action shall have arisen, and may be recovered with full costs of suit.

Penalties recovered under this section shall be paid over to the Receiver-General of Inland Revenue. It may be that the Attorney-General has taken an altogether different view of the matter; if so, we hope the Legal Practitioners' Society will introduce this provision as framed in their Bill of last session (which we consider an improvement on the above), into Parliament next session for the fourth time.

UNDER the heading "Commissions" letters have during the past week appeared in the columns of the Times, the subject matter of which, we hope, will not be lost sight of by solicitors. "An Auctioneer" in one of such letters, and "A Broker" in another, point out the extent to which solicitors take, or rather insist, upon the payment of a "commission." Within certain well-defined limits we see no objection to this practice, but when it is carried to the length it now sometimes is, threatening as it does, to induce a solicitor to consider the payment of the commission as of greater consequence than the genuine interests of the client, then we must denounce it as a dangerous and unprofessional proceeding.

MANY things have contributed to militate against the perpetuation of a good old custom by which at Christmas time London agents sent to solicitors who were their country clients presents of oysters, cheeses, &c., yet we are happy to say that this practice was this year observed to a considerable extent among the old-established agency houses in London. We fear, however, that a few more years will see this professional custom rooted out. The agency of to-day is indeed a very different thing from the London agency of twenty-five years ago.

GREAT inconvenience is experienced by the Profession in London from the fact that most law stationers who sell printed forms of affidavits, print in the form of jurat at the foot thereof, the words "at judges' chambers." In the great majority of cases, therefore, in which affidavits prepared by the use of these forms are sworn before commissioners for oaths away from judges' chambers, it becomes necessary for the commissioner to re-write the entire jurat. This, of course, occasions unnecessary delay, and certainly does not look well. The words in question should be omitted from all such forms.

COURT OF APPEAL.

SITTINGS AT LINCOLN'S INN.

Wednesday, Dec. 20.

(Before JAMES, L.J., BAGGALLAY, and BRAMWELL, JJ.A.)

HALL v. EVE.

Pleading—What may be alleged in a reply.

THIS was an appeal from a decision of Bacon, V.C. It raised an important question of practice under the new rules. The plaintiff in the action claimed specific performance of an agreement entered into between the defendants Eve and Whiffin and a co-defendant Lane, for the granting of a lease of certain property to Lane with an option to the lessee to purchase. Lane had transferred his interest to the plaintiff, and notice had been given to exercise the option, but the defendants Eve and Whiffin refused to execute a conveyance. By their statement of defence Eve and Whiffin alleged that, before the transfer to the plaintiff, Lane had committed a breach of the conditions of the agreement, which entitled the defendants to put an end to it. The plaintiff delivered a reply, by which he admitted some of the statements in the defence and denied others. He said that if there had been any breach (which he denied), it had been waived; and that, if the plaintiff had broken one of the provisions of the agreement, the defendants were not, for reasons which he stated, entitled to determine the agreement. He made various other allegations, and, finally, he joined issue with the defendants Eve and Whiffin upon their statement of defence, except as to so much of it as he had admitted; and with this reply the plaintiff served a notice of trial. The Vice-Chancellor, on the application of the defendants Eve and Whiffin, ordered both the reply and the notice of trial to be set aside as irregular and erroneous in point of form. His Lordship held that the plaintiff ought to have amended his statement of claim, and gave him leave to do so. The plaintiff appealed.

Sir H. Jackson, Q.C. and C. Browne, for the plaintiff, contended that special replications are admissible under the new rules, and that this course is the most convenient.

Kay, Q.C. and Horton Smith, for the defendants, argued that the reply contained inconsistent cases, and was open to the objection of double pleading, and that the amendment of the statement of claim was most convenient. At any rate, the Vice-Chancellor had a discretion in the matter, and the Court of Appeal would not interfere.

JAMES, L.J., said that the case reminded him of a saying of the late Mr. Jacob, which he had often heard quoted, that the importance of questions stood in this order:—The most important of all was costs; the next was practice; and the third, which came very far behind, was the merits of the case. The time occupied in the argument of the present case was wholly disproportionate to its importance. The plaintiff, by his statement of claim, said, "I am entitled to specific performance of a certain agreement." The defendants, by their statement of defence, said, "You have committed breaches of the agreement which entitle us to put an end to it." The plaintiff, in his reply said, "Your allegations are not true, and, if they are, the things which you say I have done I was induced to do by you." It was not questioned that the plaintiff was entitled to say this in some way if it was true. The only question was whether he was entitled to say it as part of his replication. Now, Order XIX. rule 2 said that the plaintiff should deliver a statement of his reply (if any) to the defence, and there was no limit that his lordship knew of as to what might be said in the reply, except that it must not be irrelevant or scandalous, or anything which the court might consider as tending to prejudice, embarrass, or delay the fair trial of the action. The reply was left as much at large as the statement of claim or the defence. It was contended that the plaintiff ought to have said what he had to say by means of an amendment of his statement of claim, and, of course, if the rules had so provided, the court would be bound by them. But if the rules had not so provided, it seemed to his lordship most illogical that the plaintiff should have to do this. It was no part of the statement of claim to anticipate the defence, and to state what the plaintiff would have to say in answer to it. This would be a return to the old system of pleading in the Court of Chancery, which certainly ought not to be encouraged, when the plaintiff used to allege in his bill imaginary defences of the defendant, and to make charges in reply to them. His Lordship was of opinion that the reply was the proper place in which to meet a defence by confession and avoidance. The appeal must, therefore, be allowed.

BAGGALLAY, J.A. was of the same opinion. Order XIX., rule 2, pointed out the proper course to be pursued in ordinary cases, and there was no restriction of the generality of the words—no suggestion that they applied only to a simple reply. Then rule 4 said that forms similar to those in the Appendix C might be used, and in that appendix several forms of special replication were given. To one of these forms a note was added, that the facts stated in that reply should in general be introduced by amendment into the statement of claim. It had been argued that this note showed that, as a general rule, new facts ought to be introduced by amendment, and not by a special reply. His Lordship read it differently. The note was added to one only of the forms, and, looking at the facts stated in that form, it was clear that in that particular case they would be most conveniently introduced by way of amendment. This view of Order XIX. was confirmed by Orders XXIV. and XXV. Rule 2 of Order XXIV said that no pleading subsequent to reply, other than a joinder of issue, should be pleaded without leave of the court or a judge. This implied that a reply might contain something which would render some further pleading necessary.

BRAMWELL, J. A. was also of opinion that the appeal must be allowed. His judgment was not influenced by any love of the old special pleading, which for a quarter of a century he did his best to get rid of, and he was happy to think it had now gone. But it was certainly quite logical, and under it this answer of the plaintiff to the defence would have come in the reply. The rule then was that you did not leap before you came to the stile. It might be a grave question whether any pleading should be allowed at all, and on this subject there were different opinions. His Lordship was inclined to think that the framers of the rules intended that the pleading should stop at replication; they certainly intended that the pleadings should go as far as replication, and that the plaintiff should be entitled to reply specially, and also to deny the statements of the defendant. It would be very unjust if he were not allowed to do this. Order XXIV., rule 2, seemed to be decisive of the matter. Did it not import that a reply might be other than a simple joinder of issue, and that it might be pleaded without the leave of the court? It amounted almost to demonstration that this was so. But it was said that this was a matter for the discretion of the judge, and that the new matter would most properly appear by amendment of the statement of claim. His Lordship was clearly of opinion that it would not. Rule 2 of Order XIX. said that the plaintiff should deliver to the defendant a statement of his complaint, and of the relief to which he claimed to be entitled. In the present case the waiver of the alleged forfeiture was no part of the plaintiff's complaint, or of the relief which he claimed. It appeared to his Lordship that it would be altogether out of place and illogical if this were put into the statement of claim, and the Rules did not require that it should. He could not help thinking that it was a mischievous thing to anticipate a defence which might never be raised. If the plaintiff were to do this, he must also anticipate every form of it, and this would lead to great length of pleadings. It appeared to his Lordship that this new matter was much more cheaply, conveniently, and compendiously introduced in the reply than by amendment of the statement of claim.

CHANCERY DIVISION.

(Before JESSEL, M.R.)

Monday, Dec. 11.

WHITEFORD v. WATFORD.

Motions to vary minutes.

UPON a motion by the defendant to vary minutes, and a cross motion by the plaintiffs to the like effect,

Bagshawe, Q.C. and Holles, for the defendant,
A. Brown for the plaintiffs.

JESSEL, M.R., ascertained upon the evidence of the respective counsel's indorsements upon their briefs made on the trial of the action, what was the order actually made on that occasion, and refused to let the order then made be opened, even upon the cross-motion. He stated that he wished to inform the members of the Junior Bar (for of course the Queen's Counsel practising in his court were perfectly aware) that on motion to vary minutes the only question which he could allow to be argued was what was the actual order made, and that he could not on such a motion allow the case to be re-argued. The only exceptions were when both parties consented to something being added to the minutes, or, as sometimes happened, when it could not be ascertained what order had been made; and in the latter case his Lordship might allow the case to be put in the paper again for argument.

F. and T. Smith and Sons, for defendant.
Wm. Tatham and Sons for plaintiffs.

HEIRS AT LAW AND NEXT OF KIN.

BATES (Ann), 21, Church-row, King's-cross, Middlesex, widow (who is believed to have been the daughter of Richd. Hopkins and Ann, his wife, formerly Ann Loyal, who were married at St. James's Church, Westminster, on the 15th Feb. 1779). Next-of-kin to come in by Feb. 6, at the chambers of the M.R. Feb. 29, at the said chambers, at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

UNCLAIMED STOCK AND DIVIDENDS IN THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

[Transferred to the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, and which will be paid to the persons respectively whose names are prefixed to each in three months, unless some other claimants sooner appear.]

BAYLEY (Thos. Butterworth Chas.), of Winberg, Cape of Good Hope, Esq. One dividend on the sum of £225 New £5 10s. per Cent. Annuities 1854. Claimant, Daniel Bayley, acting surviving executor of Thos. B. C. Bayley, deceased.
SPARTALI (Michael), Gresham House, Old Broad-street, London, Esq. One dividend on the sum of £350 6s. 8d. Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said M. Spartali.
TWISS (Edw. Curtis), student at Exeter College, Oxford. One dividend on the sum of £1922 6s. 8d. Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimant, said Edw. C. Twiss.
WOODBRIDGE (Chas.), junior, gentleman, and MORTON, (Henry), builder, both of Exbridge, £55 17s. 4d. Three per Cent. Annuities. Claimants, said Chas. Woodbridge, jun., and H. Morton.

APPOINTMENTS UNDER THE JOINT-STOCK WINDING-UP ACTS.

BROWN (G. and J.) AND COMPANY (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by Jan. 15 their names and addresses, and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any) to W. H. Smith, 5, High-street, Sheffield one of the liquidators of the said company. Jan. 31, at the chambers of V.C. H., at three o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

JOINT STOCK COAL COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up to be heard Jan. 13 before the M.R.

LONDON, ASIATIC, AND AMERICAN COMPANY (LIMITED).—Creditors to send in by April 10 their names and addresses and the particulars of their claims, and the names and addresses of their solicitors (if any) to P. Williams, 5, Bank-buildings, London, E.C. April 17, at the chambers of V.C. M., at twelve o'clock, is the time appointed for hearing and adjudicating upon such claims.

MADRID MARKETS COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up to be heard Jan. 12 before V.C. H.

TAURISE COMPANY (LIMITED).—Petition for winding-up to be heard Jan. 13 before the M.R.

CREDITORS UNDER ESTATES IN CHANCERY.

LAST DAY OF PROOF

BROOME (Andrew), Chisden's Farm, Great Missenden, Bucks. Jan. 25; Daniel Clarke, solicitor, High Wycombe, Bucks. Feb. 5; V.C. H. at twelve o'clock.

BELL (Thos. B.), Newcastle-upon-Tyne, an Elder Brother of Trinity House. Jan. 29; Wm. Harle, solicitor, Union Chambers, Grainger-street, West, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Jan. 29; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

BLOOMER (Boss), late of 56, Holland-road, Kensington, Middlesex, and formerly of Pelsall, Stafford, ironmaster. Jan. 22; Robert Peckham, solicitor, 17, Knight-bridge-street, Doctor's Commons, Middlesex. Feb. 5; M. R., at eleven o'clock.

BONNER (Thos.), Bridport, Dorset, gentleman. Jan. 22; Wm. H. Manley, solicitor, Bridport. Feb. 5; M.R., at eleven o'clock.

BURNEY (Jane A.), Gosforth, Northumberland, widow. Jan. 15; Wm. G. Davies, solicitor, Newcastle-upon-Tyne. Jan. 22; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

DALE (Wm.), Gt. Stanmore, Middlesex, veterinary surgeon. Jan. 12; R. B. Pugh, solicitor, 8, Gray's-inn-place, Gray's-inn, London. Jan. 29; M.R., at eleven o'clock.

EDDS (Thos. Edwards), Auckland House, Lower Norwood, Surrey. Feb. 5; W. Kelly, solicitor, 48, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London. Feb. 15; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

GREEN (Jonathan), Pucklechurch, Gloucester, farmer. Jan. 31; Obed Edwd. Thurston, solicitor, Thornbury, Gloucester. Feb. 9; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

HARDING (Edwd.), 82, Norfolk-terrace, Baywater, Middlesex, gentleman. Jan. 20; A. Pollock, solicitor, 68, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London. Jan. 29; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

JERVIS (Jno.), Sharrow Grange, Sheffield, gentleman. Jan. 29; Broomhead, Wightman, and Moore, solicitors, Sheffield. Feb. 15; M.R., at twelve o'clock.

JOHN (Henry), 27, Fitzroy-road, Regent's Park, Middlesex, builder. Jan. 29; Wm. Moun, solicitor, 15, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London. Feb. 2; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

MAGRATH (Henry J.), Holyrood House, Huddersfield, Middlesex, gentleman. Jan. 25; Flavell and Rowman, solicitors, 21, Bedford-row, Holborn, Middlesex. Jan. 30; M.R., at twelve o'clock.

PHILLIPS (Geo.), High-street, Southampton, stationer and ironmonger. Jan. 31; Alexander Paris, solicitor, Southampton. Feb. 10; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

REDFERN (Jas.), commonly called Jas. Frankl, late of Clifton House, Southend-on-sea, Hants, but formerly of 28, Queen Anne-street, and Lower Mount Cottage, Hampstead, Middlesex, sculptor. Jan. 15; C. Harcourt, solicitor, 13, Moorgate-street, London. Jan. 25; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

REVES (Samuel), 8, Richmond-grove, Richmond-road, Barnsbury, Middlesex, printer. Feb. 1; J. Rexworthy, solicitor, 57, Cheapside, London. Feb. 8; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

ROE (Jno.), North Shields, master mariner. Feb. 1; C. J. Holdsworth, solicitor, 25, Bush-lane, London. Feb. 15; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

ROWE (Jno.), 131, Coldharbour-lane, Camberwell, Surrey. Feb. 1; W. Horsley, solicitor, 11, Bull and Mouth-street, London. Feb. 12; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

SADLER (Wm.), Tolberton, York, yeoman. Jan. 13; Leonard, Wilkinson, and Leman, solicitors, York. Jan. 20; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

SHEPHERD (Wm.), Middle Rasen, Lincoln, farmer. Jan. 20; J. Fallows, solicitor, 4, Lancaster-place, Strand. Jan. 27; V.C. B., at twelve o'clock.

HOWE (Frederick William), formerly of York, but late of Leicester, pawnbroker. Jan. 27; Horatio L. Warwick, solicitor, Leicester. Feb. 8; V.C. M., at twelve o'clock.

SPINNEY (Sarah), and Kirby Stephen, Westmoreland, spinners. Jan. 19; Wm. Wilson, solicitor, Kirby Stephen. Feb. 2; M.R., at eleven o'clock.

WILLIAMS (Wm.), Port Cad. Ivor, Merthyr Tydfil, Glamorgan, innkeeper. Jan. 31; Wm. Beddoe, solicitor, Merthyr Tydfil. Feb. 5; V.C. H., at twelve o'clock.

CREDITORS UNDER 22 & 23 VICT. c. 35.

Last Day of Claim, and to whom Particulars to be sent.

ASH (Mary Ann), Graiseley, Wolverhampton, widow. March 21; Jno. Riley, solicitor, 32, Queen-street, Wolverhampton.

ATYER (Chas. L. S.), Allahabad, East Indies, a Lieutenant in the 5th regiment of Foot. Feb. 15; Henry P. Anber, solicitor, Bridgwater, Somerset.

BARRAS (Jas.), Seghill, Northumberland, shipowner. Feb. 7; Hodge and Harle, solicitors, Union Chambers, Grainger-street West, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

BENSON (Samuel), Ormonde House, Eastern-road, Brighton, gentleman. Jan. 31; W. A. Crump and Son, solicitors, 10, Philpot-lane, London.

BEWICK (Calverly), Close House, Northumberland, Esq. High Sheriff of Northumberland. March 31; Dees and Thompson, solicitors, 89, Pilgrim-street, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

BITHNEY (John), formerly of Tennis Court, Holborn, Middlesex, printer, and late of Bedford. Feb. 1; Thomas S. Porter, solicitor, Corn Exchange, Bedford.

BOWELL (William), 13, Alexandrian-terrace, Sunnyside-road, Hornsey-rise, Middlesex, builder. Jan. 31; C. G. Scott, solicitor, 1, College-hill, London, E.C.

BRANDER (Robert B.), Belmore House, West Grinstead, Sussex, Esq. Feb. 10; M. and H. Turner, solicitors, 22, Sackville-street, Piccadilly.

CHAPMAN (Alfred), formerly of Austin-friars, London, and late of Eaton-place, Middlesex, Esq. Feb. 8; W. and H. Jones, solicitors, 7, Great Winchester-street-buildings, London.

COPESTICK (Henry), Dresden, and Trentham, Stafford, out of business. Jan. 22; Clarke and Hawley, solicitors, Longton, Staffs.

CRAFTS (Caroline), Peel's Arms Inn, Bradford, widow. March 30; F. Whitaker, solicitor, Duchy of Lancaster office, Lancaster-place, Strand, London.

CROSS (Mary Anne M. A.), Waller-view, Clevedon, Somerset, widow. Feb. 1; Futton and Ommannay, solicitors, 89, Coleman-street, London.

DUDDALE (Thos.), West Riding, York, farmer. Jan. 31; J. and W. Eastham, solicitors, Clitheroe.

DARLEY (Samuel), late of Wellington House, 1, Ham, Norfolk, and formerly of Fordham, near Market, and of Worthing, near East Dereham, vicar of Brandon, and of Lakenheath, Suffolk. Feb. 1; J. M. Chamberlain, solicitor, 7, hall-street, London.

DICKINSON (Jno.), Wigan, Lancashire, furniture Jan. 20; Wright and Appleton, solicitors, Lead-ing, King-street, Wigan.

EATON (Jno.), Ashby-under-Lyne, architect and Feb. 20; H. J. Jackson, solicitor, Church-tray under-Lyne.

ELLEN (Geo.), Ed-n-street, Kingston-upon-Thames, ironmonger, undertaker, and carpenter. Feb. 1; and Durham, solicitors, Clarence-street, King's Thames.

ELLIOTT (Geo.), Mount Pleasant, Liverpool, mercer. Jan. 22; Lynch and Tinsley, solicitors, Lord-street, Liverpool.

FOULIS (Rev. Sir Henry, Bart.), Great Brickhill, 1, ham. March 31; Bell, Steward, and Co., solicitors, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

FRANKFORD (Isaac), 40, Leman-street, Whitechapel, sex. Feb. 15; G. J. Jennings, solicitor, 61, Lea-street, London.

GARRATT (Wm.), South Lodge, Kettering, Northampton. Feb. 14; Drake and Son, solicitors, 1, lane, Cannon-street, London.

GRAVES (Geo. C.), Gloucester House, Shepperton, sex, and of St. Dunstan's House, St. Dunstan, London, ship broker and Custom House Agent. Jan. 2; Carr and Son, solicitors, 21, Roud-lane, London.

GREEN (Jno. M.), Brookside, Withington-road, 1, Manchester, cashier. Feb. 19; Mrs. Sarah Green, Brookside.

GROVE (Jos.), Threadneedle-street, London, and 1, Park, Buckingham, Esq. Feb. 5; Farrer, Esq. Co., solicitors, 66, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

HARDING (Jacob), Wharf Hill, Winchester, carter, Adams, Moberley, and Shenton, solicitors, Wimb-HARLAND (Thos. Wm.), 8, Falmouth-road, and 1, place, Blackheath-street, Southwark, Surrey, 4, Cannon-street, London.

HASWELL (Jas.), Broxley, Kirby Stephen, Wex-yeoman. Jan. 29; Wm. Wilson, solicitor, Kil-phen.

HILL (Jas. Thos.), 3, Westbourne-crescent, Middle-March 1; Holden and Co., solicitors, 2, Pic-street, Hull.

HILL (Wm.), 13, Camberwell New-road, Kenning-Surrey, gentleman. March 1; Pritchard and S-citors, 9, Gracechurch-street, London.

HOLDSWORTH (Wm.), 3, Gloucester-place, Brighton-man. Feb. 1; Clarke and Howlett, solicitors, 1, street, Brighton.

JACKSON (Thos.), Louth, Lincoln, stationer. Jan. 2 and Faulkner, solicitors, Louth.

JACOBS (Eather), Kingston-upon-Hull, widow. J. L. Jacobs, solicitor, 2, County Buildings, Ed-JONQUET (Adolphe), 6, Thayer-street, St. Ma-Middlesex, tailor. Feb. 1; Deane, Chubb, solicitors 14, South-square, Gray's-inn, Middle-

KENT (Edmund), Fakenham, Norfolk, gentlem-6; Kent, Watson, and Watson, solicitors, Falm-KNIGHT (Wm.), Morden, Surrey, builder. Jan. 2 and Hughes, solicitors, 23, Martin's-lane, Can-London.

KULP (Leazarus Kirsch, otherwise Louis), forme-Newgate-street, London, importer of Berlin's-late of Frankfort-on-the-Maine, Germany, a Jan. 25; F. W. Mount, solicitor, 17, Gracech-London.

LAMBTON (Hedworth), 8, Lansdowne-place, Brigh-Jan. 31; Markby and Co., solicitors, 9, New-s-colic-inn, Middlesex.

MARTIN (Jos.), Hardwick, Bedford, gentleman. Jan. 31; A. R. Hudson, solicitor, Pershore, W-shire.

MENDHAM (Wace L.), Heigham, Norwich, ge-March 1; E. A. Tillett, solicitor, 16, Cande-Norwich.

MITCHELL (Jas. Thos.), Panton Court, Hendon-Oldbury, near Worcester, farmer. Feb. 14; J. H-Upper Wick, Worcester, H. G. Goddingham, 6, street, Worcester.

NEWBERY (Henry), formerly of Manchester, busi-gatestone, Essex, Esq. Feb. 20; Withings-solicitors, 21, Brown-street, Manchester.

NORTH (Thos.), Bar End, Winchester, Bank, g-Jan. 16; Adams, Moberley, and Shenton, solic-chester.

NORTON (Jas.), College-green, East Pennard, 5-yeoman. Jan. 31; Henry Dyne, solicitor, Branset.

POOL (Jno.), Potter's-street, Harlow, Essex, g-Feb. 1; Jno. Windas, solicitor, Epping, Essex.

POPE (Leonard), West Bromwich, Stafford, farm-Henry Jackson, solicitor, Heath Chambers, Ws-wich.

QUINHAMPTON (Jno. W.), Little Totham, Essex-Jan. 29; Digby, Son, and Evans, solicitors, 4, 1, it-fields, London.

RENDALL (Jno.), Stoke Newington, Middlesex, sho-Feb. 7; Wm. Sturt, solicitor, 14, Ironmonger-don.

ROSE (Jno.), Tadcaster, York, labourer. March-Bromet, solicitor, Tadcaster.

SHARP (Mary), Nottingham, widow. Jan. 31; W-Wadsworth, solicitors, 15, Wealdway Cross, Not-

SHAW (Jas. Veitch), late of The Elms, Twickenham-sex, formerly of Great Knight-bridge-street, Commons, London, law stationer. Jan. 25; P-Son, solicitors, 15, Old Jewry Chambers, London.

SHARP (Jas.), Nunby Bank, Batley, York, gentlem-31; F. S. Wooler, solicitor, 7, Exchange-build-SHEPHERD (Henry), Inkberrow, Worcester, bank-31; J. Langton Jones, solicitor, Alcester.

SMITH (Ellen), High-road, Tottenham, Middlesex-Feb. 15; Henry Little, Lincoln Cottage, Leat-Tottenham, Middlesex.

SPINKS (Samuel), Norwich, gentleman. Feb. 14-solicitor, 2, Andrews Hall, Plain, Norfolk.

STINGER (Thos.), Sandbach, Cheshire, gentlem-Arthur H. Thomson, solicitor's managing di-bach.

STURT (Robt. L.), Great Walsingham, Bedford-Feb. 1; Mrs. Mary J. Sturt, Great Walsingham-TYSON (Mo-es), Almsworth-street, Ulverston, 1-builder. Jan. 31; G. Remington, solicitor, The UNDERHILL (Geo.), Henwain Cottage, Blaenau-Al-Monmouth, mineral agent. Jan. 29; Colborne-solicitors, Victoria-chambers, Newport, Mon.

UPTON (Wm.), Lichfield, gentleman. Feb. 1; B-Russell, solicitors, Lichfield.

WALKER (Henry), 152, Normacott-road, Longst-shoemaker. Jan. 15; Clarke and Hawley, solis-ten, Staffs.

WALKER (Wm.), 9, Carr-place, Leeds, gentlem-Jas. Rider, solicitor, 15, Park Row, Leeds.

WARD (Henry), formerly of Lansdowne-cresce-Worcester, but late of St. George's-square, gentleman. Feb. 18; Piddock and Son, sol-Forgeate-street, Worcester.

WARING (Jno.), formerly of Corisburgh, R-Rotherham, York, contractor and colliery-March 31; Nicholson, Saunders, and Nicho-tors, Wath-upon-Dearne, near Rotherham.

PAKER (Chas.), Melton Hill, Welton, East Riding, York, &c. Feb. 1; E. S. Wilson, solicitor, 6, Whitefriars, Hull.

PLE (Eleanor), formerly of 8, Brunswick-terrace, Camwell-road, Surrey, but late of 85, Westmoreland-road, Jivorth-road, Surrey, spinster. Jan. 27; W. A. Holme, solicitor, Gray's Inn-chambers, 20, High Holborn, London.

PROUSE (Geo.), Mount Pleasant, Lockwood-road, Huddersfield, cloth finisher. Feb. 23; Learoyd, Learoyd, and Trison, solicitors, Buxton-road, Huddersfield.

RALL (Robt. P.), late of 2, Westmorland-road, Bayswater, Middlesex, but formerly of Manchester, and of Thirning, Sussex, gentleman. Jan. 31; Wood, Norris, & Wilson, solicitors, 7, St. James-square, Manchester.

RE (Robt.), Greystones, Sheffield, Esq. Feb. 1; E. S. Wilson, and Nixon, solicitors, East Parade, Huddersfield.

STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

As to the several Examinations and as to Admission on the Roll of the Supreme Court, as being called to the Bar, and as to taking and renewal of annual certificates, should be addressed to the Editor (Students' Department).

Articles expire between the 9th April and May 1877, candidates may be examined on 14th and 25th April 1877; and if between the 15th and 2nd Nov. 1877, may be examined on 9th and 20th June 1877; or, of course, any subsequent examination. Six weeks at least is necessary for these examinations to be calculated up to the first day of month of examination.

As to the death of a principal during articles, articles should always be entered into without delay. The time which elapses between the death of the principal and the day of date of fresh articles being entered into, must not count, so that the further articles must be a time sufficient to make up for this loss of time, as well as for the unexpired term of the articles of clerkship.

Examination certificate is only available for admission on the roll of the Supreme Court within months from its date, and must otherwise be duly enlarged by an order of the Master of Rolls, which should be applied for at the Petty Office.

General rules and regulations as to the examinations prior to admission on the roll of solicitors, and as to taking out and renewal of annual certificates, issued on the 2nd 1875, provide in effect "that if any solicitor of the Supreme Court, after having at any time obtained a stamped certificate, shall, for the of a whole year from and after the expiration hereof, have neglected to renew the same for following year, or has failed to obtain such a certificate within twelve months from the date of admission on the Roll, the registrar shall not grant a certificate to such solicitor, and under an order of the Master of the Rolls, for the purpose of obtaining such an order applicant shall, six weeks before the application intended to be made, give notice thereof to the case of an original admission, and the Registrar in support of such application shall be to the Petty Bag Office, and a copy thereof at the same time be left with the clerk of the Petty Bag, to be delivered by him to the Registrar of Solicitors, and the order for such renewal, shall (if made) be drawn reading such affidavits, and an affidavit of copies having been left and notices given. An application to dispense with the required of intention to take out or renew a certificate, summons must be served on the Registrar of Solicitors calling on him to show cause within why such taking out or renewal of certificate should not be allowed; and if no cause be to the satisfaction of the Master of the Rolls he may make an order for allowing such certificate to be issued."

Rules of clerkship, or assignments of articles of clerkship, dated on any day during January, be enrolled and registered at the Petty Bag Office on or before the same days in the month of next, and when articles or assignments are to be, and are, enrolled and registered on any day during the month of January, they must be entered and entered at the Law Institution before the same day of the month of April. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 8 and 9, and 23 & 24, s. 127, s. 7. Failure to comply with these requirements often entails a loss of time to articles students.

BOLTON ARTICLED CLERKS' SOCIETY.

This society, recently organised in Bolton, held its ordinary meeting at the Law Society's Hall, Bolton, on Dec. 20, when an inaugural address to the society was given by the president, James Watkins, Esq., solicitor, in which he dwelt strongly upon the conduct of clerks whilst under articles, and their duties when solicitors. There was a numerous attendance of members, and the address was listened to and received with very great interest.

A vote of thanks to the Bolton Law Society, for kindly allowing their rooms to be used by the society for their meetings, and to the president for his address, concluded the evening's proceedings.

LAW STUDENTS' DEBATING SOCIETY.

At the meeting of this society, held at the Law Institution, Mr. Eady, LL.B., in the chair, several notices of motion were given by the secretary for the first meeting in January, and amongst them one proposing to allow any solicitors, or any articulated clerks of solicitors, barristers, and students of any of the inns of court, or any of the universities, to enter the rolls of the society. This proposal is made with the approbation of the Council of the Incorporated Law Society, and, of course, will (if carried) give the society a far wider range than it has hitherto had, as, up to the present time, all members have been required to be in some way connected with the Incorporated Law Society. The society then proceeded to the discussion of the question on the paper, "Is Spiritualism a subject worthy of serious consideration?" Mr. Gordon opened the debate in the affirmative, which side found several active supporters, amongst others Mr. Munton. After a debate extending to a late hour, Mr. Gordon replied, and the president put the question, which, the numbers being equal, was decided in the negative by the casting vote of their chairman. The society then adjourned over the Christmas vacation, and the next meeting will be held on Jan. 9, 1877.

LEEDS LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

At a meeting of law students, held at the offices of Messrs. Bond and Barwick on the 5th Dec. 1876, when Mr. G. F. Hird, from Bradford, was voted to the chair, it was unanimously resolved that a law students' debating society be formed in Leeds. Mr. Shaw was elected to be the secretary, and Mr. Meredith the treasurer, of the society. A committee of five members was also elected. At a subsequent meeting, held on the 18th Dec., a set of rules was passed, and a number of ordinary members enrolled.

PRELIMINARY EXAMINATIONS

BEFORE ENTERING INTO ARTICLES OF CLERKSHIP TO SOLICITORS.

PURSUANT to the Judges' Orders, the Preliminary Examination in General Knowledge will take place on Wednesday the 16th, and Thursday the 17th May 1877, and will comprise—

1. Reading aloud a passage from some English author.
2. Writing from dictation.
3. Writing a short English composition.
4. Arithmetic.—The first four rules, simple and compound; the rule of three; and decimal and vulgar fractions.
5. History of England, and geography of Europe and of the British Isles.
6. Latin.—Elementary.
7. 1. Latin. 2. Greek, Ancient. 3. French. 4. German. 5. Spanish. 6. Italian.

The Special Examiners have selected the following books, in which candidates will be examined in the subjects numbered 7 at the Examination on the 16th and 17th May, 1877:—

- In Latin—Cicero, De Amicitia; or, Virgil, Æneid, Book IX.
- In Greek—Xenophon, Memorabilia, Books I. and II.
- In French—Lesage, Gil Blas de Santillane, liv. I., II., and III.; or, Molière, Le Misanthrope.
- In German—Schiller, Abfall der vereinigten Niederlande, Books I. and II.; or, Goethe, Hermann und Dorothea.
- In Spanish—Cervantes, Don Quixote, cap. xv. to xxx. both inclusive; or Moratin, El Si de las Niñas.
- In Italian—Manzoni's I Promessi Sposi, cap. i. to viii. both inclusive; or Tasso's Gerusalemme, 4, 5, and 6 cantos; and Volpe's Eton Italian Grammar.

With reference to the subjects numbered 7, each candidate will be examined in two languages, according to his selection. Candidates will have the choice of either of the above-mentioned works.

The examinations will be held at the Incorporated Law Society's Hall, Chancery-lane, London, and at some of the following towns:—Birmingham, Brighton, Bristol, Cambridge, Cardiff, Carlisle, Carmarthen, Chester, Durham, Exeter, Lancaster, Leeds, Lincoln, Liverpool, Maidstone, Manchester, Newcastle-on-Tyne, Oxford, Plymouth, Salisbury, Shrewsbury, Swansea, Worcester, York.

Candidates are required by the Judges' Orders to give one calendar month's notice to the Incorporated Law Society, before the day appointed for the Examination, of the languages in which they propose to be examined, the place at which they wish to be examined, and their age and places of education. All notices should be addressed to the Secretary of the Incorporated Law Society, Chancery-lane, W.C.

Examination days for 1877—Wednesday 21st, and Thursday 22nd, February; Wednesday 16th, and Thursday 17th, May; Wednesday 11th, and Thursday 12th, July; Wednesday 24th, and Thursday 25th, October.

E. W. WILLIAMSON, Secretary.
Incorporated Law Society's Hall, Chancery-lane, London, W.C., December 1876.

FORM OF NOTICE.

Preliminary Examination.

Notice is hereby given, that I,                      aged            who was educated at                      intends on the 16th and 17th days of May next, to present himself for Examination at                      previous to entering into Articles of Clerkship, and that he proposes to be examined in the                      and                      languages.
Dated the            day of            187      .

[Signature of Candidate.]

Present address:

Christian and surname, and the address at which letters will reach the applicants must be inserted in the notice.

MIDDLE TEMPLE SCHOLARSHIPS.

EXAMINATION, COMMENCING ON FEB. 1, 1877.

International Law and Constitutional Law.

Examiner—John Horack, Esq.

Subjects for examination:

1. Domicile.
2. Marriage.
3. The Constitutional History of England, down to and inclusive of the reign of King John.

Common Law.

Examiner—Samuel Prentice, Esq., Q.C.

Subjects for examination:

1. Contracts.
2. Indictable Offences against the Person.

Equity.

Examiner—William Speed, Esq.

Subjects for examination:

1. Administration.
2. Trusts.
3. The Judicature Acts, so far as they relate to or affect Administrations and Trusts.

Real and Personal Property.

Examiner—Henry Fox Bristowe, Esq., Q.C.

Subjects for examination:

1. Estates and Interests in, and Contracts, Conveyances, and Assurances relating to Real Property.
2. The testamentary disposition of Personal Property.
3. The Statute of Frauds as affecting Real and Personal Property.

QUERIES.

INTERMEDIATE EXAMINATION.—Please inform me when a list will be published of those who passed the above examination, held on Nov. 9 last. L. T.
[We hope to publish it in our next issue.]

TEN YEARS' CLERKS.—FIVE YEARS' SERVICE REDUCED TO THREE YEARS.—Will you allow me to call attention to the case reported in 37 L.J. 58 Q.B., where the judges held that a clerk who, before the expiration of ten years' service, entered into articles for five years, under which, after the expiration of the ten years, he served three years, was entitled to be examined for admission; and to ask if I can present myself for examination at the end of three years' service from the expiration of my ten years' service? The circumstances in my case are almost identical with those in the case reported. W. W. A.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

None are inserted unless the name and address of the writer are sent, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee for bona fides.

QUERIES.

(45.) EASEMENT.—Will one of your correspondents kindly inform me what are the rights and remedies of a person to whom a nominal acknowledgment is paid for the user of an easement? C. B. A.

(47.) STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS.—Where a person, owing a debt barred by statute, replies most evasively to a letter of payment, "that he was not aware of the debt owing, and knew nothing at all about it, but would pay half to save further trouble," would this be held a good acknowledgment of the debt? Would you or your readers be so kind to cite any cases where a promise to pay a part of a debt has been held good to revive the debt? H. H. D.

J. HOUNSELL, Esq., Surgeon, Bridport, Dorsetshire writes:—"I consider BUSTER'S NERVE as a specific for toothache. Very severe cases under my care have found instantaneous and permanent relief. I therefore recommend its use to the Profession and the Public, invaluable to all who suffer from toothache."

MUNICIPAL LAW.

MUNICIPAL ELECTION PETITIONS.

(Before T. W. SAUNDERS, Esq., Election Barrister.)

MANCHESTER MUNICIPAL ELECTION PETITION;
ST. GEORGE'S WARD.

Tuesday, Dec. 19.

STOTT AND OTHERS (pets.), v. GOLDSWORTHY (resp.)

Ballot paper—Sufficiency of the mark.

A ballot paper was marked by the voter with a horizontal stroke on the left side of the name of the candidate.

Held, properly marked.

Woodward v. Sarsons (44 L. J. 293, C. P.) and The Wigtown Case (2 O'Malley and Hardcastle, 240) considered.

Hopwood, Q.C. (Gouldthorpe with him) for the respondent, called for the ballot paper No. 4940 in order to have it allowed amongst the votes for his client, the same having been disallowed by the returning officer on the ground of its having been improperly marked. Upon the ballot paper being produced by the town clerk it was found to be in the following form:

1	Goldsworthy
2	Read

He now contended that the vote was improperly rejected by the returning officer, and that it came within the ruling of the Court of Common Pleas in Woodward v. Sarsons (44 L. J. 293, C. P.), where a ballot paper, No. 875, was marked with a single stroke and was held equally valid as though marked with a cross, it being moreover held in the same case that it was immaterial whether the cross was placed on the left hand side of the candidate's name instead of the right hand side.

Ambrose, Q.C. (Edge with him), argued that although, according to the case of Woodward v. Sarsons, the cross may be put on the left hand side of the candidate's name, it had not been held that a mere stroke may be so placed, and that in the Wigtown Case (2 O'Malley & Hardcastle, 214), where a ballot paper was not marked with a cross but with a single stroke, the Scotch judges held that a mark was not sufficient, and although in Woodward v. Sarsons, a perpendicular stroke on the right side was held sufficient, it has not been held that any stroke on the left side would do, and that such a mark as the one in question would be likely to lead to the identification of the voter.

The ELECTION BARRISTER.—As I read the judgment in the case of Woodward v. Sarsons, it is immaterial on which side the mark is placed. Indeed, the court has in express terms ruled, that a cross may be either on the one side or the other of the candidate's name. Then we come to the case of a stroke instead of a cross; and it appears from the decision in the same case, that a stroke may be substituted for a cross, if it clearly indicates the party for whom it is intended. Then the question arises—is a stroke to be put upon the same footing in all respects as a cross? I apprehend that it is, inasmuch as it equally indicates the person for whom the vote is intended to be given. In Woodward v. Sarsons there was certainly no ballot paper with a stroke on the left side of the candidate's name, but applying the principle upon which the court acted in that case, I consider that whether it be a cross or a stroke that is used, it is practically the same thing, and that either the one or the other may be used according to the fancy of the voter. If a cross may be put on the left side, so, I apprehend a stroke may be so put, and this, whether it be perpendicular or horizontal. No doubt, as Mr. Ambrose has correctly put it, this view is in direct conflict with the judgment of the Scotch Court in the Wigtown Case; and the Court of Common Pleas admit that in applying the principles deduced from the statute, they were acting in opposition to the judgment of the majority of the court in that case; but they say that there may have been evidence in that case which was not presented before them in the case of Woodward v. Sarsons, but that if this was not so, they respectfully differed from the judgment of the majority of the Scotch judges, and agreed with the judgment in the same case of Lord Benholme. I must look, therefore, at the decision of the Court of Common Pleas as governing my decision in the present case, and I therefore, hold that inasmuch as a stroke may be substituted for a cross, and as a cross may be placed on either side of the candidate's name, a stroke instead of a cross may also be lawfully placed in the same position. I consider, therefore, that the ballot paper was properly marked and ought to have been counted.

The rejected ballot to be counted for the respondent.

Re THE VOTE OF WILLIAM RIDLEY.

A coloured ballot paper, used as a regular ballot paper.

Where a ballot paper, coloured as a tendered ballot paper, was given to a voter who used it as a regular voting paper, and the returning officer upon counting the ballot papers, rejected it as invalid.

Held, that the vote was valid and ought to have been counted.

Hopwood, Q.C. (Gouldthorpe with him) for the respondent claimed to have the rejected ballot paper of one William Ridley counted. It appeared that Ridley, who had a qualification, was misnamed in the burgess roll as William Wrigley, applied on the morning of the election to the presiding officer for a ballot paper, explaining to him that his name was William Ridley, and that it was erroneously spelled on the burgess roll as William Wrigley. The presiding officer, thinking that this was a case for the tendered ballot paper under the 27th rule of the First Schedule of the Ballot Act (a) administered the oath to him and gave him a pink ballot paper, which was the colour adopted for tendered ballot papers. This paper the voter marked with a cross, and put into the ballot box, and then left the polling booth. The returning officer, upon subsequently counting the votes in the ballot box, finding this coloured paper, and considering it to be a tendered ballot paper, declined to count it, and accordingly it was not counted.

Ambrose, Q.C. and Edge, contended that the vote in question was a nullity, that the Ballot Act provides that the voting shall be in a particular manner, and that the only provision enabling a voter to give a tendered ballot paper is that contained in the 27th rule; that there had been no regular ballot paper delivered, and that the requirements of the 2nd section of the Ballot Act had not been complied with; that the paper in question had no more legality than any ordinary piece of paper the voter may have marked. Moreover the vote was bad, inasmuch as it violated the provision as to secrecy, since by putting into the ballot box a pink paper he thereby violated the 2nd section of the Act, which enacts that any ballot paper "on which anything except the said number on the back is written or marked by which the voter can be identified shall be void."

Hopwood, Q.C. and Gouldthorpe replied that the vote was good, and ought to have been counted, and that it was not because of the colour of the paper that the vote was bad, that the presiding officer ought not to have treated the vote as a tendered vote, since it did not come within the operation of the 27th rule which applied only to the case of a vote tendered after another vote for the same qualification, and that as the ballot paper had all the incidents of a regular ballot paper, it ought to have been counted.

Ambrose, Q.C. was heard in reply.

The ELECTION BARRISTER.—I am of opinion that this vote ought to be allowed. So far as the voter is concerned, he has done all that he could to be required to do to fulfil the conditions of the Ballot Act. It is conceded that there was a mistake in the burgess roll, and that although the name appeared as "Wrigley," it was intended for that of the voter whose real name was "Ridley," and, as such, had a right to vote; and if there had been a miscarriage it has been that of the presiding officer, who erroneously treated this as a tendered vote. In this case all the requisites of a good vote are found existing as far as the vote is concerned, except, as is suggested, the colour of the voting paper. Now, the Act of Parliament does not provide for the ballot paper being of any particular colour, and it would, therefore, be quite competent in the presiding officer to have the ballot paper of any colour, or of many colours, taking care, however, that the tendered ballot papers are of a different colour from the rest. When, therefore, the voter received this ballot paper it was not for him to say "This is not a white paper—it is a pink paper." It was really no business of his what was the colour of the paper; he would naturally rely upon the judgment and official accuracy of the presiding officer. He took the paper which was given to him as one in all respects sufficient for the purpose for which he required it;

(a) This rule directs as follows: "If a person representing himself to be a particular elector named on the register applies for a ballot paper after another person has voted as such elector, the applicant shall, upon duly answering the questions and taking the oath permitted by law to be asked of and to be administered to voters at the time of polling, be entitled to mark a ballot paper in the same manner as any other voter, but the ballot paper (in this Act called a tendered ballot paper) shall be of a colour differing from the other ballot papers, and instead of being put into the ballot box, shall be given to the presiding officer and endorsed by him with the name of the voter and his number in the register of voters and set aside in a separate packet, and shall not be counted by the returning officer. And the name of the voter and his number on the register shall be entered on a list in this Act called the tendered vote list."

he marked it in the usual way and deposited the ballot box. In this he did all that the law required of him to complete a good vote; and it is said, he voted with a pink instead of a white ballot paper. When the returning officer the voting papers he found this pink paper taking upon himself to assume that it was merely a tendered ballot paper he treated it as a void vote, and refused to count it. I think not for him to determine such a question. I find in the ballot box a voting paper, regular in form, and it was not for him to say, "I will not count it, because it is of a pink colour, whilst the other papers are white." If the presiding officer had given to the voter a paper of a colour which had appropriated to tendered ballot papers, it was a matter for himself alone, and I do not think he could disfranchise a voter by so doing. I am of opinion that it was no part of the duty of the returning officer to sit in judgment upon the colour of the voting papers. If the ballot paper properly filled up. If he had given a blue ballot paper, or a red ballot paper, or a number of different coloured ballot papers, provided they were properly marked, it was his duty to have counted them. Therefore, let us see whether the ballot paper in question upon the ground that it is a violation of the 2nd section of the Act, as having on it anything written or marked by which the voter can be identified. Mr. Ambrose and Mr. Edge argue that there is such a mark on this ballot paper, and that it consists in its being coloured. I cannot, however, see any portion of the section in that way. It says to me that the words referred to, must mean a particular mark varying from the paper in some way, in fact, put upon the paper. Nothing has been written upon the paper, and I cannot see how a paper, which is wholly of one colour, can be said to be marked. The fact that the paper may certainly lead to the knowledge of the voter who used it, but I think not within the words or the meaning of the statute. I am of opinion, therefore, that it was a valid vote, and that it ought to be counted.

Vote ordered to be counted.

Re THE VOTE OF JOHN SMITH.

List of voters objected to.—The right of electors to question the validity of the vote of the respondent in his list of objections who had acted as paid canvassers, delinquent to the 7th General Rule, included in J. S. Harington's list, who had gone through all the objections in this list, he declined to proceed with it, whereupon the appellants claimed to the validity of this vote. Upon an objection as this vote was on the respondent's list, the petitioners had no right to attack it. Held, that the name being upon a list in the court, either party was entitled to question the vote.

THE name of this voter was on the list of objections to a paid canvasser for the respondent, which list was delivered by the respondent to rule 7 of the General Rules (a) by the respondent, there being no objection to the voter list delivered by the petitioners.

The respondent having exhausted all objections under this list, with the exception of John Smith, Hopwood announced that he did not intend to question this vote.

Ambrose, Q.C. thereupon proposed his question this vote on the part of the petitioners. Hopwood, Q.C. contended that as this voter was not in any list furnished by the petitioners, he had no right to go into it, for that upon a construction of the 7th general rule and could only rely upon the votes he had questioned in his own list.

Ambrose, Q.C. argued that the name of the voter before the court was at liberty to question the vote, and that it was immaterial in what list it appeared.

The ELECTION BARRISTER.—The object of the rule is that the parties may know what is objected to, and for what reason it is to be objected to; that, therefore, there may be no surprise if a voter is included in the list of objections, that difficulty does not arise. Both parties were such a case fully informed as to the voter.

(a) This rule directs that "Where a petition is presented for an unsuccessful candidate, alleging that a majority of lawful votes, the party claiming or defending the election shall, six days before the day appointed for trial, deliver to the master, and the address, if any, given by the petitioners, and the address, as the case may be, a list of the voters who are objected to, and of the heads of objections to such votes, and the master shall allow copies of such lists to all parties concerned, and evidence shall be given against the validity of the vote, nor upon any head of objection not specified in the list, except by leave of the Court of Common Pleas, judge at chambers, upon such terms as to costs of the list, postponement of the inquiry, and of costs, as may be ordered."

ground of his disability, and if there is any disadvantage, it is certainly not on the side of the party who originally raised the objection. I am of opinion, therefore, that if the name is inserted in either list it is sufficient, and may be questioned by either party.

The vote being held to be bad, the ballot paper disclosed that the voter had voted for the respondent.

Solicitors for the petitioners, Messrs. Boots and Rigar, Manchester.

Solicitor for the respondent, Chorlton, Manchester.

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

THAMES CONSERVANCY—RIPARIAN OWNER—TIDAL RIVER.—A riparian proprietor on the banks of a tidal navigable river has similar rights and natural easements to those which belong to a riparian proprietor above the flow of the tide, subject to the public right of navigation. The Thames Conservancy Act, by sect. 53, empowers the conservators to grant a licence to the owner of any land adjoining the river, to make an embankment in front of his land, into the body of the river; by sect. 179 all existing rights of owners of lands on the banks of the river are preserved. The appellant and the respondents owned adjoining wharves, the appellant had access from his wharf to the river both on the south and west sides; the respondents obtained a licence, under sect. 53 of the Act, to make an embankment, the effect of which would have been to cut off the appellant's access to the river on the west side. Held (reversing the judgment of the court below), that this access was a private right within sect. 179, and that the conservators had no power to grant such licence: (Lyon v. Fishmongers' Company, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 569. H. of L.)

REFRESHMENT HOUSE—WHAT IS AN ENTERTAINMENT?—23 VICT. c. 27, s. 6.—The appellant kept a shop consisting of one room only, open in front, and without any seats. Persons were in the habit of frequenting the shop for the purpose of obtaining lemonade and ginger beer, which they simply drank at the counter and went away. The shop was kept open until two or three o'clock in the morning. The appellant had no licence to keep a refreshment house. Held (affirming the decision of the Divisional Court for Appeals from inferior courts, diss. Baggallay, J.A.), that it was a shop kept open for "public refreshment, resort, and entertainment," and therefore a licence within s. 6 of 23 Vict. c. 27, was required: (Lowes v. Peake, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 584. Ct. of pp.)

MUNICIPAL CORPORATION.—CORRUPT PRACTICES.—By sect. 52 of the Municipal Corporation Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4, s. 76, it is enacted that a town councillor who becomes bankrupt or compounds with his creditors by deed shall "thereupon immediately become disqualified, and shall cease to hold the office of such councillor, and the council thereupon shall forthwith declare the office void, and shall signify the same by notice, under the hands of three or more of them, countersigned by a town clerk, to be affixed to some public place within the borough, and the said office shall thereupon become void," but that "every person becoming disqualified and ceasing to hold such office on account of his being so declared bankrupt or having compounded with his creditors or ceased, shall, on obtaining his certificate, on payment of his debts in full, be capable of being re-elected to such office." And by sect. 21 of the Debtors' Act 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 62) those provisions are extended to persons who have compounded with their creditors "whether by deed or otherwise." By 22 Vict. c. 35, s. 8, sub-sect. 4, it is enacted that if at any election of councillors to be held for any borough or ward, no person be duly nominated for election, "the retiring councillors shall be deemed to be re-elected, and the mayor, or, shall publish a list of the names of all the persons so elected." J., a town councillor of the borough of Welshpool, whose term of office would expire by lapse of time on the 1st Nov. 1876, on the 29th June in that year filed a petition for validation of his affairs by arrangement. On the 29th July a statutory majority of his creditors by special resolution declared that his affairs should be liquidated by arrangement, and his discharge was granted to him on the 29th September. No declaration was made by the council under sect. 52 that the office held by him was void under that section, but he did not, in fact, act as town councillor after the institution of these proceedings with his creditors until after the 1st Nov. On the 1st Nov. the offices of three other councillors besides that of J. would become vacant by lapse of time, and for these four vacancies seven candidates presented themselves for election. In consequence of all the candidates being nominated by the same person, contrary to the provisions of the Act regulating the election, the mayor declared no one to be duly nominated. Thereupon the returning officer, under 22 Vict. c. 35, s. 8, sub-sect. 4, declared that the retiring councillors, among whom he included J., had been re-elected to their offices. Upon a rule for a mandamus calling upon the mayor, &c., of Welshpool to declare the office of councillor lately held by J. void, as required by 4 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 52, and to proceed to the election of another person to supply such vacancy. Held, on the first part of the rule, that the office "lately held by J." was in fact filled up, and that the time had, therefore, passed when it could be declared void. Held also that the mandamus would not lie for a fresh election, for inasmuch as the council had not declared J.'s office void under sect. 52, the office was still full on the 1st Nov.; that J. was, therefore, a retiring councillor within the meaning of 22 Vict. c. 35, s. 8, sub-sect. 4, and under that section was properly declared to be re-elected to his office. By the Corrupt Practices (Municipal Elections) Act (35 & 36 Vict. c. 60), s. 12, it is enacted that the election of any person at an election for a borough may be questioned by petition before an election court constituted under that Act on the ground that the election was wholly avoided because "he was, at the time of the election, disqualified for election to the office for which the election was held," and that "an election shall not, except in the manner provided by this Act, be questioned upon an information in the nature of a quo warranto or by or in any other process or manner whatsoever for a matter for which it might be questioned under the provisions of this Act." Held that if there were any remedy, it would have been under this section by petition, and not by mandamus. Quære, whether the mandamus should not have been addressed to the town council, instead of to the mayor, &c.: (Reg. v. Mayor, &c., of Welshpool, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 594. Q. B.)

MARLBOROUGH STREET POLICE COURT.

Thursday, Dec. 21.

(Before Mr. KNOX.)

The Medical Act—Unqualified person using the title of Dr. "wilfully and falsely"—Penalty.

HENRY THOMAS LEWIS, of 102, Wardour-street, was summoned by Dr. Robert Carpenter, on behalf of the East London Medical Defence Association, for falsely pretending to be and taking and using the name and title of Doctor of Medicine, contrary to the 40th section of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90, known as the Medical Act.

Pridham prosecuted.

Henry Kisch, barrister, appeared for the defendant.

Benjamin Fordham, detective of the E division, stated that on the 18th Oct. he went to 102, Wardour-street. The name of Dr. Bell was on a lamp over the front of the shop. He asked a person in the shop if Dr. Bell was in, and in reply was told to walk into the back room. The defendant was there, and witness asked him if he was Dr. Bell. He replied, "I am Dr. Bell," at the same time taking a card from the table and handing it to him. On the card was "Dr. Bell." Witness told the defendant he came for advice. The defendant said he knew what was the matter with him and would make him up a bottle of medicine for 6s. A few bottles would cure him. Witness told the defendant he had no money with him, and would call again.

Replying to Mr. Kisch, witness said he did not see the diploma produced in the defendant's window. He was certain the defendant gave him the card, though he had similar cards previously in his possession. The defendant did not say, "I am not Dr. Bell." He went there in consequence of instructions he received to get up a case against the defendant, and was not suffering at the time from any ailment. He received no pay from the association.

Pridham objected to these questions being put. Kisch said he must press for an answer, as it was evidence of motive.

Mr. KNOX ruled that the witness must answer the question, it being an important one. Witness then stated that he had no emolument of any kind from the association. He had nothing beyond his usual pay as a detective constable.

Pridham put in the Medical Register, in which the defendant's name did not appear. This was the case for the prosecution.

Mr. KNOX doubted whether he ought to rely upon the unsupported testimony of a single witness, who, according to his own statement, visited the house to get up a case against the defendant. Eventually, however, he decided to hear the case out.

Kisch then took the objection that nothing had been proved beyond the fact that the defendant called himself a "Dr." and was not registered. According to the judgment of Erle, C.J. (the other judges concurring), in the case of Pedgrift v. Chevalier (29 L. J. 225), this was not sufficient to convict under the statute, and the onus of proof that the defendant held no lawful diploma lay on the prosecution.

Mr. KNOX, on referring to the 3rd section of the Act, which enacts that the words "legally qualified practitioner," &c., or any words importing a person recognised by law as a medical practitioner when used in any Act of Parliament shall be construed to mean a person registered under the Act, decided that inasmuch as the defendant's name did not appear in the Medical Register, the onus lay on him to show that he held some qualification. He overruled the objection.

Kisch, for the defendant, stated that his client was only an assistant to Dr. Osterfield Wray, who had undergone the proper examinations. The business passed into that gentleman's hands upon the death of Dr. Bell, who carried it on for nine years, and died about four years ago. Dr. Joseph Kingston, who held an English diploma, and whose name appeared in the Medical Register, attended daily to see patients, and Dr. Wray lived on the premises. The defendant never saw a patient when his principals were in the way, and he had positive instructions always to state that he was not Dr. Bell. He would ask the magistrate not to place too much reliance on the uncorroborated evidence of the detective, who might well mistake what actually occurred at a single interview, when the object of the visit was considered. The detective might have misunderstood the defendant to say "I am not Dr. Bell;" not "I am Dr. Bell." He would show that the defendant's principal occupation consisted in making galvanic belts, and that he could have no motive for making the alleged representation.

Dr. Wray was called, but did not give evidence.

A Witness, in the employ of Dr. Wray, proved that the certificate produced—an American diploma—was always in a conspicuous part of the shop window, and further stated that the defendant was only an assistant, and that he had invariably heard him tell patients he was not Dr. Bell.

Mr. KNOX said he would convict on the facts, but in the case of Andrew v. Stysap (26 L. T. Rep. N. S. 704), it was held that where a person put M.D. after his name, without anything more, it implied that the person was a doctor of medicine with an English diploma. He had some notion, however, that in the course of his law reading he had come across a case in which it had been held that a person putting Dr. before his name did not bring himself within the statute. He would therefore grant an adjournment to give Mr. Kisch an opportunity of seeing if any such case appeared on the books.

Kisch urged that before the defendant could be convicted some overt act must be proved, and as no specific advice or medicine had been given, he contended that the defendant had not pretended to be a doctor within the meaning of the statute.

Mr. KNOX considered, under the circumstances, there had been an overt act on the part of the defendant, but would adjourn the case for further consideration.

Upon the case being resumed, a witness named Sears produced an American diploma, framed and glazed, which, he said, was always conspicuously exposed in the window of his shop.

Kisch having addressed the court and referred to cases in support of his views,

Mr. KNOX, after dealing with the counsel's arguments, said that in the present case there must be a conviction. The defendant had assumed to be Dr. Bell—a person who, by the mouth of his own witnesses, was proved to be long since deceased. The detective went into the shop and asked for Dr. Bell. The defendant said he was Dr. Bell, and handed to the detective a card as his, with the title inscribed on it. He then remarked on the detective's sickly appearance, and offered to provide him for 6s. with a bottle of medicine, which would do him good. But the mere assumption of the title of doctor, with nothing more, might mean one of several things, but when a man held himself out as doctor in a doctor's shop and offered to prescribe for you, surely it was not a violent inference to draw that he held himself out as a doctor of medicine and not doctor of laws, of music, and so forth. Then as to the words in the statute, "wilfully and falsely." Surely in this case the defendant assumed to represent a dead man. There could be no great doubt as to this point. Nor was he at all helped by the fact that he was merely the assistant of Dr. Wray, who was in court the other day in such a disgraceful state of intoxication, and was ordered out of the witness-box; that had simply nothing to do with the matter. He held himself out as Dr. Bell, and practised medicine. This was a clear case of violation of the Act of Parliament. The full penalty of £20 must be paid, with £1 3s. costs.

Kisch hoped the magistrate would express an opinion in favour of having, in cases brought before him by the association, more than one constable as witness.

Mr. KNOX would emphatically say he concurred in the suggestion of Mr. Kisch, and hoped in future cases it would be carried out.

jurisdiction where the decision was made, still it cannot control the question before the court, for the reason that the rule of practice here is different, as is clearly shown by the judgment of this court delivered at the last term of the court: (The Alabama v. Gamecock, 2 Otto.) Counsel of experience and ability attempted to maintain in that case the same theory as that now advanced in argument here by the appellees, and they cited The Milan (Lush. Adm. R. 403), The Atlas (4 Ben. R. 28), and same case (10 Blatch. 460) in support of the proposition which they desired the court to adopt. Suffice it to remark, by the way of explanation, that all the parties interested in the case then under argument were before the court, which is all that need be said in respect to the operation of such a theory if applied in a case where the parties interested were duly served and were present, and it did not appear that each of the respondents was not able to respond for a moiety of the damages suffered by the owner of the cargo. Contingencies are also portrayed in which it is conceded that the theory may be applied without serious injustice or inconvenience; but the court proceeds to say that it would seem to be just that the owner of the cargo, who is supposed to be free from fault, should recover the damage done thereto from those who caused it, adding that if he cannot recover from either of them such party's due share, he ought to be able to recover it from the other, and that the same reason for a division of the damage does not apply to the owner of the cargo as applies to the owners of the ships. Remarks are then made to show that the moiety rule is both just and expedient between the ships where both are in fault, but the court proceeds to say that if either is unable to pay his moiety of damage, there is no good reason why the owner of the cargo should not have a remedy over against the other, and finally remarks that the moiety rule was adopted for the better distribution of justice between wrongdoers, and that it ought not to be extended so far as to inflict positive loss to innocent parties: (The Gregory, 9 Wall. 516.) Much care was taken in framing the decree in that case, which of itself shows to a demonstration that the court never intended to adopt a theory which would fail to give innocent parties full compensation suffered by a collision, and that they never meant to extend the moiety rule so as to do injustice to an innocent tow or to the owner of cargo. Such a result can never be sanctioned by the justices of this court so long as they adhere to the rule that when a third party has sustained an injury to his property from the co-operating consequences of two causes, though the persons producing them may not be in intentional concert to occasion such a result, the injured person is entitled to compensation for his loss from either one or both of them, according to the circumstances of the incident: (The New Philadelphia, 1 Black, 76; Boyer v. Sturgis, 24 How. 122.) Except when both parties are to blame, the offending party can recover nothing, whether he pursues his remedy in the Admiralty or at Common Law. Where both are to blame neither can recover anything at Common Law, but the Admiralty requires each to suffer a moiety of the loss, to be ascertained in the manner already explained. Parties without fault, such as shippers and consignees, bear no part of the loss in collision suits and are entitled to full compensation for the damage which they suffer from the wrongdoers, and they may pursue their remedy in personam, either at Common Law or in the Admiralty, against the wrongdoers or any one or more of them, whether they elect to proceed at law or in the Admiralty Courts. Such a party is not required in any event to bear any portion of the loss suffered by others, the rule being that where the collision occurs exclusively from natural causes without any fault of either of the colliding vessels, the loss shall rest where it happens to fall, on the principle that no one is responsible for such a disaster when produced by causes over which human skill and prudence can exercise no control. Inevitable accident is a good defence in such a controversy, where both vessels are free from blame, but it is utterly unavailing if either or both were in fault. Where the vessel of the respondent is alone in fault, the libellant is entitled to recover full compensation for his damages, and the rule is that if the vessel of the libellant is alone in fault, the decree must be for the respondent that the libel be dismissed. Cases also arise where both vessels are in fault, and the repeated decisions of this court have established the rule that in that contingency the damages shall be equally apportioned between the offending vessels, as having been occasioned by the fault of both: (The Catherine, 17 How. 177; The Sunnyside Otto, 216; The Continental, 14 Wall. 355; The Morning Light, 2 Id. 560; The Pennsylvania, 24 How. 313). Innocence entitles the loser to full compensation from the wrongdoer, and it is a good defence against all claims from those who have lost. Individual fault renders the party liable to the innocent loser, and is a complete answer to any claim made by the faulty party, except in a case where there is mutual fault, in which case the rule is that the combined amount of the loss shall be equally apportioned between the offending vessels. Decree reversed, and the cause remanded, with directions to reverse the decree of the District Court, and to enter a new decree in favour of the libellants for the entire damages as ascertained by the commissioner.

COMPANY LAW.

RAILWAY CLAUSES CONSOLIDATION ACTS.

INQUIRY AT SOUTH SHIELDS.

Thursday, Dec. 7.

(Before JOHN GRAHAM, Esq., one of Her Majesty's Coroners, and a Special Jury.)

HEATH AND OTHERS v. THE NORTH-EASTERN RAILWAY.

Capitular Estates of Durham—Tenant-right of perpetual renewal of leaseholds—Quit rent—Power of Ecclesiastical Commissioners, as reversioners, to refuse renewal—Quantum of compensation to leaseholders.

THIS inquiry was before one of the coroners of the county instead of the sheriff, the latter official being personally interested in the proprietary of the railway.

The peculiar and important question was raised whether a leaseholder under the Dean and Chapter of Durham, claiming by custom to renew in perpetuity, was entitled to compensation (by virtue of the compulsory powers for taking land, possessed by the railway company) beyond the mere value of the unexpired term of years specified in the demise?

Waddy, Q.C. represented the claimant. Shaw (barrister) for the North-Eastern Railway Company.

Borrett (solicitor, firm of White, Borrett, and Co.) watched for the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England.

The North-Eastern Railway Company have a branch line from Newcastle-upon-Tyne to South Shields, and for its extension to a nearer point to the German Ocean required to take, under the usual compulsory powers, two small shops and premises in King-street, South Shields, of which the trustees and executors of the will of Mary Heath, deceased, were the leaseholders.

The property was formerly farmhold, part of Shields Hough estate, which pertained to the demesne of the Dean and Chapter of Durham (whose rights and interests vested in 1870 in the Ecclesiastical Commissioners), and was held by the Rolls of the Halmote Court in 1496, at a rent of 28. The custom of the dean and chapter had been to grant leases for twenty-one years, and to renew, for a like term, every seven years, upon payment of a fine, governed in practice by the amount of rack rent for the time being. In 1846 a renewal fine of £25 was paid to the dean and chapter, and subsequently £27 10s., besides the clerk's fees. Evidence was adduced of the payment of 1s. 8d., as a customary yearly quit rent, by the leaseholder, and that the old assignments comprised, in the general words, "the term and terms of years yet to come and unexpired, tenant right, and right and benefit of renewal." The lease was last renewed in 1867, and the twenty-one years created by it expires in 1888. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners were now in the habit of granting to the leaseholders a term of 999 years, or an enfranchisement in fee. They, however, refused to make any such grant, or to renew the present demise to the claimants, because the premises were required by the railway company, with whom the commissioners had entered upon some negotiation of a nature which did not transpire. On the contrary, the commissioners endeavoured to acquire the outstanding beneficial leasehold estate for a sum of between £300 and £400. At a subsequent period the railway company served the claimants with notice to treat, and took the necessary proceedings for this inquiry.

Several witnesses estimated the value of the property, assuming the right to perpetual renewal, and allowing for fines and fees, at about £850; whilst others (called in the railway company's interest) considered the value of the unexpired term of years at amounts varying from £356 to £417.

Interesting historical testimony was given by Mr. W. H. D. Longstaffe, solicitor, of Gateshead, and Mr. John C. Heath of the Middle Temple, one of the claimants.

It is unnecessary to set out the arguments of counsel, but it was admitted that no decision had been given to establish whether or not the Ecclesiastical Commissioners or the Dean and Chapter had power arbitrarily to refuse to renew a lease under the circumstances.

The Coroner fairly and lucidly summed up, but said he considered that the claimants were entitled to more consideration than ordinary leaseholders, by reason of the peculiarities attendant upon their tenure. Still, the broad question for the jury was, what was the value of the interests of the claimants, which the railway company had given notice to acquire, in the property?

The jury assessed the compensation at £24. Solicitors, Crowdy and Son, Serjeants' Inn, W. H. Bell, South Shields, for the claimants. Richardson, Gutch, and Co., York, for the railway company.

COUNTY COURTS.

CHESTER COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Dec. 21.

(Before HORATIO LLOYD, Esq., Judge.)

CATHERALL v. LLOYD.

Sale—Warranty—What amounts to.

THIS was an action brought to recover the sum £39 10s., money had and received by defendant the plaintiff's use.

Roper, of Mold appeared on behalf the plaintiff Marshall, barrister (instructed by Messrs Walker and Smith) for the defendant.

The circumstances under which the action brought were these: On the 7th Sept. the plaintiff attended Chester fair for the purpose of purchasing a horse. There he met the defendant's Duncan, with a mare for sale, and, after a conversation as to its merits, Mrs. Lloyd the defendant's wife, was seen, and something was said to the purpose for which the plaintiff wanted horse, and the capabilities of the mare, it was then purchased for £39 10s. It remained in defendant's custody till the following day, when the plaintiff fetched it and put it to draw from a sand-hole. According to his statement he refused the work, and he said showed himself a "jibber." The horse was then returned to defendant, and hence the present action to recover the amount paid.

Ralph Catherall, the plaintiff, stated that he was a farmer residing at Ewloe Hall Farm, Hawarden. On the 7th Sept. last he attended Chester fair for the purpose of buying a horse, being in want of one to draw sand from a sand-hole. In the fair he met defendant's man named Duncan, with a mare. They had a conversation as to its qualities, during which Duncan said "there was not a better drawing mare, good anywhere." Plaintiff then asked to see the mare, but was told that Mrs. Lloyd, who was conducting the sale. He ultimately went and in company with a man named George W. they all went into the Bear's Paw Inn, Fawcett street, to bargain. He told Mrs. Lloyd it was a heavy place to go to, and the mare was no use unless it could draw. One of the present said it would draw "until its belly hit the ground," and Mrs. Lloyd rejoined, "It will." She also further said that the mare would draw anywhere, either in the cart, chain shandry. On these words he bought the mare for £40, with 10s. back. The mare was to go to defendant that day, and he was to fetch it that day, which he did. The same day he took three small loads of wheat over level ground when she showed a disposition to rear up. Following morning his son took the mare to draw sand from the sandhole. He brought her back, and in consequence of what he told (witness) he took the mare back to the defendant. There was no one at home but the servant man, Duncan, who looked after the mare out to her colt. He told the plaintiff that it was brought back because it would not draw. The following Monday morning defendant sent him a note stating that he charged 7s. per week for the mare's keep. Plaintiff returned the mare again, and he (plaintiff) then sent it back again. Plaintiff saw Lloyd on the subject, who said that the mare was only "collar proud." He suggested to the plaintiff that the mare should have a trial in the press a man named Beavan, and it was arranged that should be carried out on the following morning. The mare, which was then in defendant's possession, was to be sent about 10 o'clock, but it did not arrive until two o'clock the afternoon, when he at once sent it to the man Beavan, in whose presence the trial was to take place, had gone. The mare was not in his possession, and he did not know it was.

In cross-examination plaintiff said that he took the mare back he saw Duncan, who had offered to put 30cwt. upon her and to drive in his presence. He had seen the mare, but never noticed it at work before purchasing.

Edward Catherall, son of the plaintiff, deposed to having put the mare in the shafts and to her to the sandhole and loading her with ordinary load. This she refused to draw, as to be taken out and another horse substituted.

also tried on the level and in the chains, in every fair means, but she could not be raw.

Wright, labourer, of Ewloe, Edward n, of Ewloe, and Joseph Morris, who assent at the time the mare was purchased, stated the plaintiff's evidence as to the nt made by Mrs. Lloyd.

William Catherall, late manager of the oft brickworks, stated that he had seen e more than once refuse to draw.

es-examination, this witness admitted that produced of loads carted by the mare, from a ton to a ton and a half, for the oft Company, were correct.

or Hewitt, carter, Peter Jones, labourers, Astbury, carter, John Ellis, carter, who re or less, were well acquainted with the testified that they had on various occasions e refuse to draw comparatively light loads.

h Catherall, son of the plaintiff, stated alve months previous to the purchase of e, during a conversation, Mr. Lloyd (the nt) told him that it was not fit for heavy However, he did not tell his father of this.

se defence, Marshall contended first that ds used by Mrs. Lloyd did not amount to a y. The plaintiff, it was true, had said he he required the mare to work at a sand- she denied that, and she clearly could e been aware of the exceptionally heavy of the work, the plaintiff himself admit- was a bad place to get sand out of. Hence tement that this was a "good working must, he submitted, be taken only as words of praise. Then he contended that, it were held a warranty, neither she nor ant man had power to give one unless ex- authorised by the defendant, as was held ase of Brady v. Todd.

ONOUR.—In that case I think it was said there was a warranty in fact given, and no ty proved to give it, the sale was void. all said there was no doubt an obiter of the judges to that effect.

ONOUR said it must necessarily be so on 3. all then proceeded to comment on the of the case, alleging that whatever the mounted to there was no breach, as the eriment made of the mare's capabilities unfair one, and she was in fact a capital orker, as would be proved by many witalled Mrs. Lloyd, wife of the defen- ho stated that when the mare was pur- the defendant told her that he merely it for carting, but nothing was said about dhole. She had no authority whatever r husband to give a warranty, and nothing l about one.

Duncan, labourer, in the employ of the nt, described the mare to be "as good a are as was ever put in gear." He had scores of times to draw loads of 31wt. t., and had never known her refuse. He rated Mrs. Lloyd as to the fact of taking e to the fair. Referring to the Saturday g the sale, when the mare was brought g offered to put 31wt. on her and try her, offer was refused.

awer to his HONOUR, the witness said had no authority to warrant the mare.

le Tomlinson, of Pentre, farmer; Mr. rd, agent to the Little Mountain Colliery y; Edward Hughes, Thomas Edwards, r; and Thomas Johnson, manager of the oft works, had all seen the mare drawing ut had never seen her refuse to draw, sidered that she was a "good working ONOUR held that the words used by Mrs. mounted to a warranty, but that neither her servant had express authority to give nty. Under those circumstances, on the ty of Brady v. Todd, he held that there sale, and that plaintiff was entitled to the amount claimed. In regard to the elf, the plaintiff had returned her to the nt, and could not be held responsible for d happened to her afterwards.

WAKEFIELD COUNTY COURT.

Thursday, Dec. 14.

Mr. Serjeant TINDAL ATKINSON, Judge.)

BOSTON v. GOODER.

land to lateral support of adjoining land ct of added weight of houses built within y years.

vious sitting of the court, Councillor woollen draper, Westgate, and the owner outages in Field-lane, Thorne, sued Mr. an engineer at Messrs. Craddock and Co.'s e works, Denby Dale-road, for damages e alleged he had sustained in consequence r having, whilst excavating on the adjoining property, let down some outbuildings belonging to him.

After hearing evidence, his HONOUR (having reserved judgment) gave his decision as follows: The plaintiff in this action seeks to recover damages for an alleged trespass on his land caused by the defendant excavating his land so close to that of the plaintiff's that thereby the earth gave way and caused some outbuildings of the plain-tiff's to fall. The facts proved at the trial were that the defendant and plaintiff's land adjoin. At the time when the alleged trespass was said to be committed the plaintiff's outbuildings, which had been erected within the period of twenty years, stood close to the boundaries of the two properties. Whether by settling or otherwise, the buildings and walls had become out of the perpendicular, leaning over towards the defendant's land. Defendant gave the plaintiff notice to restore them to an upright condition, and this was accordingly done. Two boundary walls of the plaintiff ran to the extremity of his land, one on each side of the outbuildings. One of these was pulled entirely down, and the bricks, weighing upwards of a ton, were stacked behind the remaining wall, close to the outbuildings.

On the defendant excavating his land for the purpose of building, and coming within two feet of the plaintiff's land, the plaintiff's remaining wall and the outbuildings gave way and fell, and for the deprivation of the lateral support of the defendant's land and the consequences which followed, the plaintiff brings the present action. The decision turns upon the answer to the question—Would the plaintiff's land have remained in its original position, notwithstanding the defendant's excavations, but for the weight of the plaintiff's outbuildings and walls, and also if it would not have remained in the same state, was there appreciable damage caused by such excavation? The law on this subject is free from obscurity or doubt. It has long been decided that in all the cases in which the owner of land has not by buildings or otherwise increased the lateral pressure on the adjoining soil, he has a right to the support of it, as an ordinary right of property, not as an easement but as a right necessarily and actually attached to the land: (Gale on Easements, 5th ed. 358).

In a very early case, Wilde v. Ministerley (Bolle's Abridgment, 564), it is said—"It seems that a man who has land closely adjoining my land cannot dig his land so near mine that mine would fall into his pit, and an action brought for such an act would lie." But since that time, by slow steps, the law now is that if the plaintiff has within twenty years by adding buildings or otherwise to his land caused such a pressure by the superincumbent weight that his land has fallen into the defendant's excavation, where, without such pressure it would have remained in its original position, then he is without remedy, and a further limitation of a plaintiff's right to recover in such cases is found in the late case of Smith v. Thackeran (L. Rep. 1 C. P. 564), in which it was held, that if the plaintiff's soil falls away in consequence of the defendant digging in his land, but there would have been no appreciable damage had it not been burdened with modern buildings, no action can be sustained. Apart from that case, I am of opinion that the plaintiff's land would not have fallen in, but from the pressure caused by the outbuildings, and the remaining wall aided by the fact of stacking the bricks of the wall which had been removed closed to the defendant's excavation, and that these co-operating together originated the damage, and that the present case falls within the principle of Wyatt v. Harrison (3 B. & Ad. 871), in which it is said: "Yet if I have laid an additional weight on my land, by building, my neighbour is not to be deprived of the right of digging his own ground, because mine will then become incapable of supporting the artificial weight which I have laid upon it." Upon these grounds there must be a verdict for the defendant with costs.

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

COURT OF APPEAL, LINCOLN'S INN.

Thursday, Dec. 21.

(Before JAMES, L.J., BRAMWELL and BAGGALLAY, J.J.A.)

Ex parte THE GOVERNORS OF ODIHAM SCHOOL; Re NEWMAN AND SON.

Building contract—Liquidated damages—Penalty —Proof—The Bankruptcy Act 1869, ss. 23, 31.

N. and Son, in April 1875, contracted with the governors of a school to build and complete a schoolhouse by the 31st Dec. following. The contract contained a variety of stipulations, with remedies for the breach of them, and concluded with a clause, that if in case the contract was not in all things duly performed by N., he should pay to the governors £1000, as liquidated damages.

N. failed before the 31st Dec. and his trustee in bankruptcy repudiated the contract:

Held (reversing the decision of the Chief Judge), that "liquidated damages" must be read "penalty," and that the governors could prove only for the damages actually sustained.

THE decision of Bacon, C.J. in this case is reported 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 558. His Lordship said: I cannot alter the contract, and I cannot find any circumstances that will induce me to say, or justify me, in considering this contract, in saying that in the event of such things happening as have happened, a less sum than £1000 should be paid. If I said that I should be obliged to ask myself the question how much less than £1000 ought to be paid? What means have I of ascertaining that? There has been no suggestion of the existence of any particulars of the amount of damage that has been incurred, and I do not know that anyone is in a position to furnish them; but I say that if the contention of the trustee were right, and I decided according to their contention, I should be puzzled greatly in either finding or directing any other tribunal to find the amount of the specific damage that has been sustained. The order is wrong, and the appeal must succeed. The appellants will have the costs of this appeal and in the court below.

The trustee appealed.

Bagshawe, Q.C. and F. O. Crump for the appellant.

De Gez, Q.C. and G. W. Lawrence for the respondents.

The COURT, without calling for a reply, were of opinion that the order of the Chief Judge must be discharged with costs in this court and both courts below.

Solicitors for the appellants, Lambert, Petch, and Shakespear.

Solicitors for the respondents, Pickett and Mytton.

Ex parte ATTWATER; Re TURNER.

Unregistered bill of sale—Actual possession—Prior act of bankruptcy.

THIS was an appeal from a decision of Mr. Registrar Pepys, as Chief Judge, and it raised an important question with regard to the construction of the Bills of Sale Act 1854. That Act provides that a bill of sale, if not registered, shall be void as against the assignee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor, as regards any personal chattels comprised in the bill of sale which, at or after the time of the bankruptcy, shall be in the possession, or apparent possession, of the mortgagor. The question was whether when the holder of an unregistered bill of sale had taken possession of the property comprised in it, before the filing of a liquidation petition by the mortgagor, his title was liable to be defeated by reason of a secret act of bankruptcy committed by the mortgagor before the possession was taken, the title of the trustee in the liquidation having, by virtue of the Bankruptcy Act, relation back to that prior act of bankruptcy. The question was, in short, whether the bill of sale holder was protected by sects. 94 and 95 of the Bankruptcy Act. In the present case, the mortgagee took possession on the 24th Aug., the debtor filed his petition on the 28th Aug., under which Mr. W. C. Cooper was subsequently appointed trustee. The debtor had, on the day before the possession was taken, committed an act of bankruptcy by denying himself to several of his creditors. In these circumstances, the registrar held that the trustee was entitled to the property comprised in the bill of sale.

The following is the judgment of the Registrar, which was appealed against:

Mr. Registrar Pepys.—This is a motion on behalf of the trustee under the bankruptcy of Henry Turner, asking for an order that certain deeds, in the nature of mortgages, made on the 24th Sept. 1875, and on the 24th May 1876, under which two several sums of £1000 and £500 were advanced to the bankrupt, may be declared void as against the trustee under the liquidation. It is admitted on either side that these deeds come under the head of bills of sale, subject to the Bills of Sale Act, and the contention on the part of the trustee is that the property comprised in and subject to these deeds, was in the apparent possession of the bankrupt at the time of the committing of the act of bankruptcy. Two questions arise which have to be considered on this occasion. I might say, in the order of events, that possession was taken by the creditor on the 24th Aug. 1876, and that on the 29th Aug. the debtor filed a petition for liquidation, and the two questions that are to be determined now are—firstly, whether the possession which was taken by the creditor on the 24th Aug. 1876, was a sufficiently good and complete possession, or whether or not the property was apparently in the possession of the bankrupt on the 29th Aug. The next question, supposing I determine in favour of the mortgagee, is whether before possession was taken the debtor had not committed a prior act of bankruptcy; whether, in fact, there was not in existence a prior act of bankruptcy before taking possession at all, under which the title of the mortgagee would be rendered void, and would make it incumbent upon me to give effect to the application of the trustee. On the first point I expressed an opinion during the course of the argument, and I did not call upon counsel for the creditor to reply to it, because I considered the possession taken by the creditor on the 24th Aug. was a good and ample and sufficient possession. At the time the creditor, by his solicitor, went to the house, demanded possession, closed the shop, took possession of the premises, and painted out the name on what is called the fascia, over the door, and, as I think, gave sufficient evidence to all parties that he had taken possession of the premises, and that the goods were no longer in the possession of the debtor. Against that it was alleged, in the first place, that the person who so took possession was the solicitor to the creditor, and had also been employed as solicitor to the debtor, and it was argued with some force that the person so employed might be considered to be the agent, not of the creditors, but of the debtor, and that possession by a person under such circumstances could not be held to be a good and sufficient possession. I am of opinion that that argument cannot prevail. The mere fact that a solicitor has acted at some time or other, or on several occasions, as solicitor for the debtor could not so invalidate his acts as to render possession by him valid on behalf of another. As far as that is concerned, the possession taken by the solicitor to the mortgagee was a good and sufficient possession. It was then argued, and evidence was brought to show, that although the name was painted out of the fascia over the door, the name of the debtor was still left in large letters on the front of the house. That no doubt was so, but at the same time it is impossible in the nature of things that these large letters on the house could be taken down without great trouble, time, and expense, and I am not prepared to say that it is incumbent upon a creditor seeking to take possession of premises under circumstances such as these entirely to remove all outward sign, and destroy all trace of the ownership of the former tenant. Sufficient was done, if there was any doubt on the subject, to enable a person to make inquiries and to ascertain what had taken place, and if he had done so, he would have been informed that the creditor was in possession. If, therefore, the question had been left in the form in which it was originally launched, and entirely dependent upon the question whether the possession was taken before the filing of the petition for liquidation, I should have no doubt, after the inquiry which has taken place, in deciding that the title of the mortgagee was good, and ought to be allowed to stand; but at the eleventh hour, after the case had come before the court, and was adjourned to enable the trustee to amend his notice of motion, a new case altogether is started and brought before the court. An affidavit was filed only a few days before the case came before me, in which the debtor himself—because it is a joint affidavit filed by the debtor himself and two of his employees—states he did on the day previous to the taking possession on the part of the mortgagee, commit an act of bankruptcy by denying himself to his creditors, inasmuch as he had given orders, and was in fact denied to several of his creditors by persons whom he employed. It cannot be disputed, and must be inferred, that the instructions were given and the denial was made with the object of defeating and delaying his creditors. First of all, that was prima facie an act of bankruptcy, and it appears to me that all the cases have decided that denial of a man to his creditors, with the intent to defeat and delay those creditors, and that his keeping house for such a purpose is an act of bankruptcy under the Act of Parliament. That is sufficiently established and a man so acting must be held to have committed an act of bankruptcy unless the evidence of such act of bankruptcy can be rebutted in any way, and it can be clearly proved that there was an intention on the part of the debtor to deny himself to his creditors. No such attempt was made in this case. Whether or not it was not thought necessary, or not thought of sufficient consequence to be rebutted, no evidence was brought to set it aside, and no cross-examination took place of the witness, but it is left on the proceedings in its pure and naked form, as distinct evidence that on a certain day which is not mentioned, but on a certain occasion previously to taking possession on the 24th Aug., an act of bankruptcy was committed by the bankrupt, and that being so, and it being established by law that the title under liquidation, as well as under bankruptcy, will have relation back to the time at which an act of bankruptcy is committed, if this act of bankruptcy was committed a few days before the possession was taken, it seems to follow that the title of the mortgagee would be rendered incomplete in consequence of his not having taken possession previous to his having committed an act of bankruptcy, unless it can be saved from being so under the provisions of this or any other Act. The case of Ex parte Wright, re Arnold was cited by Mr. Roxburgh, on the part of the mortgagee, as being a case entirely in his favour. I need scarcely say that since this case was argued before me I have taken the opportunity of looking carefully through that case, and in that case I find there is a very material distinction, and that the circumstances are very different. In Wright, re Arnold the bill of sale and mortgage had been duly registered, and the title of the mortgagee was good as against all the world, except as against the trustee in the bankruptcy, and the trustee in bankruptcy could only establish his title by establishing the fact that the goods when taken possession of were in the order and disposition of the bankrupt with the consent of the true owner thereof. But here the matter rests on a different basis: there they were able to establish that the act of bankruptcy was committed prior to the mortgagee taking possession, but in that as in this the act of bankruptcy was unknown to the mortgagee and accordingly it was held under those circumstances that the case came under the saving clause, the 94th clause of the Act, which says that nothing in this Act shall invalidate any payment made in good faith and for value received to any bankrupt, or any contract, or dealing, for due consideration, and without the knowledge on the part of the mortgagee of any act of bankruptcy, and in that case these conditions were fulfilled, and, therefore, the 94th section applied, that is to say, that part of the 94th section which exempts from the operation of the Act certain dealings which come under the head of disabilities of the deed, and which are only the creatures or creation of Act of Parliament, and, therefore, those dealings come within the exceptions to the operation of the order and disposition clause of the Act. The title of the mortgagee was good in that case as against the trustee. But in this case the matter rests entirely on a different consideration. It is not the Act of 1869, the Bankruptcy Act, which renders the transaction invalid; it is the Bills of Sale Act 1854, and by that Act it is enacted that, transactions of this nature unless registered shall be invalid as against the trustee in bankruptcy or other parties, unless possession is taken at the time of the act of bankruptcy. There is no saving clause in that Act and it is impossible to argue that an Act passed in that way—the saving clause enacted in the Act of 1869—can be held to apply to the Act of 1854, which enacted that unless possession was taken at the time of bankruptcy the bill of sale should be invalid as against the trustee in bankruptcy. But the precise conditions were not fulfilled, the mortgagee does not register the bill of sale at the time of the act of bankruptcy. There having been a denial of the debtor to his creditors at a time preceding the taking possession, there has been an act of bankruptcy established, and however hard the case may appear to be (the act of bankruptcy being unknown), the court cannot but hold as against the mortgagee and must make an order in the terms of the motion.

The mortgagee appealed.

Roxburgh, Q.C., Doria, and Crump were heard in support of the appeal.

Winslow, Q.C. and Winch for the trustee, were not called upon.

JAMES, L.J. was of opinion that it was impossible to escape from the plain meaning of the words of the Bills of Sale Act. The court had nothing to do with the policy or impolicy of the Act. The Legislature intended that, if a man chose to take a bill of sale without registering it, he should be liable to all the consequences of his so doing, and one of the consequences was this—that the bill of sale was void as against the trustee in bankruptcy of the mortgagor, unless the mortgagee had taken possession of the property before the bankruptcy. What did the word "bankruptcy" mean when the Act was passed in 1854? It clearly meant the commission of an act of bankruptcy to which the title of the assignee could have relation. Sect. 94 of the Act of 1869 had really nothing to do with the question, nor had sect. 95. To hold that those sections applied would be to say that general words in a subsequent Act had repealed the special provisions of a prior Act which was passed for a special purpose. The title of the trustee must prevail, and the appeal must be dismissed with costs.

BAGGALLAY, J.A., concurred.

BRAMWELL, J.A., was entirely of the same opinion. In his opinion the law could never be said to create hard cases, and he did not think the present case was a hard one. The Act was intended to ensure the registration of bills of sale. If a person who advanced money upon the security of a bill of sale chose to run the risk of not registering it, any hardship which resulted to him was of his own creation. If, in the Bills of Sale Act, the Legislature had by the word "bankruptcy" meant the adjudication or the filing of the petition, they might have said so; but instead of doing that they had used words which is always understood to mean the commission of an act of bankruptcy. The only question was the provisions of the Bills of Sale Act as repealed by sect. 94 or sect. 95 of the Bank Act of 1869. His Lordship was of opinion they had not. Not that the words were some extent inconsistent, but it was a well established rule of construction that a subsequent general Act did not repeal a former Act of application. The object of the Bills of Sale Act was to ensure the registration of bills of Sects. 94 and 95 of the Bankruptcy Act was intended to repeal the stringent provisions of Bills of Sale Act, but were passed for a different purpose. It was not, therefore, where a subsequent Act had repealed a previous consistent enactment. The title of the trustee must prevail.

LONDON BANKRUPTCY COURT.

(Before the CHIEF JUDGE.)

Monday, Dec. 18.

Re E. ESILICK; ex parte ALEXANDER.

Bill of sale—Trade fixtures—Registration—Bankruptcy of mortgagor—Bills of Sale Act, 1854, ss. 1, 7.

THIS was an appeal from a decision of the judge of the Aberdare County Court.

On the 13th May 1874, the Waynes Company demised to E. Eslick, a cabinet maker, a term of sixty-eight years from the 25th of May 1856 (less the last three days of the term) of ground in Aberdare. The lease contained a covenant by Eslick that he would before 1st January 1875, erect and finish on the premises a building for the purposes of a saw mill; that he would keep the building and the fixtures appertaining thereto in repair; that at the determination of the demise he would surrender the land, buildings, and all which during the term might be fixed to hold in good repair, except the steam apparatus, machinery, fixtures, and things noted therewith, which it was agreed might be removed.

On the 22nd Aug. 1874, Eslick, to secure payment of a sum of £1300 lent to him by Moxham, assigned to Moxham the piece of ground comprised in the lease, together with the saw mills and buildings erected thereon, steam engines, boilers, fixed and moveable machinery fixed or placed on the premises, and hereditaments and such of the machinery in the nature of landlords' fixtures to his executors, administrators, and assigns, residue of the term of sixty-eight years, three days, and to hold such of the machinery as was in the nature of tenants' or trade fixtures to Moxham, his executors, administrators assigns absolutely, subject to redemption. It was a power for the mortgagee in default of payment to sell the premises expressed to be in parcels or parts thereof, either together or in parcels. The mortgage was not registered under the Bills of Sale Act.

In July 1876, Eslick filed a liquidation petition. The mortgage debt remained due, and the mortgagee had not taken possession of any mortgaged property. The judge held the mortgagee was entitled to the steam saw mill, and other trade fixtures.

The trustee appealed.

Little, Q.C. and Romer for the appellant.

De Gez, Q.C. and Everitt for the mortgagee.

The CHIEF JUDGE held that by the mortgage it was intended that the mortgagee should have power to sever the trade fixtures and remove them separately from the premises. The case was governed by Ex parte Daylight (8 Ch. 1072), and not by Ex parte Barclay (9 Ch. 576), and, the mortgage not having been registered under the Bills of Sale Act, the mortgagee was entitled to the trade fixtures.

Solicitors: Torr and Co.; Tamplin, Tey Joseph.

NEWCASTLE-UPON-TYNE COUNTY COURT.

Friday, Dec. 15.

(Before T. J. BRADSHAW, Esq., Judge.)

Ex parte FRAZER; Re LLOYD.

Order at instance of petitioning creditor's proceedings of independent judgment creditor suing out debtor summons—Debtor's application to dismiss—Debtor's summons restrained—Dismissal of debtor's application—Restraining order dissolved by consent. Blackwell (instructed by W. H. Bell Shields), moved upon notice for the dismissal of the debtor's application to dismiss the summons. The facts were these: In May 1874 Robert Fraser issued a debtor summons against Lloyd, a trader, having previously instituted proceedings in the Exchequer Division to recover a debt. The registrar, upon the application of a formal affidavit, alleging non indebit adjourned the summons until judgment in execution without requiring security. A trial at Prius and reference took place, establishing the claim of Frazer, who signed judgment and his costs in September. A levy under the writ followed, and adverse claims to the seized goods having been made, the sheriff interpleaded. On his steps at chambers, Messrs. Foster, solicitors for Lloyd, filed a petition for an order of bankruptcy against him, and, at the instance, the Registrar granted an interim order, which, no cause being shown, was made absolute by the judge, and renewed, restraining the sheriff from taking further proceedings "under the writ of summons and execution." Foster's petition stands over for the decision of questions the subject of appeal. Mr. Edmund (solicitor) opposed the motion on its grounds.—The restraining order was made absolute by the judge, and renewed, restraining the sheriff from taking further proceedings "under the writ of summons and execution." Foster's petition stands over for the decision of questions the subject of appeal.

Kicell.—The restraining order was to protect the estate for the general body of creditors. But the summons was not "under the writ of execution," or "execution," but preliminary to an adjudication than Foster's petition could be for the same purpose.

HONOURABLE COURSE.

Kicell moved to dissolve or set aside the restraining order.

Con (solicitor), on behalf of Foster, the respondents, offered no opposition.

Remond claimed locus standi, contra. The court made (1) to dissolve the restraining order and (2) dismissing Lloyd's application to set aside the summons, with costs.

WORCESTER COUNTY COURT.

Wednesday, Dec. 13.

Before RUPERT A. KITTLE, Esq., Judge.)

Re EDWARD TOLLEY GRUBB.

Costs.—Not exceeding 50*l*.—Sheriff's fees.—B. A. 1869, s. 87.

HONOURABLE.—A motion was made at the last sitting of this court for an order declaring the respondents entitled to the proceeds of the sale of goods and chattels seized in execution by the sheriff of Herefordshire under a writ of fieri facias at the suit of William Dillwyn Sims, Charles Sansome, John Head, and James Edward Ransome, judgment creditors of the respondents, such goods, or the proceeds thereof, intended, being part of the estate of the respondents, divisible among the general body of his creditors. The writ of execution upon which the goods were made was indorsed: "Levy 24*l* 12*s*. 110*s*. 6*d*., for costs of execution, and also at 24*l* 12*s*. at 2*l* per cent. per annum, the 12th Sept. 1876, until payment, besides the poundage, officers' fees, costs of levy, and other legal and incidental expenses." Motion was taken by the sheriff on the 9th Sept. in this year, and the goods then were sold on the 26th Oct. for the sum of 258 3*s*. 6*d*. It was contended on behalf of the execution creditors that the goods were not taken in execution for a sum exceeding 250*l*. and on behalf of the trustees it was contended that the sum for which such goods were so in execution did exceed 250*l* within the meaning of sect. 87 of the Bankruptcy Act 1869.

GURUS presented to the court on behalf of the execution creditors were as follows: Judgment and costs, 244 12*s*.; execution, 21 10*s*. 6*d*.; age, 22 6*s*.; officer's fee and mileage, 1*s*.—total, 287 18*s*. 6*d*. On behalf of the trustees it was stated that a sum of 5*s*. for possession must be added to the costs of execution, as mentioned, and that, therefore, the levy was for 250 3*s*. 6*d*. It was not contended for the trustees that the 5*s*. possession fee was a "legal incidental expense" within the meaning of the words indorsed upon the writ, but admissions of two learned judges in the cases Howes v. Young and others and Howes v. Young and others (L. Rep. 1 Ex. Div. 146; 45 499, Q.B., C.P., and Ex.) were relied upon for authority for excluding possession fees from the costs of execution in calculating under the Bankruptcy Act the amount for which goods taken in execution, having regard to the meaning of sect. 87. Upon considering the language of the judges in those cases, in relation to, and in connection with, the facts and arguments then presented to the court, I think the opinions they expressed were intended to apply to possession fees which may have accrued due after the levy. In the case now before me the fee of 5*s*. for possession was due upon the act of possession—that is, at the time when the execution was levied. I know of no legal distinction between the possession fee due upon taking possession and any of the items of "legal incidental expenses" then became due. If then I take the judgment appeal in Ex parte The Liverpool Loan Com- pany; re Bullen (27 L. T. Rep. 667; L. Rep. 7 Ch. App. 732), with the interpretation of that judgment suggested in the cases of Howes v. Stone and Howes v. Young, and hold that the section in the Bankruptcy Act may be read "goods taken in execution for a sum which at the time they were taken in execution exceeded 250*l*." I must find that at the time this execution was levied the sum for which the goods were taken was for a sum exceeding 250*l* by the sum of 3*s*. 6*d*. at the least. I must, therefore, small as the excess is, make the order upon the sheriff, moved for by the trustee to pay over to him the proceeds of the sale for the general benefit of the creditors of the liquidating debtor.

Corbett, for Shaw, trustee.
Bentley, for execution creditors.

THE BANKRUPTCY LAW.

THE following is the memorial of the committee of the Nottinghamshire and Midland Merchants' and Traders' Association, comprising 900 members who are merchants and traders carrying on business in the Midland counties:—

That the attention of your memorialists has been given to the Bill introduced into Parliament during the last session with a view to consolidate and amend the Law of Bankruptcy.

There are several new provisions in the Bill which the committee highly approve, such as allowing creditors to petition for liquidation instead of requiring that their petition should be for bankruptcy, requiring trustees in liquidation to pay moneys received into a bank, bringing trustees more directly under the control of the court, &c.

There are certain other provisions which the committee respectfully suggest should be amended, and they therefore submit the following observations:—

Before the first meeting.—The committee is strongly impressed with the fact that a far greater delay now takes place in convening the first meeting than is desirable. They believe that in all ordinary cases seven days would suffice. During the twenty-one to twenty-eight days now intervening, debtors' estates frequently suffer by diminished assets; by the carrying on of unprofitable business; by the expenses of keeping men in possession, with the necessary attendance of receiver, &c., and they would prefer that an investigation into the affairs should take place after the first meeting, and under its direction, rather than either the present system should be continued, or than the plan proposed by your lordship should be adopted.

If desirable, leave might be given by the courts, on application in special cases, on good grounds shown, to extend the time for the first meeting being held.

The committee fear that the provision for five of the principal creditors named in the debtor's list, to investigate the affairs without proving their debts, and before the first meeting, will frequently be abused by family, friendly, or fictitious creditors making a professed investigation, and giving a favourable report.

They fear that the first meeting of the committee of five, then the first meeting of creditors, to be followed by a second meeting, will occupy much time and considerable expense will be incurred.

They desire that creditors suing may be bound by the liquidation proceedings without the present costly form of special restraining orders.

They think it should be the duty of a debtor at the time of filing his petition himself to send with the notice convening the meeting a printed list of his creditors, with their addresses and amounts, together, with any information as to the value of his assets he might be prepared to give, leaving a more complete balance sheet to be afterwards supplied.

The furnishing of this list to each of the creditors, would so enable them to communicate with each other as to the best course to be taken, and as to the persons whom they would desire to have the management of the business, that it would more effectually than any other step prevent the evils of the proxy system complained of in the report of the committee appointed by your Lordship to consider the working of the Bankruptcy Act 1869.

At the first meeting.—The committee regard with considerable apprehension the provision for the first meeting of creditors "to be held before the court in the prescribed manner." They do not desire that meetings of creditors should be held in the court room, or presided over by a court officer. They would much rather have the power of managing their own affairs.

The committee are of opinion that many of the evils of the proxy system referred to by the committee, are such as arise from the carelessness of indolent creditors. They would strongly deprecate any attempt to dispense with proxies. They regard it as a convenience that the creditors should be allowed to combine and put their proxies into the hands of one man to act on their behalf.

They desire to see a provision that the debtor's solicitor, or his clerk, shall not be appointed proxy by any creditors. This is at present a serious evil.

In cases where a composition is intended to be offered there should be submitted to the meeting a detailed schedule and valuation of the debtor's estate, made, as regards the stock and property by licensed valuers or by persons skilled in the particular trade of the debtor, and by an accountant, or other qualified person, so far as the books are concerned. The present method of the debtor putting his uncontrolled value upon the assets and liabilities is exceedingly objectionable.

As to trustees.—The committee regard the report upon which the Bill of last session was based as largely biased in favour of officialism. They think it is to be regretted that four of the five gentlemen constituting the committee were members of the legal profession, and four of them were officials, while not one person connected with mercantile pursuits was appointed on the committee.

They would strongly deprecate any attempted return to the system of official assignees, preferring that the creditors being the losers should decide who should manage their affairs.

The committee see no necessity whatever for the stringent provision in sect. 23 against any solicitation being used by or on behalf of a trustee or receiver.

If some of the principal creditors employ a man in whom they have confidence to act on their behalf, it surely ought not to be made an offence if he asks others to unite, or if some of the creditors ask the other creditors to support him. The committee regard this clause as one which in attempting to cure an evil, creates a greater. The remedy is evidently in creditors exercising greater care as to whom they support; but this cannot be regulated by Act of Parliament, and it would be manifestly unjust after a trustee has realised an estate to deprive him of remuneration because months before somebody asked somebody else to vote for the appointment of the trustee.

The present practice of allowing deputy registrars to act as trustees is undesirable. No taxing master should be a trustee or receiver.

The committee fail to see what benefits are likely to be realized by allowing the committee of inspection, instead of the creditors, to appoint the trustee.

As to trustee's remuneration.—The committee, while approving the system of remuneration to trustees by a scale or percentage, regard it as being applicable only in certain cases. There are many cases in which great skill and perseverance are required for the discovery of property, or the punishment of fraud, or where the debtor's affairs are exceedingly complicated. In such cases a payment by scale will deter trustees from accepting the office, and wrong-doers will go unpunished. It is suggested that provision should be made for application to the court for variation in special cases.

There appears no means of remunerating a trustee in cases where it is necessary in order to realise a benefit to complete a contract, and there is nothing to induce a trustee to investigate creditors' claims, or to reject excessive or fictitious ones. There are frequently assets to be recovered that do not come under any definition in the scale. There are duties to be performed in addition to those named above that are not provided for.

The committee cannot fail to notice the fact that the trustee's remuneration is proposed to be fixed by Act of Parliament, whereas the great source of expense, "law costs," are to be fixed by rules and orders.

According to the comptroller's last report, in 199 cases, out of 217,129 assets, 210,312 were spent in law costs, including stamp duties, and only 28724 were paid to trustees, so that the solicitors' charges, for chiefly initiatory proceedings (as in the majority of cases these duties terminate with the creditors' meeting) were 60 per cent., and the trustee's charges for realising and distributing the estates, extending over considerable periods, were only 21 per cent., in other words, the trustee did probably five times the amount of work for one-third the pay.

The committee fail to see why the one class of charges should be regulated by enactment and the other by rules.

The committee seriously question the soundness of the policy of adopting an unremunerative scale. They fear the effect will be either to devise means of evasion, or neglect of the business, or a sacrifice of creditors' interests, or the necessitating of the court officials taking charge of estates, and thus a covert and gradual revival of the official assignee system.

They desire, moreover, to call your lordships' attention to the want of adaptation in the scale of the proposed remuneration. The debts of a wholesale manufacturer or merchant will frequently average £100 each, and will be paid upon a single written application. For this application the scale will be £5. The debts of a retail shopkeeper will generally average about £2. Many of these will have to be applied for repeatedly, then received by instalments of say 4s. per month, some sued in the County Court, and followed up with judgment summonses; after the trouble and delay of which the trustee will receive as remuneration two shillings, yet the trouble will have been in the latter case ten times that of the former, with one-fiftieth of the remuneration. The result will be that the debts due to retail shopkeepers will be sold to debt collectors for a few shillings in the pound, in other words, they will practically be confiscated by your lordships' scale.

As to dividends.—The maintenance of the principle of a minimum dividend is regarded as important whether the amount is fixed at ten shillings or any lesser sum. The way in which dissentient creditors are now compelled to accept sixpence or one or two shillings in the pound is detrimental to the public interests. The minimum dividend should be applicable to liquidations and compositions as well as to bankruptcy. In compositions a creditor giving notice of his dissent should be able after a given time to proceed for the difference between the dividend paid and the minimum dividend.

As the difficulties of fixing in an Act of Parliament a minimum dividend are great, without harshness in cases of misfortune, or laxity in cases of fraud, it is suggested that, in cases of difficulty, where the creditors are not agreed, on the application of three or more creditors, the court might fix the minimum dividend, but so that it should not be below five shillings in the pound, and the court in fixing the dividend should take into consideration the wishes of the general body of the creditors and the debtor's conduct.

It appears to the committee unjust that unclaimed dividends should be paid to the Crown. Until 20s. in the pound is paid to creditors, unclaimed dividends ought to be paid to the creditors.

A trustee is now required to make provision in dividends for all persons whose names are inserted in the debtor's statement, whether such creditors prove their debts or not. This should be altered, as the tendency of the rule is to keep estates open. The debts may be fictitious, and never be proved. If a creditor, after due notice, fails to prove his debt within a specified time, the dividend should be forfeited and divisible among the creditors.

As to closing cases.—While the committee approve of the requirement for trustees to pay all moneys in hand, at the expiration of two years, into court, yet there are exceptional cases where it is desirable provision should be made for an extension of time on application to the court, and the court being satisfied as to the wisdom of such extension. These cases are where contracts have to be finished in order to obtain a benefit, or where property cannot be sold, or where it is in foreign countries, and such like. In these cases it may be better for the creditors to retain the power in their own hands, rather than that it should be transferred to the court.

Under the present law there are a number of cases where bankrupts have absconded, and it is desirable the estates should be kept open with a view to either punish the bankrupt, or for the recovery of property he may have, but the requirement of quarterly audits and reports without intermission, renders it practically impossible to keep such cases open. Provision should be made for these exceptional cases.

As to non-traders.—It is suggested that the distinctions between traders and non-traders should be abolished, but that, if continued, farmers and graziers should be deemed traders.

The foregoing suggestion the committee most respectfully submit to your Lordship's consideration.

Signed on behalf of the committee of the said Association,

JOHN HOWITT, Alderman,
President of the Association.
HENRY M. BAINES,
Chairman of the Sub-Committee.

LEGAL NEWS.

THE LATE CHIEF JUSTICE WHITESIDE. ON the 18th inst. a meeting was held at the Four Courts, for the purpose of taking steps to commemorate the admiration and regard of the legal profession for the memory of the late Chief Justice Whiteside. This meeting (although not formally summoned) was numerously attended by members of the Bench and Bar, as well as by solicitors and officers of the Courts of law and equity.

The Right Hon. Judge Fitzgerald presided as chairman.

was proposed by the Right Hon. Chief Justice Morris, seconded by Mr. William Read, solicitor, and unanimously resolved—"That a fund should be raised by subscription, amongst the different branches of the legal profession, for the purpose of erecting a statue of the late Lord Chief Justice at the Four Courts, or in such other locality as might hereafter be deemed most appropriate."

A committee was thereupon appointed (with power to add to their number) for the purpose of collecting the necessary funds. The Right Hon. the Lord Chancellor was nominated chairman of the committee, and Messrs. Edward Pennefather, Q.C., Piers F. White, Q.C., William Findlater, solicitor, Gerald Fitzgerald, and William Fry, jun., Esqs., were named as Hon. Secretaries; and Messrs. Pennefather, Q.C., White, Q.C., and Mr. Findlater, were appointed treasurers.

THE Hilary sittings commence on the 11th prox., and the Nisi Prius sittings on the following day, when 300 jurymen will attend at Westminster—150 special and 150 common jurors—who are required to attend for a week, when another 300 will have to attend.

CHANCERY CHIEF CLERKS.—The following appeared in the columns of a contemporary:—"A short time ago two letters appeared in your columns complaining of the insufficiency of the clerks in the common law courts. In the Chancery Division the inadequacy of the Chief Clerk's office is yet more apparent, unless the blame is thrown by the solicitors upon the wrong shoulders. In the year 1870, after a friendly petition to the court, in which all the parties joined, an estate was directed to be sold; and, after applying the proceeds to pay off existing encumbrances, the remainder was ordered to be invested in Consols or land, and the yearly income to be given to the tenant for life. Two years ago, in 1874, two separate petitions were presented to the court by all the parties interested, and approved by the trustees, for the purchase of two small fields, out of the money so remaining, and after investigation of title by the conveyancer of the Court of Chancery, the decree prayed for was granted as a matter of course. Early in the present year the conveyance was completed, and duly executed by all the parties; but, though the money is invested in Consols, and the tenant for life, the purchaser, regularly receives the interest through the pay office of the Court of Chancery, his solicitor represents that he is unable to get the purchase money out of the principal, as the Chief Clerk is too pressed with business to be able to make out the certificate. In the meantime the tenant for life has to pay interest to the vendor at a higher rate than he gets from the Consols. We hear much of the evil of throwing difficulties in the way of transfer of land; but surely this is an extreme case. If you think so, sir, you will much oblige persons interested by giving space to this letter, not as a means of redressing the grievance, but of exposing it, and especially of preventing the blame attaching where it is not due."

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION.

NOTE.—This Department of the LAW TIMES being open to free discussion on all professional topics, the Editors do not hold themselves responsible for any opinions or statements contained in it.

ACTIONS IN THE COUNTY COURT.—Under the 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 30 (1848), I desire to bring an action for a penalty of £20 or £40, as may be. The words of this Act are "to be recovered by action of debt in any of the superior courts of law at Westminster." The extension of the County Courts Act from £20 to £50 is by the 30 & 31 Vic., c. 142, passed in 1867. What is to prevent me from bringing the action in the County Court, such courts specially providing for actions of debt for trial therein? Sect. 7 of 30 & 31 Vic. c. 142, makes it lawful for the defendant (not the plaintiff) "to apply to a judge at chambers for a summons to the plaintiff to show cause why such action should not be tried in the County Court," &c. I desire, on the score of expense, to bring my action in the County Court. Question—Having regard to the Acts referred to, why cannot I bring my action in the County Court?

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER.

PROFESSIONAL CIRCULARS.—With reference to the circular published by you in your issue of the 16th inst., will you permit me to say that it was intended solely for my own personal friends and for those who were formerly engaged in the same occupation as myself. If some members of the Profession, not the most celebrated for their knowledge of business or their legal lore, had not forced it from me, I should not in sending my address to my friends have said anything to them of my present attainments. I shall, however, issue no more circulars—my friends have already given me enough business to require all my attention, and that business I mean to conduct on commercial principles, whether it be usual or I shall seek no one's clients, nor shall I deign to stay by me if their interest or their opinion should lead them away.

THE WRITER OF THE CIRCULAR.

SECRETARIES, &c., AS ADVOCATES.—Has quite understood the rule I suggest, namely, an officer upon whom service of process by other side is the legal mode of service is not to appear in person on behalf of the corpus whose officer he is? At all events, I do so how your illustrations show that my view is entirely correct." You put two cases; one of creditors forming themselves into a company to assist one another in recovering debts attempting to appear by the secretary to the company. Service on the secretary would not be service, as the individual creditor must be notified. So, I agree with you, he could not be. Supposing the creditor assigned his debt to a company, so that the company could sue in its own name, then service on the secretary would be good service; and do you not agree that he should be allowed to appear as advocate, or at least express it, as the company in person? In other cases, that of a police officer appearing for a railway company in a County Court, his application, for the same reason. Service on a police officer would not be service on the company. On the other hand, in a police court if a police officer lay an information, and so make himself the prosecutor, I should allow him to act as advocate, i.e., as prosecutor in person, as the defendant might have served him with process, e.g., notice to produce, and, therefore, is a party in person. My rule is simple. I person who may be served legally as a party the other side is a party in power for all purposes. If it will not do, I shall be very thankful that will.

A MAGISTRATE'S CLERK.

CONTINUING GUARANTEE.—His Honor, Fisher, Esq., the Judge of the Bristol & Glos. Court, lately decided in a case (Baker v. Son v. Dawe and Another) that the following instrument was a continuing guarantee, and tended to work not ordered at the date of and, indeed, not until some three months afterwards:

"Mr. Baker, Sir—I, Henry Dawe, am responsible for the joiner's work which you are making for Frank Dawe.—I am, yours respectfully, HENRY DAWE."

An invoice for the work then being made was sent on 17th Aug. 1875, and the price was afterwards paid. I appeared for the guarantee and applied for leave to appeal, but was refused. The claim was for £14 5s. 8d. I hold myself responsible for the accuracy of these statements and should be glad if you would draw attention to the decision, either by an insertion of letter in your journal or by a note of your own.

W. H. WARLOW, Solicitor,
Bristol. (Clerk to Mr. J. H. C.)

UNITED LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.—I otherwise flattering notice which in your number you are kind enough to accord to society you remark that you have "only fault to find," namely, that we so seldom discuss legal questions. This is a perfectly just claim, but is capable of being, to some extent, answered. Legal questions can and are discussed at Clement's Inn Hall under serious disadvantage, that we have not a law library. The consequence is that in discussing a legal question a gentleman whose are strong enough may with perfect impunity unfettered cite an imaginary case in aid of every view he may happen to be maintaining. obstacle, though a serious one while it remains, is not incapable of removal; and if any philanthropic member of the Profession would remove it, the name and address of the member of the society is

WALTER SHIRLEY SHIRLEY
2, Dr. Johnson's-buildings, Temple.

THE COURTS AND COLLEGE PAPERS.

SUPREME COURT OF JUDICATURE ORDER IN COUNCIL.

THE following Order in Council has been made Dec. 9.—Whereas by the Supreme Court Judicature Act, 1873, it is enacted that it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by Order in Council from time to time to direct that there shall be district registrars in such places as shall be such order mentioned for districts to be from which writs of summons for the cement of actions in the High Court of may be issued, and in which such process may be taken and recorded as are hereinafter mentioned; and Her Majesty may thereby that any registrar of any County Court, registrar or prothonotary or district prothonotary of any local court whose jurisdiction is transferred to the said High Court of, or from which an appeal is hereby given to the Court of Appeal, or any person who, been a district registrar of the Court of, or of the Admiralty Court, shall under become and be a district registrar of the High Court of Justice, or who shall hereafter appointed such district registrar, shall and a district registrar of the said High Court purpose of issuing such writs as aforesaid having such proceedings taken before are hereinafter mentioned:

whereas Her Majesty, by and with the of Her Privy Council, did, on the 12th 1875, order that there should be district registers in certain places in England:

whereas by the said order it was ordered ere should be a district registrar at Manchester, and the district prothonotary at Manchester of the Court of Common Pleas at Manchester was thereby appointed the district registrar at Manchester:

whereas by the death of the person who at the of the said Order in Council held the of district prothonotary at Manchester of the Court of Common Pleas, a vacancy has been in the said office, and such office being rendered unnecessary, the Lord Chancellor, in concurrence of the Treasury, and in pursuance of the power or authority in that behalf in him by the Supreme Court of Judicature 1873, has abolished the same:

whereas it seemeth fit to Her Majesty, by the advice of Her Privy Council, that provision for the appointment of a district registrar at Manchester should be made: therefore, Her Majesty by and with the of Her Privy Council, is pleased to order, is hereby ordered, that Henry John Walker, esq. registrar of the County Court of Cheshire, holden at Southampton, shall be and hereby appointed district registrar at Manchester for the district ordered to be the district registrar by the said Order in Council of 1875.

C. L. PERL.

COURT SITTINGS FOR JANUARY.

Court of Appeal.

At Lincoln's-inn and Westminster.

Monday	Jan. 11	Appeal motions ex parte , appeals from orders made on interlocutory motions, and other appeals
Tuesday	12	Appeals
Wednesday	13	Ditto
Thursday	14	Ditto
Friday	15	Ditto
Saturday	16	Ditto
Monday	17	Appeal motions ex parte , appeals from orders made on interlocutory motions, and other appeals
Tuesday	18	Bankruptcy appeals and other appeals
Wednesday	19	Appeals
Thursday	20	Ditto
Friday	21	Ditto
Saturday	22	Ditto
Monday	23	Appeal motions ex parte , appeals from orders made on interlocutory motions, and other appeals
Tuesday	24	Bankruptcy appeals and other appeals
Wednesday	25	Appeals
Thursday	26	Ditto
Friday	27	Ditto
Saturday	28	Ditto
Monday	29	Appeal motions ex parte , appeals from orders made on interlocutory motions, and other appeals
Tuesday	30	Ditto
Wednesday	31	Ditto

Orders in Lunacy will be taken every Saturday the sittings.

High Court of Justice.

Chancery Division.

(Before the MASTER OF THE ROLLS.)

At the Rolls House.

Monday	Jan. 11	Motions and general paper
Tuesday	12	General paper
Wednesday	13	Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Thursday	14	Adjourned summonses, and general paper
Friday	15	General paper
Saturday	16	Ditto
Monday	17	Ditto
Tuesday	18	Ditto
Wednesday	19	Motions and general paper
Thursday	20	Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Friday	21	Adjourned summonses, and general paper
Saturday	22	General paper
Monday	23	Ditto
Tuesday	24	Ditto
Wednesday	25	Ditto

Friday	Jan. 26	Motions and general paper
Saturday	27	Petitions, short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday	28	Adjourned summonses and general paper
Tuesday	29	General paper
Wednesday	30	Ditto
Thursday	31	Ditto

The days (if any) on which the Master of the Rolls shall be engaged in a Court of Appeal are excepted. Causes and actions in which witnesses are to be examined before the Court will be taken on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays, and causes and actions without witnesses will be taken on Mondays; but when the list of causes and actions without witnesses is exhausted, causes and actions with witnesses will be taken on Mondays also.

Unopposed petitions must be presented and copies left with the secretary, on or before the Thursday preceding the Saturday on which it is intended they should be heard.

(Before V.C. MALINS.)

Thursday	Jan. 11	Motions and general paper
Friday	12	Short causes, petitions, and general paper
Saturday	13	Adjourned summonses and general paper
Monday	14	General paper
Tuesday	15	Ditto
Wednesday	16	Ditto
Thursday	17	Motions and general paper
Friday	18	Short causes, petitions, and general paper
Saturday	19	Adjourned summonses and general paper
Monday	20	General paper
Tuesday	21	Ditto
Wednesday	22	Ditto
Thursday	23	Motions and general paper
Friday	24	Short causes, petitions, and general paper
Saturday	25	Adjourned summonses and general paper
Monday	26	General paper
Tuesday	27	Ditto
Wednesday	28	Ditto

(Before V.C. BACON.)

Thursday	Jan. 11	Motions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Friday	12	General paper
Saturday	13	Petitions, short causes, and general paper
Monday	14	In Bankruptcy
Tuesday	15	General paper
Wednesday	16	Ditto
Thursday	17	Motions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Friday	18	General paper
Saturday	19	Petitions, short causes, and general paper
Monday	20	In Bankruptcy
Tuesday	21	General paper
Wednesday	22	Ditto
Thursday	23	Motions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Friday	24	General paper
Saturday	25	Petitions, short causes, and general paper
Monday	26	In Bankruptcy
Tuesday	27	General paper
Wednesday	28	Ditto
Thursday	29	Motions, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Friday	30	General paper
Saturday	31	Ditto

(Before V.C. HALL.)

Thursday	Jan. 11	Motions and general paper
Friday	12	Petitions and general paper
Saturday	13	Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday	14	General paper
Tuesday	15	Ditto
Wednesday	16	Ditto
Thursday	17	Motions and general paper
Friday	18	Petitions and general paper
Saturday	19	Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday	20	General paper
Tuesday	21	Ditto
Wednesday	22	Ditto
Thursday	23	Motions and general paper
Friday	24	Petitions and general paper
Saturday	25	Short causes, adjourned summonses, and general paper
Monday	26	General paper
Tuesday	27	Ditto
Wednesday	28	Ditto
Thursday	29	General paper
Friday	30	Ditto
Saturday	31	Ditto

Any cause intended to be heard as a short cause before the Master of the Rolls, or either of the Vice-Chancellors must be so marked in the cause book at least one clear day before the same can be put in the paper to be so heard, and the necessary papers must be left in court with the judge's officer the day before the cause is to be put into the paper.

Further considerations will be taken by the Master of the Rolls, V.C. Bacon, and V.C. Hall, as part of the general paper in priority to original causes which have not already appeared in the paper.

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

NOTA BENE.—Information intended for publication under the above heading should reach us not later than Thursday morning in each week, as publication is otherwise delayed.

H. R. HUGHES, Esq., of Kinnel, Lord Lieutenant of Flintshire, has appointed Mr. Evan Morris, solicitor, Wrexham, clerk of the Lieutenancy of the Hundred of Maestor.

It is announced in the Gazette that the Queen has been pleased to nominate and appoint James Adam, Esq., one of the Lords of Session, to be one of the Lords of Justiciary in Scotland in the room of James Craufurd, deceased.

THE Queen has appointed Sir David Patrick Chalmers to be Chief Justice, and Mr. James Marshall and Mr. T. W. Jackson to be Puisne Judges of the Supreme Court of the Gold Coast.—Gazette.

THE Governor of Nova Scotia has appointed Mr. William Law Gane, of the firm of Messrs. Truefitt and Gane, solicitors, of 54, Bishopsgate-street Within, a commissioner to take affidavits, &c., in England in all matters depending in the Courts of the Province of Nova Scotia.

THE GAZETTES.

Bankrupts.

Gazette, Dec. 22.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Lincoln's-inn-fields. FORT, JAMES, jun., Westbourne-sq. Pet. Dec. 19. Reg. Haslitt. Sole. Chinnery and Aldridge, Fenchurch-st. Sur. Jan. 17. HOGARTH, WALTER H., coal merchant, Water-la, Great Tower-st. Pet. Dec. 21. Reg. Pepps. Sole. Messrs. Spyer, Winchester House, Old Broad-st. Sur. Jan. 17.

To surrender in the Country. CHAMBERS, JOHN ASHES, tailor, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 18. Reg. Lister. Sur. Jan. 4. GLENWRIGHT, THOMAS, wine and spirit merchant, Tow Law. Pet. Dec. 20. Reg. Marshall. Sur. Jan. 5. HANDE, JOHN CHECKETT, woollen merchant, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 19. Reg. Cole. Sur. Jan. 5. HOLMES, PHILIP (otherwise JAMES HOLMES, otherwise JAMES HENRY HOLMES), ironmonger, Ferryvale, Forest-hill. Pet. Dec. 19. Reg. Pitt-Taylor. Sur. Jan. 5. ORMEROD, JOHN, coal dealer, Acorington. Pet. Dec. 18. Reg. Bolton. Sur. Jan. 21. PHILLIPS, RICHARD, of the Meadows, Sutton. Pet. Dec. 19. Reg. Rowland. Sur. Jan. 5. PITCHER, JOHN HORATIO, wine and spirit merchant, Brighton, and Halesham. Pet. Dec. 11. Reg. Evershed. Sur. Jan. 9.

Gazette, Dec. 26.

To surrender at the Bankrupts' Court, Lincoln's-inn-fields. BRISTOCKE, AUGUSTUS, no occupation, Holles-st, Cavendish-sq. Pet. Dec. 21. Reg. Spring-Rice. Sur. Jan. 23. COTTON, FRANCIS LOVETT, merchant and wharfinger, Bishopsgate-st, City, and Granville Park, Blackheath. Pet. Dec. 21. Reg. Murray. Sur. Jan. 16. CURTIS, CHARLES EDWARD, farrier, High-st, Homerton. Pet. Dec. 22. Reg. Keene. Sur. Jan. 17. GRESHAM, THOMAS, solicitor, Basinghall-st. Pet. Dec. 22. Reg. Keene. Sur. Jan. 17. MERCHANT, JAMES, and MERCHANT, JAMES SMITH, stock and share dealers, Hop and Malt Exchange, Borough. Pet. Dec. 21. Reg. Pepps. Sur. Jan. 17.

To surrender in the Country. CARDWELL, JAMES PARKINSON, builder, Altrincham. Pet. Dec. 22. Reg. Lister. Sur. Jan. 8. DABY, EDWARD, butcher, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 20. Reg. Marshall. Sur. Jan. 24. GELDART, THOMAS, and BANNER, JOHN, lard refiners, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 22. Reg. Watson. Sur. Jan. 10. HALL, HERBERT KING, Queen's messenger, Peterham. Pet. Dec. 19. Reg. Whittebury. Sur. Jan. 19. HOOPER, EDWIN THOMAS, baker, Aston, near Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 23. Reg. Parry. Sur. Jan. 6. PARKINSON, RICHARD, clerk to a woollen manufacturer, Armley, near Leeds. Pet. Dec. 20. Reg. Marshall. Sur. Jan. 24. SOKOLOV, ABRAHAM, clothier, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 22. Reg. Watson. Sur. Jan. 9. WINWARD, RALPH, hotel keeper, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 22. Reg. Lister. Sur. Jan. 15.

Bankruptcies Annulled.

Gazette, Dec. 22.

LYONS, GEORGE JOSEPH, gentleman, Oxford. Oct. 26, 1876. WATTLEWORTH, ROBINSON, watchmaker and jeweller, Whitehaven. Oct. 17, 1876.

Liquidations by Arrangement.

FIRST MEETINGS.

Gazette, Dec. 22.

ADAMS, EDWIN, and COCKING, HENRY WHITTALL, lead merchants, Upper Thames-st. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 3, at two, at office of Fenner, Hilton, and Gifford. 2, Gresham-bdgs, Basinghall-st. Sole. Tippetts, Son, and Tickle, Carter-la, Doctors'-common. ADDISON, JAMES, plumber, Tunstall. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 3, at three, at offices of Sol. Llewellyn and Acliff, Tunstall. ARUNDEL, JAMES, FARRER, JOHN, FOZZARD, THOMAS, HUDSON, GEORGE, INGRAM, WILLIAM, MILNS, JOSEPH, SHARP, JOHN, HARRISON, JOHN, and TINGOLE, BENJAMIN, bill discounters, Leeds (trading as the Volunteer Loan and Investment Society). Pet. Dec. 18. Jan. 3, at three, sep. of Hudson Jan. 4, at two, sep. of Harrison Jan. 4, at three, at offices of J. Routh, Kirk, and Co., accountants, Royal Insurance-bdgs, 11, Park-row, Leeds. Sol. Emsley. ASHWELL, JOHN, solicitor, Arundel. Pet. Dec. 15. Jan. 2, at two, at offices of Sol. Austin, Old Jewry. ASPLAND, TUNNARD, wholesale grocer, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 20. Jan. 11, at three, at offices of Sol. Rylands and Barker, Manchester. BACON, HENRY, upholsterer, Worship-st, Finsbury. Pet. Dec. 19. Jan. 4, at one, at offices of Sol. Messrs. Whittington, Bishopsgate-st without. BAILEY, EDWARD JOSEPH, no occupation, Luton. Pet. Dec. 19. Jan. 15, at eleven, at the George hotel, Luton. Sole. Shepherd and Ewen, Luton. BAILEY, HENRY, joiner, Oldham. Pet. Dec. 18. Jan. 3, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Clark, Oldham. BAINSTOW, HODGSON, out of business, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 16. Jan. 2, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Hewson, Leeds. BARBER, GEORGE, farmer, Cowfold, near Horsham. Pet. Dec. 18. Jan. 5, at three, at offices of Sol. Gordon, Lincoln's-inn-fields. BARNES, ELIZABETH, leather merchant, Manchester. Pet. Dec. 18. Jan. 8, at three, at offices of Sol. Chorlton, Manchester. BARNET, THEOPHILUS, wine merchant, Sutton. Pet. Dec. 14. Jan. 10, at two, at offices of Sol. Blachford, Riches, Kilby, and Wood, College-hill, Cannon-st. BECKS, RICHARD GEORGE, coachbuilder, Fakenham. Pet. Dec. 19. Jan. 5, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Cates, Fakenham. BOULD, HENRY JOSEPH, grocer, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 18. Jan. 4, at three, at offices of Sol. Jaques, Birmingham. BOURNE, HENRY, grocer, Stoke-on-Trent. Pet. Dec. 15. Dec. 30, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Tennant, Hanley. BROOKS, JAMES, benchman keeper, Wolverhampton. Pet. Dec. 19. Jan. 12, at three, at offices of Sol. Rhodes, Wolverhampton. BROWN, WILLIAM, dealer in cattle, Bramfield. Pet. Dec. 19. Jan. 8, at twelve, at office of Sol. Ferrier, Great Yarmouth. BUSBY, ALFRED, coal merchant, Milton-next-Gravesend. Pet. Dec. 18. Jan. 8, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Sharland and Hatten, Gravesend. CLEWLOW, GEORGE, bootmaker, Weston-at, Upper Norwood. Pet. Dec. 19. Jan. 10, at twelve, at offices of Sol. Arnold, Exchange, Southwark-st, Borough. COLBORE, CHARLES, tailor, Ball's Pond-rd, Tellington. Pet. Dec. 20. Jan. 10, at two, at the London Warehousemen's Association, 111, Cheapside. Sol. Clift, Cheapside. COOKE, WILLIAM, journeyman hatter, Denton. Pet. Dec. 18. Jan. 4, at three, at offices of Sol. Newton, Stockport. COOPER, JOHN, coal merchant, London-rd, and North-st, co. Sussex. Pet. Dec. 18. Jan. 4, at four, at offices of Sol. Webb, Brighton. CROFT, HENRY, carrier, Bristol. Pet. Dec. 20. Jan. 5, at two, at offices of A. Barron and Co., & The Exchange, West Bristol. Sol. Sibby, Bristol. DAVIES, JOHN, tailor, Nantgarw, near Cardiff. Pet. Dec. 18. Jan. 4, at eleven, at office of Sol. Morgan and Scott, Cardiff.

RATZ, HENRY, potato dealer, Liverpool. Pet. Dec. 2. At eleven, at office of Sol. Gray, Barnsley.

REYNOLDS, WILLIAM, tailor, Pontypridd. Pet. Dec. 11, at twelve, at office of sol. Rowse, Pontypridd.

RIDMAN, JAMES, bookmaker, Bradford-on-Avon. Pet. Jan. 9, at three, at office of G. P. Bates, Bradford-on-Avon.

RISBY, RICHARD, brewer, Shipdham. Pet. Dec. 7, at two, at office of -sol. Bellie, King's Lynn.

ROBINSON, GEORGE WILLIAMS, farmer, Yardley House. Dec. 21. Jan. 8, at eleven, at offices of Sol. Jeffrey, Birmingham.

SAMPBARDSON, WILLIAM, plumber, Middleborough. Pet. Jan. 6, at eleven, at offices of G. P. Bates, 5, Leake-st., Middleborough. S. H. Addisonbrook, Middleborough.

BAYNES, WILLIAM, insurance agent, Claremont. Pet. Dec. 10, at five, at two, at the Queen's Hotel, Leeds.

STEVENS, MATTHEW, baker, Cardiff. Pet. Dec. 2. At two, at offices of Sols. Griffith and Corbett, Cardiff.

STEW, WILLIAM, innkeeper, Much Wenlock. Pet. Dec. 2, at five, at the Tontine Hotel, Ironbridge.

SMITH, JOHN WELLS, artist, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 11, at three, at offices of J. Gordon, accountant, 1, 3, 5, Sol. Brown, Leeds.

SMITH, JOHN, discounteur (trading as Vintners' Investment Society, Hunslet, par. Leeds). Pet. Feb. 5, at three, at offices of South, Kirk, and Co., Leeds. Sol. Emley.

SLIMAN, LOMON, manager to a wholesale firm, 145, Chespeide. Sol. Catt In, Gun-dally-yard.

THORNTON, JAMES, contractor, Merthyr Tydfil. Pet. Jan. 5, at eleven, at office of Sols. Smith, Lewis, and Merthyr Tydfil.

THOMAS THOMAS SAMUEL, butcher, Merthyr Tydfil. Pet. Jan. 8, at eleven, at office of Sols. Smith, Lewis, and Merthyr Tydfil.

TUNER, BROWN, boot and shoe maker, Harrogate. Dec. 22. Jan. 10, at twelve, at 2, Harvey, Leicester.

TAYFIELD, HARRIS, hairdresser, Mile End. Pet. Jan. 6, at four, at offices of Sol. Newman and Charles Maynard, Mile End.

JAYLOR, ALFRED, builder, Cornbridge, Exchange Street, Birmingham. Pet. Dec. 11, at two, at offices of Sols. Tippings, Thirk, Carter's, Doctors' common.

TOPELEY, EBENEZER SAMUEL, grocer, Seave Slough-ton. Pet. Dec. 22. Jan. 4, at two, at offices of the Association of Wholesale Dealers, 4, Archbold-Bar, London.

UMBERS, EDWARD, farmer, Wapenbury. Pet. Dec. 2, at twelve, at office of Sol. Moor, Warwick.

WILLIAMS, JAMES, carpenter, Monmouth. Pet. Jan. 2, at two, at office of Sol. Jenkins, Monmouth.

WILKINSON, BATHURST EDWARD, butcher, Kingston. Pet. Jan. 11, at seven, at offices of Sols. Bailett and Kinzton.

WOOD, EDWIN and WOOD, ROBERT, dress, Ealing. Pet. Jan. 5, at two, at the Royal Hotel, Dewsbury.

WATSON, JAMES THOMAS and WATSON, JAMES, hat and retail clothiers, Leeds. Pet. Dec. 2. At two, at offices of South, Kirk, and Co., accountants, Leeds.

WILCOX, EDWIN, asphalt contractor, Lombard St. Edinburgh. Pet. Dec. 20. Jan. 5, at eleven, at offices of Aubyn, Lombard-st.

WARE, JAMES, carrier, Castle-st., Laurence-la, and Essex. Pet. Dec. 20. Jan. 5, at four, at 2, Wetherfield, Graham-hors, Guildford.

[illegible]

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS

NEAVES.—On the 23rd inst., at 7, Charlotte-square, East the Hon. Lord Neaves, one of the Judges of the Court of

To Readers and Correspondents.

ERRATA.—You are under a misimpression. We go to press on Thursdays (on), and whenever your reports are received in time they are invariably so, and will be so in future, of course. Your reports should be addressed to its Department, and if possible reach this office on Wednesday in each rick and Co., of 10, Godliman-street, City, write in reference to a letter published in our issue of the 23rd ult., and bearing a similar e, "No such notices are issued from this office."

communications are invariably rejected.

communications must be authenticated by the name and address of the writer specially for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith.

communications intended for the Editor (SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT) should be addressed, and similarly in the case of the Editor (LAW STUDENTS' DEPARTMENT).

CONTENTS.

REPORTS.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

D. ANOTHER v. THE LONDON AND WESTERN RAILWAY COMPANY

Story negligence—Evidence—Decision ..... 637

D. ANOTHER v. WADDELL—Adjacent owners—Natural user ..... 639

THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

LAVORY—Lower Canada—Quebec Contro-Elections Act—Right of prerogative of Crown ..... 640

TRAR OF TITLES v. PATER—Victoria—Transfer of Lands—Writ of fi. fa.—Alias writ—ation ..... 642

THE COURT OF BANKRUPTCY.

PROVINCIAL BANK; ER—Mortgage—Misdescription in the—Rectification—Evidence, ability of—Statute of Frauds ..... 673

HAM; RE LATHAM—exchange—Action at law—summons—Security for costs ..... 674

RELFALL; RE WILLIAMSON—Stoppage in transitu—Bill of further advance of goods—Act rruptcy ..... 675

THE COURT OF JUDICATURE.

APPEAL, LINCOLN'S INN. ON; RE HENLEY—Factor—Set-off principal of debt due from Proof in bankruptcy ..... 644

RELL; RE TERRELL—Jon—Sham resolution—Mortgage to debtor—Discharge ..... 646

SHEFFIELD AND BOTHER—STOCK BANKING COMPANY; L—Liquidation—Meeting of re—Power to summon fresh stings ..... 648

MASTER; RE LANCASTER—Practice—Debtor's summons—Solicitor's clerk—Agent ..... 649

KE; RE STRACHAN—ter and principal—Proceeds of trust fund in hands of stock ..... 649

FANTON—agent—General agent—on insurances—Commission ..... 652

OPPEAN ASSURANCE SOCIETY CASE—Company—Amalgamation—of liabilities—Annuitant ..... 653

OPPEAN ASSURANCE SOCIETY CASE—Contributory—Past member alseory registration ..... 654

SPILLER—Infringement—Interlocutory on—Accounts of profits—Stoppage—Balance of convenience ..... 656

APPEAL, WESTMINSTER. I v. THE PACIFIC STEAM COMPANY—Days allowed for loading—Coal—Demurrage—lien—Ceasing of charterer's ..... 658

IT OF JUSTICE—CHANCERY DIVISION.

DD—Priority—Prior publication—on in provisional specification—ted in final specification ..... 661

BARKER v. COX—Vendor and purchaser—Husband and wife—Joint power of appointment ..... 662

RANKEN v. ALFARO—Bill—Cargo—Specific appropriation—Lien—Equitable assignment ..... 664

EXCHEQUER DIVISION.

THE SILKSTONE AND DODSWORTH COAL AND IRON COMPANY (LIMITED) v. THE JOINT-STOCK COAL COMPANY (LIMITED)—Vendor and purchaser—Colliery owner and coal owner—Contract for sale and purchase of coal at per ton, to be delivered in equal monthly quantities at pit's mouth ..... 668

BAKER AND OTHERS v. OAKES—Costs—Application made after trial to judge at chambers—Jurisdiction ..... 671

LEADING ARTICLES, &c.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS ..... 163

LEADING ARTICLES.

Topics of the Week ..... 163

Cases under the Judicature Act ..... 164

The Power of the Court of Bankruptcy to Restrict Actions ..... 164

Some Remarks on the present County Court System ..... 165

LAW LIBRARY ..... 166

SOLICITORS' DEPARTMENT

(Edited by a Solicitor).

SOLICITORS' JOURNAL—Topics of the Week ..... 167

Notes of New Decisions ..... 167

Specimen Digest of the Law relating to Solicitors of the Supreme Court ..... 168

Unclaimed Stock and Dividends in the Bank of England ..... 169

Appointments under the Joint-Stock Winding-up Acts ..... 169

Creditors under Estates in Chancery ..... 169

Creditors under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35 ..... 169

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

Topics of the Week ..... 170

The Council of Legal Education ..... 170

United Law Students' Society ..... 170

Queries ..... 171

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

COMPANY LAW—Notes of New Decisions ..... 171

MAGISTRATES' LAW—Notes of New Decisions ..... 171

Extraordinary Fraud on a Licensed Victualler by an "Accountant" ..... 171

Borough Quarter Sessions ..... 171

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

Notes of New Decisions ..... 172

BANKRUPTCY LAW.

Leeds County Court ..... 172

Swansea County Court ..... 173

Court of Bankruptcy (Ireland) ..... 173

Accountant: Trustees in Liquidation Proceedings ..... 174

COUNTY COURTS.

High Court of Justice—Chancery Division ..... 175

High Court of Justice—Divisional Court ..... 175

Croydon County Court ..... 175

Stonehouse County Court ..... 175

Waltham Abbey County Court ..... 176

LEGAL NEWS.

CORRESPONDENCE OF THE PROFESSION ..... 177

NOTES AND QUERIES ..... 177

LAW SOCIETIES.

Law Association ..... 178

Bradford Incorporated Law Society ..... 178

THE COURTS AND COURT PAPERS.

Cause List for Hilary Sittings ..... 178

Registrars for the ensuing Week ..... 179

THE GAZETTES.

BIRTHS, MARRIAGES, AND DEATHS ..... 180

never enter a barrister's chambers to gain practical experience. There are two objects to which the Benchers should direct their attention: (1) simplifying the exposition of the law, so as to make its study less irksome to students, and (2) assisting poor students to pay the fees for reading in Chambers. The present Professional system of teaching is of little value—very little is, as a rule, learned at lectures. There are sensible, practical men among the Benchers, and the marvel is that they should be able to satisfy their consciences by flinging gold to students. There is serious work to be done by the heads of the Profession if existing scandals are to be got rid of. Authors should, if necessary, be subsidised to systematise the law, instead of producing the bloated volumes which now load our shelves, and scholars should be induced to learn something of the practice of the Profession before the Inns place them in the position of being able to attempt to apply the principles of the law which they have learned in the libraries.

A SINGULAR incident occurred at the recent Quarter Sessions held at Exeter. A prisoner was convicted of having stolen four books from an inn and sentenced to twelve months' imprisonment. He was duly transferred to the gaol, his beard was shaven off, and his hair close cropped in conformity with the prison regulations. The grand jury, however, had found no true bill. Through some oversight this fact had been overlooked, and the case was called on as though a true bill had been found. The facts becoming known, the prisoner was again brought up and ordered to be discharged. An interesting question might, under the circumstances, be raised, Has the prisoner any right of action for false imprisonment? If so, against whom should it be brought? After all, the most curious circumstance in the whole affair is that one jury should convict upon evidence which the other jury did not think sufficient to indicate even a prima facie liability. Such a circumstance is not calculated to make the public repose confidence in the verdicts of juries.

THE 5th section of the County Court Act 1867 provides that if in any action commenced in any of the Superior Courts the plaintiff recovers a sum "not exceeding twenty pounds if the action is founded on contract, or ten pounds if founded on tort," he shall not be entitled to any costs of suit unless the Judge certify on the record that there was sufficient reason for bringing such action in the Superior Court, or unless the court or a Judge at chambers allow such costs. A rather important case upon this section came before the Divisional Court on the 20th Dec. (Pontifex v. Midland Railway Company). The plaintiff was the consignor of goods. Hearing that the consignee was a doubtful character, he gave notice to the company to stop the goods in transitu. The company, instead of doing so, delivered them to the consignee, who subsequently absconded. The plaintiff then brought an action in the Supreme Court against the defendant company, setting out the facts in his statement of claim. The company paid £12 into court, the value of the goods. The question then arose whether the plaintiff was entitled to his costs. The Master decided the question in the affirmative. Mr. Justice LOPEZ overruled the Master's decision on the ground that the action was founded in contract, and that less than £20 had been recovered. This decision was again overruled by the Divisional Court. It seems on general principles that the question really admits of no argument. A contract was in existence up to the stoppage in transitu, but no longer. The action of the plaintiff was substantially one in trover. The true principle, and one which would reconcile all the cases, appears to be discoverable in the ordinary definition of a tort as a wrong independent of contract. Here the contract was at an end by the stoppage; the wrong was subsequent, when there was no contract in existence.

THERE has been a considerable amount of correspondence lately in the daily papers upon the practice of agents taking presents or commissions from those with whom they deal on behalf of a principal. It is highly important that agents should be well informed of their rights and liabilities with respect to such commissions, and it is equally important that this knowledge should be widely diffused. We have so often had occasion to point out that one of the primary duties which an agent owes to his employer is "loyalty to his trust" that little need now be said upon that head. An agent in acting for his principal will not be allowed to have any interests in conflict with his duty; he will not be allowed to take advantage of his position as agent to the detriment of his principal. In short, the law of England will not wink at any exercise of bad faith on the part of an agent in the course of his employment. Hence an agent employed to purchase will not be permitted to purchase for himself, nor will he be allowed to sell his own property as that of another. The general principle, which has been often stated by our Judges, may be thus expressed: Wherever two persons stand in such a relation that while it continues confidence is necessarily possessed by one, and the influence which naturally grows anac is presented to Subscribers to the LAW TIMES with essent issue.

THE LAWYERS' ALMANAC FOR 1877.

The Law and the Lawyers.

of Court have evidently more money than they know do with. We don't complain that they have so much we do complain that they should not know what to do. We perceive that the Middle Temple Benchers have just to lavish some hundreds a year in scholarships. This good; it will simply encourage the already large class forms who spend all their lives in libraries, and out of that confidence is possessed by the other, and this confidence is abused, or the influence is exerted to obtain an advantage at the expense of the confiding party, the person so availing himself of his position will not be permitted to retain the advantage, although the transaction could not have been impeached if no such confidential relation had existed: (See per Lord CHELMSFORD, Tate v. Williamson, L. Rep. 2 Ch. P. 61.) "Why," asked Lord COTTENHAM (in Reed v. Norris, 2 My. & Cr. 374), "is an agent precluded from taking the benefit of purchasing a debt which his principal was liable to discharge? Because it is his duty, on behalf of his employer, to settle the debt upon the best terms he can obtain; and if he is employed for that purpose, and is enabled to procure a settlement of the debt for anything less than the whole amount, it would be a violation of his duty to his employer . . . if he procured an assignment of the debt and so made himself a creditor of his employer to the full amount of the debt which he was employed to settle." The correspondence to which we have already referred relates mainly to commissions taken by solicitors, but the reader will do well to bear in mind that the principles of law to which we advert are equally applicable to all agents in a fiduciary position. We have said that an agent will not be allowed to abuse the confidence reposed in him. Hence, to turn to the question, raised by the correspondence he will not be permitted to benefit himself secretly at the expense of his principal. In Tyrrrell v. The Bank of London (27 Beav. 273; 31 L. J. 369, Ch.), it was said by Lord Westbury that a "solicitor shall not be permitted to make a gain for himself at the expense of his client. The client is entitled to the full benefit of the best exertions of the solicitor. The relation of solicitor and client involves, of course, the relation of principal and agent. The duties of the first include all those of the second and something more," namely, duties peculiar to fiduciary relations. There is a number of cases in which this principle is broadly laid down. It is very evident that it is really immaterial whether the advantage obtained by the agent consists in making an overcharge for a purchase, or in obtaining a bonus from the other contracting party. In either case he fails to show that loyalty to his trust which the law makes imperative. In the recent case of Morison v. Thompson (L. Rep. 9 Q. B. 481), which was decided in the year 1874, an action was brought by the purchaser of a ship to recover from the defendant, who had been employed by the former to buy the ship as cheaply as possible, the sum of £225 which had been received by the defendant from the vendor by way of commission on the sale. Lord Chief Justice COCKBURN, in delivering the judgment of the court, said, "The remaining cases cited directly support the conclusion that whenever the earnings acquired in the service of a third person have reached the hands either of the servant or the master, they must be regarded as belonging to the master. . . . Nor are these principles confined to the case of service by apprentices. They apply to all cases of employment as servants or agents—the profits acquired by the servant or agent in the course of, or in connection with, his service or agency, belong to the master or principal." Nothing more need be said; and it may be taken as established law that the profits directly or indirectly made by an agent in the course of his employment without the sanction of the principal belong absolutely to the latter.

COSTS UNDER THE JUDICATURE ACT.

By Order 55 of the Judicature Act, the costs of and incident to all proceedings in the High Court, are to be in the discretion of the court, "provided that where any action or issue is tried by a jury the costs shall follow the event unless upon application made at the trial for good cause shown, the Judge before whom such action or issue is tried, or the court, shall otherwise order." What effect have the words, "or the court," on the previous part of that order? Are they intended to enlarge the power, so as practically to make the foregoing words, "upon application made at the trial," of no effect? In fact, are these words merely directory, so as not to bind the court? and can an application be made to a Divisional Court after the trial? This question came before the Divisional Court of Exchequer in the case of Baker v. Oakes, but unfortunately was only in part settled, and the exact meaning of these words still remains undecided.

The circumstances of that case were somewhat peculiar. The action was brought to recover three separate sums of £61, £6, and £60. The defendants as to the £61 claim paid it into court, and pleaded never indebted to the residue. On the trial the plaintiff failed to prove his claim for £60, but recovered a verdict of £4 6s., part of his £6 claim, which amount consisted of two items, one of £2 7s. and the other of 39s. The verdict was accordingly entered for him for that amount, but no application was made at the trial as to costs, which would, therefore, under Order 55, follow the event. Some days after the trial the plaintiff discovered that the first time that the sum of £2 7s., for which he had gained a verdict, had in fact been paid to him by the defendant before action. He immediately communicated this to the defendant, who thereupon took out a summons to stay execution till the 4th Nov., that he might apply for a new trial on the ground of surprise, mistakingly or unintentional misconduct on the part of the plaintiff's counsel. Execution was stayed accordingly, but the application for a new trial was refused on the ground of the smallness of the dispute. But the court intimated that the best course for the defendant to pursue would be to make an application to the court to vary the incidence of costs under Order 55. A summons accordingly taken out before Baron Huddleston at chambers, an order was eventually made that the plaintiff should pay his own costs of suit subsequent to the payment into court by the defendant. The learned Baron doubted very much whether he had jurisdiction to make the order, and gave the plaintiff leave to appeal. Upon the hearing of the appeal before the Divisional Court the counsel for the defendant urged that the words "upon application made at the trial" were directory only, and that the court were not concluded by them; and that the court had power under Order 57, r. 6, to enlarge the time for such an application. He further contended that the intention of the Act as evidenced by the words "or the court" was that the application was to be made either to the Judge at the trial, or to the court after the trial, from which he argued that the order could also be made to a Judge at Chambers afterwards. The court, however, decided that neither the Judge who tried the case, or any Judge sitting at Chambers, had jurisdiction to make such an order upon application made after the trial. But the court unfortunately stopped there and did not proceed to enquire into the real meaning of the words "or the court." That they were intended to have some distinct meaning apart from the words in the order is obvious, while it is equally clear that the application to the court must be made at some time subsequent to the trial. They can hardly be supposed to refer to an appeal to the divisional court from the decision of the Judge who tried the case upon the question of costs, for the order says that the costs shall be in the discretion of the court, and by section 72 of the Judicature Act it is enacted that no order made by the Court of Justice, or any Judge thereof, as to costs only which law are left to the discretion of the court, shall be subject to appeal, except by leave of the court or Judge making such order. Possibly, therefore, the words "or the court" were inserted in the order to give the Judge who tried the case power to decide the question of costs for the decision of the divisional court to give leave to appeal against his decision under that section. But another likely interpretation is this, that these words were intended to meet a case where the Judge at the trial refused to enter judgment for either party, but leaves either of them to move for judgment, in which case, under Order 55, the question of costs may be reserved by him in order that it may be considered at the hearing of the motion for judgment. Baron Cleasby's judgment hinted at this interpretation, but gave no definite opinion upon the question. Whatever their interpretation may be, it seems to be equally clear that the court in no shape or form can have jurisdiction to entertain the question, unless an application be first made to the Judge at the trial of the action.

THE POWER OF THE COURT OF BANKRUPTCY TO RESTRAIN ACTIONS.

DEFAULT OF PAYMENT OF COMPOSITION.

THE Bankruptcy Act 1869, s. 13, provides in general terms that the court may at any time after the presentation of a bankruptcy petition against the debtor, restrain further proceedings in any action or other legal process against the debtor in respect of debt provable in bankruptcy; or it may allow such proceedings to continue, whether in progress at the commencement of the bankruptcy, or commenced during its continuance, to proceed upon such terms as the court may think just. The court is given full power by section 72 to decide all questions of priorities and all other questions whatsoever, whether of law or fact, arising in any case of bankruptcy coming within its cognisance, or which the court may deem it expedient or necessary to decide for the purpose of doing complete justice or making a complete distribution of property in any such case. We propose in the present paper to make some remarks to an examination of the rules by the application of which are now determined the rights of creditors to sue upon a default by the debtor to pay a composition agreed upon.

The first proposition to which reference will be made is founded upon the authority of Slater v. Jones (L. Rep. 8 Ex. 100) and cases there cited. In that case the question for the decision of the court was whether a creditor who was bound by a composition to accept a composition by instalments, passed in conformity with the 126th section of the Bankruptcy Act 1869, could sue the debtor for his whole debt before the time had come for the payment of any instalments of the composition. The court decided this question in the negative. "The matter," said Lord Cairns, "depends upon the 126th section, which provides that the creditors may, by an extraordinary resolution, resolve that a composition shall be accepted in satisfaction of the debts due to them from the debtor. Could the Legislature have intended that a creditor who has assented to or is bound by such a resolution, should the next day commence an action against or for his whole debt? Such a construction seems to me to be repugnant to common sense, and certainly one which is not supported upon us by any of the decided cases. Here the creditors become bound by a resolution that a composition to be paid instalments or at a future time shall be accepted in satisfaction; I think that a person who is bound by such a resolution is bound by necessary implication not to sue the debtor before the time for payment comes, and until default is made." This also puts very clearly the difference between the operation of the Acts of 1861 and 1869 in this respect.

Summing, however, that a debtor who had covenanted to pay a composition on a particular day makes default in payment, the question whether the creditor will be allowed to proceed by action against the debtor, or whether he will be restrained, under the composition already quoted, may give rise to other questions that will require some careful consideration. It is laid down generally in Edwards v. Coombe (L. Rep. 7 C. P. 519) that it is competent to a dissenting creditor, notwithstanding a resolution for a composition, to sue for his original debt when the debtor has failed to pay or tender the composition within the time agreed on, or within a reasonable time. But it must be observed that in that case the Court of Bankruptcy had made no order restraining proceedings. This decision was approved of by the Lords Justices in Hatton (L. Rep. 7 Ch. 723). There resolutions had been passed, the creditors had agreed to accept a composition payable by instalments. The debtor made default in payment of an instalment, and the Court of Appeal, reversing the decision of the Registrar, held that the creditors could maintain an action against the debtor for the balance of the whole debt remaining unpaid, would not be restrained by the Court of Bankruptcy. This decision is only an authority for the proposition that where a debtor's failure to pay the instalment of the composition is simply due to his want of money, the creditor will not be restrained from suing him for the whole of the debt remaining unpaid. At the same time it is sufficiently evident, from the remarks of the learned judges, that a default in payment of an instalment would not, under the circumstances, be a good answer to an application to the court to restrain an action for the balance of a debt for which a composition had been accepted. Thus it was said by Lord Justice James, "there may be cases in which by accident, and not by default of the debtor, the composition is not duly paid, and then, no doubt, the court would relieve the debtor from the effect of such an order, and remove any injustice." This brings us to the second position.

Ex parte Paper Staining Company, re Bishop (L. Rep. 8 Ch. 481) a creditor refused to be bound by a resolution for a composition registered, on the ground that his name was not duly entered in the debtor's statement of debts, and that the composition had not been tendered to him within the prescribed time. The Registrar refused to restrain him from suing the debtor at law. The principle upon which the court proceeded was that where a creditor is to be bound by an arrangement with creditors on terms personal to himself, and not applicable to the rest of the creditors, he will not be restrained by the Court of Bankruptcy from trying the question in an action at law.

Ex parte Hartel, re Thorpe (L. Rep. 8 Ch. 743), Lord Justice James discussed at some length the question whether, and if so under what circumstances, the Court of Bankruptcy has jurisdiction after resolutions for composition have been passed, to restrain a particular creditor from maintaining an action against the debtor for a debt which is included in the composition. His Lordship's reasoning may be thus stated: The court has jurisdiction in a case of composition to restrain a creditor, the word "composition" in the 82nd section including composition. But jurisdiction ought to issue unless there is some real reason for granting an injunction; if there is no such reason the Court of Bankruptcy ought not to prevent other courts from trying cases which are to be decided by those courts. One of the chief objects, however, of the Act of 1869 was to prevent the evils which resulted from the exercise of the right of every creditor to dispute a composition. Much litigation and confusion resulted from the operation of the Act of 1861. Instead of this multiplicity of action, the court now tries the question of the validity of a composition once for all, "The Court of Bankruptcy," says his Lordship, "is to try the question not merely as between the particular creditor and the debtor, but generally, so that if the Court of Bankruptcy holds the composition to be good it is good as to all the creditors, and if it is held to be bad, then it is bad as to all the creditors, and the other remedies in bankruptcy may be once resorted to. I am of opinion, therefore, that the court, exercising jurisdiction does quite right when it appears that the only object of the creditor in bringing the action is to dispute the composition generally." In this case the creditors wished to proceed with an action for the purpose of testing whether there was some imposition practised by the concealment of the real amount of the debtor's assets from the court when the resolutions were passed. Such a question obviously went to the validity of the whole composition, and the action, if allowed to go on, would tend to render void the whole composition. Hence the objection should be made in the Court of Bankruptcy, so that successful all the creditors, and not the applicant only, might receive the benefit. The rule laid down in Ex parte A Paper Staining Company (sup.) was again affirmed in Ex parte Watson, re Watson (L. Rep. 2 Ch. Div. 63), where Lord Justice Mellish says that "it has been laid down in previous cases that where the objection is one which applies only as between the debtor and the particular creditor who is bringing the action, the action ought not to be restrained." In this case the debtor had made default in payment of a composition.

We shall now be better able to understand the most recent cases in which similar questions have been raised. In Re Rogers (see LAW TIMES for 2nd Dec. 1876, p. 84), an action was restrained, but there had been no failure to pay a composition. The real question related to the creditor's proof. In Re Varbetian, which was decided by Mr. Registrar Pepys on the 15th Dec., resolutions to accept a composition were duly registered, but the debtor made default in payment to one of the creditors. It was urged that the court would allow a reasonable time for the payment, although the covenant was to pay on a certain day. Some of the remarks of the judges in Edwards v. Coombe (sup.) appear to favour this view, but they are not supported by authority. Upon default being made the above creditor proceeded with his action, and the Registrar refused to restrain him, on the ground that the question whether an alleged tender had been made properly was a matter personal to the debtor and the creditor.

The authorities, then, may be summed up in the following propositions:

- (A) Whenever a debtor who, having covenanted to pay on a certain day makes default, the Court of Bankruptcy will not restrain a creditor from proceeding with an action to recover the remainder of debt unpaid provided (1) the subject matter of the action is personal to the debtor and the creditor; (2) the default in payment is not due to some equitable ground of relief: (See per Lord Justice James in Re Hatton (sup.).)
- (B) Under the above circumstances an action by a creditor will be restrained when the action involves matters not personal to the creditor and debtor, but important to the whole body of creditors.

SOME REMARKS ON THE PRESENT COUNTY COURT SYSTEM,

WITH SUGGESTIONS FOR AN IMPROVED PROCEDURE.

It has been long my opinion, derived from observation, that the remedy to be had, through the medium of the County Court, considering that tribunal principally as a court "for the more easy recovery of small debts and demands," is unsatisfactory and inconvenient; nor has the latest legislation on the subject, providing "default" summonses effected much improvement, inasmuch as a defendant has merely to give notice of defence in order to be placed in the same position as if he had been served with an ordinary summons.

Of the working of the system in large districts, where courts are held frequently, I cannot speak from experience. It may be that in such places suitors are substantially benefitted by resorting to the local tribunal, but, at any rate, I know that in small districts, where the Judge only sits at rare intervals, as bi-monthly, the progress of a cause too often serves chiefly to provide a remarkably strong illustration of "the law's delay" and delusiveness. In the latter part of the year, indeed, an interval of three months often happens, as no courts are held in September.

These observations, therefore, must be taken as directed especially to small districts, though they may also apply to those of larger extent.

My objections, then, to the court constituted for the "more easy recovery of small debts and demands" are that the plaintiff is put to unnecessary trouble, and that he is too long delayed in the obtaining of his judgment, and execution or order of commitment, as the case may be; for a person may have to wait two months before he can obtain a judgment, and execution against the goods of his debtor; and if there are no goods to take, he may have to wait two months longer before he can get an order for his committal to gaol.

Now the principal features of the scheme I would suggest are:

1. Instead of making a summons returnable at a distant period, notice be given upon it, that unless within a certain number of days after service defendant satisfies the registrar that he has a good defence, then that judgment will be signed.
2. Upon default in payment of the amount adjudged according to the order, let a commitment summons be issued in the same form as that on a plaintiff, and let the registrar have the power to make an order of committal.

And now to go more into details. Under the system which I propose, a person who has a demand against another would attend at the registrar's office and obtain a summons, supplying the registrar with copies of particulars of demand, which should be given in all cases, and not merely as now, only where the claim exceeds £2.

The plaintiff should be required to state how, in his opinion, the defendant could pay the debt, and his statement should be communicated to the defendant on the summons.

Where the plaintiff desired payment forthwith, the defendant should be informed that if he paid the amount within six days after service, there would be an end to the action without further costs.

Where the plaintiff desired payment by instalments, the defendant should be informed that if he admitted the debt, and agreed to pay according to the plaintiff's wishes, he must, within the like time, attend at the registrar's office and sign a consent.

The defendant, moreover, should be informed that if he wished to dispute the claim in the manner mentioned by the plaintiff, or if he wished to be decided by the registrar, or if he wished to apply to him before a Judge, then he should attend at the office of the registrar named hour on the tenth day after service, when the plaintiff

In case of payment or admission within the time limited, the registrar would immediately give notice thereof to the plaintiff, or, in other cases, would inform him when he should attend to meet the defendant.

If within the appointed time the defendant neither paid nor admitted the claim, nor declared his inability to pay as the plaintiff stated he could, nor applied for leave to defend, the plaintiff might have judgment signed upon proving his claim to the satisfaction of the registrar, who, however, should exercise a discretion in deciding upon the mode of payment, and should not make an order for payment in manner indicated by the plaintiff, unless it was shown to him that defendant could pay so.

If the plaintiff failed to make out his claim clearly to the registrar, though the defendant did not put an appearance, the registrar should insert the case on the list of those to be heard by the Judge.

In cases where it appeared to the registrar, upon the representation of the defendant, that a bona fide defence might be urged, he should give leave to defend, and the case would be set down for the next sitting of the court. But where the defendant's grounds for wishing a trial to take place were only trivial, or in cases of account, &c., the registrar should not allow him to go before the Judge.

It should, however, be open to the defendant, if dissatisfied with the decision of the registrar, to bring the matter on at the next sitting, he giving notice at a stated period beforehand to the registrar and plaintiff of his intention to do so.

The like right of trial before the Judge should also belong to the plaintiff.

To discourage such applications on slight grounds, the Judge should have power to allow substantial costs to the plaintiff or defendant in those cases in which he was of opinion that the other party ought not to have applied to him.

I imagine such a system would work well. There would not, I think, be many cases in which the registrar would have any difficulty in deciding whether or not he would allow a case to go to trial, and where he had any real doubt he would, of course, give leave to defend.

I will here give statistics, which I think will help to prove that the present system requires remodelling. In the judgment book of a small court in North Wales (average of plaints in a year about 500), the following judgments are entered:

Judgments by admission by defendants, signed before Court day.	Judgments on Court days where defendants did not appear.	Judgments where defendants appeared and admitted claims.	Judgments where defendants appeared in person and contested claims.	Judgments where defendants employed advocates.
1872 63	116	22	8	11
1873 43	121	16	3	7
1874 35	94	4	7	11
1875 33	97	13	3	13
Totals.. 173	428	55	21	42

From the above figures it will be seen that out of 719 cases, in which judgment was obtained, there were only 63 instances (total of columns four and five) in which there was any occasion for plaintiffs to appear, yet 483 other unfortunate individuals (total of columns two and three) were obliged to attend sittings of the court, besides being delayed for months, to prove their claims—claims to which, let it be particularly observed, the defendants made no defence whatever, for the best of reasons—that they had none.

Now, as to my second point: the judgment summons and warrant of commitment. By figures I will show that in this department, as well as in the case of plaints, plaintiffs are troubled and delayed quite unreasonably.

And here, by the way, I may state it to be my opinion that were the movement to abolish imprisonment for debt carried out, it would, assuming a system of credit to be a necessity, work great mischief. It is true that but few persons are actually imprisoned; yet the power to commit, hanging in terrorem, has a most powerful effect. There are many cases in which defendants would never endeavour to pay, whose goods and chattels are not worth a straw, and who would get off "soot free" were it not for the prospect of being lodged in a gaol.

The following is a summary of orders for commitment made in the court above mentioned:—

Orders made where defendants appeared.	Orders made where defendants did not appear.
1872 ..... 2	1872 ..... 7
1873 ..... —	1873 ..... 10
1874 ..... 2	1874 ..... 7
1875 ..... 6	1875 ..... 13
Total ..... 10	Total ..... 42

Here, out of fifty-two cases, forty-two plaintiffs had to await patiently for a long period, and also to attend the courts, although the defendants had no objections to offer why they should not be imprisoned, or reason to urge why they could not discharge their debts.

I would altogether remodel this part of the procedure. I see no reasons why it should be imperative that the Judge alone should have the power of committal. Why should not the registrar be allowed to exercise it? He could, as well as a Judge, inquire into the debtor's circumstances; and for the sake of his reputation as a public officer would, I should think, be very careful in giving his decisions. The presumption ought to be that a man is able to discharge the debts which he contracts, and if a debtor who has been summoned on a plaint, and afterwards on the judgment, does not on either occasion even appear, why should the plaintiff have to go through tedious formalities before he can fairly grasp him and oblige him to pay? Still, I do not propose to do away with the rule requiring the plaintiff to prove that the defendant has, or since judgment has had, means to pay. I would yet indulge a defendant, though, as I think, quite undeserving of it, by leaving that rule in force.

I believe it will be generally found that but few debtors, comparatively speaking, ever allow themselves to be imprisoned. They endeavour, it would seem, to exhaust the patience of plaintiffs by obliging them to wait, and by putting them to the trouble of attending sittings of the court. But when these debtors are visited by a commitment-armed bailiff they quickly produce the cash.

The following is a return of commitments issued, and put in force in the court above referred to:—

Commitments issued.	Debtors imprisoned.
1872 ..... 10	1872 ..... 3
1873 ..... 4	1873 ..... —
1874 ..... 9	1874 ..... 1
1875 ..... 16	1875 ..... 1
Total ..... 39	Total ..... 5

Then, I would propose, that after default in payment of the amount obtained as above, the plaintiff should be at liberty to issue a judgment summons for the amount that ought to have been paid to the defendant, as allowed at present. Notice should be given on this sum to the defendant, that unless within five days after service he paid the due, or on the sixth day at a named hour applied in person to the registrar for an amended order, he would be committed to gaol for period.

If he did not pay the amount mentioned in the summons into court did not attend at the time above limited, the plaintiff should at such time (notice whereof would be given to him by the registrar at the office of the court, and upon giving the registrar satisfactory proof of the defendant's ability to pay, would be entitled to an committal.

Where the defendant appeared, and made application for further time to pay, or to be allowed to pay by instalments of a less amount ordered, the registrar would duly consider the application, inquire into his circumstances, both of him and the plaintiff, and either give time, make a new order, or confirm the original one, making in the latter case for the defendant's imprisonment in default of payment. In cases of doubt or difficulty, the registrar would set the case down for hearing, as in the case of a plaint.

Such briefly are the alterations I would propose in the general procedure of the court. I have a few more suggestions to make on some miscellaneous points.

The fees require remodelling. It would be desirable that the fees should not run up per £ as at present, but at a rate something like this: 1s. ; from £2 to £5, 2s. ; from £5 to £10, 4s. ; &c.

It would also much simplify matters if fees on all proceedings, plaints, executions, hearings, &c., were charged at a uniform rate.

The scale of solicitors' costs requires revision and general reduction. Let execution on failure of payment of instalments be allowed only for the amount that ought to have been paid; and not, as at present, for the whole amount of the judgment.

The rule requiring the leave of the Judge for the issue of a committal summons where the defendant resides out of the district, ought to be rescinded.

Let the practice in cases now provided for by the summary procedure Bills of Exchange Act be assimilated to what I have proposed for cases.

I should again observe that my remarks are based upon the practice of the court only in small districts, where sittings are held but at long intervals. How effective or otherwise the present system may be in larger towns I am not able to determine.

The principal defect in the existing scheme is that the registrar, utilised as he might be, and with regard to the "default" system, observe these faults: as no inquiry is to be made into the soundness of the defendant's defence, he may give notice of defence merely for the purpose of gaining time, and in fact as the procedure has become known what is generally now done.

Again, judgment is given for payment in such manner as the plaintiff shall elect. I think, however, that defendant's circumstances should be inquired into in all cases, and that he should be allowed the opportunity of declaring them.

Moreover, as in these cases where defendant does not give defence, plaintiff has the right to sign judgment for the amount claimed, without any investigation being made into it, it seems to me that opportunity is given to an unprincipled plaintiff to obtain judgment more than is due to him. Now, supposing that such a person, plaintiff for a larger amount than was justly due to him against a poor or ignorant defendant, who omitted to give notice of defence; yet have judgment signed without any inquiry being made into his claim. Surely, though a defendant is too ignorant or too careless to take himself, as a matter of justice he should be protected, and an expedition should be made, requiring the plaintiff in all cases to prove his claim to the satisfaction of the Judge or registrar.

A WELSH SOLD

LAW LIBRARY.

NEW EDITIONS.

Russell on Crimes and Misdemeanors. Fifth edition. By Sir James Stephen, Esq., Q.C.—London: Stevens and Sons; H. K. Maxwell.

THIS is a work which ought to be discarded as soon as Mr. James Stephen brings out his projected Digest of the Criminal Law. It is one of those abominations which have acquired respectability and toleration simply because it was originated by an eminent lawyer, and has been nursed by lawyers of equal eminence. But, however eminent a lawyer may be, he is capable of committing great enormities in the form of law books, and it is surely not to be two opinions that the dimensions of this edition of Russell on Crimes are such as to make the hair of every young lawyer stand on end. There are in all cases of new editions two courses open—first, the one which has been taken by Sir James Prentice and his assistant, Mr. Horace Smith (the Editor of Roscoe's Criminal Evidence), namely, overlaying the small book of principle with husk upon husk of decided cases; secondly, that which we fervently hope all future editions will adopt, namely, boldly excising all cases which are not necessary to support the propositions of the text, and reducing the text to short statements placed either in notes or in some of subordinate position. It is indeed to be deeply lamented that Mr. Prentice should have lost a great opportunity of re-arranging Sir William Russell's work, and reducing it to something like a digest or code. As it stands it commands that wondering veneration which would be accorded to an ingenious architect who had a grand but huge impediment in Fleet-street—the law

INFANT—ACTION AGAINST—TORT INDEPENDENT OF CONTRACT.—In an action to recover damages for injuries to a mare of the plaintiff, whilst let on hire to the defendant, the statement of claim alleged that the defendant hired from the plaintiff a mare and dogcart, to go from M. to C. and back, on the express conditions that only one other person besides the defendant should be carried on any part of the journey in the dogcart, and that the mare should be driven from M. to C. and back, and nowhere else; that in violation of the conditions the defendant carried on his return journey three other persons besides himself in the dogcart, and also drove the mare a greater distance than from M. to C. and back—viz., to B., four miles beyond C., and back to M.; and the defendant also, instead of using due care and diligence in driving the mare at a reasonable pace, as it was his duty to do, drove her furiously, carelessly, and negligently, and beat and otherwise ill-treated her, that the mare on her return was found to be badly out, bruised, and injured, and was suffering greatly, owing to having been over-driven, and that her injuries, by reason of the negligence, misuser, and improper conduct of the defendant were so great, that the plaintiff was obliged to have her destroyed. Held (by Kelly, C.B. and Huddleston, B.), discharging the rule, that it was clear from the statement of claim, the whole of which must be looked at in order to see whether the case was substantially in contract or in tort, that the plaintiff claimed damages for a tort, and that the plea of infancy afforded no defence: (Walley v. Holt, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 631. Ex. Div.)

PRACTICE—TWO DEFENDANTS—VERDICT FOR ONE DEFENDANT AND AGAINST THE OTHER—MOTION BY ONE DEFENDANT FOR NEW TRIAL—NEW TRIAL ORDERED AGAINST SUCCESSFUL DEFENDANT.—In an action for negligence against a railway company and also against H., the verdict was in favour of H. and against the company. Notice of an order nisi for a new trial, obtained by the company, on the ground that the verdict was against the weight of evidence, was, by direction of the court, served on H. The order nisi was discharged by the Queen's Bench Division, and the company appealed, but gave no notice of the appeal to H. At the hearing, the Court of Appeal directed notice of the appeal to be served by the plaintiff on H., and also notice to him to show cause why a new trial should not be had against him. H. accordingly appeared, but under protest, alleging that the court had no jurisdiction to call on him to show cause, since he had been discharged by the finding of the jury and the order of the court below, and since the four days within which, under Order XXXIX., rule 1, a motion for a new trial ought to be made had elapsed: Held, that the court had jurisdiction. After hearing H. show cause, the court made the order absolute for a new trial against both defendants. The Court of Appeal has power, under Order LVIII., rule 5, to enlarge the time for moving for a new trial. Quere, per Mellish, L.J., whether, under the practice since the Judicature Act, the court might not, if the justice of the case required it, grant a new trial against one defendant without the other: (Purnell v. Great Western Railway Company and Harris, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 605. Ct. of App.)

SPECIMEN DIGEST OF THE LAW AS TO SOLICITORS OF THE SUPREME COURT.

(Continued from page 133.)

ARTICLE 28.

BREACHES OF COVENANT.

THE covenants in a deed are independent covenants, and a breach of covenant by the one party will not entitle the other to dissolve the contract.

Winstone v. Linn, 1 B. & C. 460.

Where a solicitor who continues in practice discharges an articled clerk and refuses to allow him to continue his service, and refuses also to assign the articles or consent to cancel them, so that the clerk may have the benefit of past services, the only remedy of the clerk is (apparently) an action for the breach.

If the clerk refuses to be taught, and by his wilful acts hinders and prevents his master from teaching him, the master will not be liable for a breach of covenant to teach.

Rayment v. Minton, 4 H. & C. 371.

Winstone v. Linn, 1 B. & C. 460.

Hughes v. Humphreys, 6 B. & C. 680.

Note 1.

Before the passing of the Judicature Acts in an action by an apprentice on the covenant to teach, it was no answer to say that the apprentice had been guilty of such misconduct in the defendants' business that it became unsafe to continue him in his service.

Phillips v. Clift, 4 H. & C. 188.

The Supreme Court has jurisdiction over matters in dispute between articled clerks and their masters, and therefore, and left the matter to whom he was articled at the latter refused to take him back in consequence of his previous misconduct, the court referred it to the master, who decided that a portion of the premium should be returned. But the court refused to compel an attorney to execute an assignment of articles of clerkship, when the clerk had been guilty of criminal conduct with the attorney's wife, even though the attorney had promised to assign him over:

Ex parte Briggs, 22 Geo. 3, h. 13.

Cited in Tidd's Practice, 9th edit. 68.

A question may be raised whether the solicitor who refuses to teach a clerk articled to him may be compelled to assign the clerk, or whether (as it seems most probable) the only remedy of the latter is to proceed against the solicitor for breach of covenant. Solicitors are officers of the Supreme Court, but not apparently for the purpose of instructing articled clerks.

Note 3.

In Ex parte Fisher (1 Ch. Rep. 694), 1819, where the court ordered a master to report what part of the premium should be returned to an articled clerk, Abbott, C.J., said: "It is exceedingly convenient that there should be a summary jurisdiction in this court for deciding differences between attorneys and their clerks of this description. The Legislature has given a summary jurisdiction as to apprentices of another kind. This court, and the other courts of Westminster Hall have, as far back as our practice will carry us, been in the habit of exercising a jurisdiction as to differences of this nature between an attorney of the courts who is an officer of the court, and his clerk." Bayley, J., said: "The attorney receives a premium as a compensation for keeping a clerk for a certain period of time, and for instructing him during that time. If at the end of a year the clerk goes away, having been guilty of great misconduct, and the master when he comes back exercises his discretion as to whether he shall take him back or not, and he determines that the young man shall not continue any longer with him, it is but reasonable he should return some proportion of the premium."

Illustrations.

In an action in covenant by the father of an apprentice against the master for not teaching and providing for the apprentice, a plea that up to a certain time defendant did teach, &c., and that then the apprentice without leave quitted defendant's service and never returned, held good: (Hughes v. Humphreys, 6 B. & C. 180.)

So the master is not liable when the apprentice wilfully hindered the master from teaching him: (Rayment v. Minton, 4 H. & C. 371.)

In an action by a salaried articled clerk, the master alleged that the plaintiff was dismissed for having conspired with another to induce the defendant's clients to leave him, and for having, in pursuance of the aforesaid combination, disclosed defendant's professional secrets and committed other acts of misconduct. Lord Denman left it to the jury to say whether any of the acts were proved, and were such breaches of duty as to warrant dismissing the plaintiff: he ruled also that the defendant at the time of the dismissal had notice of the matters charged against the plaintiff. Verdict for plaintiff. A rule for a new trial was refused, the only difference of opinion being that some of the judges were of opinion that the jury should have been told that, as the plea alleged a conspiracy and none was proved, the issue must be found for the plaintiff: (Mercer v. White, 5 Q. B. 447.)

Note 2.

Striking off the roll is not a punishment for a legal crime, but an exercise of the discretion of the court upon the question whether a man who has been admitted to practise as a solicitor is a proper person to be continued on the roll or not.

Ex parte Brounall, 2 Cowp. 829.

Re King, 9 Q. B. 129.

ARTICLE 29.

OF THE RETAINER—HOW RETAINED.

A retainer may be express or implied. An express retainer, again, may be given either by formal warrant, or by parol (i.e., by writing or by word of mouth).

A solicitor may be duly retained to act on behalf of another person, or, acting without authority, the person for whom he assumes to act may acquiesce in and so ratify the acts of the solicitor.

Note 1.

Where the authority is derived from the client's acquiescence in the act or conduct of the solicitor on his behalf, such act or conduct is said to be ratified, and the question whether there has been such acquiescence as to constitute the solicitor an authorised agent will be solved by determining whether the acquiescence amounts to a ratification.

Note 2.

In order to render themselves more secure, solicitors ought to follow the advice of Lord Tenterden, in Owen v. Ord (3 C. & P. 349), and before commencing an action take a written direction from their clients for so doing.

Illustrations of Implied Retainer.

No instance need be given of express authority. Cases when the authority inferred from conduct of client:

Instances of implied authority to act as solicitor.

(1) A. appoints an attorney, B., to conduct an action. Having recovered judgment the authority ceased. A. however, further directs B. not to compromise the matter. B., acting in good faith, disobeys and does compromise. A.'s direction is tantamount to a retainer: (Butler v. Knight, L. Rep. 2 Ex. 109.)

(2) A solicitor is retained to act for several defendants in separate actions. The actions are consolidated by consent. A joint retainer will be implied from this arrangement: (Anderson v. Baynton, 13 Q. B. 808.)

(3) A retainer to commence an action will be implied from a retainer to commence a suit which has been abated by plea of non-joinder, the second action being brought against the parties in the plea: (Crook v. Wright, B. & M. 278.)

(4) An attorney, who was the ordinary attorney of a borrower, also acted in a particular case for the lender, but did not make any charge on the lender for his services. Having taken sufficient security, it was held that he was not liable as having acted as the retainer lender: (Donaldson v. Haldane, 7 C. & P. 100.) Payment into court of part of a solicitor's costs does not necessarily admit a retainer to incur more than that amount.

Stevenson v. Mayor of Berwick (1 Q. B. 154)

In the following case no retainer was proved: A., a workman, employed by B. under a deed contained an unusual stipulation with respect to payment of salary, met C., B.'s solicitor on B.'s premises, and asked him whether he might act in that way under the deed. C. replied in the affirmative, without remembering the unusual term in the deed. A. acted upon the answer, and, having a loss by reason of so acting, sued C., but could recover as there was relationship of solicitor and client subsisting between C. and A., the answer given in casual inquiry.

Fish v. Kelly, 17 C. B. N. S., 154.

Instances of Ratification.

1. A. appoints an attorney to act for B., who informed of the retainer on his behalf no objection: (Cameron v. Baker, 1 C. & P. 100.)
2. A female, by whom a solicitor was employed to conduct a suit, married while proceedings were pending. The husband was then made and afterwards received in right of his share of the property in dispute. He was to have acquiesced in the retainer of the solicitor: (Butterworth v. Clapham, cited 1 Q. B. 457, 678a.)

But the mere fact that a party knows the name has without authority been introduced by the solicitor of some of the plaintiffs in a suit, without taking any steps to have his name expunged as plaintiff from the record, is not necessarily as between that party and the solicitor equivalent to a retainer, or an adoption of it as his attorney.

See Hall v. Laver, 1 Hare, 571.

Wherever a solicitor appears or acts on behalf of a party it is presumed in accordance with the maxim "Omnia presumuntur rite et solemniter esse acta" he has authority so to do.

Berryman v. Wiles, 4 J. B. 366.

Anderson v. Watson, 3 C. & P. 214.

See The Attorneys' and Solicitors' Act, s. 12.

Note.

A retainer implies a promise to pay all costs and properly incurred upon the retainer.

Bolden v. Nicholas, 3 Jur. N. S. 884.

ARTICLE 30.

RETAINER BY CORPORATION.

By the common law a corporation can retain a solicitor only by deed under the common seal, but where a corporation is empowered by Parliament or charter of incorporation to retain a solicitor without this formality, a retainer in accordance with such power will be valid.

(a) Arnold v. Mayor of Poole, 5 Scott 414 L. J. 97, C. P.

(b) Reg. v. Cumberland (Justices of), 171 Q. B.

Note 1.

The rule of the common law will not be prejudicial to third parties who deal with a corporation without notice that he has not been appointed the common seal.

Fariell v. Eastern Counties Railway Co, L. J. 297 Ex.

where Baron Alderson says, "Parties suing a corporation would be grievously injured if they were obliged in all cases to inquire whether the solicitor for the corporation was authorised and where a solicitor holds an appointment as a corporation, to which office he has been appointed, and at the same time acts for the corporation under a parol retainer, upon payment made to him by the corporation in discharge of his bills for disbursements, he may appropriate such payment to the discharge of his bills for disbursements as a solicitor."

Illustration.

Business was done for a corporation by an attorney whose appointment was not under seal. After bills had been delivered for business done by such attorney, and also for costs incurred by the corporation, he received payment on account in the absence of specific appropriation by the corporation, he appropriated at the time to the payment of certain bills, upon which, for the reason stated, he could have maintained no action. The Court of Common Pleas held that, inasmuch as the claim on those bills was a just and an equal claim to those on which he could not be made the subject of an action of appropriation so made by him could not be questioned.

Arnold v. Mayor of Poole, 12 L. J. 97, M. & G. 860.

Where a defendant has notice of an action against him without authority appearing for him, proceedings will not be set aside; but it is only the defendant has no notice.

Bayley v. Buckland, 1 Ex. 1, and see son v. B.

Fariell v. Eastern Counties Railway Co, Ex. 348.

ARTICLE 31.

WHO MAY RETAIN.

Whoever is sui juris may appoint an attorney, and no one who is not sui juris may do so, married women, except so far as they exercise rights of a feme sole, infants, idiots, and lunatics are not qualified to appoint.

LANGHAM (Henry B.), Cottesbrooke-park, Northampton, and of Montrose House, Hampstead, Middlesex, Esq. Feb. 15; Tatham and Co., solicitors, 35, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

LEES (Henry), formerly a lieutenant in H. M.'s 47th regiment of Dragoon Guards. Feb. 28; Darbishire and Co., solicitors, 26, George-street, Manchester.

LUPTON (Wm.), Arnley, Yorks, gentleman. Jan. 25; H. Snowden, solicitor, 15, East Parade, Leeds.

MARILLIER (Jacob F.), Harrow, Middlesex, Esq. Feb. 15; Palmer and Co., solicitors, 4, Trafalgar-square, Charing-cross, Middlesex.

MAY (Jonathan), formerly of Lindfield, Sussex, farm bailiff, but late of Kelvedon, Essex, gentleman. Feb. 3; Jos. Beaumont, solicitor, Great Coggeshall, Essex.

MONEY (Charlotte M.), 6, Lansdown-place, Plymouth, widow. Feb. 1; Bradley, Robins, and Son, solicitors, Hampshire Bank-buildings, Threadneedle-street, London.

MOTT (Charles), Hilsdale, Stamford-hill, Middlesex, gentleman. Feb. 1; Pownall and Co., solicitors, 2, Staple-inn, Holborn, Middlesex.

NASH-WOODHAM (Wm.), Shepreth, Cambridge, Esq. April 24; Eadens and Knowles, solicitors, 15, Sydney-street, Cambridge.

ORMOND (Thos.), Chelmsford, Essex, tobacconist. Jan. 31; Arthy and Bell, solicitors, Chelmsford.

OXFORD (Geo. G.), Barchin, Kent, Esq. Jan. 31; Wrightwick, Kingsford, and Wrightwick, solicitors, Canterbury.

PAGE (Major-Gen. Wm. Napier), Connor, Neillcherry Hills, East Indies. Feb. 25; E. W. Croase, solicitor, 7, Lancaster-place, Strand, London.

PARKER (Mary E.), Ilfracombe, Devon, widow. March 1; Gribble and Gouldsmith, solicitors, 14, Small-street, Bristol.

PEACE (Jno. H. C.), 6, Alexandra-terrace, Bognor, Sussex, mathematical tutor. Feb. 1; French, Hardwick and Harvie, solicitors, Bognor.

PERKINS (Jas. Geo.), Horace-street, Edgware-road, Middlesex, carman. Jan. 25; Fallova and Brown, solicitors, 4, Lancaster-place, Strand, Middlesex.

PHILLIPS (Sarah Anne), 6, Bath-place, Worthing, Sussex, spinster. March 1; Richard Edmunds, solicitor, Worthing.

PHILLIPS (Thos. Richd.), Treocky, Ystradgynog, Glamorgan, surgeon. Feb. 1; Henry Hopkins, Glenview Brewery, Pontypridd.

PRESTON (Jno. F.), Holbeach, Lincoln, grocer and draper. Feb. 13; Caparn and Wilders, solicitors, Holbeach.

RHODES (Thos.), Greasbrough, York, gentleman. Feb. 1; Baxters and Co., solicitors, Doncaster.

RICHARDS (Jno.), Sandy Brick Works, Llanelli, Carmarthen, colliery proprietor. Jan. 24; Speechly, Mumford and Co., solicitors, Hall-street, Llanelli.

ROBERTS (Jno.), 17, Bury-street, St. James's, and of the Oxford and Cambridge, Middlesex, Esq. March 31; T. Webster, solicitor, 43, Lincoln's-inn-fields, London.

SEXTON (Helen), 8, Norland-square, Notting-hill, Middlesex, spinster. Feb. 31; Stone, King, and King, solicitors, 13, Queen-square, Bath.

SHANNON (Emily), formerly of Kilkenny, Ireland, afterwards of Fitzroy-square, Portland-street, Middlesex, but late of Bank House, Tenby, Pembroke, widow. March 25; Wills and Watts, solicitors, 55, Carter-lane, Doctor's Commons, London.

SIMON (John S.), Penny Bridge, Ulverston, Lancaster, gentleman. Jan. 16; C. G. Thomson and Wilson, solicitors, Finkle-street, Kendal.

SIMPSON (Mary), 310, Strutton-road, Manchester, widow. Feb. 25; George Rical, solicitor, 12, Brazenose-street, Manchester.

SMITH (Edmund), Huyton Park, Huyton, near Liverpool, gentleman. March 1; W. L. Banks, solicitor, 71, Lord-street, Liverpool.

SMITH (Edwin), 191, High-street, Cheltenham, ironmonger. Feb. 15; B. Wheeler, solicitor, 2, Ormond-place, Cheltenham.

SMITH (Sarah), Huyton-park, Huyton, near Liverpool, widow. March 1; W. L. Banks, solicitor, 71, Lord-street, Liverpool.

SMITH (Sarah Ann), late of King-street-gardens, and prior thereto of 196, High-street, Cheltenham, widow. Feb. 15; B. Wheeler, solicitor, 2, Ormond-place, Cheltenham.

STOREY (Henry), Milborne Port, Somerset, drillman. Feb. 15; Melmoth and Bartlett, solicitors, Sherborne, Dorset.

TINDALE (Betsy), 90, Stanhope-street, Liverpool, widow. Feb. 8; Hore and Monkhouse, solicitors, 5, Commerce-chambers, 15, Lord-street, Liverpool.

VAUGHAN (Hon. Edward C.), late a captain in the Rifle Brigade, and of 66, St. James's-street, Middlesex, and heretofore of Great Aberywith, Cardigan. Feb. 6; Tatham and Co., solicitors, 35, Lincoln's-inn-fields, Middlesex.

WAGGOTT (Robert S.), Leazes-lane, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, hide and skin broker. March 1; Keenlyside and Forster, solicitors, St. John's-chambers, Grainger-street West, Newcastle-upon-Tyne.

WALLINGTON (Geo.), 35, Bull-street, Birmingham, perfumer and fancy toy vendor. Feb. 1; Sargent and Son, solicitors, Argyle-chambers, Birmingham.

WARRING (Jno.), formerly of Otford House, Otford, Kent, but late of 13, Highbury-hill, Middlesex, gentleman. Feb. 9; W. H. Gatty Jones, solicitor, 7, Crosby-square, London.

WARREN (Wm.), Cambridge, Esq. April 4; Eadens and Knowles, solicitors, 15, Sydney-street, Cambridge.

WHITBREAD (Jas.), Aston-street, Birmingham, general furisher. Jan. 25; H. Band, 62, Aston-street, Birmingham.

WOODHAM (Wm. N.), Shepreth, Cambridge, Esq. April 24; Eadens and Knowles, solicitors, 15, Sydney-street, Cambridge.

WOOLEY (Geo. Boyle), formerly of Wood-street, London, straw hat hat manufacturer, and also formerly of 24, King Edward's-road, Hackney, Middlesex, Esq., but late of Melbourne Lodge, Carlton-road, Putney, Surrey, Esq. Feb. 14; Walters and Gush, solicitors, 3, Finsbury-circus, London.

YOUNG (Dame Frances S.), late of 53, Ennismore-gardens, Prince's-gate (formerly of 9, Prince's-terrace), Middlesex, widow. Jan. 11; M. and H. Turner, solicitors, 22, Sackville-street, Piccadilly.

PROMOTIONS AND APPOINTMENTS.

NOTE BENE.—Information intended for publication under the above heading should reach us not later than Thursday morning in each week, as publication is otherwise delayed.

MR. JOHN CHRISTOPHER BULL, of the firm of Bull and Son, solicitors, Oswestry, has been elected Clerk to the School Board recently established in that town.

MR. EDMUND GEORGE LAWRENCE has been appointed a Commissioner to Administer Oaths in the Superior Courts of Judicature in England.

MR. J. J. MOORE, solicitor, of Newton Abbot, Coleridge, has been appointed by Lord Chief Justice Coleridge as Commissioner for taking the Oaths of Married Women for the county

LAW STUDENTS' JOURNAL.

Inquiries, as to the several Examinations and as to Admission on the Roll of the Supreme Court, as to being called to the Bar, and as to taking out and renewal of annual certificates, should be addressed to the Editor (Students' Department).

IN case of the death of a principal during articles, fresh articles should always be entered into without loss of time. The time which elapses between the day of the death of the principal and the day of the date of fresh articles being entered into, does not count, so that the further articles must be for a time sufficient to make up for this loss of service, as well as for the unexpired term of the original articles of clerkship.

WHERE articles expire between the 9th April and 22nd May 1877, candidates may be examined on the 24th and 25th April 1877; and if between the 21st May and 2nd Nov. 1877, may be examined on the 19th and 20th June 1877; or, of course, at any subsequent examination. Six weeks' notice at least is necessary for these examinations, the same to be calculated up to the first day of the month of examination.

ARTICLES of clerkship, or assignments of articles of clerkship, dated on any day during January, must be enrolled and registered at the Petty Bag Office on or before the same days in the month of July next, and when articles or assignments are required to be, and are, enrolled and registered on any day during the month of January, they must be produced and entered at the Law Institution on or before the same day of the month of April next. See 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, ss. 8 and 9, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 127, s. 7. Failure to comply with these statutory requirements often entails a loss of time upon articulated students.

AN examination certificate is only available for admission on the roll of the Supreme Court within six months from its date, and must otherwise be specially enlarged by an order of the Master of the Rolls, which should be applied for at the Petty Bag Office.

WE were glad to be able, in our last issue, to chronicle the formation of two other law students' societies, namely, those at Bolton and at Leeds. The former society is fortunate in having for its president Mr. James Watkins, and moreover, it may be said to be established under the patronage of the Bolton Law Society. The rules of this new society are of a most exhaustive character, and will afford an excellent precedent for settling the rules of any other similar society.

NOTICES for the final examination, and notices for admission on the roll of solicitors can be renewed within one week from the end of the month, for which such original notices have respectively been given. For further information see the Regulations of November 1875.

IN our last issue we published a letter from the newly elected honorary treasurer of the United Law Students' Society, in which he very properly points out the chief reason why the society so very seldom discusses questions of a strictly legal character, and which omission he recently took occasion to notice somewhat adversely. The explanation, which points to that which amounts to a misfortune, is perfectly satisfactory, and the question presents itself, what can or ought to be done in order to place at the disposal of the members of this society such a law library as would enable them to debate pure questions of law. If the society is to become the owner of a sufficiently good law library, it must in any case be a question of time before this can be accomplished. We feel strongly that an application should be made to the Council of the Incorporated Law Society for leave to hold the meetings of the society at the Law Institution, and to make use of the library there. It is not because the council is already the patron of one of the oldest and best law students' societies in London (the Law Students' Debating Society) that therefore it will be unwilling to give assistance and encouragement to any other similar institution seeking its countenance and support.

COUNCIL OF LEGAL EDUCATION.

HILARY EDUCATIONAL TERM 1877.

PROSPECTUS OF THE LECTURES OF THE PROFESSORS.

THE Professor of Jurisprudence and Roman Civil Law will, during the ensuing educational term, deliver a course of about twelve public lectures on—

Constitutional Law and Legal

First lecture on this subject will be Tuesday, 23rd Jan. 1877, at eleven a.m. The subsequent lectures on this subject delivered on Tuesdays and Wednesdays same hour.

Equity.

The Professor of Equity will deliver ensuing educational term, fourteen lectures on Equity, as applied—

I. To Partnerships and Part accounts.

II. To the Raising of Portion Charges on Land.

The first lecture on this subject will be on Friday, 12th Jan. 1877, at 4.15 p.m. The subsequent lectures at the same hour on Fridays during the term.

Law of Real and Personal Property.

The Professor of the Law of Real Property will deliver, during the ensuing Educational Term, twelve public lectures on the subject:

On Prescriptive Rights, including Common.

First lecture on this subject will be Saturday, 13th Jan. 1877, at 3.15 p.m. The subsequent lectures on this subject delivered on Tuesdays at 4.15 p.m., and on Fridays at 3.15 p.m.

Common Law.

The Professor on Common Law, during the ensuing Educational Term, will deliver public lectures on

Criminal Law.

First lecture on this subject will be Monday, 15th Jan. 1877, at 4.15 p.m. The subsequent lectures will be on Mondays and Thursdays at the same hour.

UNITED LAW STUDENTS' SOCIETY.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE FOR

IN presenting their report for the year, your committee are glad to be able to state the society on its increased progress and extended influence. The society's position is highly satisfactory, as will appear from the treasurer's report, and the number has been largely augmented.

Seventy new members have been added since Jan. last: an analysis of the roll of this number six are barristers, fourteen are Bar students, twelve are articled clerks, and one is a gentleman eligible under the rules for election at present connected with either the Law or the Profession. Your committee regard as affording the best evidence of the success of their efforts to bring together members of the Profession for the purpose of instruction and improvement which affords.

The society has held during the seven weekly meetings, which have been attended, the average attendance has been four, but your committee would greatly desire to impress upon members the importance of a regular or frequent attendance at the meetings of the society, as your committee are convinced that members will derive much intellectual pleasure therefrom, and as the society in a great measure depends for its support it receives by the presence of members at the meetings.

During the year the society has added to many legal subjects, a legal question that has engaged the public, including questions on the Law of Personal and Real Property, in cases of intestacy, the system of usury, the constitution of the Finance Bill, the office of coroner, the Mr. Macdonald's Bill for rendering more for the negligent acts of their servants, injury to fellow servants, the Act, the present law as to suicide, treatment of habitual drunkards, the learned professions to women, and the Question. The selected subjects have every instance, evoked much discussion and given rise to very instructive debates.

The annual inaugural meeting of the society took place at Clement's-inn Hall on 12th Jan. last, under the presidency of Vernon Harcourt, Q.C., M.P., who was by Sir Frederick Pollock, Bart.; M. Cookson, Q.C., the honorary standing of the society; Mr. W. Gordon, M.P. Sheldon Amos, and other gentlemen. The meeting was largely attended, and the aims of the society were warmly supported by the learned president and his colleagues, who offered advice of much value and interest to the members of the society.

he 22nd March, at one of the society's meetings, Mr. F. T. Bircham, a former at and one of the council of the Incorporated Law Society, took the chair. The subject of this occasion was the principle of rwood's Bill on the remuneration and re- lity of barristers, which was then before use of Commons, and after an exhaustive ion, a resolution in favour of the principle ill was carried by a large majority. The society's annual dinner took place at the on the 19th July. The chair was taken J. T. Davies, a member of your com- and the dinner was a success in every legal correspondence department of the has met with continued success, and as its presents a separate report, your com- need do no more than recommend this ent to all the members of the society who already members of the department, as an e and important means of acquiring legal onal improvement.

committee have great pleasure in report- t the general correspondence department as started in the early part of the year has a success that justifies the expectations rojectors and supporters. The secretary epartment also presents a separate report. number of societies in union with this has during the year considerably increased, fact is, in the opinion of your committee, noe of the continuance and growth of the e of our society among law students in the . A separate report is presented by Mr. hon. secretary for the societies in union. committee regret that the society has lost Round, who has left London to reside in npton, the energetic and indefatigable y of this department, whose exertions rgedly conducted to its success.

'Davis Prize,' given annually for the best n an appointed subject, was this year d to Mr. E. C. Rawlings, the subject eing "The best System of Land Trans-committee notice with pleasure that members of the society have during r distinguished themselves in various examinations. Mr. Kershaw, a student of le Temple, gained a studentship of the 100 guineas, given by that Inn; Mr. Verity was awarded the prize of the ble Society of New Inn; Mr. Charles E. e of the prizes of the Incorporated Law ; and Messrs. E. W. Burrows and Oliver s, B.A., certificates of merit at the final tion of the Incorporated Law Society, at hey were respectively examined; Messrs. lis and W. Shirley Shirley each obtained ee of B.A., and Mr. E. Dean that of . (a) g the year a suggestion has been made for blishment of a Law Library and a Reading e connection with the society. Your com- annot too highly commend the suggestion, y trust that before long the society will ed to form a Library which will be worthy ocity and of practical use to its members. blishment of a reading room is a matter n the opinion of your committee, requires ation but they see no reason why a valu- usefull library should not be provided if nbers of the society and the profession y are disposed to assist in furthering so object.

committee in conclusion sincerely hope society will for many years continue its of prosperity and usefulness.

society will resume its meetings at Cle- on Hall, Strand, on Wednesday evening, inst.

Queries.

EDIATE EXAMINATION.—If an article clerk present himself for this examination within months after the expiration of one half of the is articles, what is the effect, and can he after- sent himself, and if so, within what time, and re be obtained?

L. E. LEGIS.

ation should in the first instance be made to tary of the Law Institution, for a student can- resent himself for examination without leave ined.]

as articulated on 14th Oct. 1876, for five years; be earliest date I can go in for my Intermediate ion? F. K.

1879.]

INARY EXAMINATION.—The subjects for the ary Law Examination include two special her of classics, or modern languages. Can you e if the examiners expect the candidate to be ce this report was presented the Honour List incorporated Law Society for the final examina- in November last has been issued, in which he names of two members, Mr. W. T. Rogers, awarded the prize of the Hon. Society of Inn, and W. Percy Pain, one of the prizes of orated Law Society.

prepared to answer questions on the grammar of the text, and also the subjects to which the text may allude, or do they simply want a tolerably fair translation of the special book into English? For instance, would the examiners require a knowledge of Roman customs, biography, &c., in any of the Latin books they appoint to be taken up for examination; or again is it necessary to know the idioms and peculiarities of any language in order to pass successfully in it? PRELIMINARY.

[We believe that, so far as the two languages are concerned, it is only necessary to accomplish a fair translation of the passage taken from the two books selected by the candidate, but you should apply to the secretary of the Law Institution.]

ADMISSION ON THE ROLL.—Will you inform me whether a clerk articulated on the 3rd January could gain admission in the month of January in which his articles expired? Of course if the date fixed for admission was prior to the expiration of the articles, the candidate would have to wait till April, but I should think it unlikely that the day for admission would be earlier than the 23rd of January. Your opinion, however, on the point will be esteemed a favour. M. N.

[Admission can now be obtained at any time after expiration of articles and passing the Final examination, provided the applicant is 21, and the necessary notices have been given.]

COMPANY LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

RESOLUTIONS TO DIMINISH CAPITAL BY BUY- ING UP SHARES.—ULTRA VIRES—ACTION BY SHAREHOLDER—FORFEITURE OF SHARES.—The shareholders of a company passed a special resolution authorising the directors to expend a large portion of the company's assets in purchasing the shares of those shareholders who desired to with- draw from the concern, the avowed object of the resolution being to effect a gradual winding-up of the company. The articles of association con- tained no clause authorising any such diminution of the company's assets, but contained a clause em- powering the directors, with the sanction of a general meeting, to forfeit the shares of any share- holder who directly or indirectly commenced or carried on any action against the directors or the company. A shareholder having com- menced an action against the directors and the company to restrain the carrying out of the above resolution, his shares were for- feited. Held, that the resolution was ultra vires, and that it was the duty of the shareholder to prevent the directors from carrying it into effect. Held, also, that the forfeiture of the shares did not deprive the shareholder of his right to prevent the application of the company's assets to an illegal purpose: (Hoppe v. The International Financial Society, 38 L. T. Rep. N. S. 623. V.C.B.)

MAGISTRATES' LAW.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

HIGHWAY—CONSTRUCTION OF PRIVATE CUL- VERT—REMOVAL OF NUISANCE—PROSECUTION OF SURVEYOR FOR "MALICIOUS INJURY"—WHAT IS "REASONABLE SUPPOSITION OF RIGHT."—The appellant as surveyor of highways had put down a pipe under the access from the highway to the dwelling house of the respondent. In order to improve the access to the house, the respondent took up the pipe and substituted a culvert of larger dimensions, thereby raising the level of the access and making the highway less commodious. The appellant removed, and in removing damaged the culvert, whereupon the respondent summoned him before justices for a malicious injury to property. The justices con- victed the appellant. Held, upon a case stated un- der 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, in which the justices found

(inter alia) that the appellant had not acted under a reasonable supposition of right, that the con- viction was wrong: (Denny v. Beverley, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 628. Div. App. Ct.)

EXTRAORDINARY FRAUD ON A LICENSED VICTUALLER BY AN "ACCOUNTANT."

At the Middlesex Sessions, Clerkenwell, William Frederick Stephens, alias Swainson, of 5, Arundel- street, Strand, "accountant," was indicted for stealing, as a fraudulent bailee, three sums of £50, £30, and £11 3s. 8d., the moneys of Mr. William Sumpton.

Croome, instructed by Boyes, of Barnet, prose- cuted, and stated as follows: The prosecutor was until recently the tenant of the Crown Inn, Pinner, in the trade of Messrs. Clutterbuck, brewers, Stanmore. In July 1875, being pressed by his distillers, Messrs. Bishop and Co., to give them security for the balance of his account, and having no solicitor, his eye was attracted by an advertisement in Lloyd's Weekly News, which read thus: "Tradesmen and others in difficulties should consult Mr. Swainson, of 6, Guildhall- chambers, City, who obtains for embarrassed debtors residing in town or country immediate protection of person and property without bank- ruptcy, suspension of business or publicity, and entire release from all debts; divorce and probate cases conducted, bills of sale prepared. Charges payable by instalments, loans negotiated." Mr. Sumpton placed himself in the prisoner's hands, who acted as his solicitor in the giving of a bill of sale to Bishop and Co. In October last Sumpton was leaving the Crown Inn, and just after the change paid to the prisoner the sums charged in the indictment, amounting in all to £91 3s. 8d., the total due on the bill of sale, the prisoner promising to take the money the same day to Bishop and Co.'s solicitors and pay off the bill of sale. Instead of this he only paid £50, and Bishop and Co. threatened to seize the goods at the Crown, which the incoming tenant (a Mr. Sheen) had bought and paid for. Before doing this Bishop and Co. wrote Messrs. Clutterbuck, the owners of the Crown Inn, who put the matter into their solicitor's (Mr. Boyes') hands, which led to the discovery of the facts stated, and the result was that Mr. Sumpton had, in order to prevent a seizure at the Crown, to pay over again the £41 3s. 8d. he had previously paid the prisoner, and upon this Messrs. Clutterbuck had taken the matter up, and determined to prosecute on public grounds. At an interview between Mr. Sumpton, Mr. Boyes, and the prisoner, at the latter's office, the prisoner said the money had all been paid over, and upon being told that his name did not appear in the Law List, he owned it did not, and then gave the name of Stephens, and said there were lots of solicitors in London whose names were not in the Law List, who were just as respectable as those whose were in it. The prisoner was shortly afterwards arrested and taken before Mr. Vaughan at Bow-street, where he was committed for trial, his solicitor, Mr. Goatley, reserving his defence.

The prisoner, after raising certain objections to the form of indictment, at length pleaded guilty to stealing the £41 3s. 8d., and expressed his sorrow for the manner in which he had wronged the prosecutor.

The DEPUTY JUDGE, addressing him, said he was evidently a person of superior education and ability, who well knew the nature of what he was doing. He had availed himself of that position with the help of the advertisement to entrap the unwary and rob them, and for which he must be sentenced to nine calendar months' imprisonment with hard labour.

BOROUGH QUARTER SESSIONS.

Borough.	When holden.	Recorder.	What notice of appeal to be given.	Clerk of the Peace.
Andover .....	Monday, Jan. 8 .....	W. W. Ravenhill, Esq. ....	10 days .....	Thomas Lamb.
Barnstaple .....	Monday, Jan. 8 .....	Charles Jerom Murch, Esq. ....	3 days .....	J. H. Toller.
Bideford .....	Saturday, Jan. 6 .....	Charles Jerom Murch, Esq. ....		James Rooker.
Birmingham .....	Monday, Jan. 8 .....	A. R. Adams, Esq., Q.C. ...	14 days .....	T. E. T. Hodgson.
Bolton .....	Thursday, Jan. 11 .....	Samuel Pope, Esq., Q.C. ...	10 days .....	John Gordon.
Bury St. Edmunds .....	Monday, Jan. 8 .....	John Tozer, Esq. ....	14 days .....	James Sparke.
Carmarthen .....	Monday, Jan. 8 .....	B. T. Williams, Esq., Q.C. ....	10 days .....	John H. Barker.
Chester .....	Monday, Jan. 8 .....	Horatio Lloyd, Esq. ....	14 days .....	John Walker.
Colchester .....	Friday, Jan. 12 .....	F. A. Philbrick, Esq., Q.C. ...	8 days .....	John S. Barnes.
Gloucester .....	Tuesday, Jan. 9 .....	C. S. Whitmore, Esq., Q.C. ...	7 days .....	Francis W. Jones.
Grantham .....	Tuesday, Jan. 9 .....	J. S. Dugdale, Esq. ....		H. Beaumont.
Great Yarmouth .....	Monday, Jan. 8 .....	Simms Reeve, Esq. ....	14 days .....	Isaac Preston, jun.
Guildford .....	Monday, Jan. 8 .....	J. Morgan Howard, Q.C. ...		John L. Capron.
Hastings .....	Friday, Jan. 26 .....	Robert Henry Hurst, Esq. ...	Statutory .....	George Meadows.
King's Lynn .....	Thursday, Jan. 11 .....	D. Brown, Esq., Q.C. ....		T. G. Archer.
Lichfield .....	Thursday, Jan. 11 .....	H. W. Cripps, Esq., Q.C. ...	8 days .....	Chas. Simpson.
New Windsor .....	Friday, Feb. 2 .....	A. M. Skinner, Esq., Q.C. ...	10 days .....	Henry Darvall.
Nottingham .....	Tuesday, Feb. 6 .....	Richard Wildman, Esq. ....	1 day .....	Arthur Wells.
Penzance .....	Friday, Jan. 12 .....	Wyndham Slade, Esq. ....	8 days .....	John P. Milton.
Southampton .....	Monday, Jan. 8 .....	Thomas Gunner, Esq. ....	14 days .....	Edward Coxwell.
Sudbury .....	Wednesday, Jan. 24 .....	Thomas H. Naylor, Esq. ...	14 days .....	Robert Ransom.
Tenterden .....	Wednesday, Jan. 10 .....	Francis Russell, Esq. ....		Stephen Weller.
Wenlock .....		Thomas S. Pritchard, Esq. ...	14 days .....	Edward B. Potts.
Wigan .....	Wednesday, Jan. 24 .....	Joseph Catterall, Esq. ....		Thomas Heald.
York .....	Monday, Jan. 8 .....	E. P. Price, Esq., Q.C. ....	14 days .....	J. Wilkinson.

REAL PROPERTY AND CONVEYANCING.

NOTES OF NEW DECISIONS.

REPRESENTATION—TRUST MONEY—FOLLOWING MONEY INTO LAND—STATUTE OF FRAUDS—SOLICITOR AND CLIENT.—Money was advanced to a solicitor by A. for the purpose of being invested on mortgage security. The solicitor wrote that he had invested the money on mortgage to Messrs. M. on leaseholds in Camden Town, and that A. was receiving interest at the rate of 5 per cent. The solicitor, in fact, subsequently to this, advanced large sums on mortgage to Messrs. M., but no specific mortgage was made in favour of A. The draft, however, of a mortgage for the sum advanced in favour of A. was found unexecuted after the solicitor's death. The solicitor had died insolvent. A. applied that a sum equal to the sum advanced by him should be paid to him out of a large fund in court representing the moneys advanced by the solicitor to Messrs. M. Held, that the solicitor was bound by his representation; that the money was trust money, and that A. ought to be paid in priority to the general creditors: (Middleton v. Pollock; Ex parte Weatherall, 35 L. T. Rep. N. S. 608. Chan. Div.)

